As for the verse which seems to contradict this one: ‘To each of you We prescribed a law and a method’ (al-Ma‘ida: 48), the intended meaning of the phrase ‘a law and a method’ are those doctrines, laws and principles which are revealed for a particular community, society or environment, or which deal with those plagues and diseases which afflict people. These revealed laws are given to help treat such ailments, depending on the practices of those people, hence why do such laws differ from one religion to the next? Every civilisation has its own trials to undergo. Some have experienced corruption and transgression, while others have tried to scrimp what is in their weights and measures. There are those who worshipped cult images, e.g. objects and statues and others who worshipped planets or angels. We should not be surprised then to find differences in the laws revealed to them.

Accordingly, we see that the two points of contention raised by the orientalists concerning this verse, have no grounds, since each verse is revealed in a particular context and treats a particular subject.

وَمَا تَفَرَّقُوٓاْ إِلَّا مِنۢ بَعۡدِ مَا جَآءَهُمُ ٱلۡعِلۡمُ بَغۡيَۢا بَيۡنَهُمۡۚ وَلَوۡلَا كَلِمَةٞ
سَبَقَتۡ مِن رَّبِّكَ إِلَىٰٓ أَجَلٖ مُّسَمّٗى لَّقُضِيَ بَيۡنَهُمۡۚ وَإِنَّ ٱلَّذِينَ أُورِثُواْ
ٱلۡكِتَٰبَ مِنۢ بَعۡدِهِمۡ لَفِي شَكّٖ مِّنۡهُ مُرِيبٖ ١٤

They divided, out of rivalry, only after knowledge had come to them, and, if it had not been for a decree already passed by your Lord to reprieve them until an appointed time, they would already have been judged. Those after them, who inherited the Scripture, are in disquieting doubt about it[14]
(The Quran, ash-Shura: 14)

Regarding the historical context of this verse, there were disbelievers in Mecca who worshipped cult images. There were also people of the Book, both Jews and Christians, who contended with those disbelievers. The tension between these two groups prevailed for a long time; the people of the Book were greatly angered by the disbelievers, insomuch that they would say to them, ‘The time will soon come that a prophet will come out from among you. We will fight you tooth and nail, even unto death’.

Allah Glorified is He informs us about the state of the people of the Book: ‘And when there came to them a Book from Allah confirming that which was with them - although before they used to pray for victory against those who disbelieved - but [then] when there came to them that which they recognised…’- that is Prophet Muhammad- ‘they disbelieved in it’ (al-Baqara: 89).

Indeed, the holy books have testified of Prophet Muhammad’s coming, in the time and place in which he came. The people of the Book knew of him and had ample descriptions of him in their Scriptures. There were even many people of the Book, such as `Abdullah ibn As-Salam who understood that Muhammad would bring the complete truth with him and that he was a prophet sent from Allah.

Concerning these people and their knowledge of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him Allah Glorified is He states: ‘Those to whom We gave the Scripture know him as they know their own sons’ (al-Baqara: 146). For this reason, one notable figure(1) from among the people of the Book is said to have been aware of Prophet Muhammad’s coming just like his own son, or even that he was more familiar with Muhammad than his own son.(2) This is because statements describing Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon

(1) Referring to `Abdullah ibn As-Salam ibn Al-Harith Al-`Isra`ili Abu Yusuf. He was a Companion of the Prophet and accepted Islam after the arrival of the Prophet in Medina. At the time, his name was Al-Hasin, and the Messenger of Allah peace and blessings be upon him gave him the name `Abdullah. He, along with `Umar, oversaw the opening of the Holy Mosque, and he resided in Medina until his death in 43 A.H. Ensigns by Az-Zirikli, 90-94).

(2) In his Tafsir (1/194), Ibn-Kathir states, ‘Al-Qurtubi says, ‘Umar Allah be pleased with him relates that he once asked `Abdullah ibn As-Salam, “Did you know of Muhammad’s coming just like you know your own son?” He answered, “Yes, and even better than I know my son. Allah caused His upright servant to come to earth as His authorized representative thereupon. His messenger came according to the description present in the Scriptures and so I knew him when I saw him. As for my son, I did not know him before he came from his mother.”’ him and his advent are repeated throughout their Scriptures. However, many of the people of the Book did not believe in the Prophet when he finally came.

So then, Allah states: ‘And they did not become divided until after knowledge had come to them…’ (ash-Shura: 14). Here, the word ‘knowledge’ refers to those statements in their Scriptures testifying to the coming of Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him. ‘And if not for a word that preceded from your Lord…’ (ash-Shura: 14), a decree which Allah had promised them by: ‘[postponing the penalty] until a specified time…’ (ash-Shura: 14) referring to the Day of Judgment, ‘it would have been concluded between them’ (ash-Shura: 14), i.e. the ultimate demise and rooting out of the disbelievers and the continued survival of the believers. Allah did not utterly destroy them, but rather postponed their demise since there were those among them who would later accept Islam and become warriors in Allah’s army.

In the following verse: ‘And indeed, those who were granted inheritance of the Scripture after them are, concerning it, in disquieting doubt’ (ash-Shura: 14), Allah refers to the Jews and Christians alive during the time of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him by, ‘…those who were granted inheritance of the Scripture.’ (ash-Shura: 14) And that they are in ‘disquieting doubt’ (ash-Shura: 14) means that they were in doubt about the inspired writings they had previously received. This alludes to the doubt, hesitation, and confusion they felt regarding their Scriptures since they found a number of errors which led them to distrust those writings. They forgot what Allah had previously revealed about the Christians: ‘And from those who say, “We are Christians” We took their covenant; but they forgot a portion of that of which they were reminded’ (al-Ma‘ida: 14). Likewise, the Jews, whom He talks about in the verse before this one: ‘So for their breaking of the covenant We cursed them and made their hearts hard. They distort words from their [proper] usages and have forgotten a portion of that of which they were reminded’ (al-Ma‘ida: 13). Here, ‘and have forgotten’ indicates that forgetfulness is of the forgotten. So, if the Jews truly thought these sayings of the Scriptures were important, they would be constantly pondering on them, rather than neglecting them to the point of forgetting. Even when they did not forget certain statements in the Scriptures, they altered those things which they remembered. They had no excuse for their failure to remember inspired revelation; how much less of an excuse for perverting Allah's words?

After forgetting what Allah had revealed to them in the Scriptures, which they already had, they suppressed further revelation from their Lord: 'And [mention, O Muhammad], when Allah took a covenant from those who were given the Scripture, [saying], "You must make it clear to the people and not conceal it." But they threw it away behind their backs and exchanged it for a small price. And wretched is that which they purchased.' (Al-'Imran: 187)

If only they had ceased their distortion of the Scriptures at this point! But they continued to the point where they interjected their own vain statements into the inspired writings, taking them to be the words of Allah. Allah says to them: 'So woe to those who write the "scripture" with their own hands, then say, "This is from Allah," in order to exchange it for a small price. Woe to them for what their hands have written and woe to them for what they earn.' (al-Baqara: 79)

Allah says:

فَلِذَٰلِكَ فَٱدْعُ ۖ وَٱسْتَقِمْ كَمَآ أُمِرْتَ ۖ وَلَا تَتَّبِعْ أَهْوَآءَهُمْ ۖ وَقُلْ ءَامَنتُ بِمَآ أَنزَلَ
ٱللَّهُ مِن كِتَٰبٍ ۖ وَأُمِرْتُ لِأَعْدِلَ بَيْنَكُمُ ۖ ٱللَّهُ رَبُّنَا وَرَبُّكُمْ ۖ لَنَآ أَعْمَٰلُنَا وَلَكُمْ
أَعْمَٰلُكُمْ ۖ لَا حُجَّةَ بَيْنَنَا وَبَيْنَكُمُ ۖ ٱللَّهُ يَجْمَعُ بَيْنَنَا ۖ وَإِلَيْهِ ٱلْمَصِيرُ ١٥

So [Prophet] call people to that faith and follow the straight path as you have been commanded. Do not go by what they desire, but say, 'I believe in whatever Scripture God has sent down. I am commanded to bring justice between you. God is our Lord and your Lord – to us our deeds and to you yours, so let there be no argument between us and you – God will gather us together, and to Him we shall return' [15]

The demonstrative phrase 'So…' in this verse, refers to the preceding discussion regarding the fact that the people broke up their unity; contended among themselves as to what was revealed in the Scriptures and suppressed the words of Allah, even going so far as to pervert it for their own purposes.

Allah gave His Messenger peace and blessings be upon him the special mission to correct what they have done, to restore balance and order to the lives of the people and to keep them from future corruption and perversion of Allah's message. We note here the link between words and actions: 'So to that [religion of Allah] invite, [O Muhammad], and remain on a right course as you are commanded' (ash-Shura: 15). In other words, Allah commands the Messenger's deeds to match his words as He states elsewhere: 'Indeed, those who have said, "Our Lord is Allah" and then remained on a right course…' (Fussilat: 30).

As noted in previous sections, a straight line is the shortest distance between two points. So, when Allah gives the command 'and remain on a right course', He means for us to stay on the straight, main road, without veering into side streets. Hence, the names 'The Straight Path' and 'Soundness of the Way'(1) are both mentioned in the Quran since it guides us to our destination, namely Allah, along the shortest possible path—a straight one. Therefore, when Allah commands His Prophet peace and blessings be upon him to do these things, it is as if He is saying: 'Pursue the right course because when you do that, your adherence to the Straight Path will help others accept true religion, listen to your words and believe that what you do is right'. Of course, it is well known that actions speak louder than words and so teaching people and counselling them through what we do is more effective for their conversion to true faith than mere talk. That is why one of the Companions came to the Messenger of Allah peace and blessings be upon him and said, 'O Messenger of Allah, say something definitive of true religion, such that I need not ask whether it be true. He replied, 'I found belief in Allah and now I continue pursuing the straight path.'(2) This is one of many of his sayings on the matter.

(1) The description of the Quran as 'As-Sirat Al-Mustaqim' (The Straight Path) appears in the opening chapter al-Fatiha 'Guide us to the straight path' (al-Fatiha: 6). The appellation 'Sawa` As-Sabil (Soundness of the Way) appears in the chapter of al-Baqara: 'Or do you intend to ask your Messenger as Musa (Moses) was asked before? And whoever exchanges faith for disbelief has certainly strayed from the soundness of the way' (al-Baqara: 108). The phrase in Arabic for 'Soundness of the Way' refers to the middle portion of a path or road which is the straightest and which leads most quickly to one's destination. Calling the Quran by this name, therefore, represents counsel to be moderate in all things.

(2) This Hadith is narrated by Sufyan ibn `Abdullah Ath-Thiqafi, who extracted it for its authenticity. He related it as follows: 'I said, "O Messenger of Allah, say something=

Then, after ordering His Messenger peace and blessings be upon him to follow the Straight Path, Allah warns him not to adhere to what the world would have him do: ‘and do not follow their inclinations’ (ash-Shura: 15). Personal desires, likes and dislikes lead to contention and discord. One such worldly desire took its form in the peoples’ requests for the Prophet peace and blessings be upon him to experiment with devotion to other deities, ‘Worship our gods, and we will worship your one God.’(1) It was because of this challenge to the Prophet peace and blessings be upon him that Allah revealed the chapter of al-Kafirun. In the statement, ‘I have believed in what Allah has revealed…’ (ash-Shura: 15), the phrase ‘what Allah has revealed’ (literally book) is indefinite making the statement more inclusive. Indeed, Allah is referring to all those inspired writings revealed prior to this. It is as if Allah were asking the Jews and Christians why, if they believed in the Scriptures which had come before, they refused to believe in the message revealed to Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him. His Message is like those which had come before and in which they believed, so, why cut their belief off and pretend that Islam is a lie which they did because there were groups of Muslims who contended among themselves over certain points of doctrine?

The people of the Book would say to Muhammad’s followers, for example, ‘Our religion and holy books are older than yours as are our messengers. Your Quran even testifies of our special relationship to Allah, “O Children of Israel, remember My favour which I have bestowed upon you and that I preferred you over the worlds” (al-Baqara: 122). We are, therefore, given precedence over other peoples by testimony of your own holy book’!

= definitive of true religion, such that I need not ask whether it be true.” He replied, “I found belief in Allah and now I continue pursuing the straight path.”’ Ahmad also rated it as authentic in his Musnad (384-385) as well as Muslim (38).

(1) Al-Wahidi states in his Asbab An-Nuzul, on the circumstances surrounding the revelation of the verse of al-Kafirun, that a band of members from the tribe of Quraysh went up to Muhammad and said to him, ‘Come! Try our religion, and we will try yours; experiment with our gods, and we will attempt to worship your one God. If this new religion you bring is better than what we already have, we will freely participate in it and take our fair portion of it. If, however, our religion is better than the one which you bring, then have part of our faith and come worship with us.’ He said in response, “Allah forbid that I worship anything other than Him.”’. As part of the Prophet’s response, Allah revealed this verse, beginning with: ‘Say, “O disbelievers…”’ (al-Kafirun: 1).

However, according to this argument, this precedence is not absolute, but rather a product of time and place. Otherwise, they would also take precedence over Ibrahim (Abraham) and Ishaq (Isaac) peace be upon them which they do not claim to be the case.

Allah's statement '…and I have been commanded to do justice among you…' (ash-Shura: 15) means restoring balance and fairness without contention such that each person may have his rights. This means not giving preference or priority to one person over another in your views or treatment of them. One must even distribute his glances evenly, as the Prophet peace and blessings be upon him did when sitting amongst the Companions, showing no preference to one person to another. He did not want them to think that just because he had fixed his gaze longer on one or the other, that he thought that that person had more prestige or power or experience or strength. All were equal in his sight, which shows the Prophet's fair treatment and sense of justice with regard to his fellow human beings.

In the following verse, 'Allah is our Lord and your Lord.' (ash-Shura: 15) means that Allah Glorified is He is not the Lord of Muhammad's followers alone, but also of those who did not yet believe in Him. And as long as this is the case, His Lordship is over us all and His revealed path is one and final, made known to everyone. The next statement in the verse is one of many which indicate the perfect completeness of that lordship when Allah teaches us to: 'For us are our deeds, and for you your deeds' (ash-Shura: 15). This means, of course, that each person will have to answer for his or her actions alone, 'There is no [need for] argument between us and you' (ash-Shura: 15) meaning, no disagreement and discord which can lead only to dispute, stubbornness and enmity, and which do not lead back to the truth. In times of contention, each person will decide to follow his own path, rather than trying to come together.

Allah further takes up this subject in the chapter of al-Kafirun: 'Say, "O disbelievers! I do not worship what you worship. Nor are you worshippers of what I worship. Nor will I be a worshipper of what you worship. Nor will you be worshippers of what I worship. For you is your religion, and for me is my religion.' (al-Kafirun: 1-6). Thus, there is no reason to argue here because the discord between belief and doubt is unequivocal and final. This is unlike other aspects of human society, such as international politics. At times, certain nations cut off relations with each other, only to be forced to reconcile again by extenuating circumstances. This is not the case with faith and disbelief which can never be reconciled. That is why, when we attend closely to the statements made in chapter of al-Kafirun, we find the negation of any such reconciliation, whether now or in the future: ‘I do not worship what you worship. Nor are you worshippers of what I worship. (al-Kafirun: 2-3) referring to the present and ‘Nor will I be a worshipper of what you worship. Nor will you be worshippers of what I worship’ (al-Kafirun: 4-5) referring to the future.

At the end of the verse, Allah says, ‘Allah will bring us together, and to Him is the [final] destination’ (ash-Shura: 15). This means that, even if we continue contending with one another here on earth, Allah will bring us together to account for our deeds on the Day of Judgment, each person answering for his own actions here on earth. On that day, He will give each person that which is deserved; everyone would do well to leave the judgment of their deeds to the Just, which will show they are confident in their deeds on earth and that they are in the right. Indeed, Allah’s Wisdom is sufficient, ‘…and to Him is the [final] destination.’ (ash-Shura: 15) It is to Him that we shall return.

وَٱلَّذِينَ يُحَآجُّونَ فِي ٱللَّهِ مِنۢ بَعۡدِ مَا ٱسۡتُجِيبَ لَهُۥ حُجَّتُهُمۡ
دَاحِضَةٌ عِندَ رَبِّهِمۡ وَعَلَيۡهِمۡ غَضَبٞ وَلَهُمۡ عَذَابٞ شَدِيدٌ ١٦

As for those who argue about God after He has been acknowledged, their argument has no weight with their Lord: anger will fall upon them and agonizing torment awaits them [16] (The Quran, ash-Shura: 16)

Allah’s statement: ‘And those who argue concerning Allah…’ (ash-Shura: 16) means that they still contend with each other over Allah’s religion. This statement refers to those who have already answered the call of the truth. And the statement: ‘…after He has been responded to…’ (ash-Shura: 16) means that those who argue over religion say to the believers, ‘Our religion and messengers are older than yours. Your very Quran testifies that we are the best people among those who have knowledge of divine religion’. Allah says about them: '…their argument is invalid with their Lord' (ash-Shura: 16). This means that their claims are futile and are not accepted by Allah and it is unwise to ever try to turn to them. The statement: 'and upon them is [His] wrath…' (ash-Shura: 16) refers to Allah's Anger and denunciation of them since they did not stop disbelieving, but sought to bring others down into similar disbelief. In this, the disbelievers bear responsibility for their burdens and those of the people whom they caused to go astray. They, therefore, deserve this fate, namely Allah's Wrath which is the first of many stages of His punishment. On that account, Allah Glorified is He mentioned in a Qudsi Hadith (1) how He was displeased with a group of people. They were cast out of His Mercy for good. To further illustrate this progression, take for example an owner of a company with employees and workers. One employee commits an error and the boss instantly gets mad. However, his heart softens and once again he leaves the employee to his duties. However, the employee soon commits another error and so his boss says, 'I do not want to see you again' as though the boss wanted to create a barrier or a veil between himself and the employee. Later, the boss reprimands the employee by deciding to fire him, just like when Allah cast stubborn disbelievers out of His Mercy.

In the same manner, Allah Glorified is He grew angry with those who contend over religion, after which He distanced and created a veil between them and Him, finally condemning them and casting them out of His Mercy, 'and for them is a severe punishment' (ash-Shura: 16).

ٱللَّهُ ٱلَّذِىٓ أَنزَلَ ٱلْكِتَٰبَ بِٱلْحَقِّ وَٱلْمِيزَانَ ۗ وَمَا يُدْرِيكَ لَعَلَّ ٱلسَّاعَةَ قَرِيبٌ ﴿١٧﴾

It is God who has sent down the Scripture with Truth and the Balance. How can you tell? The Last Hour may well be near [17] (The Quran, ash-Shura: 17)

In the statement: '…in truth…' (ash-Shura: 17), 'the truth' refers to that which is fixed and does not change. It is certainly also that which remains victorious after all is said and done. Even if vain falsehood gets the better of truth from time to time, this is yet for a wise purpose, since falsehood nips at people's heels in order to repel them and cause them to inquire after truth and to seek refuge in its protection. The final victory, therefore, goes to the truth, no matter how long falsehood lasts or assails or roams freely. Accordingly, we previously said that falsehood is one of the soldiers in Allah's army.

(1) A Qudsi Hadith is a narration, a Hadith which, from the perspective of its meaning, is from Allah the Exalted and from the perspective of its wording, from the Messenger of Allah peace and blessings be upon him.

Let us now draw from the imagery, which Allah uses, to clarify the relationship between truth and falsehood. Allah Glorified is He states: 'He sends down from the sky, rain, and valleys flow according to their capacity, and the torrent carries rising foam. And from that [ore] which they heat in the fire, desiring adornments and utensils, is a foam like it. Thus, Allah presents [the example of] truth and falsehood. As for the foam, it vanishes, [being] cast off; but as for that which benefits the people, it remains on the earth. Thus, does Allah present examples' (ar-Ra'd: 17). Therefore, the truth is that which remains, whereas falsehood is that which fades and vanishes. Because of this, we see the attempts by those who fight against the Quran's message including efforts to criticize its rhetorical style. For example, they often disparage the following verse: '…and made the word of those who disbelieved the lowest, while the word of Allah - that is the highest' (at-Tawba: 40) saying that this is an incorrect statement since the cause of those bent on denying the truth was already utterly low, without Allah doing anything to it, the same being true of Allah's cause being supreme from the beginning. This contradiction is the result of a lack of understanding of Allah and of their lack of understanding of linguistic style of the Quran. This verse means that Allah Glorified is He made their cause utterly low; it is the object of a change which Allah put into effect. As for Allah's Cause, however, it is not such an object, since His cause is supreme from the very beginning. It was not initially low and then somehow made high by Allah, which is evidenced by the fact that it is the subject of the sentence, rather than the object.

The statement '…and the balance…' (ash-Shura: 17) means that Allah brought something tangible for mankind, an instrument used to differentiate between truth and falsehood(1) by measuring proper weights. So, the issue is not random, but rather, there is an established, palpable measure for insuring justice and equality. The only difference in measuring weight is in the substance placed on the balances. A measure of wheat or potatoes, for example, is not worth the same as a measure of gold. We find certain goldsmiths who fashion balances with a glass casing around them, in order to block out more air, which might interfere with the measurement. In this way, they create their balances with the precision necessary for proper measurement. With the least amount of tilt due to this precision, measuring gold yields a different weight than when measuring potatoes, for example.

(1) Falsehood; This is the contextual meaning of this word, which was mentioned by Al-Qurtubi in his interpretation (9/6058). He mentioned a few definitions to it: =

In short, the word ‘balance’ means those laws which govern what lies between truth and falsehood. In the chapter of al-Hadid, Allah says: ‘We have already sent Our messengers with clear evidences and sent down with them the Scripture and the balance that the people may maintain [their affairs] in justice’ (al-Hadid: 25). In other words, justice and truth were the final goal of bestowing revelation on chosen apostles. Allah Glorified is He brought the balance of revelation in order to give every person that which he rightfully deserves and to mete out a just reward to those who should receive it. He also did this so that no one would take more than he deserves and that one person might not violate the rights of others by taking that which does not belong to him.

This verse: ‘And what will make you perceive? Perhaps the Hour is near.’ (ash-Shura: 17) refers to the fact that those who disbelieved in Allah’s message had previously asked His Messenger peace and blessings be upon him to bring them word of the exact time of the Last Hour, as the Quran relates about them elsewhere: ‘And they ask, “When is this promise, if you should be

= - balance= justice, according to Ibn `Abbas and the majority of interpreters
- balance= what was revealed to human beings from divine orders
- balance= justice in what was allowed for us to do and what were prohibited from, according to Qatada
- balance= Al-Qurtubi said, ‘These definitions are close in meaning.’
- balance= getting rewarded for doing good deeds and getting punished for sinning
- balance= of weights, which was sent down from Allah in order for people not to experience injustice if and when they misuse it, according to Mujahid

It was also said that this ‘balance’ is personified in Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him by which he judges between people through the teachings and orders of the Quran.

truthful?"' (al-Anbiya': 38) They sought out this knowledge out of sarcasm and ridiculing the idea of the Last Hour. We also note that the verb yudrika (perceive) appears in the present tense in the phrase, 'And what will make you perceive?' (ash-Shura: 17) In another context, it appears conjugated in the past tense: 'The Inevitable Reality. What is the Inevitable Reality? And what can make you know what the Inevitable Reality is?' (al-Haqqa: 1-3) Here, the fact that the verb in the phrase 'And what could make you know…' (al-Haqqa: 3) signifies that it is an eternal truth which was unknown before, but which is now acknowledged. As for the statement 'And what will make you perceive?' (ash-Shura: 17), it refers to the fact that none other but Allah will inform the disbelievers about the Last Hour. In another verse, Allah refers to revelation of this matter in terms of the future: 'None will reveal its time except Him.' (al-A'raf: 187), meaning, it will never come until Allah Glorified is He reveals it.

أَنَّهَا ٱلۡحَقُّۗ أَلَآ إِنَّ ٱلَّذِينَ يُمَارُونَ فِي ٱلسَّاعَةِ لَفِي ضَلَٰلِۭ بَعِيدٍ ﴿١٨﴾

Those who do not believe in it seek to hasten it, but the believers stand in awe of it. They know it to be the Truth; those who argue about the Hour are far, far astray [18]

In the affirmation that they 'are impatient for it' (ash-Shura: 18), 'it' refers to the Last Hour. This verse refers to the people as 'Those who do not believe in it…' (ash-Shura: 18), they do not know of the Last Hour and do not have faith that it will come, nor do they know what will happen when it comes. For this reason, they ask the Messenger of Allah peace and blessings be upon him to tell them about it, saying things like, 'Give us word about the coming of this hour, for we wish to see it!' out of sarcasm and ridicule. If they truly knew what horrors awaited them at the Last Hour, they would not seek its coming so vehemently and in such sarcastic tones. This, then, is the state of disbelievers regarding the Day of Judgment.

Those who do believe in it, on the other hand, are in an entirely different state: 'but those who believe are fearful of it…' (ash-Shura: 18). In other words, they fear the horrors of the Last Hour when they realise that what has been said on the matter is true. They also fear the sharp precision of the final accounting of our lives at that hour and the torment which it will bring. In the phrase '…and know that it is the truth…' (ash-Shura: 18), Allah did not say, 'true' instead He said, 'the truth' so there is no use trying to make a lie of it, or even to doubt it in any way. For this reason, Allah describes those who contend over the matter of the Last Hour as being in extreme error: 'Unquestionably, those who dispute concerning the Hour are in extreme error' (ash-Shura: 18). Again, the idea of calling something into question, especially in this case, is only futile squabble which does not bring people nearer to the truth.

The description of these disbelievers as having gone far astray is appropriate, since even the simplest rational consideration of the matter confirms the coming of the Day of Judgment and the necessity of it as far as our mortal lives are concerned. This is because, if we contemplate the reality of our lives, we find that the acts we have committed in this world provide the starting point for our reward or punishment in the next. It is therefore imperative to furnish a reward to those good people who have done good, and a punishment to those who have committed acts of evil.

Over the course of the early years of life, people receive education as students at school, wherein teachers administer monthly tests to them, then mark the errors on those tests in red so that the student knows which mistakes he made and how to correct them. On the final exam, however, the errors are not marked in red; rather, the test is simply given a final grade, pass or fail, which represents a kind of final accounting, and a reward or punishment depending on how well the student did on the exam. If this is how people everywhere organise their evaluation of students, then we should not disbelieve the fact that Allah the Glorified and Exalted does the same thing with our very lives. There are many different types of people who all respond to Allah's Message differently—the believer and the disbeliever, the obedient and the rebellious, the doer of good deeds and the doer of bad deeds, etc. How, then could we possibly evaluate each of these as equal to all the others?

Anyone with a sense of justice would say that no transgressor dies until Allah the Glorified and Exalted seeks His vengeance against that person, since reason says that it is not right for such a person to commit his crimes without then receiving a punishment. If any rational, thinking person was to see a transgressor die happily, without any ill will coming upon him, that thinking person would have to conclude that there is another life beyond this world, in which the transgressor is punished for his wickedness on earth. If this were not so, then criminals and transgressors would win and continue committing their crimes, and that punishment which they deserve in the Hereafter would be lost.

God is most subtle towards His creatures; He provides [bounti- fully] for whoever He will; He is the Powerful, the Almighty [19] (The Quran, ash-Shura: 19)

The meaning of the phrase 'Most-Kind' is that Allah the Glorified and Exalted is extremely compassionate to His slaves.

He forgives aplenty and does not chastise any of His faithful slaves the first time a crime is committed. We see this in a story(1) from the time of `Umar Allah be pleased with him in which a crowd of people brought forward a woman for judgment on claims that she was a thief. The woman said to him, 'By Allah, I have never stolen anything before now.' He Allah be pleased with him responded, 'You have said a lie for Allah would not uncover you for the first crime.'(2) Regarding this matter, Allah the Glorified and Exalted states, '…although He pardons much' (ash-Shura: 30) referring to those faults which will yet emerge; He does not chastise those who commit errors excepting those most apparent mistakes.

(1) The story of `Umar ibn Al- Khattab, with the woman whose son stole for the first time

(2) Al-Bayhaqi extracts this Hadith in his greater collection of Hadiths of the Prophet peace and blessings be upon him (286-288), from a Hadith stating that `Umar brought forth a thief, who said, 'By Allah, I have never stolen before now.' `Umar responded: 'You have told a lie of that which Allah grants unto a faithful slave upon his first guilty act.' He then forbade the man from future theft. Ibn Dawud also extracts this Hadith in his Az-Zuhd (51-58); likewise, Al-Muttaqi Al-Hindi, in his Treasure of the Workers, from the sayings attributed to `Umar (Hadith #13949). Ibn Hajar writes in the margins that Ibn Wahab related this Hadith from his mosque, being endowed with extraordinary knowledge of his Prophet as evidence of the correctness of this saying.

Among other meanings of the phrase ‘Most-Kind’ is that of one who is precise, whose wisdom and forethought penetrate all things deeply. We have stated previously, regarding material objects, that nothing can withstand Him, no matter how miniscule or violent or recalcitrant. This has been portrayed to us in the example of someone who constructs a house in the woods, placing iron bars on the windows to keep wolves and beasts away and from coming inside. However, that person soon finds flies and mosquitoes present in the surrounding environment, and so he returns from his labours with a finer, tighter screen for preventing bugs from entering the house.

In the same way that the man in this example builds his house so that nothing, not even tiny bugs, gets past the exterior, one of the meanings of this description of The Most-High as ‘Most-Kind’ is that nothing gets past Him nor hides from Him, no matter how miniscule. This usage differs slightly from how we employ the word ‘kind’ when referring to a well-mannered person of good moral pith. In such a case, we say he is ‘kind’ to mean that he is gentle and mild in his treatment of others.

Thus, it is out of His Kindness for us that He provides, for example, a way for us to repent that is accepted by Him. He has also allotted seasons of worship wherein the worth of the good that we do multiplies and the evil of our bad deeds is diminished. These times are special occasions for obedience and for obtaining more value from good deeds in Allah’s sight. It is out of Allah’s Kindness that, in such special periods of devotion, He makes one good deed the worth of ten, up to seven hundred times; and as for a bad deed, He diminishes it to one.(1)

We then read Allah’s statement ‘…He provides sustenance for whomever He wills – for He alone is Powerful, Almighty!’ (ash-Shura: 19) This means that he sustains whomever He pleases because He is the Creator, and He is that one who calls His creations unto accountability for His blessing of them with sustenance. In this, Allah the Glorified and Exalted is also the Strong, since kindness does not come without strength. Indeed, He is the Almighty and the Subduer, whom nothing can restrain and whom nothing can conquer

(1) This Hadith is extracted in Kitab Al-`Iman, as well as by Ahmad in his Musnad (6898, 8957, 10061), from a Hadith quoted by Abu Hurayra: ‘For those who have not done a good deed, write “he has committed one good deed.” But if he has truly committed a good deed, then write “he has done ten good deeds.” And for those who do one bad deed, do not write “he has committed one bad deed.” But if he has truly committed that bad deed, then write “he has done one bad deed.”’

مَن كَانَ يُرِيدُ حَرْثَ ٱلْـَٔاخِرَةِ نَزِدْ لَهُۥ فِى حَرْثِهِۦ ۖ وَمَن كَانَ
يُرِيدُ حَرْثَ ٱلدُّنْيَا نُؤْتِهِۦ مِنْهَا وَمَا لَهُۥ فِى ٱلْـَٔاخِرَةِ مِن نَّصِيبٍ ﴿٢٠﴾

If anyone desires a harvest in the life to come, We shall increase it for him; if anyone desires a harvest in this world, We shall give him a share of it, but in the Hereafter he will have no share [20] (The Quran, ash-Shura: 20)

The literal meaning of the word al-harth (harvest) is the tilling of the earth with the stirrings of a plough for the purpose of sowing seeds therein. The tilling is necessary because small plants are not powerful enough to pierce through the hard soil themselves. For this reason, we break up the soil for them, so as to facilitate their growth. After breaking through the soil, small seedlings then need air; by turning the soil over through tilling, we allow this needed air to enter. Back when harvesting the ground was the reason fruits were produced by the earth, it became known by the name ‘harvest’ meaning those fruits of the earth which are expected to be gained through cultivation.

In the Quran, we see the figurative idea of sowing and harvesting, for example, in Allah’s statement ‘But whenever he prevails, he goes about the earth spreading corruption and destroying [man’s] tilth and progeny: and Allah does not love corruption.’ (al-Baqara: 205) We see it elsewhere as well, such as Allah’s following statement ‘and [remember] Dawud (David) and Sulaiman (Solomon) – [how it was] when both gave judgment concerning the field into which some people’s sheep had strayed…’ (al-Anbiya’: 78) referring in this instance to actual fields

Thus, the meaning of the phrase ‘To him who desires a harvest in the life to come…’ (ash-Shura: 20) is that the reward of the Hereafter is eternal and its blessings everlasting, in paradise. In this way, Allah the Glorified and Exalted clarifies things pertaining to the true religion using images from the reality of our lives, in order to help our minds approximate them better. We read, for example, ‘Truly shall the believers have success’ (al-Mu’minun: 1). They have success, those who are able to gain their desired results from cultivation of the earth, almost being to the point of reaping the fruits of their labours: likewise, the believer, who gains an eternal reward and firmly established blessings.

In sum, the verse, ‘To him who desires a harvest in the life to come, We shall grant an increase in his harvest…’ (ash-Shura: 20) means that such a person will find increase in the Hereafter, and that his reward will be more than he has been hoping for; it also means that the good things of this world will not be kept from him, either. In other words, a person’s efforts and tiresome toil to do good while in this world do not prevent him from obtaining the practical fruits of his labours: ‘…Verily, We do not fail to requite any who persevere in doing good’ (al-Kahf: 30). Then, we read ‘…whereas to him who desires [but] a harvest in this world, We [may] give something thereof…’ (ash-Shura: 20), namely, the fruits of this world. In like fashion as those who obtain a harvest in the next life, those who seek after what this world has to offer are not kept from enjoying the pleasures and delights thereof, but by rushing headlong after earthly rewards, they are prevented from securing such rewards in the Hereafter: ‘…but he will have no share in [the blessings of] the life to come.’ (ash-Shura: 20) In other words, he will have no good portion or reward in the Hereafter since he chased after glory and fame and wealth and riches in this world. As long as someone seeks after something for the right reasons, he shall obtain it, even if that person is a disbeliever. Likewise, if a believer is idle and neglectful in seeking good things, then he will not obtain them since he did not pursue them for the right cause.

Allah the Glorified and Exalted does not accept any actions except those dedicated especially to Him; and those who wish for a harvest in this world, do not have Allah the Glorified and Exalted on their minds at all. For this reason, many people ask about the fate of those scholars and inventors who did a service to humanity through their inventions and discoveries since their minds were preoccupied with things of this world. Theirs is a fate in hell since they did what they did for the sake of people and not Allah—they were in it for the fame, which they took as their reward from this world.

كَلِمَةُ ٱلْفَصْلِ لَقُضِىَ بَيْنَهُمْ ۗ وَإِنَّ ٱلظَّـٰلِمِينَ لَهُمْ عَذَابٌ أَلِيمٌ ﴿٢١﴾

How can they believe in others who ordain for them things which God has not sanctioned in the practice of their faith?
If it were not for God's decree concerning the final Decision, judgement would already have been made between them.
The evildoers will have a grievous punishment [21]

The general question put forth by this verse is: Why did the disbelievers act as if Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him and the message which he brought forth were lies? Do they believe in deities other than Allah, who gave law and a righteous Way for them to follow? Did those other deities bestow a religion upon them in which they profess a belief such that they therefore leave behind the religion of Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him? By the phrase '…deities who have ordained for them a religion to which Allah has not consented…' (ash-Shura: 21), the verse is referring to those things aside from Allah which the disbelievers would worship. For example, some would worship the sun, others the moon, trees, rocks or angels. This verse asks: Do these other gods invite people to follow a set of religious laws? Have they established prescriptions for certain actions, and proscriptions against others, so that we know how to live our lives?

Thus, it is in vain that people worship gods which do not provide a right Way or spiritual obligations. In fact, those who do worship such gods do so because of this fact. There is no moral path or duties, and thus people who worship these other gods are happy to follow those urges of superficial piety found within themselves; indeed, what is easier for a person than a religion without spiritual obligations? Religious devotion per se is nothing more than the obedience of the worshipper to the object of worship in terms of prescribed and proscribed behaviour, and a system of reward and punishment determining that which is returned unto those who are obedient and disobedient to the established law.

In sum, then, this verse points out the fact that the inanimate objects chosen by disbelievers as things to be worshipped did not give any word to their followers; neither commanding nor legislating anything to them in the way of religious duties. Rather, these disbelievers made such duties up for themselves, following their own whims in order to satisfy their own internal sentiments. Indeed, these multiple gods were created by the people's hands, or through their own faulty, mistaken thoughts. For this reason, Allah the Glorified and Exalted states: 'It was not Allah who instituted (superstitions like those of) a slit-ear she-camel, or a she-camel let loose for free pasture, or idol sacrifices for twin-births in animals, or stallion-camels freed from work: It is blasphemers who invent a lie against Allah. But most of them lack wisdom.' (al-Ma'ida: 103) He affirms that these people attributed lies to Allah the Glorified and Exalted and by their own volition created religious injunctions which were not revealed by Allah's Power. Where did the people get their superstitions like the rules regarding a slit-ear she-camel, or a she-camel put out to pasture, or idol sacrifices for twin-births in animals or stallion-camels freed from work? These proscriptions did not come from Allah the Glorified Exalted; rather, the people invented them, making a lie against Him.

Take the slit-ear she-camel, a she-camel which has given birth five times. To them, such a she-camel was past her time, so they would slit her ear and leave her as a free-roaming she-camel, neither to be ridden nor to have her milk drunk, nor to be kept from drinking water or roaming the pasture as she pleased. These matters were not established by Allah the Glorified and Exalted who even permitted such a she-camel's meat to be used for its benefits, let alone her milk. Likewise, a she-camel let loose for free pasture (if one of the people complained of an ache or a mishap that befell him) it was believed that the situation would be rectified by letting the she-camel out to pasture, neither to be ridden nor to have her milk drunk, nor to be kept from drinking water or roaming the pasture as she pleased.

Idol sacrifices for twin-births involved prescriptions surrounding the delivery of newborn animals. If a sheep, for example, gave birth to a male lamb, they would slaughter it in sacrifice to their gods and give the meat to the servants and gatekeepers of the Ka`ba; if it birthed a female, they would keep it for the purposes of birthing future lambs. However, if the sheep gave birth to twins, one male and one female, they would preserve them both, since the female was related to her brother, the male lamb (which they would otherwise sacrifice to their gods).

Finally, the stallion-camel freed from work is a male camel whose back was protected from people riding on it by law after he had impregnated ten she-camels. His siring of ten calves was a sign to the people that he was past his time, neither to be ridden nor to be kept from drinking water or roaming the pasture as he pleased.

All these things which the people of that time prohibited unto themselves were permitted to them by Allah the Glorified Exalted. Thus, His statement to them in the chapter of al-An`am: '[His followers would have it that, in certain cases, any of these] four kinds of cattle of either sex [is unlawful to man]: either of the two sexes of sheep and of goats. Ask [them]: "Is it the two males that He has forbidden, or the two females, or that which the wombs of the two females may contain? Tell me what you know in this respect, if what you say is true." And [likewise they declare as unlawful] either of the two sexes of camels and of bovine cattle. Ask [them]: "Is it the two males that He has forbidden, or the two females, or that which the wombs of the two females may contain? Is it, perchance, that you [yourselves] were witnesses when Allah enjoined [all] this upon you?" And who could be wicked than he who, without any [real] knowledge, attributes his own lying inventions to Allah, and thus leads people astray? Behold, Allah does not grace [such] evildoing folk with His guidance.' (al-An'am: 143-144) In this then, Allah the Glorified and Exalted asks them to tell Him who prohibited these things '…Is it, perchance, that you [yourselves] were witnesses when Allah enjoined [all] this upon you? ...' (al-An'am: 144). By 'this' in the phrase 'enjoined this', the verse is referring to those proscriptions which the people themselves put into place, making a lie of the fact that Allah the Glorified and Exalted had allowed them certain actions and behaviours. Thus, the people made themselves receivers of Allah's law, into lawgivers, prescribing rules for themselves rather than trying to encounter such moral codes in Allah's true religion.

Next, we read in the verse under consideration: '…Now were it not for [Allah's] decree on the final judgment…' (ash-Shura: 21) meaning the decision against their destruction and delaying their punishment until the Hereafter,

‘…all would indeed have been decided between them [in this world]…’ (ash-Shura: 21) meaning a speedy punishment for them in this world.

When we look at those things which Allah the Glorified and Exalted has permitted and prohibited, we find that such injunctions are based on a consideration of what is useful, and on protection from that which is harmful to people. That which is permitted is of benefit to human beings, and that which is prohibited is detrimental, which is why we see some Orientalists arguing over those things which Allah the Glorified and Exalted prohibited from the Israelites from eating, for example, even though they are not harmful and other peoples would eat them without any negative result.

Indeed, Allah the Glorified and Exalted prohibited the Israelites from eating any type of cattle or camel with uncloven hooves, as well as animals of webbed feet, such as ducks, geese, and ostriches. He also prohibited them from eating the fat of animals: ‘…excepting that which is in their backs or entrails or that which is within the bone…’ (al-An‘am: 146). But all these things were permitted for people other than the Israelites to eat, and, moreover, they are not harmful when ingested. As to the reasoning behind these prohibitions, Allah the Glorified and Exalted states, ‘So, then, for the wickedness committed by those who followed the Jewish faith did We deny unto them certain of the good things of life which [a foretime] had been allowed to them…’ (an-Nisa’: 160). When the Israelites fell into wickedness, then, Allah the Glorified and Exalted chastised them so as to help them see their error, by prohibiting them from eating that of which other people were allowed to partake.

Moreover, we note how this verse expresses the futility which they brought forth by professing a religion which came from themselves: ‘Or have they other deities who have ordained for them a religion to which Allah has not consented?’ (ash-Shura: 21) Their vain inclination is figuratively called ‘religion’ because they have strong faith in albeit it oversteps the bounds of Allah’s decrees, as Allah the Glorified and Exalted states: ‘For you is your religion, and for me is my religion.’ (al-Kafirun: 6) Their faith is dependent upon what they believe in, the term ‘religion’ meaning the beliefs professed by man.

The last part of this verse states: ‘…but verily, grievous suffering awaits the evildoers [in the life to come].’ (ash-Shura: 21) Transgressors either do evil to others or unto themselves, the latter being the most horrible of transgression. It is at least reasonable to expect people to do evil unto their enemies; but how does one commit evil unto oneself, the being underneath one's own skin? The answer is that people inflict evil upon themselves when they subject themselves to punishment and prevent themselves from obtaining a reward and a blessing in the Hereafter. That is why evil committed to the self, in terms of religious devotion and faith in Allah, is the harshest from of transgression: '…for, behold, such [a false] ascribing of divinity is indeed an awesome wrong!' (Luqman: 13)

تَرَى ٱلظَّـٰلِمِينَ مُشْفِقِينَ مِمَّا كَسَبُوا۟ وَهُوَ وَاقِعٌۢ بِهِمْ ۗ
وَٱلَّذِينَ ءَامَنُوا۟ وَعَمِلُوا۟ ٱلصَّـٰلِحَـٰتِ فِى رَوْضَاتِ ٱلْجَنَّاتِ ۖ
لَهُم مَّا يَشَآءُونَ عِندَ رَبِّهِمْ ۚ ذَٰلِكَ هُوَ ٱلْفَضْلُ ٱلْكَبِيرُ ﴿٢٢﴾

You will see them fearful because of what they have done: punishment is bound to fall on them – but those who believe and do good deeds will be in the flowering meadows of the Gardens. They will have whatever they wish from their Lord: this is the great bounty [22] (The Quran, ash-Shura: 22)

'In this verse, the Arabic word for '[In that life to come,] you will see…' (ash-Shura: 22), 'tara' refers to all that which we perceive by means of physical sight; the phrase 'full of fear' (ash-Shura: 22) means that the evildoers will be frightened and terrified, and this '…at [the thought of] what they have earned…' (ash-Shura: 22) meaning at the thought of the reward meted out to them for their evil deeds. As noted before, the Arabic verb for 'they have earned' (kasaba, yaksabu) refers literally to obtaining an increased amount of capital, i.e. profits or returns; in a figurative sense, this form of the verb is collocated with 'good', as in 'to earn a good reward'. Another version of the verb, with the same root but different form, 'to be possessed of' (iktasaba) gives the sense of intentional attempts to invent or do something, and is often collocated with 'evil'. However, in this verse, the verb 'to earn' (kasaba) is used to refer to evil deeds, rather than its normal, more positive connotation. We see this elsewhere in the Quran such as following statement by Allah: 'Yea! Those who earn [kasaba] evil and by their sinfulness are engulfed…'

(al-Baqara: 81). This form of the verb, which is normally employed in reference to positive gains, is used here because, for evildoers, their wicked deeds have become like good deeds in their eyes, something normal and natural, just as good deeds seem natural to the righteous. When an evildoer commits a bad deed or a crime, it does not wear him out because he has become accustomed to it and even intimate with it.

Moving on, the phrase '…full of fear at [the thought of] what they have earned…' (ash-Shura: 22) refers to how the evildoers fearfully imagine their state on the Day of Judgment since they were not afraid while living in this mortal world and did not give thought to this Final Day. The phrase '…for [now] it is bound to fall back upon them…' (ash-Shura: 22) means that there is no escape from the final accounting, which Allah, in His Wisdom, has promised and made known to all people. These statements might also refer to those evildoers who begin to fear their final judgment while they are yet in this world, which indicates knowledge of one's wrongs and a sense of compunction present in human beings. A person knows when he has committed a wicked deed, and he knows the nature of his crime. Likewise, he knows that he is accountable for such things, hence why he begins to fear and to feel the pangs of conscience.

In contrast to the state of evildoers, we read, '…And in the flowering meadows of the gardens [of paradise you will see] those who have attained to faith and done righteous deeds: all that they might desire shall they have with their Sustainer: [and] this, this is the great bounty.' (ash-Shura: 22) This is a true intimation from Allah the Glorified and Exalted since the result of faith and good works is paradisiacal gardens meaning the refuge and rest of those most wonderful spaces to be found in paradise at the Day of Judgment; such places are even to be found on earth, albeit through imagination and longing for them. Therefore, the martyr who dies for Allah and who finds himself on the path of Allah the Glorified and Exalted does not come to tread that path except for his trust in this ultimate reward. And he who is killed while striving for the cause of Allah will go to a life much better than this one.

We have previously recalled the story of one of the Companions to Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him who heard directly from Allah's Messenger about the final reward for martyrs. He asked, 'O Messenger of Allah, is it not true that the only thing standing between me and paradise is that I fight those [disbelievers] until the death?' He peace and blessings be upon him answered, "yes." So the Companion, who had placed a date in his mouth while speaking with Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him rushed off to die a martyr before he even had a chance to chew the date in his mouth.'(1) The reason is that he trusted the truthfulness of Allah's words regarding the final reward reserved for martyrs: 'But do not think of those that have been slain in Allah's Cause as dead. Nay, they are alive! With their Sustainer have they their sustenance' (Al-'Imran: 169). Indeed, martyrs are alive, alive with their Lord, which is the peak of honour, strength, and blessing, a particularity which those other than martyrs do not obtain. This is because martyrdom facilitates movement from one life to the next, since they do not die, but rather resurrect with the rest of humanity and are made alive.

One poet(2) expressed this idea when he wrote the following lines concerning the foremost of martyrs, Hamza ibn `Abd Al-Muttalib Allah be pleased with him Prophet Muhammad's uncle:

O Hamza, uncle of the Chosen, you are without exception

Foremost among all the martyrs of the earth,

And protection is enough for you, choice among martyrs, protection

From that death connecting two worlds, this one and the next, one to the other.

Next, we read the statement '…And in the flowering meadows of the gardens [of paradise]…' (ash-Shura: 22). The phrase 'flowering meadows' refers to gardens full of greenery, flowers, blooms and fruits such that one would catch the wafting aroma of its fragrances if one entered it, watching the streams of water running past. Those who believe in Allah the Glorified and Exalted and do good works in this life will be in the flowering meadows of the gardens of paradise meaning the most beautiful places therein found. Moreover, '…all that they might desire shall they have with their Sustainer…' (ash-Shura: 22), a state which is more honourable and grand than any other conceivable blessing since believers find themselves in the bounty of paradise and its refuge from the world. Going further, all this abundance is enjoyed in the presence of their Lord, hence how Allah concludes this verse: '…[and] this, this is the great bounty' (ash-Shura: 22), meaning Allah's favour and blessing upon them. Therefore, when a person contemplates this abiding, everlasting blessing which Allah the Glorified and Exalted gives unto His believing slaves, any hardship in worship of or obedience to Allah becomes easy. In this situation, a person sees that such hardships are easy when he connects them (in his mind) to the reward received for undertaking them.

(1) Al-Bukhari extracts this Hadith for its correctness (Hadith #374), quoting from Jabir ibn `Abdullah, who states: 'A man asked Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him "If you saw me killed while fighting for the true religion, where would I go?" Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him responded, "To paradise." The man, who had a date in his mouth, rushed off to combat the disbelievers until he was killed.' An-Nasa`i also extracts this Hadith, in his Sunnan (Hadith #3130), as well as Ahmad in his Musnad (Hadith #13794).

(2) The poet is Sheikh Ash-Sha`rawi Allah rest his soul.

Humans become worn out by the world. They spend dozens of years seeking knowledge in school, or learning a trade or profession, carrying all the hardships and dangers that go along with this, in order to simply meet the needs of daily life. If they toil and sweat and expend more effort than this, they might even obtain a degree of opulence and luxury, perhaps employing servants to wait on them or cooks to prepare food for them. Such domestic employees work for people as a recompense for the hard work expended to get to the point where people can afford such luxuries. However, that recompense could be lost at any time if, for example, the servants and cooks became angry with their employer and decided to defy his orders.

People find a completely different situation if they strive for a reward in the Hereafter since following the injunctions of true religion is a straightforward matter, not requiring of humans all the toil and sweat and late nights and working during the day and preoccupation of mind. And even though adhering to Allah's Commandments is a painless effort, it carries with it a great and limitless reward which we cannot possibly imagine.

As noted, the most which humankind has achieved through scientific progress can be seen in somethings like hotels and travel services, where a person can press a button on a machine from which coffee or tea is produced and served. But this is a device, its motor could stall, impeding its ability to dispense the desired refreshments; the sought-after reward is not afforded in this case. However, in the Hereafter, the final reward is firmly established and everlasting and nothing can disturb or spoil it. It does not require any request or pushing of buttons or the summoning of a servant to provide it. In paradise, we only need to call up the desired objects in our minds and we will find it instantaneously in our hands. We see this in the following Hadith of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him 'The reward of the Hereafter contains that which eye has not seen nor ear heard, nor occurred to the mind of man.'(1)

We read of this in the chapter of al-Baqara, for example: 'But unto those who have attained to faith and do good works give the glad tiding that theirs shall be gardens through which running waters flow. Whenever they are granted fruits therefrom as their appointed sustenance, they will say, "It is this that in days of yore was granted to us as our sustenance!" – for they shall be given something that will recall that [past]. And there shall they have spouses pure,(2) and there shall they abide.' (al-Baqara: 25) And, Allah willing, we will find in paradise those things which we used to eat here on earth. Or at least, this is how we now imagine them to be: '…they will say, "It is this that in days of yore was granted to us as our sustenance!…"' (al-Baqara: 25) However, when we actually taste such things in paradise, we will find that they differ completely from those culinary sensations experienced in mortality. This is because the blessings and pleasures of paradise do not run out or continue in one monotonous state; they are that much more desirable than what we are used to in the mortal realm.

In all, then, we behold in these verses the vision of an eternal reward which softens the trials which come as we follow Allah's Methodology. It would be enough even if the reward for obedience was only peace and happiness on earth for humans. It would suffice us to have peace of mind, tranquillity of soul and a sense of reassurance about the future, a point expressed by the poet(1) when he writes:

(1) Muslim extracts this for its correctness (2824), as does Ahmad in his Musnad (462-466), and Abu Na`im (262-263) in Al-Haliyya from a Hadith quoted by Abu Hurayra.

(2) At-Tabari states in his commentary (391-395): 'The term "mutahhara" (pure) means that the (female) spouses are purified of all pains and annoyances resulting from undesirable bodily functions and substances as experienced by women while on Earth. These include menstruation, childbirth, faeces, urine, mucus, spittle, semen and other physical annoyances, pains and unwanted substances such as these.'

Said the astronomer and the doctor both,
‘Human bodies do not resurrect!’ I replied,
‘If what you say is true, then I lose nothing;
‘But if what I say is true, the loss is yours.’(2)

For this reason, Allah the Glorified and Exalted when He wanted to describe paradise to us did not describe it as it is, since it is above human capacity to imagine what it would be like. Rather, Allah uses things we know and which are like unto paradise in order to portray it to us. Indeed, if the reward of the Hereafter contains that which the eye has not seen, nor ear heard nor occurred to the mind of man, then how can we expect it to be illustrated to us in its fullness? Humans cannot assign a word to something unless it is an object already known to them; as for those things which they know nothing about, it follows that they also cannot know the right word for them. Thus, there are no words in our language to describe the eternal reward of paradise, as we see in the following statement: ‘The parable of the paradise promised to those who are conscious of Allah [is that of a garden]…’ (ar-Ra‘d: 35), a garden in which certain things are found.

This poses the question, to whom is such a reward promised? The answer is that it is promised to those who believe in Allah the Glorified and Exalted while on earth, and who join their faith with good works. We see an injunction to bring together faith and good works in various places in the Quran, such as the following verse: ‘[But] behold, as for those who say, “Our Sustainer is

(1) Abu Al-`Ala` Al-Ma`arri, Ahmad ibn `Abdullah, a poet and philosopher. He was born in Ma`arra in modern-day Syria in the year 363 A.H/ 973 CE, and he began composing poetry when he was only eleven years old. He travelled to Baghdad in 398 A.H to live there. Upon his passing, 84 poets stood at his grave to eulogize him. He famously abstained from eating meat. His works include Luzum Ma La Yalzam, Suqt Az-Zand and Daw` As-Saqt. He died in the year 449 A.H/ 1057 CE.

(2) These two lines come from one of Abu Al-`Ala` Al-Ma`arri’s poems written in the Bahr (meter) Al-Kamil and comprising seven total lines.

Allah", and then steadfastly pursue the right way – upon them do angels often descend, [saying:] "Fear not and grieve not, but receive the glad tiding of that paradise which has been promised to you!"' (Fussilat: 30).

After this, Allah the Glorified and Exalted states:

ٱلْمَوَدَّةَ فِى ٱلْقُرْبَىٰ ۗ وَمَن يَقْتَرِفْ حَسَنَةً نَّزِدْ لَهُۥ فِيهَا حُسْنًا ۚ إِنَّ ٱللَّهَ غَفُورٌ شَكُورٌ ﴿٢٣﴾

It is of this that God gives good news to His servants who believe and do good deeds. Say [Prophet], 'I ask no reward from you for this, only the affection due to kin.' If anyone does good, We shall increase it for him; God is most forgiving and most appreciative [23] (The Quran, ash-Shura: 23)

In this verse, the word 'that [bounty]' (ash-Shura: 23) refers to the reward in paradise discussed above. The phrase '…whereof Allah gives the glad tiding to such of His servants as attain to faith and do righteous deeds…' (ash-Shura: 23) indicates the 'glad tiding' of a good reward had in Allah's sight. After this statement, the context changes to address another topic, concerning Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him: that of inviting others to come unto the true religion. '…Say [O Prophet]: "No reward do I ask of you for this [message]…"' (ash-Shura: 23) meaning Allah the Glorified and Exalted commands Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him to say that he seeks no recompense for the invitation to true religion and the mission he has undertaken for their benefit. Moreover, he is never supposed to ask for such a repayment unless he does something truly extraordinary which does in fact deserve reward.

All of Allah's messengers peace be upon them have said similar things with regard to recompense for their mission as prophets, since people are accustomed to repaying those who render them a service or some good, or to one who hints at signs of his own misery. We therefore read prohibitions against repayment in the words of many prophets throughout the Quran: 'And, O my people, no benefit do I ask of you for this [message]: my reward rests with none but Allah…' (Hud: 29). The reason that a prophet's reward is with Allah is that he, as a messenger, performs a grand, unique, and honourable role, the value of which humankind cannot fully appreciate and the deserved reward of which humans cannot grant. Hence the affirmation that none but Allah the Glorified and Exalted who sent the prophets, can truly repay them.

As noted, all of Allah's messengers have enjoined the people against repayment. All but Prophet Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon him that is, and Prophet Musa (Moses) peace be upon him. This is because, when Prophet Ibrahim (Abraham) began inviting others to the true religion, he first called upon his father Azar, from whom it would be illogical to expect repayment; he therefore did not tell his father not to reward him. So, it is with Prophet Musa (Moses) peace be upon him who first called upon Pharaoh when undertaking to invite people to the true religion. Since Musa (Moses) peace be upon him already owed, a favour to Pharaoh, in Pharaoh's sight, as he was brought up in Pharaoh's house, and it would not make sense for Musa (Moses) peace be upon him to have asked Pharaoh to abstain from repaying him.

In sum, Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him is commanded to tell the people not to reward him for that missionary endeavour which he has undertaken for their benefit. Likewise, he is to inform them that his reward lies with Allah, who sent him, and Who can fully appreciate the Prophet's mission. He is to ask the people for nothing '…other than [that you should] love your fellow men…' (ash-Shura: 23). Here he requests that the people have compassion on their neighbours, or the turning of their hearts to other people in love, and that they treat those around them with all due appreciation and generosity.

It is as though Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him were saying to them: 'Verily was I sent (as a messenger) unto all people everywhere. And despite this, you received me with victimization, defied me in enmity, maltreated my family and friends, and forced me to seek refuge with those other than you—sometimes as an aimless itinerant, other times with the other tribes. Moreover, you compelled my friends and family to flee their homes and their lands. My ancestral line is spread out in the midst of Quraysh, even in Medina, wherein my maternal uncles from the Bani An-Najar tribe reside. You could therefore at the very least give me the right of my lineage, which right is that you not make a victim out of me; I do not force you to accept Islam, for example, nor do I attempt to victimize you. Likewise, it is from the right of my lineage that you not give me up unto my enemies. This is my right which you owe me'.

The meaning of the phrase '…other than [that you should] love your fellow men…' (ash-Shura: 23) might also refer to the Prophet's relatives and those living at home. This is because specific aspects of daily life were not permitted for the Prophet Muhammad's relatives, since they were not like the rest of the Muslims at the time. Money, for example, which poor people other than them had a right to receive, was prohibited to them. Their right, then, was for the people to treat them with all due beneficence and fairness, and to watch over them in the Prophet's stead.

For this reason, we find among The Hadiths of the Prophet peace and blessings be upon him many injunctions to honour and tend to his family and those living at home such as the following: 'Whoever dies for love and care of the family of the Messenger of Allah's house dies as a martyr, having been forgiven his sins and being made alive again by the angels at his grave. He has died and gone to a grave with a door which leads to paradise. However, those who hate the house of Muhammad are cut off from Allah's Mercy.'(1)

They stated this because Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him said things to this effect: 'Love Allah when He nourishes you with blessings. Likewise, love me with that love of Allah, and love the people of my house with that love which you have for me.'(2) This is yet another possible meaning of the phrase, '…other than [that you should] love your fellow men…' (ash-Shura: 23).

(1) Al-Qurtubi quotes this Hadith in his commentary of the chapter of ash-Shura, verse (23) in the following form: 'He who dies for love of the family of Muhammad dies a martyr. Whosoever dies for love of the family of Muhammad, Allah causes the angels to visit his grave with mercy. And for those who die in hatred of Muhammad's family, the Day of Judgment will find them with the phrase "Cut off from Allah's Mercy" written between their eyes. Likewise, those who die in hatred of Muhammad's family will not enjoy the fragrances of paradise. Those who die in hatred of my house have no final share of my intercession for them.' Az-Zamakshari also quotes this Hadith in his commentary, Al-Kashaf (992); it is also recalled by Al-`Albany in his Silsaleh Ad-Da`ifa (4920), saying: 'The topic is false.'

(2) At-Tirmidhi extracts this Hadith in his collection of sayings of Prophet Muhammad (3722); likewise, Al-Hakim in his supplement (4699); At-Tabarani in the Great Lexicon=

Yet a third meaning of '…other than [that you should] love your fellow men…' (ash-Shura: 23) might be that all those being addressed wished for their relatives to have their right according to lineage. Indeed, if any loving person who wishes to earn his keep were to give it to his relatives in order to provide them what is necessary to live and to help them attain a happier existence, then we would find no poor or needy people among us. This is because society is a series of interlocking communal circles, and if each of us were to provide for those needy members of our individual circle, the blessings of Allah would spread throughout all His creation.

There are other rights of possession had by relatives aside from zakat. If a rich man were to say that he gives of such monies to his brother, who is poor and in need, the appropriate thing for him to do would be to give his brother the clear majority, perhaps 97.5%, and to leave the other 2.5% to those poor people who are not related to him. Given this division of monies, leaving the 2.5% to give to other people aside from needy relatives, there are some who say they contribute their zakat funds to build schools, and others who contribute it to the building of hospitals or mosques. And by Allah, 2.5% of zakat offerings suffice for all these various causes. It is therefore necessary for those contributing to it, use it to maintain desirable conditions in society.

Thus, if we put zakat into proper usage as taught to us by the True Lord, i.e. to care for society and to protect those in need, we would not find anyone naked or hungry or sick, nor would we find heavy costs for treatment of such things. However, if we become lackadaisical about applying those principals which religious law enjoins upon us in this matter, these societal problems will continue to appear as we see them now.

Originally Allah the Glorified and Exalted distributed His bounty to all His creation; likewise, he engineered the societal economy in such a way that, if we properly apply His teachings on this matter, the poor person will come to live at the same socio-economic level as the rich person. Among other examples of this just division and distribution of blessings among people, we find that of a rich man in the village which has been his hometown since birth. Despite this, however, he moves to another town, where he spends his life and distributes the surplus of his wealth to the people there. We learn by this simple illustration the point that the presence of this man in his hometown provides an excess surplus to those whose lives he has been blessing for years. Allah the Glorified and Exalted therefore causes him to go to another place where the people are in need, in order for him to bless their lives there.

If everyone at the time of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him were doing this with their own relatives, then it makes sense that Prophet Muhammad would have charged the believers with taking care of his family, as well. He came close to doing this, because he knew that hard times would come upon those of his household, something to which history attests. We see, for example, how the Prophet's family members were scattered throughout other lands; and, moreover, how many of them were killed. In this, the love of the Egyptian people for the family of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him is well known, as well as their love for Abu Bakr and `Umar Allah be pleased with them there being no Shi`a among them.

In its most fundamental sense, love for one's fellow man means love first and foremost of Allah the Glorified and Exalted and His Messenger peace and blessings be upon him. If this love were only given by us to those whom we wish, then it would have negative consequences: if you are mad with someone, you might overlook the fact that he is in need; if you are learned, you might not perceive the need of another for knowledge and so on. In another sense, love for one's fellow man also signifies reverence for one's parents. As noted, Allah the Glorified and Exalted made respect for parents a sort of training grounds for increasing our faith in Allah. This is because our parents are the direct reason for our existence on earth, in similitude of Allah, who is our original Creator and therefore the higher source of our existence. Thus Allah the Glorified and Exalted states, '…We have enjoined on man kindness to parents…' (al-'Ankabut: 8). In another verse, He makes a similar pronouncement: '…We have enjoined upon man goodness towards his parents…' (al-Ahqaf: 15).

Even in the case of our parents' rebelliousness in that highest of orders, that of belief in Allah the Glorified and Exalted and in His Oneness, He commands us to revere and respect them: '…yet should they endeavour to make thee ascribe divinity, side by side with Me, to something which thy mind cannot accept [as divine], obey them not; but [even then] bear them company in this world's life with kindness…' (Luqman: 15). The greater emphasis is placed upon the mother in Allah's statement '…We have enjoined on man kindness to parents…' (al-'Ankabut: 8). Here He mentions both, but never does he specifically stress reverence to one's father. However, there are numerous places where especial emphasis is given to respecting one's mother, such as the following verse: '…His mother bore him by bearing strain upon strain…' (Luqman: 14). This is because her role has its greatest effect when children are small and unaware of the work performed by their mothers; it is therefore largely absent from their conscious memories. But when children grow up, they learn for themselves the role of their father by observing him. For this reason, Allah the Glorified and Exalted specifically mentions mothers, of whose role they are less consciously aware.

Moving on, we find the Quran making provisions for all cases of parenthood, and it therefore considers the rearing of children, even if this is performed by those other than a child's biological parents: '…And say, "O my Sustainer! Bestow Your Grace upon them, even as they cherished and reared me when I was a child!"' (al-Isra': 24) Whoever raises a child at home is to be treated as that child's parent, being given all due respect and reverence.

The next clause '…for if anyone gains [the merit of] a good deed…' (ash-Shura: 23) signifies obedience to Allah the Glorified Exalted. Then we read, '…we shall grant him through it an increase of good…' (ash-Shura: 23). The matter therefore does not stop merely at love for one's fellow men; we must also render them those good things which they need. Finally, the verse ends with the affirmation, '…And, verily, Allah is Much-Forgiving, ever responsive to gratitude' (ash-Shura: 23). Here, the terms 'ghafur' (Much-Forgiving) and 'ever responsive to gratitude' (shakur) are based on the emphatic noun form (fa`ul) and are taken from the normal active participle forms ‘forgiving’ (ghafir) and ‘grateful’ (shakir). This form of the noun confirms that Allah’s forgiveness spreads wide and His thankfulness is much indeed; He forgives all those who come unto Him in repentance, and is grateful to all who obey Him. Whether on the side of gratitude or ingratitude on the part of His creations, there is an increase of reward or punishment, as He states elsewhere: ‘…‘But if you are ungrateful, verily, My chastisement will be severe indeed!’ (Ibrahim: 7)

أَمْ يَقُولُونَ ٱفْتَرَىٰ عَلَى ٱللَّهِ كَذِبًا ۖ فَإِن يَشَإِ ٱللَّهُ يَخْتِمْ عَلَىٰ قَلْبِكَ ۗ وَيَمْحُ ٱللَّهُ
ٱلْبَٰطِلَ وَيُحِقُّ ٱلْحَقَّ بِكَلِمَٰتِهِۦٓ ۚ إِنَّهُۥ عَلِيمٌۢ بِذَاتِ ٱلصُّدُورِ ﴿٢٤﴾

How can they say, ‘He has invented a lie about God’? If God so willed, He could seal your heart and blot out lies: God confirms the Truth with His words. He has full knowledge of what is in the heart [24] (The Quran, ash-Shura: 24)

This verse refers to those disbelievers in Mecca, contemporary with Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him who accused Prophet Muhammad of lying about the divinity of the Quran and making it up himself, then attributing it to Allah. In the phrase ‘Or do they say…’ (ash-Shura: 24), ‘they’ refers to these disbelievers. Then, we read, ‘He has invented about Allah a lie’ (ash-Shura: 24). This statement means that Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him brought them the Quran, and that the false attribution is on their part rather than his, since they were expert wordsmiths and composers of songs and orations. Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him who had lived among them, was not known by the people for having talents in this area. However, if the disbelievers were the experts in these arts of poetry and speech, why did they not bring forth something like that which Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him did, not even one chapter? If the false attribution were on Muhammad’s part, then the disbelievers were in the right; why, then, was it he who brought forth the Quran and not them? We read elsewhere how the Quran itself responds to these accusations with logic and fairness: ‘Do some, perchance, assert, [Muhammad] has invented this [story]? Say, [O Prophet]: "If I have invented it, upon me be this sin; but far be it from me to commit the sin of which you are guilty."' (Hud: 35)

For this reason, the verse shifts from the context of a discussion about the disbelievers and their accusations against the Messenger of Allah, to direct address of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him himself: '…But if Allah willed, He could seal over your heart…' (ash-Shura: 24).This means that, even if Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him had falsely attributed the Quran to Allah, having written it himself, Allah had the power to seal his heart causing the Prophet peace and blessings be upon him to forget that which he had made up and written down in the Quran. However, this did not happen to Allah's Messenger peace and blessings be upon him; rather, the Quran continued to be published abroad in the depths of the night and in the expanse of the day, being taught unto all people.

In sum, then, Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him did not make up the Quran himself, nor did he attribute it falsely to Allah. Indeed, it is the disbelievers who are guilty of falsely attributing the Quran to Muhammad's capacities with language alone. In many verses, the Quran itself reveals this false attribution on the part of the disbelievers, and it responds with logic and reason. We read one verse, for example, which recounts how the disbelievers quarrel amongst each other on this matter: 'And, indeed, full well do We know that they say, "It is but a human being that imparts [all] this to him!…"' (an-Nahl: 103) In this instance, there were disbelievers who had accused Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him of learning the Quran from a non-Arab person. Allah the Glorified and Exalted responds to these claims by saying, '…[notwithstanding that] the tongue of him to whom they so maliciously point is wholly outlandish, whereas this is Arabic speech, clear [in itself] and clearly showing the truth [of its source].' (an-Nahl: 103) This verse makes clear the illogicality of the accusations levelled against Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him. The disbelievers stated that Muhammad sought out a non-Arab man, who taught the Quran to the Prophet. However, the Quran is written in clear, fluent Arabic, making such claims false on the face of it. If disbelievers are intent on making accusations, they might at least try to make logically coherent ones so that their spurious falsehoods are not immediately revealed.

Elsewhere, the Quran recounts another instance of this wilful stubbornness: ‘And [thus it is:] whenever Our messages are conveyed unto them in all their clarity, those who do not believe that they are destined to meet Us [are wont to] say, “Bring us a discourse other than this, or alter this one.” Say [O Prophet]: “It is not conceivable that I should alter it of my own volition; I only follow what is revealed to me. Behold, I would dread, were I [thus] to rebel against my Sustainer, the suffering [which would befall me] on that awesome Day [of Judgment]!” Say, “Had Allah willed it [otherwise], I would not have conveyed this [divine writ] unto you, nor would He have brought it to your knowledge. Indeed, a whole lifetime have I dwelt among you ere this [revelation came unto me]: will you not, then, use your reason?”’ (Yunus: 15-16) Yes, Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him did bring forth the Quran only after he had reached forty years of age, and he was indeed among those disbelievers the entire time before he did so. Never in his life had he shown himself to be a poet or an orator—in other words, he was not known for his abilities with language before bringing forth the Quran.

Growing desperate, the disbelievers left these preceding arguments behind and launched a new attack: it was now the fact that Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him himself was the one who had received the Quran which posed a problem for them. ‘And they say, too, “Why was not this Quran bestowed from on high on some great man of the two cities?”’(1) (az-Zukhruf: 31)

Then, Allah the Glorified and Exalted lets on to their position and makes clear their ignorance and vehement quarrelling over falsehoods. This enmity on their part is nothing more or less than stubbornness and arrogance regarding acceptance of the truth, and for this reason Allah the Glorified and Exalted says, ‘And, lo, they would say, “O Allah! If this be indeed the truth from You, then rain down upon us stones from the skies, or inflict [some other] grievous suffering on us!'" (al-Anfal: 32) Such talk clearly embodies hatred for Muhammad the man, rather than reasoned arguments against him.

(1) Qariya is an urban centre, but one smaller than a large metropolis; it is also a place in which buildings have been erected. The meaning of the two cities is Mecca and Medina. [Al-Qamus Al-Qawim [112-115]]. Qatada recalls that the people were hoping for some great man not among their own, such as Al-Waid ibn Al-Mughira or `Arwa ibn Mas`ud Ath-Thaqafi. From Ibn `Abbas, we are told that they were hoping for someone like Al-Walid ibn Al-Mughira or Habib ibn `Amr Ath-Thaqafi. Ibn Kathir states in his Tafsir (124-127): ‘It is apparent that they were looking for a great man from one of the two cities, whoever that man may have been.’

Next, Allah the Glorified and Exalted states, '…For Allah blots out all falsehood, and by His words, proves the truth to be true. Verily, He has full knowledge of what is in the hearts [of men].' (ash-Shura: 24) The verb yamhu (blots out) which normally contains the long vowel 'u' at the end has this vowel removed in this instance for purposes of acoustic diminution. As far as meaning is concerned, that which is blotted out is the falsehood spoken by the disbelievers, namely the accusation that Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him falsely attributed the Quran to Allah; these are the things which Allah the Glorified and Exalted blots out. Then, in contrast, we read that '…[He] proves the truth to be true…' (ash-Shura: 24) establishing that which is correct and strengthening it '…by His words…' (ash-Shura: 24). In other words, through revelation to the heart of] Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him in the noble Quran. The phrase 'by His words' might also mean the command 'be!' since Allah is who He is, i.e. Allah.

Moving on, we read, '…Verily, He has full knowledge of what is in the hearts [of men].' (ash-Shura: 24) This signifies that Allah is Knowledgeable of the secrets of men's hearts, those things which the human tongue cannot express, and this fact causes him to be silent about his hidden intentions. We read about this in the following verse: '[for] He is aware of the [most] stealthy glance, and of all that the hearts would conceal.' (Ghafir: 19)

Thus, those people continued to dispute with Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him to bring their hatred upon him, to resist his invitation to true religion, and to falsely accuse him. That is, until Allah the Glorified and Exalted revealed their falsehood and annihilated it, bringing about an end to the matter, be it with regard to true religion or their defeat or their inclusion in the forgiveness of Allah's Messenger peace and blessings be upon him on the day he opened Mecca to them. It was on that day that he said: 'Do not think that I am an agent unto your cause.' The people said, 'That is fair, oh you kind brother, and son of a kind brother. He responded: 'Leave, you are free to go.'(1)

(1) Ibn Ishaq states: 'I have it on good narration from those in the know that Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him gave a speech at the door of the Ka`ba. He=

Thus, came the victory of Allah and the opening of the city, as He thwarted falsehood and confirmed the truth, coming out on top and prevailing amidst disbelievers. Indeed, it is illogical to think that Allah the Glorified and Exalted would send a messenger in order to guide His creations, only to later submit that messenger to his enemies and to forsake him as he tries to confront these half-truths.

Elsewhere in the Quran, Allah states: 'For, long ago has Our word gone forth unto Our servants, the message-bearers, that, verily, they – they indeed – would be succoured, and that, verily, Our hosts – they indeed – would [in the end] be victorious!' (as-Saffat: 171-173)

Finally, we note in the verse under consideration that the verb 'He blots out' is the predicate of 'He wishes', after the conditional 'if' (e.g. 'if He wished, he would blot out…'). However, this is incorrect, since the verb 'He blots out' starts a new, independent clause, as indicated by the repetition of the 'He' of majesty, as well as the indicative verb 'He proves' (yahuqqu). As mentioned, the verb 'blots out' (yamhu) which normally contains a long 'u' at the end has this long vowel removed for purposes of acoustic diminution, or for the avoidance of having two consonants next to each other.

وَهُوَ ٱلَّذِى يَقْبَلُ ٱلتَّوْبَةَ عَنْ عِبَادِهِۦ وَيَعْفُوا۟ عَنِ ٱلسَّيِّـَٔاتِ وَيَعْلَمُ مَا تَفْعَلُونَ ﴿٢٥﴾

It is He who accepts repentance from His servants and pardons bad deeds – He knows everything you do [25]
(The Quran, ash-Shura: 25)

It is out of Allah's kindness to His slaves and his Mercy towards them that He has established a way for them to repentance, leaving them an open door which will not shut upon them. Repentance is a hope which the sinner depends upon, and in which he finds a lifeline to pull him back so that his disposition can be improved and his behaviour made better, and so that

= said: 'There is no god but Allah alone, and no sharer of His Oneness. Believe in His promise and in the triumph of His slave, and in the defeat of all those who fight against His Oneness.' Then he said, 'Do not think that I am an agent unto your cause.' The people said, 'This is fair, oh you kind brother, and son of a kind brother.' He responded: 'Leave, you are free to go.' From the Autobiography of the Prophet by Ibn Hisham, 412-414] society can benefit from his actions. If the door of repentance were closed to such a person, however, causing him to return back to his state of despair and continuing in a state of rebellion against Allah, both he and society would become distressed and miserable.

The word at-tawba (repentance) means the return of the sinner to Allah, a return which encompasses various phases. Allah the Glorified and Exalted made repentance a spiritual law whose very legitimacy is a gift from Him to us: if a person sincerely turns back to Allah the Glorified and Exalted in penitence, that repentance is accepted of Him. Hence Allah's statement, '…And thereupon He turned again unto them in His Mercy, so that they might repent…' (at-Tawba: 118). In this verse, the expression 'He turned again unto them' means that He provided a way for them to repent, and for that repentance to be acceptable to Him.

The repentance process is not just a word or phrase we say; we cannot expect true repentance just by exclaiming, 'May I be granted forgiveness by that Great Lord who is the only true God!' Rather, repentance is a path to be trod, as is made clear to us by the words of `Ali Allah be pleased with him when, as he was praying, heard a man say, 'May Allah grant me forgiveness! Allah is the greatest!' `Ali finished praying and said to the man, 'You were too quick to repent. In this, you need to repent of your repentance.'(1)

Thus, repentance is not just a word, but rather a path and a process which begins with feelings of sorrow for those sins or evil deeds committed in the past. Regret for such actions comes upon us as the first step of repentance, as we see in the Hadith which says, 'Regret is repentance.'(2)

(1) This Hadith is recalled by Ar-Razi in his commentary Keys to the Unseen (413-434), in his explanation of the sentence 'and it is He who accepts repentance of His servants…' (ash-Shura: 25). Jabir recounts that a man entered the mosque of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him and said: 'O Allah, may You grant me forgiveness as I repent unto You!' Then, when `Ali ibn Abu Taleb had finished saying prayers, he said to the man: 'O but this speed in asking His forgiveness is the repentance of liars! In this, you need to repent of your repentance.'

(2) This Hadith was extracted by Ibn Majah for its legitimacy (4242); Ahmad extracts it as traceable (3387, 3809, 3811, 3914); Al-Bayhaqi extracts it for its legitimacy (110-153), and Al-Hakim for its rectification (7720). Al-Bayhaqi quotes it in his Lessons on Faith (6771, 6770). All quote the Hadith from `Abdullah ibn Mas`ud.

We also see this in the story of the sons of Adam: ‘But the other’s passion drove him to slaying his brother; and he slew him: and thus he became one of the lost.’ (al-Ma‘ida: 30) When the throes of evil and enmity had passed, he came to himself and repented of what he had done.

After feeling regret for our misdeeds, the next step is to remember those prayers which we may not have been saying and which need making up for, and we thus might engage ourselves in supererogatory prayer for this purpose. After doing this, it is necessary to provide redress to those who have been wronged, a condition whose fulfilment is absolutely essential. We add to these actions the final step of a return to doing good deeds, just as we had first fallen into doing bad deeds; it is necessary to once again taste the bitterness of the duty of obedience, just as we once tasted the saccharine nectar of rebellious behaviour.

Regarding the language of this verse, normal usage would call for the phrase: He accepts repentance, but here the True Lord says, ‘of His servants…’ (ash-Shura: 25). It is as if the True Lord keeps off their sins when He accepts their repentance. The result of this is the forgiveness of those sins which they have committed. However, the sins they have committed call for many of Allah’s attributes. These attributes are concerned with such sins and should be operationalized.

When one of His servants commits a sin, it calls for such attributes. Take, for example, His attributes Al-Qahhar (the Compeller), Al-Jabbar (the Conqueror) and Al-Muntaqim (the Avenger) indicate His Stern Majesty as well as imply punishment. There are other qualities that manifest His Beauty, such as Al-Ghafur (the All-Forgiving), Ar-Rahim (the Compassionate) and At-Tawwab (the Granter and Acceptor of repentance), and so on. For this reason, the Prophet peace and blessings be upon him states in a Hadith about the last days of Ramadan: ‘The angels have interceded, the apostles have interceded and the believers have interceded, and no one remains (to grant pardon) but the Most Merciful of the merciful.’(1)

(1) Muslim extracts this Hadith for its correctness (269), and Ahmad extracts it as traceable (11463). Both quote it from Abu Sa`id Al-Khudri, who states that Allah said: ‘The angels intervened, as did the prophets and the believers, and only The Most Merciful remained. And so, He snatched up a handful of hellfire to extract from it a people who had never done good deeds. They returned as ash, and so He placed them in the river at the mouth of paradise.’ This is the Hadith in its entirety.

If the believers, the prophets and the angels will all intercede on the part of those who commit sin, leaving only the intercession of the Most Merciful of the merciful, to whom does He intercede on their behalf? The answer is that He Himself is the source of their punishment and their forgiveness, since He possesses the attributes of Majesty and the attributes of Beauty. If the attributes of stern majesty start to lay hold on the rebellious sinner, the attributes of beauty come to plead his case before the cause of justice contained in Allah's qualities of sternness and exacting judgment. Thus, the statement 'It is He who accepts repentance of His servants…' (ash-Shura: 25) employs the word 'of' even though the repentance is really from them. In this instance, 'of' is used because Allah Glorified is He bears away their sins of them. We find such precise, meaningful use of words like this throughout the Noble Quran, with meaning which is given to certain words in a specific context. For example, we read in the following verse: '…'I shall certainly cut off your alternate hands and feet, then crucify you on the trunks of palm trees.'…' (Ta Ha: 71).

From this we understand that crucifixion binding someone to a tree. That is why some commentators said that it means `ala (on) trucks of palm trees. Why then does the Quran employs the word fi (in) instead of `ala (on) indicating that there is another meaning which `ala (on) would not suffice to give. We can thus infer that the meaning is: I shall most certainly crucify you harshly and severely, such that the parts of the body of the crucified will be impressed into the trunk on which he is crucified. For this reason, the verse states: '…in the trunks of palm trees.…' (Ta Ha: 71).

Likewise, in the following statement by Allah the Exalted: 'Praise be to Allah, who has granted me Ishmael and Isaac on my old age…' (Ibrahim: 39), some commentators note that the meaning here is ma`a (with, but here: despite) old age. However, the verse instead uses the `ala (on) old age. In this case, there is yet again a second, deeper meaning which justifies the use of `ala (on), a word which is useful for expressing things as being on a loftier level. In this instance, old age was preventing the bearing of children. However, the will and power of Allah Glorified is He superseded that barrier, showing that He exists on a higher level. Likewise, in the verse: '…your Lord is full of forgiveness for people, despite their wrongdoing…' (ar-Ra'd: 6), Allah says: `ala zhulmihim (despite their wrongdoing). `Ala, literally means (on). The rebelliousness referred to in this instance was deserving of punishment. Yet, Allah’s Forgiveness and Mercy unto His slaves is higher and loftier than His punishment.

Moving on, we read that He: ‘pardons bad deeds’ (ash-Shura: 25), i.e. Allah blots them out. Then, He says: ‘…He knows everything you do.’ (ash-Shura: 25) This is so because Allah’s Knowledge is all encompassing and all-inclusive, which not even a speck of dust escapes it, whether in heaven or on the earth. Thus, if a person were to commit a sin which no other person knew about, Allah Glorified is He would still know, and it is necessary that we repent of it to Him. Even if the sin were only in one’s mind and not manifest as an action, it would still require repentance.

Then, the True Lord says:

وَيَسْتَجِيبُ ٱلَّذِينَ ءَامَنُوا۟ وَعَمِلُوا۟ ٱلصَّٰلِحَٰتِ وَيَزِيدُهُم
مِّن فَضْلِهِۦ ۚ وَٱلْكَٰفِرُونَ لَهُمْ عَذَابٌ شَدِيدٌ ﴿٢٦﴾

He responds to those who believe and do good deeds, and gives them more of His bounty; agonizing torment awaits the disbelievers [26]
(The Quran, ash-Shura: 26)

In other words, Allah Glorified is He responds to all those who believe in Him and who do good deeds. The verb yastajeeb, (responds) indicates the swiftness of the response; hence why He did not yujeeb. He says: ‘…and gives them more of His bounty’ (ash-Shura: 26) which indicates that Allah is the One Who responds to the believers. By contrast, ‘…agonizing torment awaits the disbelievers.’ (ash-Shura: 26) The agonizing torment referred to here comes eventually because they will, first, be faced with Allah’s Wrath, then they will be debarred from their Lord, then they will be cursed and cast away from His Mercy and finally, they will have the agonizing torment.

Then, the True Lord says(1):

(1) The context of the revelation of this verse is that it came forth among a people in Saffa who were possessed of great riches and the things of this world. Khabab ibn Al-Art states: ‘This verse was revealed unto us, and this, because we recklessly sought after gold and the riches of our panegyrics. Thus, Allah sent this verse down to us.’ The Contexts of Revelation by Al-Wahidi Al-Nisaburi, p. 213; Al-Maktaba Ath-Thiqafiyya, Beirut

وَلَوْ بَسَطَ ٱللَّهُ ٱلرِّزْقَ لِعِبَادِهِۦ لَبَغَوْا۟ فِى ٱلْأَرْضِ وَلَـٰكِن
يُنَزِّلُ بِقَدَرٍ مَّا يَشَآءُ ۚ إِنَّهُۥ بِعِبَادِهِۦ خَبِيرٌۢ بَصِيرٌ ٢٧

If God were to grant His plentiful provision to [all] His creatures, they would act insolently on earth, but He sends down in due measure whatever He will, for He is well aware of His servants and watchful over them [27]
(The Quran, ash-Shura: 27)

This verse states a quality of the human soul, as Allah Glorified is He states elsewhere in the Quran: 'But man exceeds all bounds, when he thinks he is self-sufficient.' (al-'Alaq: 6-7) This is because, when provision is extended and made easy for man, his will not be concerned with obtaining or pursuing it, nor will he exert effort. Instead, He will have time to occupy himself with other matters, such as acting insolently.

For this reason, when the Quran discusses Qarun (Korah), the clearest example of an insolent wealthy man, Allah Glorified is He states: 'Qarun was one of Musa's (Moses's) people, but he oppressed them…' (al-Qasas: 76). Thus, affluence and wealth might lead a person to be insolent and oppressive for no just reason. So, in this context, 'plentiful provision' means extending it and facilitating the means of obtaining it. In this sense, it is a sort of trial or test.

Moving on, we read: '…but He sends down in due measure whatever He will, for He is well aware of His servants and watchful over them.' (ash-Shura: 27) This statement means that Allah Glorified is He affords provision in a specific amount and measure, in accordance with His Knowledge and Wisdom in arranging the affairs of His creation. He thus gives them provision according to their needs, such that His servants reach the extent of tyranny and wrongness. Indeed, Allah Glorified is He knows best the nature of His servants, and He is aware of that which leads them to righteousness, hence the following statement from the Hadith: 'Indeed, there are among my servants those who, if I made them rich, would become corrupt; and there are those among them who, if I made them poor, would become righteous.'(1)

(1) Al-Albany quotes this Hadith in Al Silsilah Ad-Da`ifah (254-256) stating: 'Al-Bayhaqi extracts this Hadith (for its correctness) (in Al`Asma` Wa As- Siffat, p. 121, Egypt); Al-Baghwi=

Islam has been concerned with the economic aspect in sustaining life. Therefore, it makes incumbent upon us the payment of zakat, in order for benefit to be distributed in society. We have learned previously to distinguish between the poor person who is truly in need and cannot work, and he who is a skilled in deceiving others into thinking that he is needy. The latter will not have a share of people's money, and it is not meet for us to aid them in their idleness and inaction.

However, as for the helpless, they deserve our charitable offerings, since he is unable to make a living himself. For this reason, Allah Glorified is He assigns such a person a portion from that money possessed by those capable of making a living; a portion that he receives in dignity, without losing face in order to obtain provision. Indeed, Allah Glorified is He preserves dignity unto such truly helpless people. Moreover, He brings those wealthier individuals, capable of making a living, to their very doors to give them their share; such that the helpless know that, even as Allah Glorified is He took away their ability to work, He subjugated the strength and ability of others to them.

Likewise, with the injunction to perform the pilgrimage to Mecca, we see people feel sad for they are truly unable to fulfil this command, when in reality such people are more blessed by Allah than those who are capable of performing the pilgrimage. This is because the latter might perform the pilgrimage, yet Allah does not accept it; whereas, fundamentally, performing the pilgrimage is not obligatory on those incapable of performing it. It is said that ninety percent of people have never seen the Holy Mosque in Mecca. However, does this mean that Allah Glorified is He prohibits them from ever seeing it simply because they do not have the material means to go? No! In fact, they are apportioned a vision of it: 'There are those who circumambulate around the Ka`ba, and there are those around whom the Ka`ba circumambulates.'(1)

= extracts it in his Explication of the Sunna (141-142); and Abu Bakr Al-Kalabadhi in his (Keys to the Meanings) (190).' He also states that the attribution of this Hadith is very weak, and quotes the beginning of the Hadith as follows: 'Whosoever purports to be my friend and condemns me, the same has come up unto me as if in battle.'

(1) Here we might pause over a line of a poem from `Abd Al-Qadir Al-Jilani (d. 561 AH/ 1166 AD):

Every important religious person circumambulates the Ka'ba seven times;
As for me, the temple circumambulates around my tent."

Thereafter, we see that the state of poverty or helplessness does not continue forever because people's fortunes alternate, as Allah Glorified is He states: '…Such days (of varying fortunes) We give to men and men by turns.' (Al-'Imran: 140) It was previously clarified that there is wisdom in the existence of poverty in society, since it is impossible for the mobility of that society and the needs of people to be based purely on benefaction. Rather, they are based on necessity. When material needs are lacking, we work and do not shrink from hard or despicable duties; otherwise, who would do such things for us?

An illustrative example—and one which we have seen previously—is that of the labourer who accepts the fate Allah chose for him and performs his work devotedly. Accordingly, Allah Glorified is He says to him: 'You have accepted my destiny (done your best according to that measure which I have given you); I will now give you blessings in accordance with My Worth.' Before long, such labourer will not be an employee; rather he will become employer or even an owner of a business, even though he was once a wage earner. This is because he was sincere and truthful with his employer and did not envy him, nor was he ungrateful for his pay (which was actually a blessing).

In all, The True Lord does not withhold provision nor sends it down in due measure except in cases of possible danger or harm. This is because Allah Glorified is He grans limited provision to those whom He knows would be made corrupt by overabundance of wealth in order to purify them through poverty. This is because, at root, Allah Glorified is He is generous and magnanimous and extends provision for His servants. For this reason, He states in the next verse:

رَحْمَتَهُۥ ۚ وَهُوَ ٱلْوَلِىُّ ٱلْحَمِيدُ ﴿٢٨﴾

It is He who sends relief through rain after they have lost hope, and spreads His mercy far and wide.
He is the Protector, Worthy of All Praise [28]
(The Quran, ash-Shura: 28)

The phrase 'relief through rain' (ash-Shura: 28) means rain which falls on earth after a drought providing water to people and saving them from parched fields, hunger and famine which had previously beset them. The phrase '…after they have lost hope…' (ash-Shura: 28) means that they had lost hope in the return of rainfall.

Next, He says, '…and spreads His Mercy far and wide…' (ash-Shura: 28) meaning, He bestows sustenance mercifully upon all His slaves. His words: '…He is the Protector…' (ash-Shura: 28) means the One in Whom His servants confide with regard to all their affairs and their benefactor. The final statement that Allah Glorified is He is is '…Worthy of All Praise' (ash-Shura: 28) means that He is to be honoured for those blessings which He has granted people bestowed upon them since Allah Glorified is He had blessed people even before they existed since He created the heavens, the earth and indeed the entire universe, subjugating it for their benefit and service. People have therefore been placed in a universe ready and prepared to receive them, and in which are found all things requisite for preserving their lives.

مِن دَآبَّةٍ ۚ وَهُوَ عَلَىٰ جَمْعِهِمْ إِذَا يَشَآءُ قَدِيرٌ ﴿٢٩﴾

Among His signs is the creation of the heavens and earth and all the living creatures He has scattered throughout them:
He has the power to gather them all together whenever
He will [29] (The Quran, ash-Shura: 29)

The phrase 'His signs' (ash-Shura: 29) the singular of which is aya (sign), referring to something miraculous which causes a person to wonder or ponder. We might also say: 'this person is an aya (a prodigy) when it comes to good manners or acquiring knowledge'. Further, as noted, the ayat (signs) which are described in the noble Quran are of three types: the first are natural signs which are evidence of His ability and the wondrousness of His creative power. These signs include phenomena such as the sun, the moon, the night, and daylight. The second category includes those miraculous signs which prove the truthfulness of Allah's messengers, in terms of their claims about Allah Glorified is He. Finally, there are those ayat (verses) which include specific dictates or pronouncements about religion; these are the verses of the noble Quran.

In the verse under consideration, the True Lord speaks about some of His natural signs: ‘Among His signs is the creation of the heavens and earth…’ (ash-Shura: 29). The heaven and the earth are both astonishing in their nature, and are proofs of the absoluteness of Allah’s Power, as well as His Wisdom. Elsewhere in the Quran, He states: ‘The creation of the heavens and earth is greater by far than the creation of mankind, though most people do not know it.’ (Ghafir: 57)

Certainly, the creation of heaven and the earth is greater than the creation of man, since man comes to life by being born then dies. They perish as small children or as youth or even while still in their mother’s wombs. Even if a person lives for one hundred years, he will eventually die. So then, who is man alongside Allah who created the heavens and the earth and those natural signs found therein, signs which last as long as Allah Glorified is He wishes?

It is important for man to remember these truths, and to ask himself: can it be that these signs are older than man is when they were created and subjugated for his benefit? Then, there must be another term of existence which is more befitting to man’s station, and by which Allah Glorified is He has privileges him above these signs. We may thus say that we have another, more eternal and permanent life through we will exist and survive eternally when all these signs or other creations in the heaven and the earth perish.

The statement ‘…the heavens and earth…’ (ash-Shura: 29) means those things found therein, since the heavens and the earth are enveloped vessels containing countless creations. For this reason, Allah Glorified is He states elsewhere: ‘To Allah belongs whatever is in the heavens and whatever is in the earth...’ (al-Baqara: 284).

Moving on, we read the words: ‘…and all the living creatures He has scattered…’ (ash-Shura: 29) meaning He spread ‘all the living creatures’ (ash-Shura: 29) throughout the heavens and the earth. Daabah (living creatures) is the noun and yadubbu on the earth is the verb which means: that which crawls on earth, referring to all humans and animals which walk upon its surface. As for yadubb in the heavens, it refers to the angels that live in them.

Next, we read: ‘…He has the power to gather them all together whenever He wills.’ (ash-Shura: 29) This sentence refers to the Day of Judgment. The statement ‘He has the power’ (ash-Shura: 29) means that He is capable of gathering them, as made clear elsewhere: ‘…the Day of Gathering, of which there is no doubt…’ (ash-Shura: 7).

Some scholars have gone so far as to assert the presence of other creations in the highest heights, being just as responsible as we are, and have obligations just like us. In our solar system, for example, there are other planets aside from earth such as Mercury, Venus, Mars, Jupiter, and others. His greatness is manifested in gathering all these creatures.

Then, the true lord says:

وَمَآ أَصَٰبَكُم مِّن مُّصِيبَةٖ فَبِمَا كَسَبَتۡ أَيۡدِيكُمۡ وَيَعۡفُواْ عَن كَثِيرٖ ٣٠

Whatever misfortune befalls you [people], it is because of what your own hands have done – God forgives much [30]
(The Quran, ash-Shura: 30)

The word asaba (befell) is taken from the idea of an arrow hitting a target. If an archer is skilled, he will hit the target without the arrow deviating from it in the slightest. In this verse, then, the calamities which beset people in this world are as if they were arrows that have already been shot toward us, which undoubtedly wound or befall those for whom they are intended. For this reason, it is said that a calamity does not begin the moment it befalls someone, but rather, it is predestined, an arrow that have already been shot, whose time is that period taken to travel the distance to the targeted person, as noted previously with regard to the calamity of death.

Thus, the issue of misfortunes sent our way is certain, written, recorded, predestined for and not a sudden accident. Indeed, the entire universe has a recorded mock-up in which all details are clarified. For this reason, Allah the Exalted states: ‘No misfortune can happen, either in the earth or in yourselves, that was not set down in writing before We brought it into being. That is easy for Allah.’ (al-Hadid: 22) In other words: there is no escaping or fleeing from those misfortunes which have already been determined for us; nor can we forestall such tragedies which are like an arrow that has already been shot and cannot be returned.

There are two types of misfortunes which befall humankind. The first is the type of problem or crisis which we have some measure of control or influence over; the second type is that over which we have no such control. For example, if a student fails his final exam because he has neglected his studies and did not make the necessary effort to study the material during the semester, then it is the sort of crisis which could have been avoided and over which the student has control. If we all wish to prevent this type of misfortune, we should do that which is necessary to succeed and set aside those things which cause us to fail. If we do this, then we will surely find success.

The other type of misfortune or crisis is that which we cannot prevent or control. Returning to the example of the student, this second type of misfortune would come about if the student works hard and memorizes his lessons, only to get dizzy or sick on the day of the exam, which he is thus unable to finish properly. This happens according to Allah's will, and therefore there must certainly be some wisdom therein. For this reason, we must be content when such a misfortune befalls us knowing that it is Allah's wish for it to happen. This knowledge makes such a misfortune easier to deal with when we know that it comes from Allah Glorified is He and no one else.

It was mentioned previously that examples from reality might help us understand this concept better. Suppose that a father is sitting in his house, and his son walks in with bruises on his face. The first question from the father would of course be, 'Who did this to you'? In this he is wise, for he does not judge the matter until after discovering who the doer of the deed is; for an incident cannot be pleasing or distressing until the doer of the action is known.

If the son says that it was Uncle So-and-So who hit him, the father would respond that the son probably did something to deserve the punishment that he got, since that uncle is a trusted, loving figure in the family. If, however, the son says that it was So-and-So from next door, the father would get extremely upset at the neighbour who did this terrible thing to his son.

We see from this example that, when something unpleasant is done to us by someone we love and trust, that we know there must be some benefit, and we therefore accept it. If, however, such an unpleasant deed is done to us by an enemy, then we fight against it, knowing that there is no benefit there from it.

The True Lord wants to teach us how to receive misfortunes, and to learn that each comes to us for a reason. If we understand that reason, then we know why the misfortune has happened, making it easier to accept. If we do not know the reason, then we accept it and say to ourselves that Allah Glorified is He must have some wise purpose for sending such misfortunes upon us. In this way, we pass through the door of contentment and submission, rather than discontent and objection.

So then, the student who gets sick and cannot complete his final test says to himself, 'Perhaps I was envious, and Allah wanted to chastise me for that. Or perhaps I would have gotten a worse grade than that for which I was hoping. Or perhaps Allah was defending me against the evil eye of envy'.

Did the True Lord not say regarding Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him, 'The disbelievers almost strike you down with their looks' (al-Qalam: 51). There is another instance, found in the chapter of al-Kahf in which the True Lord gives us an example for how to receive unpleasant incidents and accept misfortunes; as long as we have can never stop them, there must be some divine wisdom in our having to go through them. This idea appears in the story of the Righteous Servant(1) and Musa (Moses) peace be upon him: for even though the righteous servant was not a prophet per se, Musa (Moses) peace be upon him who was a prophet, nevertheless learned from him and asked to accompany him in his journey. Through this example, we learn that, when a servant of Allah Glorified is He rises in his relationship with his Lord, Allah Glorified is He opens insights and breakthroughs to that servant, and grants him knowledge intended especially for him.

The righteous servant worshipped Allah Glorified is He according to that path delineated by Musa (Moses) peace be upon him and yet, Musa (Moses) peace be upon him followed the righteous servant in order to learn from him. This is because the mission of a messenger is to bring to Allah Glorified is He those to whom the messenger has been sent. If that messenger does not do this, then he leaves behind those whom he is supposed to help, letting them try to find Allah Glorified is He themselves. Moreover, every messenger has his own adeptness in refining his relationship with Allah the Exalted. In this way, The righteous servant had grown closer to Allah Glorified is He and become intimate with Him, and accordingly Allah granted him special knowledge.

(1) The righteous servant is Al-Khidr peace be upon him of whom numerous stories, tales and legends have been handed down, many of which attest that he was an actual historical figure, although there is no conclusive evidence of this. The most evident fact is that he is a prophet in Allah's statement, 'And I did not do [any of] this of my own accord' (al-Kahf: 82). The only correct facts known about him are those recounted in the Quran.

Let us now consider what Musa (Moses) peace be upon him says to The Righteous Servant: 'Musa (Moses) said to him, "May I follow you so that you can teach me some of the right guidance you have been taught?"' The man said, "You will not be able to bear with me patiently."' (al-Kahf: 66-67)

This response from the righteous servant means that Musa (Moses) peace be upon him will soon behold events that he will not like or will he be able to infer the wisdom behind them. '…"How could you be patient in matters beyond your knowledge?" Musa (Moses) said, "Allah willing, you will find me patient. I will not disobey you in any way." The man said, "If you follow me then, do not query anything I do before I mention it to you myself."' (al-Kahf: 68-70)

After this, their journey begins, with Musa (Moses) peace be upon him accompanying the righteous servant. The first incident which occurs as they travel is that of the boat: 'They travelled on. Later, when they got into a boat, and the man made a hole in it, Musa (Moses) said, "How could you make a hole in it? Do you want to drown its passengers? What a strange thing to do!"' (al-Kahf: 71)

This is Musa's (Moses's) first protest against the rghteous servant's actions, which appear to be strange and deserving of outcry, 'He replied, "Did I not tell you that you would never be able to bear with me patiently?" Musa (Moses) said, "Forgive me for forgetting. Do not make it too hard for me to follow you." And so they travelled on. Then, when they met a young boy and the man killed him, Musa (Moses) said, "How could you kill an innocent person? He has not killed anyone! What a terrible thing to do!"' (al-Kahf: 72-74) Nukra means terrible and deplorable.

Indeed, Musa (Moses) peace be upon him was unable to be patient with him, looking on at this odd and reprehensible behaviour. 'He replied, "Did I not tell you that you would never be able to bear with me patiently?" Musa (Moses) said, "From now on, if I query anything you do, banish me from your company—you have put up with enough from me." And so they travelled on. Then, when they came to a town and asked the inhabitants for food but were refused hospitality, they saw a wall there that was on the point of falling down and the man repaired it. Musa (Moses) said, "But if you had wished you could have taken payment for doing that."' (al-Kahf: 75-77)

This is the third incident which occurs, and with that, the condition which Musa (Moses) peace be upon him had sworn unto himself materialized. So, the righteous servant decides to depart from Musa (Moses). However, before doing so, he told Musa (Moses) peace be upon him to come listen to him as he clarified that which Musa's (Moses's) patience was unable to bear: 'He said, "This is where you and I part company. I will tell you the meaning of the things you could not bear with patiently: the boat belonged to some needy people who made their living from the sea and I damaged it because I knew that coming after them was a king who was seizing every [serviceable] boat by force.' (al-Kahf: 78-79) In other words, the king takes every usable boat for himself.

There is no doubt that the damage done to this boat by the righteous servant seems to be a catastrophe for the boat's owners. However, there is wisdom in the fact that Allah Glorified is He permits this, since there is an oppressive king coming after the poor owners of the boat, taking all good boats and appropriating them unto himself. For this reason, the righteous servant desired to destroy the boat, so that the king could not steal it.

In this case, we do not compare the costs and benefits of having a good, usable boat and one which has been damaged. Rather, the choice is between a damaged boat and not having a boat at all: the damaging of the boat makes life easier for its owners, since they at least have the boat, which they can fix later, rather than having the whole thing taken from them by the king.

Next, we read: 'the young boy had parents who were people of faith, and so, fearing he would trouble them through wickedness and disbelief, we wished that their Lord should give them another child—purer and more compassionate—in his place.' (al-Kahf: 80-81) Allah the Exalted knows that the young man would have become disobedient, creating strife for his parents, as Allah Glorified is He states: ‘Believers, even among your spouses and your children you have some enemies—beware of them...’ (at-Taghabun: 14). There is thus wisdom in killing him.

One might reasonably ask what the boy’s crime was, such that his death at such a young age was warranted. The answer is that he was guilty of no such crime. However, the boy died in a stage of life where he had not tasted of the evils of this life, nor had he been saddled with responsibilities or held accountable for his good and bad deeds.

Being a young boy, his life was cut short. He was thus spared the chance of committing sins in this life, and died before reaching the age of being responsible of performing religious duties and held accountable for his deeds. Thus, his reward is that which is reserved for martyrs; his abode will be in paradise where he may stroll wherever he pleases and enter any place he desires. He may even enter unto the Messenger of Allah peace and blessings be upon him. He becomes among the roamers of paradise. Thus, the boy’s death represents a form of mercy upon him.

Continuing with the story, we read: ‘The wall belonged to two young orphans in the town and there was buried treasure beneath it belonging to them. Their father had been a righteous man, so your Lord intended them to reach maturity and then dig up their treasure as a mercy from your Lord. I did not do [these things] of my own accord: these are the explanations for those things you could not bear with patience.’ (al-Kahf: 82)

First, regarding this part of the story, we know that there were found in this town depraved people in whom was found not one shred of goodness, as evinced by the fact that they withheld food from Musa (Moses) peace be upon him and the righteous servant. This indicates vileness and baseness, to be sure, since those who ask for food are unlike people who ask for money, which might be hoarded. Food spoils after time, however, and therefore those who ask for food cannot but ask out of a real and immediate need.

It is thus reasonable to believe the plea of those who beg for food. For this reason, it is a marvellous thing that the righteous servant rebuilt wall after they had refused him food. Why did he rebuild the wall? The wall belonged to two orphaned boys in that same town. He did this thanks to his ability to see through the wicked masses of the town and to perceive the plight of the two orphans, for what would have happened if news about the boys' treasure reached such people?

We learn from this situation that the righteousness of fathers is beneficial to their sons. We also understand the two young boys to be twins, as evinced by Allah's statement '…so your Lord intended them to reach maturity…' (al-Kahf: 82). If one had been older than the other, then he would have taken the treasure unto himself. The righteous servant built the wall in such a way that it was timed to stand only until the two boys had come of age (which would presumably be the same time since they were twins), after which it would crumble, revealing the treasure and allowing for the two boys to protect it against the ignoble people of the village. In this way, the building of the wall was also a form of punishment for those reprehensible misers and a chastisement for their stinginess since it prevented them from taking the riches of the treasure for themselves.

Finally, the righteous servant did not neglect to clarify to Musa (Moses) peace be upon him that those actions which he performed were not of his own accord, but rather by command of Allah Glorified is He: '…I did not do [these things] of my own accord…' (al-Kahf: 82). In sum, whenever an inescapable trial or hardship is placed before us, we must look for the wisdom to be found in going through that trial since it must necessarily contain some lesson to be learned which the hardship will lead us to discover.

In the verse at hand, we read: 'Whatever misfortune befalls you [people], it is because of what your own hands have done…' (ash-Shura: 30). This statement is addressed to all people generally, including both believers and disbelievers. It is addressed to disbelievers who perhaps entered a battle and lost, had their money stolen, or were killed for their disbelief, and to believers who might have committed transgressions or sins which admit of punishment or reprimand, such as adultery or consumption of alcohol.

The True Lord revealed unto His Messenger peace and blessings be upon him that he should inform his ummah (people) and teach them how to handle trials such as these, hence the Hadith: 'No fatigue, nor disease, nor sorrow, nor sadness, nor hurt nor distress befalls a Muslim, even if it were the prick he receives from a thorn, but that Allah expiates some of his sins for that.'(1)

A knowledgeable man said: 'I do not know my status regarding my lord, from the temperament of my mount' meaning that when his riding animal is recalcitrant or stumbles along, he asks himself what he did to deserve to have his animal act stubbornly. `Asma`,(2) daughter of Abu Bakr Allah be pleased with him would suffer from chronic headaches, and she would put her hands to her head and say, 'It is the result of my sins, and surely Allah forgives much.'

By way of clarification, we had previously said that the True Lord created man and appointed him a purpose in this life. It is clear that man has a way which protects him and through which he can properly direct his life; and set for him the right way that regulates his way of life. If man deviates from that right way, this results in disorder. It is like machines produced by people and arranged into a catalogue outlining their proper care and usage: if one were to try to use these devices in a way which goes against such information, the machine would crash.

The True Lord wishes for us to be aware of this, in order to reassure the believer when trials beset him, such that he might be patient and not grow anxious or upset. It is at times like these that the believer can be assured of the wisdom of such hardships, looking inside himself and asking what he might have done to bring upon himself such catastrophe, since it must have come in order to cleanse him of some filth or transgression which he has committed.

This, then, is how self-aware believers handle crises and trials: they turn inward and hold themselves accountable, since they have learned the lesson, taught by Allah Glorified is He that this world is one reserved to work for our reward and not to receive that reward, which comes in the Hereafter: ‘Today each soul will be rewarded for whatever it has done…’ (Ghafir: 17). Thus, those hardships and trials which befall us in this world are not for our recompense. Rather, they are opportunities for us to be righteous, and to learn that violating Allah’s rulings must surely lead to punishment.

(1) Al-Bukhari extracts this Hadith for its correctness (5210); Ahmad cites it as being attributable (7684, 8070, 10714, 11024), quoting from Abu Hurayra Allah be pleased with him.

(2) `Asma`, daughter of Abu Bakr, born in the year 27 B.H. Her mother was Qatila, daughter of `Abd Al-`Azzi. She converted to Islam in Mecca after long acquaintance with the religion, and her conversion came after that of seventeen other individuals, when she was fifteen years of age. She had a major role in the pilgrimage to Medina, and she was known as 'She Who Has Two Girdles'. She married Zubair ibn Al-`Awwam, and recounted 58 Hadiths cited from the Prophet peace and blessings be upon him. She died in the year 73 A.H. after pilgrims killed her son `Abdullah ibn Zubayr.

We are aware of calamities that befall all kinds of people, including our friends as well as irreligious people, and even prophets; hence the Hadith of the Messenger of Allah peace and blessings be upon him: ‘Those beset most fiercely by trial are the prophets, followed by the saints followed by the most exemplary of believers.’(1)

Those trials which come upon the prophets are not punishments for transgressions which they have committed, but rather, trials that test their commitment to Allah’s Commands. Prophet’s conduct during such times is meant to be an example for their people. In this way, these peoples can learn to be righteous and patient. Thus, when calamities befall us, we remember those calamities that befell the prophets peace be upon them and how the received them with patience, and consequently follow their example, correct our behaviour and be closer to Allah Glorified is He.

Then, we read the statement ‘…Allah forgives much.’ (ash-Shura: 30) This refers to the fact that Allah Glorified is He forgives many of our sins and transgressions; if it were not for Allah’s forgiveness and mercy bestowed upon His creations, no one would be saved.

That is why we say to one who is afflictions with misfortunes, ‘Allah willing, there is an atonement’ meaning Allah Glorified is He has made recompense for your transgressions. We read in a Qudsi Hadith: ‘By my Might and my Majesty I do not cause my servant to leave this world having intended for him any good, until I repay him for the evils he committed in this life by means of illness in his body, loss of his wealth, or death of his child. And if (even after these sanctifying trials) there remains unto him any unpunished evil deed, I will heap upon him the agonies of death to the point (where he returns to the innocent state, purified of sin) in which his mother bore him. By my Might and Majesty, I do not cause my servant to go out of this world having intended for him any evil, until I repay him for the good deeds he committed in this life by means of (blessings as) health in his body, abundance of his riches, and safety of his children, until on the Day of Judgment, I do not owe him any reward for any good deed; for as I said: "We will not allow to be lost the reward of any who did well in deeds."'(1) Indeed, Allah Glorified is He pours out blessings upon such a one in this worldly life since he has no share or portion in the Hereafter.

(1) Ahmad extracts this Hadith as being attributable (171-172), and At-Tirmidhi extracts it for its habitual grouping with other Hadiths (2398), as well as Ibn Majah (4023), from a Hadith recounted by Sa`ad ibn Abu Waqqas. At-Tirmidhi states, ‘This is a correct and proper Hadith. It states in its entirety: ‘A man is beset by trials according to his faithfulness. Hardships will continue to befall him until he walks sinless upon the earth.’

Then, the True Lord says:

وَمَآ أَنتُم بِمُعۡجِزِينَ فِي ٱلۡأَرۡضِۖ وَمَا لَكُم مِّن دُونِ ٱللَّهِ مِن وَلِيّٖ وَلَا نَصِيرٖ ٣١

You cannot escape Him anywhere on earth: you have no protector or helper other than God [31]
(The Quran, ash-Shura: 31)

In this verse, the True Lord addresses those who opposed the Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him resisted his call to true religion and argued with him. Here, the Lord states that they will not be exempt from His Justice, and that those who escape punishment in this world will surely have their just reward in the Hereafter, as the Lord says addressing Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him: '…whether We show you part of what We have promised them in this life or whether We take your soul back to Us first, it is to Us that they will be returned.' (Ghafir: 77)

In the verse under consideration, the Lord states: 'You cannot escape Him anywhere on Earth…' (ash-Shura: 31). Mu`jiz means that which describes me as being constantly unable. Yu`jizuni means that which makes something that

(1) Al-Albany rates this Hadith in his Da`if At-Targhib Wa At-Tarhib quoting from Anas, who quotes the Messenger of Allah peace and blessings be upon him as saying: 'The Lord says, I cause no one to leave this world, while at the same time desiring to forgive that person his sins in order that I might recompense his every sin on his conscience, through bodily illness and drying up of wealth.' Razin recounts this Hadith, and Al-Mundhari claims to have never heard it. Al-`Albany does not mention the degree of its weak attribution.

I am incapable of doing. In this context, the True Lord says to the people that they are incapable of escaping Him; for wherever they go, He will find them.

We see the wisdom of the jinn regarding this point such as when they stated: 'We know we can never frustrate Allah on Earth; we can never escape Him.' (al-Jinn: 12). Indeed, the jinn are more capable of fleeing than humans. Despite this, they still recognize that they would be unable to escape or hide from Allah Glorified is He.

For this reason, Allah's Messenger peace and blessings be upon him praised those jinn who were counted as believers as he recited the chapter of ar-Rahman to some of the Companions. He peace and blessings be upon him said to them: 'I recited this surah to the jinn, who understood it better than you did. Indeed, every time they heard the statement: "which, then, of your Lord's blessings do you both deny?" (ar-Rahman: 13), they would say, "There is nothing from Your Grace which we can deny, O Lord, and unto You is all praise due."'(1)

The True Lord grants the oppressor respite and gives him time, but when He seizes him, He will not then let him escape. The fact that Allah Glorified is He grants respite to such people does not mean He is incapable of seizing them since he is Mighty and possesses absolute power. He brings such people when he pleases. By contrast, a weak person takes advantage of the first opportunity to take vengeance since he knows that such an opportunity might not return, as the poet (2) said:

When a weak one is given the opportunity,
She kills; such is the capacity of the weak.(3)

His poetry exhibits much aesthetic power and purity of style, and he composed several literary works among which are Fuhul Ash-Shu`ara` and the Amasa collection of poetry. He went down to Egypt, from whence he was summoned to Baghdad by Al-Mu`tasim; he later acted as supervisor of the postal system in Mosul. However, not two years passed before he died at Mosul in the year 845 A.D./ 231 A.H. at age 44.

(3) This line is from a poem by Abu Tammam, written in the Bahr (meter) Al-Kamil and comprising 30 total lines.

Then, we read Allah's statement '…you have no protector or helper other than Allah.' (ash-Shura: 31) Al-Waliyy means a trusted relative or a close friend who is always near to you, and who is supposed to deflect trials or disasters from you before they occur. An-Nasir means the one who provides succour and aid when hardships beset you. By using these words, the True Lord teaches us to stick to the straight path of obeying His commands, and to have a direct connection to Him. Moreover, He teaches us that we should not think that we can escape Him, or that anyone of his creation can protect us and give us succour to achieve this. Then, the True Lord says:

Among His signs are the ships, sailing like floating mountains [32] (The Quran, ash-Shura: 32)

The phrase 'the ships, sailing' refers to ships, i.e. those vessels that run along the surface of the water. In our own modern day, we see immense, colossal ships with massive tonnage which are carried along by the Grace of Allah Glorified is He across the waters. Likewise, we find freight cars and trucks of mighty weight which are carried along above the ground on wheels filled with air. The fact that light things carry heavy things is a one of Allah's miracles and signs.

In His words 'like floating mountains' (ash-Shura: 32), Al-A`laam which is the plural form of `alam means: a mountain. It is called `alam due to its height and being visible; hence the following line from Al-Khansa`(1), in lament for her brother, Sakhr:

He was like a mountain topped with fire.(2)

(1) Al-Khansa`, or Tumadir bint `Omru ibn Al-Harith), of the Bani Sulaym tribe, and the most famous of Arab poets from among the people of Najd... She lived most of her life during the Jahiliyyah period, but she came to understand the truthfulness of Islam and embraced it. Her poetic (oeuvre) survives today. She had four sons who witnessed the Battle of Qadisiyyah and were all martyred together.

(2) The line is from a poem by Al-Khansa`, written in Bahr (meter) Al-Basit) and comprising 36 total lines. The entirety of the line, as recorded in the poetic encyclopaedia, is as follows:
And of Sakhr, to mourn him unto remission—
He was as though a mountain peak topped with fire.

This statement by Al-Khansa` about her brother, is a metaphor symbolic of the fact that he was well-known and famous to everyone. When the Messenger of Allah peace and blessings be upon him heard this line of poetry, he said: 'Damned woman! It was not enough for her to make him into a mountain; she had to put fire atop it as well.'(1)

In the verse under consideration, we therefore catch a glimpse of Allah's inimitability and His providing a sign to Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him: if we asked an economist or a man of industry when history first saw huge ships composed of several deck levels, being so large as to look like mountains moving across the sea, he would answer that such a phenomenon appeared for the first time in the eighteenth century. This means that Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him did not see such ships in his lifetime; but if that is the case, who informed him of such inventions, such that they might be compared to mountains in this verse? Moreover, how did he know that they would look like mountains? It is Allah Glorified is He giving us signs proving the truthfulness of His Prophet peace and blessings be upon him.

Moreover, al-jawari (vessels(2) running across the sea) need energy or power to cause them to run. Where does such energy come from? The first ships were powered by the winds, or else by the pushing of the waters against the hull: if a ship were moving with the current, it was the power of that current that moved it; and if it were moving against the current, the people sailing the ship made it so by harnessing wind power via sails. If the winds died down, sailors would remain motionless on the ocean's surface.

We can therefore say that these ships moved and stood still according to Allah's command (since He commands the winds and currents). If a ship moved against the current in a river, its sailors and deckhands had to pull it along with ropes while they walked along the beach.

(1) Al-`Alusi cites this in his explanation of the verse under consideration (18/280): 'Damned woman! She was not content to compare him to a mountain, so she added fire on top, too.' Likewise, Ar-Razi cites this saying in his Mafatih Al-Ghayb (13/440).

(2) 'Vessels' in this verse refers to ships continuously moving across the water. The Arabic word is jawari, sing. Jariya, an active participle meaning 'that which runs/flows.' These ships are called by this name because they move across the water. The term may also refer to a young (sexually mature) woman, indicating that the water of young men flows in her. Al-Qurtubi's Quranic commentary, 6076-6079).

Then, the True Lord says:

إِن يَشَأۡ يُسۡكِنِ ٱلرِّيحَ فَيَظۡلَلۡنَ رَوَاكِدَ عَلَىٰ ظَهۡرِهِۦٓۚ إِنَّ فِي ذَٰلِكَ لَأٓيَٰتٖ لِّكُلِّ صَبَّارٖ شَكُورٍ ٣٣

If He willed, He could bring the wind to a standstill and they would lie motion- less on the surface of the sea – there truly are signs in this for anyone who is steadfast and thankful[33] (The Quran, ash-Shura: 33)

‘Fayazhlalna rawakid’ refers to the ships which ‘lie motionless on the surface of the sea’ (ash-Shura: 33). Rawakid means still, fixed, unmoving; perhaps a wave might move them out of their place, but they are not sailing across the water. The statement ‘…There truly are signs in this for anyone who is steadfast and thankful…’ (ash-Shura: 33) employs the emphatic participle sabbar (steadfast) a stronger form of the active participle sabir (patient). The stronger form sabbar is used here because the sailing of ships entails much effort and hardship, and such hardship must exude great patience.

Similarly, this verse uses the Arabic word shukur (thankful) which is the more emphatic form of the word shakir. Here, it is employed because the movement of ships across the water is one of Allah’s signs and wonders deserving of thanks.

This verse comes after Allah’s statement: ‘Whatever misfortune befalls you [people], it is because of what your own hands have done…’ (ash-Shura: 30). Such misfortunes also require patience and gratitude from us since hardships, when they do beset people, do not fall upon a person with such magnitude that they take everything away from a person all at once. In this, Allah Glorified is He might afflict us in one area of our lives, but He exempts us from affliction in all others. We therefore need patience regarding the aspect of our lives beset by troubles, and gratitude for those which are not.

Concerning this fact, it is recounted that(1) 'Abdullah ibn Ja`far(2) hurt his leg as he was travelling to Damascus, and he found no one to treat him for the entire length of his journey. His wound festered and became infected with gangrene, and they decided to amputate his leg. The others travelling with him sent for mandrake, an anaesthetic used at the time to deaden the pain in surgery. However, he refused to drink the drug, saying: 'By Allah, I should not be heedless of my lord for even one instant!' So, they truly cut off his leg without anaesthetic because he who takes joy in such closeness to Allah, as comes through full mental awareness untouched by drug—he will truly feel no pain, when he is thus accompanied by Allah.

(1) The story of amputating the leg of `Abdullah ibn Ja`far

(2) `Abdullah ibn Ja`far ibn `Abu Taleb. He was born in the land of Abyssinia (modern-day Ethiopia) in the year 1 A.H. when his parents emigrated to that land. He is the first=

It is this accompaniment through which Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him and his Companion were protected in the cave, when he said to his Companion: 'Do not grieve, for Allah is with us.' Abu Bakr Allah be pleased with him said: 'O Messenger of Allah, if any one of them (the disbelievers who chased them) looked under his feet, he would find us trampled there.' Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him said to him: 'What do you think of two, the third of whom is Allah?'(1) This is so because those two people gathered are in Allah's company, even though they cannot see Him. Likewise, whoever is found to be in Allah's company is granted a portion of this characteristic.

Thus, when `Abdullah ibn Ja`far said: 'By Allah, I should not be heedless of my lord for even one instant!' they cut off his leg as he was in this state of being in the company of Allah, thus preventing him from feeling any pain. When the others wanted to bury his leg, he grabbed hold of it and said: 'O Allah! I beseech you! If you tested me by afflicting one limb, you let the other parts of my body be sound.' This is truly the model of the patient, deeply grateful servant, who is longsuffering in trials and thankful for the blessings he receives.

Next, we read Allah's words: 'If He willed, He could bring the wind to a standstill…' (ash-Shura: 33), which exhibits another shade of the Quran's miraculous nature. In the old days, boats could only move along by wind power, which has since given way to the use of motors and electricity to power ships. However, the fact that ships no longer need wind to move across the sea does not mean that this verse does not continue to be relevant in our time. On the contrary, its significance is constant and everlasting unto the last hour before judgment since the word rih (wind) in this context means any kind of force or energy, not just air currents.

We see this elsewhere in the Quran such as Allah’s statement ‘And obey Allah and His Messenger and do not quarrel for then you will be weak in hearts and your power will depart…’ (al-Anfal: 46). ‘Tadh-haba rihukum’ means ‘your power will depart’ thus denoting power or capability of any kind, whether air, steam or other such sources of energy.

Then, we read the His words: ‘…there truly are signs in this for anyone who is steadfast and thankful.’ (ash-Shura: 33) The fact that this comes after the statement ‘…and they would lie motionless on the surface of the sea…’ (ash-Shura: 33) indicates a counsel given to the ship’s crew and passengers, who should not be sad if the winds become still and the ship stops moving. They are to accept this trial gracefully and with patience, and to give thanks that the crisis is not worse, such as a shipwreck, a hurricane, or some other catastrophe. In all, they should be patient in suffering, and grateful for those things which they still have.

Then, the True Lord says:

أَوۡ يُوبِقۡهُنَّ بِمَا كَسَبُواْ وَيَعۡفُ عَن كَثِيرٖ ٣٤

Or He could cause them to be wrecked on account of what their passengers have done – God pardons much [34] (The Quran, ash-Shura: 34)

‘Yubiquhunna’ (cause them to be wrecked) (ash-Shura: 34) means or they will be caused to drown. His words ‘…on account of what their passengers have done…’ (ash-Shura: 34) refer to those transgressions which the passengers had committed previously, such as drinking, gambling and so on. His words: ‘…Allah pardons much’ (ash-Shura: 34) mean that He forgives many of their sins and does not punish or chastise the people because of them.

Elsewhere, the True Lord clarifies this matter: ‘it is He who enables you to travel on land and sea until, when you are sailing on ships, and rejoicing in the favouring wind, a storm arrives: waves come at those on board from all sides and they feel there is no escape. Then they pray to Allah, professing sincere devotion to Him, "If You save us from this we shall be truly thankful." Yet no sooner does He save them than, back on land, they behave outrageously against all that is right…' (Yunus: 22-23).

Then, the True Lord says:

وَيَعۡلَمَ ٱلَّذِينَ يُجَٰدِلُونَ فِيٓ ءَايَٰتِنَا مَا لَهُم مِّن مَّحِيصٖ (٣٥)

To let those who argue about Our messages know that there is no escape for them [35] (The Quran, ash-Shura: 35)

This verse means: those who argue about Allah's messages have no refuge or escape from His punishment. Those who argue with Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him about Allah's messages and deny him, know the Power of Allah Glorified is He over them; since He could, if he so wished, smite them with a great and powerful blow.

Hasa (mentioned in the verse as mahis: escape) means: going here and there in a place without finding comfort or rest. Egyptian colloquial Arabic employs the active participle form of this verb in the expression: 'fulan hayis' (So-and-so does not find a place to rest). He does not know where to go, and so he has no refuge or a place of safety.

Then, the True Lord says:

فَمَآ أُوتِيتُم مِّن شَيۡءٖ فَمَتَٰعُ ٱلۡحَيَوٰةِ ٱلدُّنۡيَاۖ وَمَا عِندَ ٱللَّهِ خَيۡرٞ
وَأَبۡقَىٰ لِلَّذِينَ ءَامَنُواْ وَعَلَىٰ رَبِّهِمۡ يَتَوَكَّلُونَ (٣٦)

What you have been given is only the fleeting enjoyment of this world. Far better and more lasting is what God will give to those who believe and trust in their Lord [36] (The Quran, ash-Shura: 36)

'Min shay`in' (Whatever thing…) (ash-Shura: 36) refer to all enjoyable things of this world such as material wealth, women, the joy of raising children, professional careers, good health, fame etc. All these are but pleasant aspects of this mortal existence which we enjoy while on the earth. Even though we know this world will last from the creation of Adam peace be upon him until the Last Hour, an individual person does not experience it as such. An individual person's experience of this world is only that time which he and he alone remains on earth, since time cannot be added to his life from the lives of others; it is not the person who passes by the world, but rather, it is the world that passes by the person.

Thus, whatever pleasure one may experience in this life, it only lasts as long as one's lifetime on earth, and ultimately passes away. '…What is with Allah is better and more lasting for those who believe and rely on their Lord.' (ash-Shura: 36) In other words, that which is with Allah is better because the enjoyment we have on earth is commensurate with our own meagre efforts and abilities. In the Hereafter, however, the enjoyment corresponds to the True Lord's ability to bestow happiness. Moreover, earthly pleasures are fleeting, whereas joy in the Hereafter is everlasting.

In sum, when we compare the level of enjoyment we have on earth to that experience in the Hereafter, we learn that what is with Allah Glorified is He is far better and more enduring. When we realize this truth, it is incumbent upon us to strive for the fruits of the Hereafter, which show Allah's infinite beneficence. The eternality of joy in the Hereafter is placed upon all those who believe and trust in Allah Glorified is He. In this, there are two aspects: aqida (creed) of true religious principles, and exerting one's own efforts to live a good life.

We may note here the difference between a person who first does his part to be successful, then leaves the rest up to Allah Glorified is He and a person who says, 'I trust in Allah!', but does not do his part to accomplish his goals. The true believer trusts in Allah in his heart, and puts his faith into action.

This verse: 'Whatever thing you are given, is only the fleeting enjoyment of this world. What is with Allah is better and more lasting for those who believe and rely on their Lord' (ash-Shura: 36) was revealed in response to what a group of leaders of the tribe of Quraysh did. They (the most of which was Walid ibn Al-Mughira) envied the Messenger of Allah peace and blessings be upon him when Allah Glorified is He set him apart as a prophet. They said:

'…why was this Quran not sent down to a distinguished man, from either of the two cities?' (az-Zukhruf: 31) They were referring to a person who had such and such riches. Allah Glorified is He responded by stating that all these are transient joys and pleasures of earth, i.e. worldly and transitory, and that the joy which is with Allah Glorified is He is far greater and more enduring.

Who shun great sins and gross indecencies; who forgive when they are angry [37] (The Quran, ash-Shura: 37)

The meaning of the verb 'shun' is to remove oneself from those things which lead to '…the more heinous sins and abominations.…' 'More heinous sins' refer to those great transgressions which Allah has warned us not to commit, and for which He has allotted punishment. The Arabic word al-fawahish (abominations) means that which is most vile and repulsive in Allah's sight. Both heinous sins and abominations require setting our boundaries so as not to commit them.

We have said previously that the various messengers throughout the ages agreed that heinous sins are not permitted, and they have urged all humankind to avoid these shameful acts by all their body parts. The heart must be made free of worshipping any but Allah, the True Lord, of insisting on committing sins, feeling secure from the plan of Allah and giving up hope of His Mercy. Likewise, the tongue must be purged of bearing false witness, telling lies, defaming pure and chaste women, and the false oath, being that oath which plunges the one who says it into hellfire. The false oath is the act of lying about what has previously happened and swearing by that lie, an act for which there is no atonement. However, if a person swears to do something in the future, then found that there is something better to be done, Allah allows him to do what is better and to do a kaffara (fasting, feeding the needy or freeing a slave) for breaking his oath. Likewise, the stomach must be free of alcohol and the consumption of the orphan's sustenance or of that which is gained through usury, the private parts must be free of any unlawful relations, the hands of theft and killing, and the legs of fleeing from duty on the day that the army marches into battle. And above all, the whole self must be purified from disobedience to one's parents.

We then read Allah's statement, '…And who whenever they are moved to anger, readily forgive' (ash-Shura: 37). Anger is the boiling of rage at the thing which has angered or exhausted you; if that thing happens to be a person, a desire for vengeance might arise, or possibly hatred and envy. For this reason, the True Lord teaches us to forgive, to excuse others their faults, and to pardon; if we want Allah to forgive us, then we too must be willing to forgive others. If we consider the human condition, we note that the result of forgiveness and mercy is commendable, whereas the result of retaliation and vengeance is disastrous. Therefore, the True Lord counsels us to take the side of forgiveness and to be on guard against violent feelings of anger, and to not be carried away by them. He tells us not to overstep our rightful bounds when these feelings arise, even in the case of (lawful) reprisal: '…Just retribution is ordained for you in cases of killing…' (al-Baqara: 178). After setting the terms of legal revenge through retribution, He reminds us of that which is better to us, namely excusing others their sins: '…And if something [of his guilt] is remitted to a guilty person by his brother, this [remission] shall be adhered to with fairness, and restitution to his fellow-man shall be made in a goodly manner…' (al-Baqara: 178). Allah establishes the punishment so as to give the guilty person his due comeuppance after which He opens the door of forgiveness to that person.

We thus find that true religion prevents any person from intervening on behalf of a person to prevent lawful punishments established by Allah except in cases of murder which allow such intervention. This is so because, when the murder victim's surviving relatives forgive the killer, they spread undue amity in society; and the killer feels himself to be in their debt, knowing his soul is contingent upon that forgiveness.

Let us read another of Allah's statements on this matter: 'Repel [evil] with something that is better – and lo! He between whom and yourself was enmity [may then become] as though he had [always] been close [to you], a true friend! Yet [to achieve] this is not given to any but those who are to be patient in adversity: it is not given to any but those endowed with the greatest good fortune!' (Fussilat: 34-35) This is a truth which the Creator has put into place, for He knows His slaves well. In this context, we find some people who say, 'I swear I repelled evil with something better, but to no avail'! To such a person we must say, 'You should re-examine yourself and the sincerity of your behaviour. You think that you have repelled evil with something better, but this is not really the case. Rather, you are tempting Allah, and trying to tempt Allah indicates doubt. If you spoke the truth, then this verse would also be correct along with your words. He spoke truly who said:(1)

O you are vexed by the deeds of this and that Repel your ransom with something better, in order to see he [between whom and thyself was enmity a friend].

Next, we must ponder why this verse mentions the subject of the sentence in the statement '…[they] readily forgive' through inclusion of the subject pronoun hum (they) which is semantically unnecessary since Arabic verbs reflect their subjects through conjugation. Here, the pronoun hum is also included in order to emphasize that 'they' are the ones who have made the decision to forgive, not out of flattery or because they are forced to do so. For example, a person who has been wronged by a guilty party might very well send someone else to trial in their stead in order to intercede on the guilty person's behalf. In this case, however, the gratitude and good favour would be due to the person who intercedes, rather than the person who sent him. So, why would he not do the forgiving himself, thus collecting the reward of gratitude and favour himself?

وَٱلَّذِينَ ٱسۡتَجَابُواْ لِرَبِّهِمۡ وَأَقَامُواْ ٱلصَّلَوٰةَ وَأَمۡرُهُمۡ شُورَىٰ بَيۡنَهُمۡ وَمِمَّا رَزَقۡنَٰهُمۡ يُنفِقُونَ ﴿٣٨﴾

Respond to their Lord; keep up the prayer; conduct their affairs by mutual consultation; give to others out of what We have provided for them [38] (The Quran, ash-Shura: 38)

Allah's statement 'and who respond to [the call of] their Lord…' means those who respond in faith, clearly exhibiting `aqida, internal conviction of true religious principles. The statement which follows shows the practical application of that conviction through action: 'And are constant in prayer; and whose rule [in all matters of common concern] is consultation among themselves; and who spend on others out of what We provide for them as sustenance.' This verse is one of several which link prayer and zakat (tithes) since both of them are reasons for perfect Muslim individuals and society. zakat is money yielded up from us in order to help those in need; they are therefore a monetary sacrifice on the giver's part. In like fashion, prayer represents a greater zakat since people sacrifice time in order to pray, time which could otherwise be used to make money.

(1) From the poetry of Sheikh Ash-Sha`rawi Allah rest his soul.

What is different about this verse from those others which connect prayer and zakat is the injunction to call a shura (counsel). It is the True Lord Glorified is He who is speaking here, and we should thus pause and consider the wisdom in what is being said. In thinking about why shura (counsel meeting) is called for in this verse which links prayer and zakat, when so many other verses connect these two concepts without such a command. We might say that the phrase '[they] are in constant prayer' means praying to the fullest extent, which would be at gatherings in the mosque. In this sense, those praying together at mosque take the opportunity to gather in prayer, as though calling a counsel among themselves. We should also note that in this instance, the call for a counsel is not for discussing a commandment neither of Allah nor of His Messenger peace and blessings be upon him. Rather, it is for discussing an issue up for debate, being that no hard-and-fast stipulation was issued on this matter. The main point is that matter should be conducted in counsel by those who are specialized, as we see concerning the question of issuing of fatwa.(1) That is why we call for any fatwa to be agreed upon by several people, not just one. This is so because discussing a question or issue in a group must necessarily lead to the right answer. Moreover, a decision reached in counsel is more easily defended by an individual participant in that counsel, even if his opinions differ from those held by others.

(1) Among the various examples of shura (counselling), we find the consultation of `Umar with Al-Hurmuzan after the latter had embraced Islam. `Umar counselled with him regarding the military campaigns, and Al-Hurmuzan said to him: 'Those enemies of Muslims are like a bird with feathers, two wings, and two legs. If one wing breaks, the other wing will rise with the two legs and the head. If the second wing is broken, then the two legs will rise with the head. But if the head is crushed, then the wings and legs will perish. Verily, the head is Kisra, king of the Persians; one wing is Caesar, and the other is Faris. So, order the armies of Muslims to go toward Kisra.' Tafsir Al-Qurtubi, 6081-6089.

Next, we read, '…And whose rule [in all matters of common concern] is consultation among themselves…' (ash-Shura: 38). In this verse, the Arabic word used for 'counsel' is shura, the gathered group itself, rather than the word tashawur, which connotes the process of meeting and discussing. This is for emphasis: rather than highlight the process of discussing matters in counsel, the verse underscores the assemblage itself. In like fashion, we might say, 'He is a man of justice', rather than 'he is a just man'. In this example, the word 'justice' is more emphatic. On the matter of counsel, `Ali Allah be pleased with him said to the Messenger of Allah peace and blessings be upon him: 'O Messenger of Allah, what of those matters on which we see no ruling issued by Allah, nor do we find any such ruling in the Sunna of His Prophet? What are we to do [on these matters]?' The Prophet said to him, 'Gather together the slaves (of Allah), and form a counsel, so that your decisions are not shaped by the opinion of one man alone.'(1)

وَٱلَّذِينَ إِذَآ أَصَابَهُمُ ٱلۡبَغۡيُ هُمۡ يَنتَصِرُونَ ٣٩

And defend themselves when they are oppressed [39]
(The Quran, ash-Shura: 39)

The phrase 'whenever tyranny afflicts them' indicates that they have been afflicted with oppression. The phrase '…defends themselves' means that they seek vengeance upon their oppressors in the same degree as they were attacked, no more. This verse shows one of Allah's decrees, namely that vengeance against an oppressor is permissible.(2) But the matter does not end here. Rather, the

(1) At-Tabarani quotes this in Al-Mu`jam Al-Kabir (#11874), by Ibn `Abbas, who stated that `Ali ibn Abu Taleb said, 'O Messenger of Allah, hast you considered if an issue were to confront us for which no [legislative] verses have been revealed, nor any pronouncement from you?' He replied, 'Gather together the believing slaves (of Allah), and form a counsel, so that judgments are not passed according to special interest.' As-Suyuti attributes this to him in his Ad-Durr Al-Manthur, in his interpretation of the verse, 'When Allah's succour comes, and victory' (an-Nasr: 1). Al-Haythami states, `Abdullah ibn Kisaan is one of the narrators.' Al-Bukhari states, 'The Hadith of this man is not recognized as authentic.'

(2) There are two responses to an oppressor or dictator which were decreed by the judge Abu Bakr ibn Al-`Arabi, and which are quoted by Al-Qurtubi in his Tafsir. 'First: the oppressor is to show publicly his immorality, be a rude presence in society, harmful to all people great and small. In this situation, retribution is the most preferable course of=

True Lord Glorified is He continues with another decree to complete the picture, and He states in the verse which follows:

وَجَزَٰٓؤُاْ سَيِّئَةٖ سَيِّئَةٞ مِّثۡلُهَاۖ فَمَنۡ عَفَا وَأَصۡلَحَ فَأَجۡرُهُۥ عَلَى ٱللَّهِۚ إِنَّهُۥ لَا يُحِبُّ ٱلظَّٰلِمِينَ ٤٠

Let harm be requited by an equal harm, though anyone who forgives and puts things right will have his reward from God Himself — He does not like those who do wrong [40]
(The Quran, ash-Shura: 40)

The True Lord Glorified is He is Merciful and Kind to His slaves, and when He allowed them to return and requite the evil done to them in the same degree, He meant for this to assuage the resentment of those who have been wronged, to give them peace through retribution to their oppressors. However, He then narrows the door of vengeance and widens the door of pardon, as in the verse: ‘Hence, if you have to respond to an attack [in argument], respond only to the extent of the attack levelled against you; but to bear yourselves with patience is indeed far better for [you, since Allah is with] those who are patient in adversity.’ (an-Nahl: 126) Thus, when the True Lord states, ‘And the retribution for an evil act is an evil one like it’, it is to bring peace to one’s heart, to end the enmity and hatred between the wrongdoer and he who has been wronged. Indeed, is it possible to respond to wrongdoing in the same degree, with no escalation or increase of violent force? In a simple example, if one person strikes another person, or slaps a person, can the person who has been struck respond without increasing the amount of force he uses? And if the person who was struck, then strikes back harder, has that person not also become an attacker? Hence the injunction of forgiveness and pardoning one’s foe, which provides an escape from this, narrow cycle appointed day, his creditor could take a pound of his flesh in repayment for the unpaid debt. When the appointed day came, the debtor could not pay what he owed, and his creditor took the case before a judge. The judge ruled in his favour and told him it was his right to take the pound of flesh, but that if he took more than that, the court would take anything over a pound from his [the creditor's] flesh. Thus, the usurious man relinquished his claims on the man's flesh.

For this reason, Allah says, '…Hence, whoever pardons [his foe] and makes peace, his reward rests with Allah – for, verily, He does not love evildoers.' It is almost as though the person who deserves to be avenged will be led to do evil if he tries to requite that evil which has been done to him. In this same vein, we read a Hadith told by `Ali Allah be pleased with him that the prophet peace and blessings be upon him said: 'When the Day of Resurrection comes, a herald will proclaim, "Whosoever has his reward with Allah, let him enter paradise." No one responded (to the Prophet), so He said, 'Whosoever has his reward with Allah, let him enter paradise' (without reckoning). So they asked who it is that has his reward with Allah. The Prophet responded, 'He who pardons his foe.'(2)

It is also recounted that one day, the Messenger of Allah peace and blessings be upon him was sitting with his Companions when he suddenly burst out laughing. `Umar asked him, 'O Messenger of Allah, why are you laughing?' The Prophet said, 'I saw my Lord judging between two men. One of the two said, 'Lord, since this man has done me wrong, take away some of the good deeds attributed to him and give him back the same number of bad deeds.' The Lord said, 'He has no good deeds. But look!' The man looked, and suddenly he saw palaces and other marvellous things. He asked, 'To whom does all this belong, Lord?' The Lord replied, 'To he who forgives his brother.' The man said, 'I forgive him!' The Lord said, 'Then take the hand of your brother, and both of you enter paradise together.'(1) We can see how the Creator corrects the errors of his slaves in this manner, and what we must do is apply this abstract idea in our daily lives.

(2) At-Tabrani quotes this in Al-Mu`jam Al-`Awsat, from Anas ibn Malik, that the Prophet peace and blessings be upon him said, 'Then the herald will proclaim, "Let him be resurrected unto his reward from Allah and enter paradise." He then said this a second time, after which one man asked, 'Who is it that has his reward with Allah?' He answered, 'Those who forgive others.' Al-Qurtubi cites this in his Tafsir. He notes that Al-Mawardi (Alboacen in Latin) also refers to this Hadith

(1) Al-Hakim correctly renders this from `Anas ibn Malik: '`Umar asked, 'What makes you laugh O Messenger of Allah?' He replied, 'Two men from my nation knelt before=

As a final note, the word ‘evil’ in the statement ‘And the retribution for an evil act is an evil one like it’ (ash-Shura: 40) does not refer to sin or defiance of Allah, but rather something bad in word or deed which has been done to a person by another.

وَلَمَنِ ٱنتَصَرَ بَعْدَ ظُلْمِهِۦ فَأُو۟لَٰٓئِكَ مَا عَلَيْهِم مِّن سَبِيلٍ ﴿٤١﴾ إِنَّمَا ٱلسَّبِيلُ عَلَى ٱلَّذِينَ
يَظْلِمُونَ ٱلنَّاسَ وَيَبْغُونَ فِى ٱلْأَرْضِ بِغَيْرِ ٱلْحَقِّ ۚ أُو۟لَٰٓئِكَ لَهُمْ عَذَابٌ أَلِيمٌ ﴿٤٢﴾

There is no cause to act against anyone who defends himself after being wronged [41] But there is cause to act against those who oppress people and transgress in the land against all justice – they will have an agonizing torment [42]
(The Quran, ash-Shura: 41-42)

Allah’s statement ‘Yet indeed, as for any who defend themselves after having been wronged…’ means those who have avenged themselves against their oppressors. The statement ‘…No blame whatever attaches to them’ refers to the fact that there is no punishment reserved for them since they did not overstep the bounds of self-defence or vengeance for wrongs done to them.

‘Blame attaches but to those who oppress [other] people and behave outrageously on earth, offending against all right: for them there is grievous

One of these two men said, “Oh Lord, recompense the wrong done to me by this man by taking away from his blessings.” The Lord said to the man who made this request, “What would you have me do with this, your brother, since he has no good deeds from which to remove blessings from him?” The man replied, “Let him bear some of my crimes as his own.”’ At this point, the eyes of Allah’s Messenger filled with tears, and said, “The fact that that day will be great and terrible enough, without a person having to answer for the sins of another, requires people to carry their own crimes and sins.” Thus, Allah said to the man who demanded justice, “Lift up your eyes and gaze into the garden.” The man looked and said, “Lord, I see coffers of gold and golden palaces studded with pearls. Unto which prophet or martyr does all this belong?” The Lord said, “Unto he who pays the price.” The man asked, “Who possesses all of this?” The Lord said, “You do.” The man asked, “On what condition?” The Lord replied, “That you forgive this, your brother.” The man said, “I forgive him!” The Lord said, “Then take the hand of this, your brother, and both of you enter paradise together.”’ Al-Hakim states, ‘This is correct according to Al-Bukhari and Muslim.’*

suffering in store!’ The True Lord takes His slaves by the hand and leads them to a more peaceful path than revenge, and more fruitful in result.

Allah states:

وَلَمَن صَبَرَ وَغَفَرَ إِنَّ ذَٰلِكَ لَمِنْ عَزْمِ ٱلْأُمُورِ ﴿٤٣﴾

Though if a person is patient and forgives,

Elsewhere, Luqman gives counsel to his son: ‘O my dear son! Be constant in prayer, and enjoin the doing of what is right and forbid the doing of what is wrong, and bear in patience whatever [ill] may befall you: this, behold, is something that requires determination’ (Luqman: 17). The difference is that in this verse, the lam of emphasis (translated as ‘indeed’) does not appear as it does in the statement ‘But withal, if one is patient in adversity and forgives – this, behold, is (indeed) something that requires determination’ (ash-Shura: 43). It is true that the general meaning of these two verses is one and the same, i.e. the call to patience in adversity. The difference is that the temptation to revenge is greater in a trial or hardship brought against a person by an adversary or enemy since interaction with that enemy incites the wronged party to anger and vengeance. For this reason, the verse under consideration includes the emphatic ‘indeed’; whereas Luqman’s advice to his son concerning a calamity which was not brought upon him by an opponent or adversary does not include such emphasis. As for having patience when one is tempted to seek revenge upon an enemy and return the evil done to him in kind, such one needs strength of will to exercise patience, and great reserves of energy capable of moving him out of the realm of self-defence into that of forgiveness and pardon. Hence the emphasis of this point twice in the same verse

Allah’s statement ‘But withal, if one is patient in adversity and forgives…’ refers to two stages: that of patience when someone harms us, and forgiveness of that harm. Many people remain patient in the face of adversity, but do not forgive the person who has done them wrong, since the stage of forgiveness requires the power of faith and resolve—as the verse states, ‘…This, behold, is indeed something to set one’s heart upon!’ Here, the statement refers to those important matters which require resolve, firmness of will, and strength necessary to extinguish the fires of hatred, loathing, and vengeance; in addition, they require the strength to forgive. Such attributes belong only to the believer who trusts that what is with Allah is better and more enduring, and that through forgiving others, he will receive by right that which he did not obtain through revenge.

We see, then, that the True Lord permits those who have been wronged to seek revenge after which He calls people to pardon their enemies. This raises the question of when vengeance is an appropriate response to wrongdoing, and when it is better to forgive. The learned men have said that forgiveness is better than revenge or self-defence, except in cases where the guilty party is devoid of conscience such that pardoning his crimes only results in his continued wrongdoing, or clemency toward him only results in his continued bloodlust. In such an instance, it is better to return the wrongdoer's evil to him in kind such that he does not continue to harm others.

Many Arab poets of the classical era attended to this truth such as Al-Mutanabbi(1):

It is clement to forget about clemency
If through clemency the paths leading to evil are enlarged.(2)

He also wrote:

If you show generosity to the generous, you will own him,
But if you did the same with cunning, he will be rebellious.
Replacing the sword with leniency
Is as harmful as replacing leniency with the sword(3)

Another poet (1) writes:

There is no good in leniency if it does not encourage Impulses which protect it from being disturbed(2)

The history of the early Arab tribes also confirms this truth. Some tribes, such as the Beni Mazin, were powerful and ferocious, and out of self-defence would not accept harm done to them. Because of this, everyone came to fear them, and no one dared attack them. Then there were those tribes that forgiveness increased their evil deeds, such as the tribe of Beni Laqita from Beni Dhuhl. Then there were tribes like Tayy`, which was a peaceful tribe, forgiving and pardoning the wrong done to it by other tribes. For this reason, the Beni Dhuhl began to lust after their belongings, and they continuously attacked until the tribal poet of Tayy` burst out in condemnation of them after the attackers had invaded their land and made off with their livestock, his imagination fuelled with the results of forgiveness of those who do not warrant it. He said, in description of his tribe:

It is as though your Lord created none to fear Him
    Out of all mankind, except for them
They reward the wickedness of the wicked with pardon,
    And the evil of evildoers with charity(3)

However, he switches around the order of the two cited lines. Likewise, Al-`Abidi in At-Tadhkara As-Sa`diyya, where he recounts the name ‘Qarit ibn `Anif.’ -Al-Jahiz cites only the first of the two lines, in his Book of Animals. Ibn `Abd Rabbihi Al-`Andalusi quotes these lines in his Al-`Aqd Al-Farid, and states: 'A man from among the Arabs said that his people were blameworthy and that the Benu Shayban had come and raided their camels. He appealed for help but to no avail. His people were weak, and he said this line in description of them. This is also the explanation given by `Abd Al-Qadir Al-Baghdadi in Khazanat Al-`Adab. Ibn Qutayba Al-Dinuri quotes these lines in `Uyun Al-`Akhbar under the caption: 'A poem by a man from the Benu `Anbar tribe, in which he praises the Benu Mazin and satirizes his own people, reviling them in comparison with other tribes.'

(1) The poet is Al-Fanad Az-Zamani, whose full name is Sahl ibn Shayban ibn Rabi`a, of Bakr ibn Wa`il. He was a poet of the pre-Islamic period; in his day, he was ruler, leader, and knight of the Bakr tribe. He fought and won the Bakr war, and lived to be one hundred years old. He was called 'Al-Fanad' because of the magnanimity of his personal character, which was like unto the height of a mountain, of which he was the peak. Al-Mawsu`a Ash-Shi`riyya

At times, showing clemency to one’s foe, is a form of submission to humiliation.
Evil sometimes carries deliverance
When charity delivers us not(1)

And on this topic, how beautiful are the words of `Ali Allah be pleased with him:

If I were in need of leniency,
At times, I still need to disregard that need.
I have one horse for dispensing clemency, bridled thereby,
And one horse to overlook it, saddled with disregard.
Those who seek my clemency will have it,
And those who expose themselves to my anger will have what they deserve.(2)

Anyone God allows to stray will have no one else to protect him: you [Prophet] will see the wrongdoers, when they face the punishment, exclaiming, ‘Is there any way of going back?’ [44]

Allah’s statement ‘he whom Allah lets go astray’ means that Allah is the One Who decides on that person’s straying from the path. This is because guidance along the right path comes from Allah, and He has made clear to humankind the path of good and that of evil, by guidance to that which is good and the proscription against that which is evil. This guidance is what we call guidance by showing and conducting, and the True Lord has provided such guidance for the believer and disbeliever alike. Indeed, Allah guides all people. The believer takes such guidance and applies it in his life, walking along the path which Allah has laid out through proscription. Because of this, Allah increases the guidance given to such a one.

(1) By Al-Fanad Az-Zamani, written in the divided abundant metre and comprising 26 total lines. We must also take into consideration the great difference between the version quoted by Ash-Sha`rawi Allah rest his soul and alternate ones. In some versions, the line states, ‘We pardoned the tribe of Benu Dhuhl’, while in others it says, ‘We renounced the tribe of Benu Dhuhl.’

(2) These lines appear in Al-Mawsu`a Ash-Shi`riyya, taken from two poets: Muhammad ibn Hazim Al-Bahili from Basra, who lived in Baghdad and died in the year 215 A.H. Muhammad ibn Wahib Al-Hamiri, also from Basra, who lived his life in Baghdad and passed away 225 A.H. However, it is believed that these two poets are the same person.

As for the disbeliever, he ignores this right guidance and does not apply it in his life. For this reason, Allah causes such a person to go increasingly astray, something which the disbeliever has chosen unto himself. Allah says, regarding the believers, ‘Just as for those who are [willing to be] guided, He increases their [ability to follow His] guidance and causes them to grow in Allah-consciousness.’ (Muhammad: 17) As for the disbeliever, his lack of faith has been stamped onto his heart such that he cannot leave behind his disbelief and let the light of faith enter.

Next, the statement, ‘…Has henceforth no protector whatever…’ means no one to protect or support him. ‘Henceforth’ means, after Allah. Then, we read, ‘…And so you will see such evildoers [on Judgment Day, and will hear how] they exclaim as soon as they behold the suffering [that awaits them], “Is there any way of return?”’ These evildoers are asking if it is possible for them to come back to earth, repent, and to do good deeds. This is the question of a weak and feeble person who cannot fool himself since he has seen with his own eyes that punishment which he tried to ignore and cover up in this mortal world.

The True Lord Glorified is He exposes the lie behind this claim, as we see in another of His verses, addressing the Messenger of Allah peace and blessings be upon him: ‘If you could but see [them] when they will be made to stand before the fire and will say, “Oh, would that we were brought back [to life]: then we would not give the lie to our Lord’s messages, but would be among the believers!” But nay – [they will say this only because] the truth which they used to conceal [from themselves] in the past will have become obvious to them; and if they were brought back [to life], they would return to the very thing which was forbidden to them: for, behold, they are indeed liars!’ (al-An‘am: 27-28) And still elsewhere, He says in response to those who make a lie of the afterlife: ‘[As for those who will not believe in the life to come, they go on lying to themselves] until, when death approaches any of them, he prays: “O my Lord! Let me return, let me return [to life], so that I might act righteously in whatever I have failed [a foretime]!” Nay, it is indeed but a [meaningless] word that he utters: for behind those [who leave the world] there is a barrier [of death] until the Day when all will be raised from the dead!’ (al-Mu’minun: 99-100) Allah then says:

وَتَرَىٰهُمْ يُعْرَضُونَ عَلَيْهَا خَٰشِعِينَ مِنَ ٱلذُّلِّ يَنظُرُونَ مِن طَرْفٍ
خَفِيٍّ ۗ وَقَالَ ٱلَّذِينَ ءَامَنُوٓا۟ إِنَّ ٱلْخَٰسِرِينَ ٱلَّذِينَ خَسِرُوٓا۟ أَنفُسَهُمْ
وَأَهْلِيهِمْ يَوْمَ ٱلْقِيَٰمَةِ ۗ أَلَآ إِنَّ ٱلظَّٰلِمِينَ فِى عَذَابٍ مُّقِيمٍ ﴿٤٥﴾

You will see them exposed to the Fire, abject in humiliation, glancing furtively, while those who believed exclaim, ‘The losers are the ones who have lost themselves and their people on the Day of Resurrection.’ Truly the evildoers will remain in lasting torment[45] (The Quran, ash-Shura: 45)

In His statement ‘And you will see them…’, ‘them’ refers to disbelievers. The phrase ‘…exposed to that [doom]…’ means that they are exposed to the hellfire. ‘…Humbling themselves in abasement…’ means they are forced into submission out of great fear. For this reason, they are ‘…looking [around] with a furtive glance…’, i.e. stealing glances, but unable to look for too long since the shame heaped upon them hurts their eyes. Hence, a person says to someone who accuses him falsely, ‘look at my eyes’ since looking to each other’s’ eyes reveals what is true. A person who is right has a powerful eye, the strength of which is shored up by the power of truth which that person defends. As for the eye of someone in the wrong, it is weak and enfeebled by the rays of the light of truth that reveal his deception.

Moving on, we encounter the statement ‘…the while those who had attained to faith will say, “Verily, lost on [this] Day of Resurrection are they who have squandered their own and their followers’ selves!” Oh, verily, the evildoers will fall into long-lasting suffering.’ This is a declaration of the believer who has escaped punishment in the hereafter and won the reward of paradise. It is as if to say, the true loss is the state of evildoers who have lost everything. Finally, we read, '…Oh, verily, the evildoers will fall into long-lasting suffering' meaning endless suffering which is never cut off.

وَمَا كَانَ لَهُم مِّنْ أَوْلِيَآءَ يَنصُرُونَهُم مِّن دُونِ ٱللَّهِ ۗ وَمَن يُضْلِلِ ٱللَّهُ فَمَا لَهُۥ مِن سَبِيلٍ ﴿٤٦﴾

They will have no allies to help them against God.
There is no way [forward] for those God allows to stray [46] (The Quran, ash-Shura: 46)

The discussion in this verse refers to the Day of Resurrection. The statement 'and will have no protector whatever to succour them against Allah…' means that no one will deflect from them their allotted punishment. In '…For he whom Allah lets go astray shall find no way [of escape]', the phrase 'whom Allah lets go astray' means that they have no path of guidance since it is Allah who guides along the straight path giving a perfect example of direction and the path to follow, We have clarified previously the two types of divine guidance: guidance by direction and conducting, and guidance by success and relief granted by Allah. It is because of this division into two types that we see some orientalists pausing over certain verses, in accusation of the Quran as self-contradictory. For example, Allah states, 'And as for [the tribe of] Thamud, We offered them guidance, but they chose blindness in preference to guidance…' (Fussilat: 17). In another place, He states, 'Verily, you cannot guide aright everyone whom you love…' (al-Qasas: 56); and yet elsewhere, He states, '…And, verily, [on the strength thereof] you, too, guide [men] onto the straightway' (ash-Shura: 52). It seems that Allah affirms guidance in one place and denies it in another. The addressee in the two verses is the Messenger of Allah peace and blessings be upon him and the objection of the orientalists results from their lack of understanding of Allah's word. The simultaneous affirmation and denial in these verses have to do with the fact that each verse deals with a separate aspect of guidance. Affirmation of guidance has one meaning, and denial thereof, another meaning. Regarding the difference, mentioned previously, between guidance by direction and guidance by aid and succour granted of Allah, the Messenger of Allah peace and blessings be upon him is the one who guides by direction and conducting. Guidance by aid and succour belongs to Allah alone Who leads whomever He pleases along the straight path back to him. Thus, in the statement ‘Verily, you cannot guide aright everyone whom you love…’ the denial is of guidance by aid and succour which belong to Allah alone and which therefore a person cannot hope to provide. The verse which reads ‘…And, verily, [on the strength thereof] thou, too, shalt guide [men] onto the straight way’ has to do with guidance by direction and conducting. We therefore see that these two instances deal with two different types of guidance and do not contradict each other.

We also read verses such as the following, which addresses Allah’s Messenger peace and blessings be upon him: ‘…And it was not you who cast [terror into them, O Prophet], when you did cast it, but it was Allah who cast it…’ (al-Anfal: 17). Here, the deed is confirmed and denied all at once, since this verse is referring to two different aspects of the action, each with a separate meaning. In yet another of Allah’s statements, we read: ‘[This is] Allah’s promise. Never does Allah fail to fulfil His promise – but most people know [it] not: they know but the outer surface of this world’s life, whereas of the ultimate things they are utterly unaware.’ (ar-Rum 6-7) This means that most people do not understand the inner truth of things, but rather their outer appearance only.

We often use this simultaneous affirmation and denial of an action in everyday settings. For example, if a person sees his son open a book and peruse its pages, caught up therein, that person might ask his son in what he studied, but the son did not know the answers. His father could then say, ‘You studied but did not study’ meaning he read the words on paper, but he did not understand their meaning. Next, the True Lord states:

ٱسْتَجِيبُوا۟ لِرَبِّكُم مِّن قَبْلِ أَن يَأْتِىَ يَوْمٌ لَّا مَرَدَّ لَهُۥ مِنَ ٱللَّهِ ۚ
مَا لَكُم مِّن مَّلْجَإٍ يَوْمَئِذٍ وَمَا لَكُم مِّن نَّكِيرٍ ﴿٤٧﴾

So [people] respond to your Lord before there comes a Day that cannot, against God’s will, be averted – you will have no refuge on that Day, and no possibility of denying [your sins]. If they still turn away [remember that] [47] (The Quran, ash-Shura: 47)

Here, the injunction is to respond to the Lord, namely He who created all things from nothing and provides for us as we were having nothing. It is He

Who undertook our being nurtured and insured against harm and favoured above all else; He is the Owner of the straight path, the Dispenser of our final reward, and the One with power over us. Unto Him alone do we return and seek refuge! Thus, He deserves to be obeyed, and has the right of complete obedience. Indeed, the one with sound intellect hurries in responding to Allah.

We should note here that the Quran states ‘respond’ rather than ‘answer’, since response is an aspect of a request or plea to a request. Hence, His statement ‘and responds unto all who attain to faith and do righteous deeds…’ means Allah responds to those who believe in Him and do acts of righteousness. For example, when the True Lord Glorified is He calls a person unto prayer, it is necessary that that person respond, since the call is for his or her benefit, providing a spiritual push to become closer to Allah’s company. The call to prayer: ‘Allah is the greatest! Come to prayer! Come to success!’ is as if Allah is saying, ‘Come unto me.’ It is the Lord, Allah, who calls us unto Him, welcoming us unto His House and His Company, and correcting the error of our ways. However, if people do not respond to Allah’s call, then they are guilty transgressors, rebels against Allah, and they deserve punishment. And Allah does not benefit from punishing them.

If we make a comparison between a meeting with Allah and one with a president or elected official, we will see a clear difference. In the latter case, it is we who request a meeting with the president or official. If this request is accepted, the time, place, and circumstances of the meeting are all chosen for us, leaving us with no control over the matter. However, in the case of Our Lord Glorified is He it is He Who requests a meeting with us, not just once, but five times each day and night (when we hear the call to prayer). He opens the door for us to say whatever it is that we need from Him, and we are the ones who choose when we end our meeting with Him. Such an encounter with Allah provides a spiritual boost that helps shore up our faith and creed; purify that which has become corrupted in our minds and hearts; forgive us our small transgressions; and make matters clear to our souls and calm our hearts.

Someone might very well ask how this all takes place. The answer is that Allah is unseen, and when He helps correct our errors, He does it far from our vision. When He gives good gifts unto us, He does it in His invisibility such that we cannot perceive or take note of it at first. Hence the fact that the Messenger of Allah peace and blessings be upon him prayed when a pressing matter befell him.(1) He used to say, regarding the matter of prayer, 'Rest us with the prayer, O Bilal.(2) We should do likewise: if harsh conditions weigh us down, or if concerns or pressures cause us anguish, we should make haste to pray.

Naturally, a person's response to Allah's call is limited to his life here on earth, which is the time allotted to perform our labours, whether for good or ill. That is why he said, '…before there comes, at Allah's behest, a Day on which there will be no turning back…', namely, that Day of Resurrection which no one can turn back from, and the time of which will not be delayed. Then we read the statement '… [for] on that Day you will have no place of refuge…' meaning there will be no place of sanctuary, where we can hide from our fate. Finally, the verse ends with '…and neither will you be able to deny aught [of the wrong that you have done].' There is no way to refute or disprove or set at naught one's punishment in the hereafter.

مِنَّا رَحۡمَةٗ فَرِحَ بِهَاۖ وَإِن تُصِبۡهُمۡ سَيِّئَةُۢ بِمَا قَدَّمَتۡ أَيۡدِيهِمۡ فَإِنَّ ٱلۡإِنسَٰنَ كَفُورٞ ﴿٤٨﴾

'We have not sent you [Prophet] to be their guardian: your only duty is to deliver the message. When We give man a taste of Our mercy, he rejoices in it, but if some harm befalls him on account of what he has done with his own hands, then he is ungrateful [48] (The Quran, ash-Shura: 48)

Allah's statement 'But if they turn away [from you, O Prophet…' means that they turn away from the Prophet peace and blessings be upon him in all these matters and leave him, departing from the way. Elsewhere, we read, 'for [it often happens that] when We bestow Our blessings upon man, he turns away and arrogantly keeps aloof [from any thought of Us].' (al-Isra': 83). If the people were to leave you O Muhammad behind, '…We have not sent you to be their keeper: you art not bound to do more than deliver the message [entrusted to you]. ...' This verse is a consolation for the Messenger of Allah peace and blessings be upon him. He was always desirous that his people would allow themselves to be rightly guided, and their resistance to his message and turning away from Allah's guidance saddened him. He would become troubled with this matter to the point where he almost perished from the weight of it. For this reason, his Lord comforts him in more than one place in the Quran, making his burdens lighter and preventing him from taking on more than he had the energy for. In another place, we read Allah's statement, 'Would you, perhaps, torment yourself to death [with grief] because they [who live around you] refuse to believe [in it]?' (ash-Shu'ara': 3) Or in the chapter of al-Kahf, where we read: 'But would you, perhaps, torment yourself to death with grief over them if they are not willing to believe in this message?' (al-Kahf: 6) In the verse under consideration, Allah states, '…We have not sent you to be their keeper…' meaning it is not the Prophet's role to be constantly supervising people to see who believes and who disbelieves; rather, his role is to bring them the message of Islam: '…you are not bound to do more than deliver the message [entrusted to you]...'. It is not the Prophet's place to force religion upon anyone.

(2) Abu Dawud cites this as legally binding (4333); Ahmad cites it as well (22009); Ibn Abu `Asim in his Sunnan attested only once or twice (2120); and At-Tabrani quotes this in Al-Mu`jam Al-Kabir) (6091), narrated by a man who embraced Islam.

Next, the True Lord describes a reality which human nature inevitably follows: '…And, behold, [such as turn away from Our messages are but impelled by the weakness and inconstancy of human nature: thus] when We give man a taste of Our grace, he is prone to exult in it.…' It is logical that a person would exult in grace shown unto him. Here, exultation means to be proud of; the gender-specific 'man' refers to all humankind. '…But if misfortune befalls [any of] them in result of what their own hands have sent forth, then, behold, man shows how bereft he is of all gratitude!'

Note here how grace is not ascribed to people because it does not result from their actions. Misfortune, on the other hand, is indeed attributed to people, since it is the consequence of peoples' desires and actions. Thus, the calamities that befall us cannot be ascribed to Allah since they are the result of our own deeds; if we were indeed to blame such troubles on Allah, we would be ungrateful: '…Behold, man shows how bereft he is of all gratitude!' meaning, rejecting Allah's bounty, and one of the ways to be ungrateful is to ascribe disasters or hardships to Allah.

Ingratitude and lack of appreciation for Allah's blessings is part of human nature, except for those upon whom Allah has had great mercy. For example, a man might knock on another person's door, asking for intercession on his behalf. The second person whose help was sought might then stay by his side and help until his situation was made right. However, the reality of the situation in this example is that Allah is the one who helps and makes hardships easier to bear, not the person who helped the man. That person just happened to be in that place at the time the other man was in need; Allah would have helped the first man whether or not there was an intermediary agent.

In sum, when one person intercedes and helps another person in trouble, that intercession was not the reason that the calamitous situation was solved, but rather, it was by coincidence that another person happened to intercede at that time. The amazing thing about this is that we sometimes find arrogant people who attribute the solving of their problems to themselves, rather than to he whom such solutions rightly belong. Such a person claims, 'I did such and such, and I was prepared for such and such disaster'. We often see such haughtiness because being rescued from trials comes from the charitable acts of another, and such acts cause the person who has been rescued to be grateful to the person who helped him. Consider the following line of poetry:

Be good to others makes you enslave their hearts,
Since goodness subjugates man to his benefactor.(1)

A person who denies that the betterment of his circumstances is the result of someone else's help is trying to free himself of this humility and indebtedness to others. This is like Qarun (Korah)'s denial of those blessings which have come as a result of the actions of others: '…this [wealth] has been given to me only by virtue of the knowledge that is in me!' (al-Qasas: 78)

(1) Abu Al-Fatah Al-Basti `Ali ibn Muhammad, born in Bost, near Sijistan (present-day Sistan, the border region of eastern Iran and southwestern Afghanistan). He has a short collection of poetry. He died in the year 400 A.H. This line is from a famous poem of his, beginning with the line: Man grows ever more inadequate in his world. The poem is written in the simple metre and comprises 64 total lines. Al-Mawsu`a Ash-Shi`riyya

In the past, people used to say, 'Beware of evil acts from he whom you have helped', since charity done unto others reminds them of their weaknesses and need for help. Hence the Lord's statement, '…Behold, man shows how bereft he is of all gratitude!' (ash-Shura: 48) namely, gratitude for the Lord's bounty upon us since people tend to attribute the bounty to their own actions, and purify them from any evil or bad deed. Both actions are considered a denial for Allah's graces over him.

When talking about His bounty towards man, the True Lord says, '…and should you try to count Allah's blessing, you could never compute them…' (Ibrahim: 34). We note first the use of 'and should you', which emphasizes the doubt that this would ever happen since Allah's blessings are so plentiful that one could never count them nor would anyone even try, since the only things that one would try to count are those things that could actually be counted. For example, no one would ask a person to try to count all the grains of sand in the world. In this way, Allah has blessed us beyond our ability to count and measure. Looking again at this statement, the singular phrase 'Allah's blessing' is used, rather than the plural since one blessing alone is immeasurable, let alone many blessings!

The statenent '…and should you try to count Allah's blessing, you could never compute them…' (Ibrahim: 34) was mentioned in two verses in the Quran. The first ended with Allah's statement '…[And yet,] behold, man is indeed most persistent in wrongdoing, stubbornly ingrate!' (Ibrahim: 34) And the second has ended with: '…Behold, Allah is indeed much-forgiving, a dispenser of grace.' (an-Nahl: 18) The difference of both ends is significant: Allah's bounty contains several elements, including the Giver, who is Allah; the one who is blessed, being one of Allah's slaves; and the gift itself which cannot be counted or measured. The proper description of the Giver is of being generous, one who gives liberally unto His slaves and favours them above all others even if they are ungrateful and do not appreciate His bounty. For this reason, Allah states, '…Behold, Allah is indeed much-forgiving, a dispenser of grace.' (an-Nahl: 18) The one who is blessed may therefore be described as ungrateful, one who does not recognize the gifts given to him by Allah, persisting in his ingratitude even unto wrongdoing. Hence this statement describes him, '… [And yet,] behold, man is indeed most persistent in wrongdoing, stubbornly ingrate!' (Ibrahim: 34)

لِّلَّهِ مُلْكُ ٱلسَّمَٰوَٰتِ وَٱلْأَرْضِ ۚ يَخْلُقُ مَا يَشَآءُ ۚ يَهَبُ لِمَن يَشَآءُ إِنَٰثًا وَيَهَبُ لِمَن يَشَآءُ
ٱلذُّكُورَ ﴿٤٩﴾ أَوْ يُزَوِّجُهُمْ ذُكْرَانًا وَإِنَٰثًا ۖ وَيَجْعَلُ مَن يَشَآءُ عَقِيمًا ۚ إِنَّهُۥ عَلِيمٌ قَدِيرٌ ﴿٥٠﴾

God has control of the heavens and the earth; He creates whatever He will – He grants female offspring to whoever He will [49] male to whoever He will, or both male and female, and He makes whoever He will barren: He is all knowing and all powerful [50] (The Quran, ash-Shura: 49-50)

Here, the True Lord talks about His possession of the heavens and the earth as an envelope for all things. In the beginning of this chapter, He talks about His dominion over the heavens and the earth, saying, 'His is all that is in the heavens, and all that is on earth; and Most Exalted, Tremendous is He.' (ash-Shura: 4) Thus, the meaning is that Allah holds the heavens, the earth and all things contained therein. The Arabic style used in these two 'His is all that is in the heavens and all that is on earth…', and 'To Allah alone is the dominion over the heavens and the earth…' is known as the style of restriction, where the Arabic preposition and the name that follows it are mentioned first, before the subject, to give the meaning of restriction. The sense given by this style is that Allah alone has possession of the heavens and earth and all things contained within them, and no one shares Him in this dominion.

The form of the word mulk (dominion), are the letters mim lam kaf. The word can be pronounced as malk, milk and mulk. When the word is pronounced with a kasra, making the word milk, it means all those items contained in your possession which you can use. When pronounced with a ḍamma, making the word mulk means one's authority and dominion over those milk, i.e. possessions (this is the system by which a kingdom generally functions). When said with a fatha, as in the verse '…We did not break our promise to thee of our own free will [malkina]…' (Ta Ha: 87), it means 'according to one's desire'.

The same word can also be pronounced with different movements on the middle letter. It can be pronounced as malik (king) or one who holds dominion over others and restrict their wills. Still another form of the word is malak (angel) the highest of beings created by Allah. Finally, the word milak means the core or essence of a thing.

Thus, as noted, Allah's statement 'To Allah alone is the dominion over the heavens and the earth…' means that He is the owner and creator and the architect of them. One can possess that which one does not make, but this is not the case here.

Next, we read, '…He creates whatever He wills' meaning His creations come about according to His desire and whim. He has all-encompassing power with regard to creation; nothing is beyond His ability to fashion things as He pleases, and the elements cannot resist His creative force. Allah gives us evidence of this in our daily lives as a society for all to understand. We read, 'To Allah alone is the dominion over the heavens and the earth. He creates whatever He wills: He bestows the gift of female offspring on whomever He wills, and the gift of male offspring on whomever He wills; or He gives both male and female [to whomever He wills], and causes to be barren whomever He wills: for, verily, He is All Knowing, Infinite in His Power.' We note first the matter of Allah's bounty: '…He bestows the gift.…' This means that begetting offspring is not an inalienable right for anyone, not even those who possess all the means to have children. Some people get married only to find that they cannot have children, and they pass through the trial of sterility, which is in fact another kind of gift from Allah. He who contents himself with this gift and believes it to be from Allah is recompensed for his hardships by the children of others, who obey and respect him in a way that their own parents might not enjoy. People without children may enjoy the respect and obedience of other peoples' children without the effort or fatigue of having to raise them. In reality, a child might come into the world and be a burden upon his parents.

After this, we note that the True Lord Glorified is He presents the female gender first, then the male: '…He bestows the gift of female offspring on whomever He wills, and the gift of male offspring on whomever He wills.' He does this because the female gender was the more undesirable of the two sexes during the Pre-Islamic period. We read, for example, 'For whenever any of them is given the glad tiding of [the birth of] a girl, his face darkens, and he is filled with suppressed anger, avoiding all people because of the [alleged] evil of the glad tiding which he has received, [and debating within himself]. Shall he keep this [child] despite the contempt [which he feels for it] – or shall he bury it in the dust? Oh, evil indeed is whatever they decide!' (an-Nahl: 58-59)

This hatred of young girls does not stop at mere loathing. Indeed, people would go so far as to commit infanticide, as He states: 'And when the girl-child that was buried alive is made to ask; for what crime she had been slain.' (at-Takwir: 8-9) Pre-Islamic peoples would do this because girls did not have the physical strength to work or to fight in the ongoing tribal wars, both of which were pressing needs in desert life at the time; moreover, they carry the responsibility of keeping her chastity. When true religion came to these people, this practice was changed completely. The status of women was raised, and they were made equal companions of men. For this reason, Allah puts the female before the male in this verse, '…He bestows the gift of female offspring on whomever He wills, and the gift of male offspring on whomever He wills.' In this, he softens the hearts of those coarse people with regard to women, causing them to love women and teaching them that women are the vessel from which they were born, and for this reason, females have a favour over all males.

He also teaches them that the status of women in society is not right in Allah's sight until we protect them, care for them and undertake to look after them since hatred of women is something that causes her to divert from the right path, and from her role in life. When a young girl's family loves her, treats her with honour and respect, she gets used to that love and respect and high self-esteem, and she does not accept insults from anyone. This is because she grew up with the thought that she has high self-worth and that she is much loved by her family, and therefore no one would try to attack her or come up against her, even only with words. This differs from a girl whose family insults her as she grows up, showing her disrespect and hatred. We see such a girl grow up hating herself, with no self-worth, thinking it too much if someone shows her respect or inclines toward her in love, even only in word.

In the next verse, the True Lord Glorified is He goes a step further with what He gives to His slaves, saying, 'or He gives both male and female [to whomever He wills]…’. This means that He gathers both kinds for you, thus blessing them with male and female. Then, we read, ‘…and causes to be barren whomever He wills…’, meaning that He forbids the gift of bearing children according to His Wisdom and will. In order that one person thinks himself above others or puts himself above another. Our Lord teaches us that whether or not people can have children, has no bearing on Allah’s love for them. When He blesses people with sons or daughters or spouses, it does not necessarily mean He loves them more because of this; and when He prevents people from having children, it does not mean that He is angry with them. It is according to Allah’s law that He blesses some with sons and some with daughters, and that He makes barren whom He wills.

We see this law applied even among the most favoured among all of Allah’s creations, namely the prophets. Allah Glorified is He blessed Lut (Lot) and Shu`aib (Jethro) peace be upon them with daughters; He blessed Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon him with a son; and He blessed Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him with both, `Abdullah, Al-Qasim, Ibrahim, Zaynab, Ruqiyah, `Umm Kulthum, and Fatima. We thus have among the prophets several good examples of the principle of being blessed with children. Those who content themselves with Allah’s Wisdom in meeting out this blessing as He sees fit, setting up a foundation of faith and submission to His will, believing it to be a gift from Allah, and even looking at the inability to bear children as a divine gift—Allah recompenses such people. For example, if He has blessed a person with daughters but no sons, and that person undertakes to raise his daughters as best he can, the Lord will compensate him for not having sons by blessing him with sons-in-law, who might even be more respectful and obedient to him than if he had had sons himself.

Finally, this verse is sealed with the following statement: ‘…For, verily, He is All Knowing, Infinite in His Power.’ The All Knowing bestows according to His Knowledge of things, and of what is more suitable and useful to His slave. Only He knows what will and will not be good for people, according to their needs. The description of Him as ‘Infinite in His Power’ means that He has absolute power with respect to His creations. There is nothing of which He is incapable, and no earthly conditions limit His deeds.

In the next verse, the True Lord states :(1)

وَمَا كَانَ لِبَشَرٍ أَن يُكَلِّمَهُ ٱللَّهُ إِلَّا وَحۡيًا أَوۡ مِن وَرَآيِٕ حِجَابٍ أَوۡ يُرۡسِلَ
رَسُولٗا فَيُوحِيَ بِإِذۡنِهِۦ مَا يَشَآءُۚ إِنَّهُۥ عَلِيٌّ حَكِيمٞ ٥١

It is not granted to any mortal that God should speak to him except through revelation or from behind a veil, or by sending a messenger to reveal by His command what He will: He is exalted and wise [51] (The Quran, ash-Shura: 51)

This verse outlines the three ways by which Allah might communicate with humankind, and of which one must always be present in order to ensure that communication. The reason is that human nature does not permit people to have direct contact with Allah Who is characterized by His Majesty and Perfection and Absolute Power. Allah cannot directly encounter lowly creatures such as humans without some sort of intermediary means including inspiration like the Book of Psalms which was revealed to Prophet Dawud (David) peace be upon him. The psalms were not given to Dawud (David) peace be upon him through an apostle or messenger—as was the Quran, for example—but rather through inspiration which Allah placed into his heart.

So then, we read Allah's statement 'And it is not given to mortal man that Allah should speak unto him otherwise than through sudden inspiration, or [by a voice, as it were,] from behind a Veil…' just as Allah spoke to Musa (Moses) peace be upon him; '…or by sending an apostle…' meaning that Allah sends a messenger with revelation. The apostle in this context is one from among the angels just as Allah has sent the angel Jibril (Gabriel) to reveal the Quran. But he was sent in a form of man, to be closer to peoples' understanding and more intimate to them.

Next, the verse states, '…Through sudden inspiration…', i.e. inspiration which Allah places into the hearts of whomever He pleases. Some might ask how to differentiate between inspiration given by Allah and the whisperings of Satan. The answer is that divine inspiration cannot be contradicted by other thoughts; rather, it enters us as an assured, indisputable knowledge. We have previously quoted the saying that the spiritual promptings of Allah can never be crowded out by the whisperings of Satan. We have also illustrated this point through Allah's saying in the story of Musa's (Moses's) mother: 'And so, [when he was born,] We inspired [thus] the mother of Musa's Moses: 'Suckle him [for a time], and then, when you hast cause to fear for him, cast him into the river, and have no fear and do not grieve – for We shall restore him to you, and shall make him one of Our message-bearers!'' (al-Qasas: 7)

(1) Al-Wahidi notes in Asbab An-Nuzul that the Jews said unto the Prophet peace and blessings be upon him 'If you were a prophet, would you not speak with Allah and look upon Him, just as Musa (Moses) did? We will not believe in you [as a prophet] until you do this.' He replied, 'Musa (Moses) did not look upon Allah.' Upon saying this, the verse was revealed. In his Tafsir, Al-Qurtubi also quotes this Hadith, saying, 'An-Naqash, Al-Wahidi, and Ath-Tha`alibi cite this Hadith.'

This is an example of communication from Allah by means of inspiration. Because divine inspiration came to her as a given, incontestable truth, she did not debate or argue. Instead, she accepted the carrying out of her fate with contentment and a surety that came from Allah; for what train of logical thought would lead a mother to think to herself, 'When you have cause to fear for him, cast him into the river'?

It is worth remembering here the attempt of some scholars of the Near East to find fault with the Quran, noting the fact that it repeats itself on several points. For example, the True Lord Glorified is He states elsewhere: 'When We inspired thy mother with this inspiration: "Place him in a chest and throw it into the river, and thereupon the river will cast him ashore, [and] one who is an enemy unto Me and an enemy unto him will adopt him." And [thus early] I spread My Own love over you – and [this] in order that you might be formed under My eye.' (Ta Ha: 38-39) However, anyone considering these two instances of revelation to Musa's (Moses's) mother will note that the first verse mentioned states '…When you have cause to fear for him…' (al-Qasas: 7) referring to a future time. The second verse, on the other hand, states, 'Place him in a chest, and throw it into the river…' (Ta Ha: 39), which is a statement made at the very time of the act itself.

Thus, the statement '…Or [by a voice, as it was,] from behind a veil…' (ash-Shura: 51) can be seen, as noted, in how Allah spoke with Musa (Moses) peace be upon him. Next, we read, '…Or by sending an apostle to reveal, by His leave, whatever He wills [to reveal]…' (ash-Shura: 51). Revelation in this instance is unlike the manner of inspiration already discussed. Rather, this second type of communication with Allah involves direct revelation by means of a messenger from the angels, as happened with the revelation of the Holy Quran to the heart of the Prophet peace and blessings be upon him by means of Jibril (Gabriel) peace be upon him a reputable intermediary sent by Allah to reveal the message. Indeed, Jibril (Gabriel) peace be upon him would come directly to the Prophet peace and blessings be upon him and give him those parts of the Quran that Allah wished. However, Allah the Exalted wanted to confirm this matter to the people, and thus he sent Jibril (Gabriel) peace be upon him in the form of a man who, although he had come to them from far away, did not appear to show signs of fatigue, hunger, thirst or any other signs of weariness from a long journey. Jibril (Gabriel) peace be upon him then asked the Prophet peace and blessings be upon him about matters of faith and affirmed that his answers were correct, in order that the Prophet peace and blessings be upon him might teach the people about Islam. Then, after Jibril (Gabriel) peace be upon him had departed, the Prophet peace and blessings be upon him said, 'Indeed, [the angel] Jibril (Gabriel) came unto you to teach you of matters concerning your faith.'(1)

This saying of the Prophet peace and blessings be upon him stands as a response to those who ask whether the Prophet was an angel. If he were an angel, he would have appeared in the form of a man with the sole purpose of strengthening the people as they learned from him. But the Messenger peace and blessings be upon him in addition to this, was also a model and example of good behaviour. Such an ideal could not be imparted by angels, who by definition, inhabit a higher plane and whom we, in our limited powers as humans, could not relate to if they commanded us to do something.

Thus, we can say that the Quran did not come to us by means of inspiration to one's heart, nor from a voice as if speaking from behind a veil. Rather, it came as direct revelation through an intermediary figure, namely the angel Jibril (Gabriel) peace be upon him. Our Prophet peace and blessings be upon him saw Jibril (Gabriel) peace be upon him in his true form, as recounted elsewhere: ‘And, indeed, he saw it descend a second time by the lote-tree of the farthest limit.’ (an-Najm: 13-14)

(1) This Hadith of the Prophet peace and blessings be upon him is correct and agreed upon. Al-Bukhari quotes it for its correctness (4404, 48), as well as Muslim (10-11), from a Hadith narrated by Abu-Hurayra Allah be pleased with him. Ahmad quotes this Hadith as being attributable to the Prophet (9137), from a Hadith of the Prophet narrated by Ibn ``Umar Allah be pleased with them. (352)

The issue of revelation and learning inspired of the True Lord Glorified is He centres upon the notion of people being called and chosen as messengers: ‘[In His almightiness,] Allah chooses message-bearers from among the angels as well as from among men…’ (al-Hajj: 75). Indeed, not all angels are selected by Allah to play this role. He sets some of them apart, and then does the same with people who are often taught as messengers by those angels who have been selected to convey revelation. The messengers chosen from among angels and men might both be taught by Allah. As a means of illustrating the point that Allah must have intermediary means of communicating with people, we have talked before about transformers, i.e. devices attached to electrical appliances which allow only the appropriate type of electricity to pass into the appliance. Without transformers, too much electricity would flow into the appliance causing it to blow its circuits. In the same way, humans do not have the capacity for direct contact with Allah which would overwhelm them. Messengers act like transformers, allowing communication from Allah in a way that humans have the capacity to handle. For this reason, the verse under consideration is sealed with the phrase, ‘For, verily, He is Exalted, Wise’ (ash-Shura: 51). This means that Allah is so Exalted to address humankind directly. The word ‘Wise’ refers to the fact that there is wisdom in whom He chooses to be taught by Allah Glorified is He as messengers.

جَعَلْنَٰهُ نُورًا نَّهْدِى بِهِۦ مَن نَّشَآءُ مِنْ عِبَادِنَا ۚ وَإِنَّكَ لَتَهْدِىٓ إِلَىٰ صِرَٰطٍ مُّسْتَقِيمٍ ﴿٥٢﴾

So We have revealed a spirit to you [Prophet] by Our command: you knew neither the Scripture nor the faith, but we made it a light, guiding with it whoever We will of Our servants. You give guidance to the straight path [52]

To begin with, the phrase ‘And thus, too…’ (ash-Shura: 52) refers to the three methods of revelation described in the preceding verse. ‘And thus, too, [O Muhammad,] have We revealed unto thee a life-giving message, [coming] at Our behest…' (ash-Shura: 52). Here, the Arabic word for 'life-giving message' (ruh) also refers to Jibril (Gabriel) peace be upon him the bringer of revelation. Allah Glorified is He calls Jibril (Gabriel) peace be upon him a 'life-giving message' just as he called the Quran by the same name, comparing them both to that spirit which the True Lord Glorified is He bestows upon humans. He breathes life and energy into people, who were beforehand lifeless vessels of flesh. Indeed, we know that humans were created by Allah out of clay, after which He made man's progeny out of vile water. When a baby forms in its mother's womb, Allah sends down an angel to breathe the spirit of life into the child after 120 days of pregnancy, infusing it with life and causing its limbs to move about. In the same way that this breath or spirit represents life for the body, so too does the Quran represent life for the hearts of men, Hence why Allah Glorified is He calls both Jibril (Gabriel) peace be upon him and the Quran a 'life-giving message,' as we see in Allah's statement, 'O you who have attained to faith! Respond to the call of Allah and The Apostle whenever he calls you unto that which will give you life…' (al-Anfal: 24). The True Lord Glorified is He addresses the people, who are already alive, in terms of the body and material things. Therefore, He is talking about those things which will give life to their hearts, i.e. values and principles.

The True Lord Glorified is He would not give unto His servants a spirit which causes his body parts to move, only to leave him without moral principles or values or a right way to follow. It is out of Allah's favour bestowed upon humankind that He permits us spiritual principles which enliven our hearts and moral compasses since the life of our bodies is temporal and mortal, ending with the final mortality of our physical selves. As for the life-giving principles and values of the right way, they are everlasting. They link our lives here on earth to the Hereafter. It is this life, i.e. the right way of Allah which is intended in the verse, 'O you who have attained to faith! Respond to the call of Allah and The Apostle whenever he calls you unto that which will give you the life…' (al-Anfal: 24).

Next, we read, '[Ere this message came unto thee,] you did not know what revelation is, and nor what faith [implies]' (ash-Shura: 52). This means that Allah’s Messenger peace and blessings be upon him did not know how to read or write, nor ‘what faith [implies]’ meaning the details of divine law. As previously noted, illiteracy is considered shameful except in the case of the Prophet peace and blessings be upon him and his nation, for whom it is an honour. If Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him had been a learned man, possessed of the ability to read and write, the people would have claimed that he had written the Quran himself (rather than having it revealed to him). If his nation had been a people of advanced learning and culture, the other peoples would have claimed that Islam was merely a cultural advance (rather than true religion revealed by Allah), and one which Muhammad’s people would use to control the world.

However, this is not the case. We catch a glimpse of Muhammad’s greatness by what Allah says to him in this verse: ‘And thus, too, [O Muhammad,] have We revealed unto you a life-giving message, [coming] at Our behest. [Ere this message came unto thee,] you did not know what revelation is, and nor what faith [implies]’ (ash-Shura: 52). As another example, there is a story about Caliph Ma`mun(1) who said to a man in need of rebuke, ‘You are illiterate.’ The man said, ‘But sir, the Prophet was also illiterate!’ Ma`mun replied, ‘In his case it is an honour, but in your case, it is a shame.’(2)

Hence why, elsewhere in the Quran, the True Lord Glorified is He orders His prophet to ‘Say, “Had Allah willed it [otherwise], I would not have conveyed this [divine writ] unto you, nor would He have brought it to your knowledge. Indeed, a whole lifetime have I dwelt among you ere this [revelation came unto me]: will you not, then, use your reason?"' (Yunus: 16) It is right that the verse should ask this, since Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him lived among his people before bringing them the message of true religion. Those people with whom he grew up, knew that he was illiterate, knowing neither how to read nor how to write; nor had he produced any oration or poetry before. It is therefore out of foolishness and stubbornness that people accuse the Prophet peace and blessings be upon him of having been taught the Quran by some foreign man. The Quran itself exposes the faulty nature of such claims: '[Notwithstanding that] the tongue of him to whom they so maliciously point is wholly outlandish, whereas this is Arabic speech, clear [in itself] and clearly showing the truth [of its source].' (an-Nahl: 103) Thus, we can say that there was nothing new revealed to Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him in the way of language, nothing which did not already exist among humankind. We read, '… [Ere this message came unto you,] you did not know what revelation is, nor what faith [implies]: but [now] We have caused this [message] to be a light, whereby We guide whom We will of Our servants…' (ash-Shura: 52). The Arabic word ja`alnahu meaning '…We have caused this [message]…' refers to the Quran. The word 'A light' (ash-Shura: 52) means a radiance or brightness which casts aside the darkness of ignorance and attempts to deny the truth of Allah's Message. It is this light which guides whomever Allah wishes to the right way making it easier for humans to see the path and walk it, such that nothing could clash against one's efforts to be true to Allah. In this case, clashing or colliding means that loss or destruction come upon a person. If someone clashes with something stronger than him, then that thing destroys the person; if he collides with something weaker, then he destroys that thing.

(1) Ma`mun also known as ’Abdullah ibn-Harun Ar-Rashid, the seventh of the ’Abbasid Caliphs in Iraq, and one of the greatest kings of his age in terms of his life, knowledge and vastness of his realm. He was born in the year 170 A.H. and died in 218 A.H. at the age of 49. ’Az-Zirikli’s Great Figures

(2) In `Itab Al-Kitab, Ibn Al-’Abar recounts that it was said by Al-Ma`mun that one of the greatest signs of Muhammad’s prophet hood, is that Allah revealed His Message to him, which he memorized even though he was illiterate. He knew neither how to write one line of Arabic nor how to read one letter of it, and neither did his family. However, this lack of learning is an honour upon him and his family, just as being learned is an honour for all others. Ma`mun, Commander of the Believers, has a special place alongside the Prophet in the history of Islam, as inheritor of Muhammad’s place and follower of that which he prescribed and proscribed. Because of this, similar solemnity as was given to the Prophet was also placed upon Ma`mun. However, he ignored such honorifics and humbled himself, saying, ‘Muhammad, you [in your eloquence] have left me behind. If I had the powers of speech which you possess, I would not be concerned about being able to read or write, even if I were illiterate.’

Hence what we have said before about leaving a nightlight on as we sleep, which helps us see where to walk if we get up in the middle of the night. This is an example of actual physical light which serves to guide our steps. How much more so with the light of heart and spirit, and the way which illumines our spiritual lives? This is that light which Allah refers to when He says, '…For he to whom Allah gives no light, no light whatever has he!' (an-Nur: 40)

As we have said before, people light their homes and workplaces according to their means. One person might light a candle, another person might use electricity, and so on. However, when the sun shines, it covers all other lights with its brightness, as though to say, ‘Put out your earthly lights, for the light of Allah has come to you’. Taking this example of physical light a step higher, we can apply it to spiritual light and say that when Allah blessed us with the righteous path, it was as though He were saying, ‘Put away your other ways and follow my way. A ruling has come from Allah, so put away your other rulings and opinions and suggestions. There is in the laws of Allah that which makes it so that you have no need of these, your former ways, in the same way that you have no need of lamplight in the noonday sun. You do not need any path other than that given by the True Lord which does away with all other ways and lifestyles’.

As we have mentioned, comparing the physical light which Allah has provided (i.e. the sun) to the light of man makes the difference between them very clear. For example, a person brings out a candle to light it and places a wick on it. That person then lights a match, which, if the wind were to blow, would be snuffed out. In like fashion, electric lamps require tools to build them, as well as transformers to allow the correct amount of electricity. After a month’s time, the light bulbs need to be changed; and if too much electric current runs through them, they burn out. In addition, lights created by humans only last as long as human lives. However, the sun lights the entire earth without any replaced parts or maintenance. Moreover, unlike the transient light of humans, sunlight lasts forever, lighting the whole world from before the creation of Adam peace be upon him all the way to the Last Hour.

Likewise, there is a difference between different types of spiritual light. We see the ways and laws of man, which are free neither from error nor from negative consequences. Even if a set of laws fits one segment of society, it does not fit with other ones, hence why people resort to changing their laws from time to time. This happens because such laws are temporal, according to the temporality of humankind.

As for divine ways and laws, they are complete and free of error. They take all conditions of human life into account, and serve to guide society in all times and places. This is because they come from Allah, who is wise as to the condition of His creations and expert in that which helps them and gives value to their lives. Thus, we may say that the True Lord Glorified is He would not give humans physical light without also providing them with spiritual light, which is more important and powerful in our lives than physical light. A blind person can still perceive his path with his other four senses, or be led by another person to his destination. However, we see someone who has lost the spiritual light from his life bumping up against life's twists and turns without any sense of direction; such a person ends up losing his way. Moreover, physical light is bound up with its own physicality, and is extinguished with the snuffing out of material existence. Divine light, on the other hand, remains forever, extending from this world into the hereafter, linking all things found on the earth.

For this reason, the True Lord Glorified is He explains in the chapter of an-Nur: '…Light upon light! Allah guides unto His Light him that wills [to be guided]; and [to this end] Allah propounds parables unto men, since Allah [alone] has Full Knowledge of all things.' (an-Nur: 35) In this instance, the phrase '…Light upon light! ...' refers to that divine, guiding light, indicated and evinced by the physical light which aids sight and helps us find our way. Physical light keeps us from getting lost or straying from the path, and it eventually carries us to the peace of the hereafter. This concept of spiritual light as indicated by physical light goes along with the verse which states, '…And [to this end] Allah propounds parables unto men…' (an-Nur: 35), i.e. in order to clarify that which might remain hidden to human minds. In other words, physical light is evidence, or a parable, of spiritual light, and the true believer will take what he knows of physical light and apply it to spiritual light.

The True Lord Glorified is He then clarifies to us the source of this light in the verse which follows: 'In the houses [of worship] which Allah has allowed to be raised so that His name be remembered in them, there [are such as] extol His Limitless Glory at morn and evening' (an-Nur: 36). This verse commands those who want spiritual light to seek after it in houses of worship which are the sources of its rays. It also commands them to seek after it in prayer and remembrance of Allah, and in treading that righteous way which Allah has given us. We see, therefore, that the Quran is a light unto us, one which, when used properly, gives us another light, namely ways of being obedient and putting our religion into practice. The greatest source of this kind of light is, of course, the place of worship, i.e. the mosque. For this reason, when scholars originally sought out the gerundive subject and object of the phrase, ‘in the houses [of worship]…’ (an-Nur: 36), they reasoned that the subject must be the ‘light upon light!’ (an-Nur: 35) It is as if to say that there is light upon light in the houses raised unto Allah, namely mosques. It is in these houses of worship that praise to Allah in the morning is connected to praise of Him in the evening. Those who inhabit, or come to worship, at these buildings are described as ‘…people…’ (an-Nur: 37), and rightly so; for who would come to worship Allah therein other than people?

In sum, we may say that the True Lord Glorified is He gives us spiritual light as represented by His Righteous Path which we receive through commands regarding what to do and what not to do. It is through this path, this way of conducting ourselves that the matters of our lives are kept on the straight and narrow. However, the moment we neglect or forget this path, or treat its precepts with any laxity, we begin to resist Allah and His commandments. When this happens, new problems and trials beset us according to the manner and degree of our laxity and those immoral actions we commit which are not in accordance with Allah’s way. For this reason, we see in the scripture how Allah’s messengers have come one after the other with messages that progress through the ages, each one appropriate to a specific time and place, and correcting those errors which existed in society at the time. This is as such, even though all the messages deal with faith and morality, as well as established aspects of religion such as prayer and tithes. After all these messengers came, the Messenger peace and blessings be upon him brought religious pronouncements specific to his people and which provided a remedy for their ills.

Anyone who considers the various messages which have been revealed through the ages will find that they develop according to the development of circumstances in life, as well as the ways in which people try to deal with the trials that confront them. In our day and age, for example, we find only small paths in the countryside, allowing for passage from one field to another. Or perhaps they are sufficient for a donkey to carry a load across several fields. However, if we wanted to create a path between two towns, we would need to widen it somewhat, in order for one car to be able to pass safely along it. And if we wanted a road between two big cities, it would need to be even larger.

In this manner, we have seen developments in the construction of roads which befit developing needs and circumstances of human society. We can see this, for example, in the Cairo-Alexandria desert road in Egypt, a wide highway which allows the passage of cars along it. It is a two-way road, allowing passage to and from either city, as well as rest stations along the way where travellers can recover from their journey.

The True Lord Glorified is He speaks to us about this last matter in the following verse: ‘He it is who has made the earth a cradle for you, and has traced out for you ways [of livelihood] thereon…’ (Ta Ha: 53). When the people were desirous to plan out the city of Basra,(1) Caliph `Umar told them, ‘Make the path wide enough for two camels carrying packs to pass each other.’ This continues to be the way roads are constructed down to the present day. In the chapter of Saba`, Allah states: ‘Now [before their downfall,] We had placed between them and the cities which We had blessed [many] towns within sight of one another; and thus, We had made travelling easy [for them, as if to say]: “Travel safely in this [land], by night or by day!”’ (Saba’: 18) The towns within sight of one another are stations on the long road, rest areas in which people can recover from their journeys and gather whatever provisions they might need. Indeed, a long journey must be divided up into phases, in order for the trip to be relaxing and not too painful. Every time we have motivation and energy, we encounter such journeys, and we therefore find places of rest along the way in order to get proper recovery and breaks from travel.

For this reason, the True Lord Glorified is He speaks about those who were harmed and oppressed by wealthy ship owners, to the point where they say, ‘Our Lord, lengthen the distance between our journeys…’ (Saba’: 19). Why would they say this when they know that travelling and the distance of travel causes fatigue? The answer is that they are oppressed by the owners of much wealth and many ships, which they do not distribute to others. These wealthy people do not want anyone but themselves to be able to travel, nor for anyone but the rich to have access to means of commercial exchange.

(1) Basra is a city in Iraq, located in the most southeastern corner of the Arabian Peninsula, with a population of more than 3.8 million people. It is the one port city which gives Iraq open access to the world via the ocean. In it, there are many different races and sects found among Christians, Syrians, Assyrians, Sabeans, and Muslims.

This case points to the fact that religious legal rulings continually progress through time, considering more and more challenges that best humankind. Every time new circumstances or trials appear, the Message of Allah cumulates from one messenger to the next, to the point when the final message, correct and appropriate for all times and places, came to humankind. It is this message that Allah speaks of in the following verse: '…Today have I perfected your religious law for you, and have bestowed upon you the full measure of My blessings, and willed that self-surrender unto Me shall be your religion' (al-Ma'ida: 3).

Moving on, we read Allah's statement '…But [now] We have caused this [message] to be a light, whereby We guide whom We will of Our servants: and, verily, [on the strength thereof] you, too, shall guide [men] onto the straight way.' (ash-Shura: 52) The message referred to in this part of the verse is the Quran, which Allah made a light to guide whichever of His servants He wishes. In this way, Allah established guidance through this radiant source of knowledge, revealed in the form of writing with definitive legal ramifications. Allah also established guidance by sending His Messenger peace and blessings be upon him and charging him with the mission of making legal rulings regarding matters of religion. The following statement by Allah is evidence of this fact: '…Hence, accept [willingly] whatever The Apostle gives you [thereof], and refrain from [demanding] anything that he withholds from you…' (al-Hashr: 7). Guidance which comes from Allah is found in the roots and established matters of religion, as well as that which appears in signs sent to help to remember Allah. Guidance from the Messenger peace and blessings be upon him is found in the branches [as opposed to the roots], namely the explanation and clarification of the root foundations of true religion. And if trials beset us, or if we are confronted by problems for which no official ruling has been given, neither in the Quran nor the Sunna, then we must gather ourselves together in counsel with one another to settle upon a group opinion, rather than one which has come only from one individual person. On this point, the following Hadith of the Prophet peace and blessings be upon him is relevant: ‘Let not my people gather together unto deviance from the path.’(1) In a similar vein, how beautiful are the words which the poet Shawqi (2) has written:

This land is not troubled by the opinion of the majority
Despite all the debate, but individual opinion that may trouble it.(3)

For this reason, the consensus of the scholars is the third source, after the Quran and Sunna, of legislation in matters of true religion. The verse under consideration establishes that Allah has given human beings guidance through The Holy Quran: ‘…But [now] We have caused this [message] to be a light, whereby We guide whom We will of Our servants…’ (ash-Shura: 52). This statement refers specifically to the root and foundation of true religion, appearing in texts containing the word of Allah. The verse goes on to establish guidance via the Prophet peace and blessings be upon him in terms of the branches of religion, i.e. detailed clarification and explanation of that which was outlined in Allah’s holy books: ‘…And, verily, [on the strength thereof] you, too, shall guide [men] onto the straight way.’ (ash-Shura: 52) Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him was given the right to make religious rulings for the people, and for this reason his Sunna is the second source of such rulings, after the Quran.

(1) Abu-Dawud cites this Hadith for its authenticity (3711). He writes, quoting from Abu-Malik Al-`Asha`ari: ‘The Prophet peace and blessings be upon him said: “Verily Allah protects you from three ills: That your Prophet not invite you to true religion, leaving you to perish; that those who pronounce lies not come upon those who tell the truth and that this people not be gathered together unto deviance from the path.”’ Ibn-Majah also cites this Hadith for its authenticity (3940), as narrated by `Anas ibn-Malik, who relates: ‘The Prophet peace be upon him said: “O may my people not be gathered together unto deviance from the path. And if I see them contending one with another, the greater darkness be upon them.”’

(2) This line was written by Hafizh Ibrahim and not Ahmad Shawqi. Hafizh Ibrahim was born in 1871 C.E and died in 1932 C.E. He grew up an orphan and began to compose poetry while still in school. He graduated from the Harbiyya Military School in 1891. He is known as the ‘Poet of the Nile’.

(3) This line is from a poem by Hafizh Ibrahim written in the Basit metre and comprising 8 total lines. The first line is as follows: O you who raise high the opinion of the council and defend it,
May the Lord bless and reward abundantly those in support of it!

We have said previously that the guidance which comes from the True Lord Glorified is He is the guidance of clarity, direction, and conducting along the right way. If we obey Allah, we will merit his guidance of help and success in our lives: ‘Just as for those who are [willing to be] guided, He increases their [ability to follow His] guidance and causes them to grow in Allah-consciousness.’ (Muhammad: 17) The guidance which comes from the Prophet peace and blessings be upon him is that of clarity and conducting only, as we have previously discussed.

Moving on, we read, ‘…And, verily, [on the strength thereof] you, too, shall guide [men] onto the straight way.’ (ash-Shura: 52) In other words, the Messenger peace and blessings be upon him shall lead and conduct people along the straight path, that path which leads people to their intended destination the fastest and with the least amount of effort or pain. This is because every time a path becomes more askew or serpentine, it gets harder to traverse. The meaning of ‘straight’ in the phrase ‘straight path’ also signifies that it is narrow like a piece of straw or hair. This means that we must walk the path with all due diligence and discipline, straying neither to the left nor to the right. For this reason, Allah says elsewhere in the Quran ‘… (sawa` at- tariq) the right path’ (al-Mumtahana: 1) [the middle road or the middle of the path] meaning that we walk straight down the centre of the way. Thus, the intended meaning of the phrase ‘straight path’ is that way which the Prophet peace and blessings be upon him brought. It is that way which accompanies us in this world and helps us to arrange the chaos of our lives. Eventually, if we follow it, this path will grant us our reward in the hereafter, hence why the True Lord Glorified is He teaches us of it, calling us to His way, saying: ‘Guide us the straightway, the way of those upon whom you have bestowed Your blessings.’ (al-Fatiha: 6-7) It is:

أَلَآ إِلَى ٱللَّهِ تَصِيرُ ٱلْأُمُورُ ﴿٥٣﴾

The path of God, to whom belongs all that is in the heavens and earth: truly everything will return to God [53] (The Quran, ash-Shura: 53)

In this verse, the phrase ‘the way that leads to Allah’ (ash-Shura: 53) means that path which Allah gives us since He is the original possessor and author of it, rather than people. In other words, Allah’s servants can in no way alter this path. And as long as it is from Allah, it is incumbent upon us to follow it and to take care not to stray from it. After this, the True Lord Glorified is He characterizes Himself using the following description: ‘…To whom all that is in the heavens and all that is on earth belongs…’ (ash-Shura: 53). This means that the possessor of the straight path also possesses all things in the heavens and the earth, i.e. this mortal world. And it is He alone who causes events on earth to move forward to the next life.

Next, we read, ‘…Oh, verily, with Allah is the beginning and the end of all things!’ (ash-Shura: 53) This exemplifies what is known in Arabic as the style of brevity which here emphasizes the fact that only with Allah is the beginning and end of all things, and no one else other than him. The straight path, the way, is placed before us by Allah Who possesses this world and the world to come; and whosoever walks this Righteous Path will not be kept from receiving a great reward in the hereafter. Indeed, the whole world from its beginning is progressing toward a final end, being the hereafter. This end is to Allah alone, and therefore it is upon us to do the best that we can in this state between the beginning of the world and its final destiny in the hereafter. This is because we are all progressing toward the next world, to Allah, and the time we have to perform our labours on earth is limited. However, the period of reward or punishment in the hereafter is eternal. It is a realm in which both misery and joy are found, and things which neither eyes have seen nor ears have heard, nor which have occurred to the mind and heart of man. As the expression goes, whoever proposes to a beautiful woman does not think the value of the dowry is too much for her.

Consider the way in which this verse is sealed at its end: '…Oh, verily, with Allah is the beginning and the end of all things!' (ash-Shura: 53) The phrase 'Oh verily' (`ala) is a vocative tool, alerting the reader or listener to something important and worthy of attention, something we cannot ignore. As noted previously, a speaker knows the points he wants to make and therefore does not need his attention directed to his words. However, the addressee does not know what will be said, and therefore might need to be told to pay attention to important matters. In this instance, the important point worthy of attention is that, '…Oh, verily, with Allah is the beginning and the end of all things!' (ash-Shura: 53) This is a flash of insight at the end of a verse containing discussion on many topics. This is similar to how a person on his deathbed might give counsel to his children: he does not go into all the details of his life, but rather the most important lessons he has learned.

Thus, the statement '…Oh, verily, with Allah is the beginning and the end of all things!' (ash-Shura: 53) means that we must attend to the fact that the whole matter comes from Allah and returns to Allah. It comes from the way which He has outlined to us, and our fate and destiny will return to Him after this life. We must therefore look at our lives and make them fall in line with this path. We must also know our fate ultimately goes back to Allah's will, and that our lives are slowly leading back to Him. Allah Glorified is He did not create us accidentally, nor will He leave us in vain. This is a reality which should never be far from our thoughts.

az-Zukhruf

In the Name of God, the Most Merciful, the Dispenser of Mercy

The chapter of az-Zukhruf(1):

حمٓ ﴿١﴾

Ha Mim [1]

(The Quran, az-Zukhruf: 1)

We have previously discussed the singular letters at the beginning of some of the chapters of the Quran, and that there is a wisdom therein intended by the True Lord Glorified is He that we hover around before saying, ‘and Allah knows better what it means’.(2)

(1) The chapter of az-Zukhruf is the 43rd chapter and consists of 89 verses. It is, by consensus, a Meccan chapter, as Al- Qurtubi stated in his Tafsir. Zukhruf means adornment. Ibn-Sayyidih said, ‘Zukhruf originally meant gold. The word was then applied to any type of adornment and was subsequently applied to anything plated with it or faked’.

(2) There is some difference of opinion between the different Tafsirs regarding the singular letters that are found at the beginning of some chapters. Of them are those who say that the knowledge of them is the province of Allah alone. Accordingly, they left the knowledge of them with Allah and did not attempt to explain them. This is what Al-Qurtubi narrated in his Tafsir of Abu-Bakr, ``'Umar, ``'Uthman, ``'Ali, and Ibn-Mas`ud. `Amir Sha`bi, Sufyan Ath-Thawri and Ar-Rabi`' ibn Khaytham also said it and it was the opinion of Abu-Hatim ibn Habban. There were those who interpreted them, and they differed as to their meaning. ``'Abd Ar-Rahman ibn-Zayd ibn Aslam said that they were the names of the chapters. It was also said that they are from amongst the names of Allah. Ibn-Kathir said in his Tafsir, ‘All of the letters that are mentioned at the beginnings of the chapters, not including the repetitions, total 14 letters: alif, lam, mim, sad, ra, kaf, ha, ya, ``'ayn, ta, sin, ha, qaf and nun. These all can be encompassed in: ‘Nass hakim qati`` lahu sirr.’ (1/37)

وَٱلۡكِتَٰبِ ٱلۡمُبِينِ ۝٢

By the Scripture that makes things clear [2]
(The Quran, az-Zukhruf: 2)

The word ‘and’ at the beginning of this verse is a conjunction and it means that ‘Ha. Mim.’ and ‘And the Clear Book’ (az-Zukhruf: 1-2) are as one. They are both Quran by which Allah is swearing, but He has separated them with a conjunction. This is because we read ‘Ha. Mim’ (az-Zukhruf: 1), and we have faith in it, but we do not know its meaning; rather, we relinquish such to its Speaker Glorified is He. ‘And the Clear Book’ (az-Zukhruf: 2), however, is clear, as it says, and thus we understand and know its meaning.

إِنَّا جَعَلۡنَٰهُ قُرۡءَٰنًا عَرَبِيّٗا لَّعَلَّكُمۡ تَعۡقِلُونَ ۝٣

We have made it a Quran in Arabic so that you [people] may understand [3] (The Quran, az-Zukhruf: 3)

This is what is sworn to. The True Lord Glorified is He swears by these Arabic letters and by the divine writ made up from them that He has made it ‘...a discourse in the Arabic tongue, so that you might encompass it with your reason’ (az-Zukhruf: 3). He named it a ‘Book’ because it has been written down, and He named it a ‘discourse’ (Quran) because it is something spoken. He described it as Arabic to emphasise the fact that it has been revealed in the language of the people around The Messenger, just as Allah Glorified is He said, ‘And never have We sent forth any apostle otherwise than [with a message] in his own people’s tongue…’ (Ibrahim: 4).

Thus, we can see that a messenger must speak the language of his people so that they can understand him and the delivery of the message may be fulfilled. If one were to say, ‘But how is it then that Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him was sent to all mankind with all their different languages?’, we say that he was sent with the language of the people who were his contemporaries, those who experienced his teachings first-hand. When they had understood, were satisfied with, and put faith in the truthfulness of them, they took them to the other nations, roaming the earth applying them in their works, actions and behaviour.

This is the meaning of being sent to all mankind. The miraculous thing about this is the standard of conduct and its practical application. History tells us that Islam spread through the lands with upright conduct that dazzled mankind and they consequently entered the religion of Allah in droves. Thus read, ‘And who could be better of speech than he who calls [his fellow-men] unto Allah, and does what is just and right, and says, “Verily, I am of those who have surrendered themselves to Allah?”’ (Fussilat: 33) And Allah Glorified is He says of this nation, ‘And thus have We willed you to be a community of the middle way so that [with your lives] you might bear witness to the truth before all mankind, and that The Apostle might bear witness to it before you...’ (al-Baqara: 143). This is how the successors were given the responsibility of carrying this message. The Messenger peace and blessings be upon him testifies that he has delivered the message to us, and the other nations testify that we have delivered it to them.

So, by means of language this nation understood this methodology and they translated it into action. They were transformed from an ignorant, illiterate nation with no system or law into an exemplary nation that drew in the most sophisticated nations of the world such as the Persians in the east and the Byzantine Romans in the west. When they applied the teachings of the methodology brought by Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him they shook the foundations of these two civilisations, and it was this that drew eyes to Islam.

If we look at the chapter of Yusuf, we find this same pattern of applied faith: ‘Now two young men happened to go to prison at the same time as Yusuf (Joseph). One of them said: “Behold, I saw myself [in a dream] pressing wine.” And the other said: “Behold, I saw myself [in a dream] carrying bread on my head, and birds were eating thereof.” [And both entreated Yusuf (Joseph):] “Let us know the real meaning of this! Verily, we see that you are one of those who have attained excellence.”’ (Yusuf: 36)

Yusuf (Joseph) peace be upon him had reached a rank such that he was trusted by these two questioners, but why? Because he had realised the state of excellence; the pinnacle in application of the methodology he brought. He proceeds to clarify the course of action that has brought him to the level of interpreting dreams. ‘[Yusuf (Joseph)] answered: “Ere there comes unto you the meal which you are [daily] fed, I shall have informed you of the real meaning of your dreams, [so that you might know what is to come] before it comes unto you: for this is [part] of the knowledge which my Lord has imparted to me. Behold, I have left behind me the ways of people who do not believe in Allah, and who persistently refuse to acknowledge the Hereafter; and I follow the creed of my forefathers Ibrahim (Abraham), Ishaq (Isaac), and Ya`qub (Jacob). It is not conceivable that we should [be allowed to] ascribe divinity to aught beside Allah: this is [an outcome] of Allah's bounty unto us and unto all mankind – but most people are ungrateful."' (Yusuf: 37-38) That is to say, 'if you do as I have, you will be able to understand and interpret dreams just as I do'.

This path of action is precisely what made Prophet Yusuf (Joseph) peace be upon him seize the opportunity to fulfil his duty of proselytising. Hence, before he gave the two questioners what they wanted, he first gave them what he desired in terms of calling them to Allah, for they were in need of it, at the time, to listen to every word that he would say. For this reason, we see him hasten with this conclusive parable of faith: 'O my companions in imprisonment! Which is more reasonable: [belief in the existence of numerous divine] lords, each of them different from the other – or [in] Allah, The One, The All-Dominant, who holds absolute sway over all that exists? All that you worship instead of Allah is nothing but [empty] names which you have invented – you and your forefathers – [and] for which Allah has bestowed no warrant from on high. Judgment [as to what is right and what is wrong] rests with Allah alone – [and] He has ordained that you should worship nought but Him: this is the [one] ever-true religion; but most people know it not.' (Yusuf: 39-40) It is only after this that he interprets the dream for them.

So, it was the behaviour of Yusuf (Joseph) which drew eyes toward him. And so, it is in every time and place, that true, upright behaviour draws eyes and attracts hearts towards one.

وَإِنَّهُۥ فِىٓ أُمِّ ٱلْكِتَٰبِ لَدَيْنَا لَعَلِىٌّ حَكِيمٌ ﴿٤﴾

It is truly exalted in the Source of Scripture kept with Us, and full of wisdom [4] (The Quran, az-Zukhruf: 4)

His saying, '...And, verily...it...' (az-Zukhruf: 4) refers to the Clear Book that was previously described, i.e. the Bounteous Quran. '...In the essence...of the Book' (az-Zukhruf: 4) refers to the Preserved Tablet or the original book from which all heavenly revelations come and in which all events are pre-recorded. ‘With Us’, i.e. with Allah. This means it has been given to no one else and is therefore protected and preserved.

‘...It is indeed sublime...’ (az-Zukhruf: 4), that is, in and of itself. Sublimity is exaltedness. This is because it is the Book that completes all the revelations before it and is a guardian over them. The guardianship of the Quran over the other books is that it agrees with them in the fundamentals of belief, action, worship, and character, but it abrogates the parts of those revelations which are inappropriate to this age. It also dissociates from them the corruption that accrued to them of distortion, alteration, and substitution.

The Quran says of them that they forgot a portion of that which they had been reminded of, and that what they did not forget they concealed, and that what they did not conceal they altered. Indeed, they did more than even that, not stopping at the point of altering the text, they brought speech of their own and said, and ‘This is from Allah.’ Read His saying, ‘Woe, then, unto those who write down, with their own hands, [something which they claim to be of] the Book, and then say, “This is from Allah…”’ (al-Baqara: 79). This is how the Quran is the guardian of the books that preceded it, and is raised above them.

As for His saying, ‘...full of wisdom...’ (az-Zukhruf: 4), the wise one is he who puts things in the right place at the right time so that you see everything in perfect order. The Quran is the Book which has completed the heavenly revelations and Muhammad peace be upon him is the Final Messenger.

If one were to say, ‘Why does The True Lord Glorified is He record His Speech in the Essence of the Book when Allah Glorified is He never forgets nor errs, has knowledge of all things and nothing is hidden from Him’? It would be said that Allah the Exalted has recorded His Speech in the Essences of the Book for the angels. When they look at the Preserved Tablet, they find therein ancient speech that corresponds to the events and situations of mankind in creation, and that current events occur just as the True Lord stated in His Speech. As a result, they increase in love for Allah and in regard for Him, and they judge that indeed Allah is the All Knowing, the Wise. This is the secret behind this writing because it happened that when the angels were asking about the creation of man, 'They asked: "Will You place on it [1] such as will spread corruption thereon and shed blood – whereas it is we who extol Your Limitless Glory, and praise You, and hallow Your name?" [Allah] answered: "Verily, I know that which you do not know." (al-Baqara: 30)

Some of the scholars said in reference to '...The Essence... of the Book...' (az-Zukhruf: 4), that it is not the same as the Preserved Tablet because of His saying about the Quran: '...containing verses that are clear in and by themselves (muhkamat) – and these are the essence of the Book – as well as others that are allegorical (mutashabihat).' (Al-'Imran: 7)

So 'the essence of the Book' refers here to the clear verses of the Quran. Taking this meaning into consideration, there may be an indication to us that the chapter of az-Zukhruf is from amongst the clear verses and that not one allegorical verse is to be found within it.

The Messenger peace and blessings be upon him has clarified the rulings concerning the clear and the allegorical verses. He said, 'What you know of them, act according to it and what you do not know of them have faith in it.'[2]

Allah the Exalted said regarding the allegorical verses '...but none save Allah knows its final meaning...' (Al-'Imran: 7), [then we pause] then, '...Hence, those who are deeply rooted in knowledge say, "We believe in it..."' (Al-'Imran: 7). Hence we act according to the clear verses and we have faith in the allegorical ones.

(1) Some non-Muslims who have fallen into the temptation of attacking the Quran say, 'How can the angels address Allah with such a question; disapproving of His creation of Adam and making him His vicegerent on Earth'? But the angels' question is not one of opposition, or out of envy for mankind. Allah has described them saying that their speech does not precede Him; they do not ask Him anything except that he has given them permission. Their question is rather one of inquiry and looking for the wisdom in this matter. `Adil Abu Al Ma`ati

(2) Al-Harith relates in Al-Bughya (18 Hadiths) via `Abdullah ibn `Amr ibn Al-`As that the Prophet said, 'O people! Do not dispute with the Quran, for those who went before you only went astray through their argumentation. Indeed the Quran did not come down so that one part might contradict another; rather, it came down so that each part would confirm the other. Thus, that which is from its clear verses (muhkamihi) act according to it, and that which is from its allegorical verses (mutashabihihi) have faith in it.' It is also like this in Al-Ahad Wa Al-Mathani by Ibn Abu `Asim (749).

أَفَنَضْرِبُ عَنكُمُ ٱلذِّكْرَ صَفْحًا أَن كُنتُمْ قَوْمًا مُّسْرِفِينَ ﴿٥﴾

Should We ignore you and turn this revelation away from you because you are insolent people? [5]

The letter hamza at the beginning of this verse carries the meaning of an incredulous question. ‘Should We, perchance, withdraw...’ (az-Zukhruf: 5): we say ‘darabtu `an al-`amal’ and ‘`adrabtu `an al-`amal’ meaning ‘I left the work’ or ‘I refrained from working’. We also say ‘`adraba al-`ummal `an al-`amal’ meaning ‘the workers went on strike’.

So, the True Lord is saying to them, ‘should we leave off reminding you and turn away from you and leave you as you are neglected, just because you neglected yourselves and denied the reminder and disbelieved in it? Certainly not! We shall continue to address and remind you, and We shall establish for you Our evidence and proof’.

If you belie to the evidence and disbelieve then the turn of conflict will come, then conquest and victory over you, until you believe. This is mercy from Allah because they are His creation and His slaves and he desires salvation for them. He is more merciful to them than a mother with her child, even though they disbelieve in Him.

If He left them to themselves, they would persist in their corruption and thus deserve punishment and destruction. Allah has mercy on the disbeliever when he comes to believe by means of his faith, and He has mercy on the society by relieving it of the corruption and evil that would have come from him had he maintained his disbelief. ‘The reminder’ here then is revelation and this is a mercy from Allah that bestows upon to His slaves out of compassion for them.

For this reason they say, ‘If you have an enemy, do not pray for his destruction, rather only pray for his guidance, for you do not benefit from his destruction, only from his behaviour and, if he is guided, his goodness will come back to you’. The fruits of goodness return upon the whole society, and it is because of this that Islam forbids us to conceal knowledge. When one conceals knowledge, he deprives society of its benefit, whereas when one teaches another, one benefits from his goodness, and is saved from his evil.

Thus, it is from Allah’s Mercy to them that He continues to send down the Quran to them despite their persistence in error, stubbornness, and disbelief. This was borne out when, with the continuity of revelation and the passing of time, notorious disbelievers entered Islam one after another, `Umar, `Amr, Khalid, `Ikrima Allah be pleased with them and many others.

The True Lord then says to the disbelievers, ‘You need to read history, take a lesson from the procession of revelations, and see the outcome of those who denied the Messengers’.’ The history of revelation affirms the victory of Allah’s messengers over those who deny them because this is Allah’s way regarding the messengers. He makes them victorious in the end, and the final outcome is in their favour while Allah deals with the disbelievers in accordance with their denial; ‘For every one of them did We take to task for his sin...’ (al-Qasas: 40).

The True Lord Glorified is He had previously addressed them with His saying, ‘And, verily, [to this day] you pass by the remnants of their dwellings at morning-time, and by night. Will you not, then, use your reason?’ (as-Saffat: 137-138) So this issue is not just hypothetical speech, it is a witnessed, lived reality. It is upon you to ponder it and learn its lesson so that the punishment might not befall you as it befell them.

وَكَمْ أَرْسَلْنَا مِن نَّبِيٍّ فِي ٱلْأَوَّلِينَ ﴿٦﴾
وَمَا يَأْتِيهِم مِّن نَّبِيٍّ إِلَّا كَانُوا۟ بِهِۦ يَسْتَهْزِءُونَ ﴿٧﴾

We have sent many a prophet to earlier people [6] and they mocked every one of them [7]
(The Quran, az-Zukhruf: 6 - 7)

‘How many’ (kam) here means that it was a large number.(1) ‘...To those of old...’ refers to those previous nations which belied the messengers and mocked them.

(1) Kam has two possible meanings: one is predicative meaning ‘a great number’; the other is as a question meaning ‘what number?’ Here it is predicative and affords the meaning of a large number. Allah the Exalted says in the chapter of an-Nisa`, ‘And as [We inspired other] apostles whom We have mentioned to you ere this, as well as apostles whom We have not mentioned to you...’ (an-Nisa’: 164).

فَأَهْلَكْنَآ أَشَدَّ مِنْهُم بَطْشًا وَمَضَىٰ مَثَلُ ٱلْأَوَّلِينَ ٨

So We have destroyed mightier people than [the disbelievers of Mecca] and their example has gone down in history[8] (The Quran, az-Zukhruf: 8)

This is saying, ‘O disbelievers of Quraysh! Take the admonition of the previous nations, and those whom Allah destroyed. They were more powerful than you were, but their strength did not protect them from Allah’s punishment. ‘...And the [very] image of those people of old became a thing of the past.’ (az-Zukhruf: 8) That is, their story and what befell them since that was Allah’s promise to His messengers.

‘For, long ago has Our word gone forth unto Our servants, the messengers, that, verily, they – they indeed – would be succoured, and that, verily, Our hosts – they indeed – would [in the end] be victorious!’ (as-Saffat: 171-173)

So, you will necessarily meet the consequences of your disbelief. Either you will be routed in this world, or your punishment will be stored up for you in the Hereafter.

ٱلَّذِى جَعَلَ لَكُمُ ٱلْأَرْضَ مَهْدًا وَجَعَلَ لَكُمْ فِيهَا سُبُلًا لَّعَلَّكُمْ تَهْتَدُونَ ١٠

If you [Prophet] ask them, ‘Who created the heavens and earth?’ they are sure to say, ‘They were created by the Almighty, the All Knowing’ [9] It is He who smoothed out the earth for you and traced out routes on it for you to find your way [10] (The Quran, az-Zukhruf: 9 - 10)

The True Lord Glorified is He wants to clarify for the disbelievers that they deny the Prophet peace and blessings be upon him and oppose his message out of mere arrogance and obstinacy, not relying therein upon logic or wisdom. He confirms this reality from their own tongues, ‘Yet thus it is [with most people]: if you ask them, “Who is it that has created the heavens and the earth?” – They will surely answer, “The Almighty, The All Knowing has created them.’’ (az-Zukhruf: 9), and in another place, ‘Now if you ask those [who worship any being other than Allah] as to who it is that has created them, they are sure to answer, “Allah.”’ (az-Zukhruf: 87) Thus, they do not deny this reality, but rather openly admit it, because nobody would claim the affair of creation for himself and argue for it.

Firstly, it is very strange that, despite believing that Allah is the Creator and that He is the Almighty, the All Knowing, they take this obstinate stance regarding the Prophet peace and blessings be upon him. Next, why did they not say, for example, ‘Allah created them’, when no one would dispute this? Instead, they described the True Lord as ‘the Almighty, the All Knowing’. The scholars say this is because they followed the way of their forefathers, believing it to be superior, saying, ‘...Nay, we shall follow [only] that which we found our forefathers believing in and doing...’ (al-Baqara: 170), and it was this that prevented them from adopting the truth.

‘...The Almighty...’ (az-Zukhruf: 9) is the one who dominates all and cannot be dominated, and with this they have refuted their own selves; for no matter what they do, they must necessarily be defeated.

Their description of the True Lord Glorified is He as ‘...the Almighty, the All-Knowing...’ (az-Zukhruf: 9) is possible because a speaker can always add from himself that which he was not told. For example, one could send an envoy with a message saying to him, ‘Go to so-and-so and tell him such-and-such’ just like that with no names or descriptions. Then when the messenger arrives he says, ‘By Allah, so-and-so said to me, “go to sheikh so-and-so, or professor so-and-so, and tell him such-and-such.”’ He has added a description of his own accord, and so it is that the disbelievers say, ‘...the Almighty, the All Knowing has created them’ (az-Zukhruf: 9) because they know that Allah is Almighty and All Knowing.

At this point Allah Glorified is He chooses to elaborate for them on His Power and Knowledge saying, ‘He it is who has made the earth a cradle for you...’ (az-Zukhruf: 10); al-mahd (a cradle) is bed that has been mumahhad (spread) for a child to rest in, whether sitting or lying down. From the same root, we say ‘a paved road’ (tariq mumahhad), that is to say it has been levelled and prepared so that whoever travels upon it can do so with ease. The True Lord likens us here to children, for the child is unable to spread its own bed and, had Allah not spread out the earth for us, we would have been unable to do it.

‘...And has provided for you paths thereon...’ (az-Zukhruf: 10), i.e. paths upon which you can travel from one place to another. This is because the needs of the creation require movement between their residences and their places of business. ‘...So that you might follow the right path’ (az-Zukhruf: 10), i.e. in your movements to your business

When The True Lord Glorified is He reminds them of some of His blessings upon them, it is only to soften their hearts and draw them towards Him so that they might believe in his message, have faith in Him and be guided to Him.

وَٱلَّذِى نَزَّلَ مِنَ ٱلسَّمَآءِ مَآءًۢ بِقَدَرٍ فَأَنشَرْنَا بِهِۦ بَلْدَةً مَّيْتًا ۚ كَذَٰلِكَ تُخْرَجُونَ ﴿١١﴾

Who sends water down from the sky in due measure — We resurrect dead land with it, and likewise you will be resurrected from the grave [11] (The Quran, az-Zukhruf: 11)

As for His saying, ‘...from the sky...’ (az-Zukhruf: 11), it means ‘from the direction of the sky’ ‘...in due measure...’ (az-Zukhruf: 11), i.e. a limited amount and a certain quantity according to Allah’s decree. So He is saying, ‘We do this to benefit you with this water and give life to the earth without causing disruption’. This is because water can be a means of destruction as we saw in the story of Nuh (Noah). Thus, He qualified the sending of the water by His saying, ‘...in due measure...’ (az-Zukhruf: 11), i.e. in accordance with your needs and what is good for you. In this vein, the Prophet peace and blessings be upon him taught us to say during rain, ‘O Allah! Around us and not upon us! O Allah! On the hills and on the mountains, the roots and the knolls, in the valleys and the bases of the trees.’

The meaning of, ‘...and [as] We raise therewith dead land to life...’ (az-Zukhruf: 11) is ‘We brought it to life with plants’, as Allah Glorified is He said in another place, ‘And [if, O man, you are still in doubt as to resurrection, consider this:] you can see the earth dry and lifeless – and [suddenly,] when We send down waters upon it, it stirs and swells and puts forth every kind of lovely plant!’ (al-Hajj: 5) So, dead land is that which has no plant-life in it.

We find in the books of fiqh (law) ‘the chapter of bringing life to dead land’. In the Noble Hadith the Prophet peace and blessings be upon him said, ‘Whosoever brings dead land to life, then it is his.’(1)

This is a principle which were the nations of the world to apply would eliminate poverty and spread abundance all over the world. We would not find a hand span’s worth of desert. We have, in Egypt, a clear example of this. When the government clamped down on the people and forbade them from spreading out into the desert, they crowded together in the Nile valley and delta. They were subsequently struck by poverty and were unable to achieve self-sufficiency from their harvests. But when the government permitted the cultivation of the desert and encouraged it, what happened? We saw the desert turn green and produce fine and delicious fruit and vegetables, and whoever goes along the desert roads will see the proof.

The True Lord Glorified is He has explained that the water comes down from the sky and mankind benefits from it in their agriculture, and what is in excess of their needs, the earth absorbs it and streams form under the earth’s surface. Allah says, ‘Are you not aware that it is Allah who sends down water from the skies, and then causes it to travel through the earth in the shape of springs...?’ (az-Zumar: 21)

The word ‘dead’ (mayta) is with a stop (sukun) on the letter ya` meaning ‘that which has physically died’. As for ‘insensible’ (mayyit), with a doubled ya`, this means ‘that which is considered to be dead’ even though it may only be on death’s door.

You ask me to explain the dead, the insensible,
    Another has expounded, if you can take it in:

(1) Abu-Dawud related it in his Sunnan [2672] on the authority of `Urwa who said, ‘I testify that the Prophet peace and blessings be upon him ruled that the earth is Allah’s earth, the slaves are Allah’s slaves, and that whoever brings dead land to life, then it is his by right.’ The ones who brought us this from the Prophet are the same ones who brought us the prayer (saltwater). At-Tabarani related in Al-Mu`jam As-Saghir [15217] on the authority of Fadalah Ibn `Ubayd who said, ‘He peace be upon him said, ‘The earth is Allah’s earth, the slaves are Allah’s slaves, and whoever brings dead land to life, then it is his.’

The one with a soul, that one is insensible,
But the dead one is taken away to his coffin.

Another example of this is Allah’s saying to His Prophet peace and blessings be upon him: ‘Yet, verily, you are bound to die, [O Muhammad,] and, verily, they, too, are bound to die’ (az-Zumar: 30).

Another poet (1) said in praise of the Prophet peace and blessings be upon him:

Your brother `Isa (Jesus) hailed a dead man, who stood up for him,
But you, you brought generations to life from oblivion.(2)

As for His saying, ‘...even thus will you be brought forth [from the dead]’ (az-Zukhruf: 11), it means that ‘Just as We bring the dead earth to life, so we shall resurrect you from your graves. So, take what you can see on earth as an indication of what is hidden from you regarding the matters of the resurrection, and believe Us when We tell you that Allah will bring you back to life after your death’.

Allah Glorified is He says:

وَٱلَّذِى خَلَقَ ٱلْأَزْوَٰجَ كُلَّهَا وَجَعَلَ لَكُم مِّنَ ٱلْفُلْكِ وَٱلْأَنْعَٰمِ مَا تَرْكَبُونَ ﴿١٢﴾

Who created every kind of thing, who gave you ships and animals to ride on [12] (The Quran, az-Zukhruf: 12)

The Arabic word azwaj (opposites) is the plural of the word zawj. We previously explained that a zawj is every member of a complementary pair such as each colour in the duality of white and black colours, each taste in the complementary pairs of sweet and sour tastes, the upward direction as opposed to the downward direction and the right side as opposed to the left side.

(1) Ahmad Shawqi, the most famous poet of the modern age, a prince among poets. He was born and died in Cairo (1868-1932) and grew up under the care of the royal family. He was sent to France in 1887 to continue his study of law. He mastered most of the branches of poetry including: praise, adoration, eulogy, and description.

(2) This verse is from a poem by Ahmad Shawqi entitled Nahj Al-Burdah, following Al-Bahr Al-Basit. It has 190 verses of which this is number 116. It begins rim `ala al-qa` bayn al-ban wa al-`alam.

Allah Glorified is He informs us that He uses the concept of duality in the creation of everything. He says, ‘and in everything have We created opposites (zawjayn) so that you might bear in mind (that Allah alone is one)’ (adh-Dhariyat: 49). We need to notice that Allah Glorified is He uses the word kulaha (all the opposites) in this verse. This reference to ‘everything’ includes all the objects in creation that we know about, as well as other objects that we do not know about. It is a reference to all the occurrences of opposites in nature, whether we have knowledge about them or are ignorant of their existence.

The people of contemplation and deep thought still find more wisdom in this verse, in which Allah Glorified is He describes His Gracious Bounty in creating the concept of duality. The concept of duality clearly demonstrates the contrasting concept of singularity, in which Allah Glorified is He is the only Unique Power, and no other power can be compared to Him or be complementary to His Power. A pair in a duality is represented by an even number that is evenly divisible or can be equally divided by the number two. Therefore, the production of a pair of complementary forces requires the presence of two distinct single forces first. In other words, the number two is dependent upon the number one, or the singularity identified by the number one, whereas the number one itself is independent of any other number.

Therefore, this concept can illustrate that Allah Glorified is He is the True One Deity, as He does not need any other power, and this attribute of singularity only truly belongs to Him. Allah Glorified is He says that He created all forms of duality and pairs, so, when all these pairs are in need of the singularity, the singularity is in no need of a partner. Therefore, as Allah Glorified is He is the Creator of duality, He is the Singular Source of Power, who has no likeness in existence.

The one who reflects upon this concept will find that the two halves of a pair, such as the male and the female, are different in some attributes. Each member has its own features that distinguish it from its counterpart, which means that each member lacks important features, and thus, it needs these features in its counterpart. On the other hand, there are common features in both individuals of the pair, and this means that each of them has a likeness in creation.

Allah Glorified is He however, is Absolutely Complete. He does not have any deficiency and is Unique in that there is no Power like Him. Therefore, it is as though this verse illustrated the way in which Allah Glorified is He is the Unique Creator Who needs no other power. Whereas the members of all the pairs in existence show continuous need due to their complementary deficiencies with their counterparts, all the forms of creation ultimately show their need to Allah Glorified is He who is One.

Then, Allah Glorified is He says: ‘and it is He Who has provided for you all those ships and animals which you can ride’ (az-Zukhruf: 12). The word fulk refers to boats. The animals which are ridden include, for instance, camels and other similar animals of burden. Allah Glorified is He says in another chapter: ‘And they carry your loads to (many) a place which (otherwise) you would be unable to reach without great hardship to yourselves’ (an-Nahl: 7).

Notice that Allah Glorified is He says, ‘…which you ride (ma tarkabun)’ (az-Zukhruf: 12), instead of saying, ‘…you ride on them’ (ma tarkabunaha) in order to include the ships with the beasts of burden. This is because we do not ride boats (tarkabuha), but rather, ride in them (tarkabu feeha). For this reason, He called these ships: ‘…the ships filled with cargo (al-fulk al-mashhoon)’ (as-Saffat: 140). He also says, ‘and (behold what happens) when you go to sea in ships’ (Yunus: 22).

Thus, we ride on the backs of animals but we ride inside boats. Even the older ancient boats had sides and seats inside them. The meaning is made clearer when we look at the larger modern ships that are several storeys high and resemble houses. The Quran described them as being like mountains.

In this verse, Allah Glorified is He mentions the beasts of burden first and then included the boats with them. There must be a reason for this preference, as every divine word is precisely chosen and perfectly placed. He gives preference to them saying, ‘which you can ride,’ (az-Zukhruf: 12) because, as we said, we ride beasts of burden but mostly ride within boats. Another reason is that the beasts of burden are Allah’s direct creation, whereas boats are made by men. Furthermore, Allah Glorified is He was, at first, addressing the Arabs with this verse, and the Arabs did not frequently ride in boats and, thus, had no extensive experience with them. Their primary means with which they transported themselves and their burdens was animals, and this is what they had more knowledge about, Then, Allah Glorified is He says:

ٱلَّذِى سَخَّرَ لَنَا هَٰذَا وَمَا كُنَّا لَهُۥ مُقْرِنِينَ ﴿١٣﴾ وَإِنَّآ إِلَىٰ رَبِّنَا لَمُنقَلِبُونَ ﴿١٤﴾

So that you may remember your Lord's grace when you are seated on them and say, 'Glory be to Him who has given us control over this; we could not have done it by ourselves [13]
Truly it is to our Lord that we are returning [14]

Allah Glorified is He says in this verse: 'In order that you might gain mastery over them' (az-Zukhruf: 13). Mastery (al-istiwa`) implies gaining control over something while being at rest and at ease. Human beings used to undergo the troubles of travelling on foot, but now, they ride upon animals that are submissive to them. Consequently, Allah Glorified is He orders us to remember that this is from His blessings, and that these blessings necessitate gratitude and remembrance. He warned us from forgetting the One Who bestowed these blessings Glorified is He.

An animal carries its burdens on four legs and may kneel for you so that you can mount it easily. A boat needs three things to function properly: the body of the boat itself, the sea upon which to sail, and the wind to propel it forward. Therefore, when you start moving using either of them, you should remember all these blessings that have come together to take you where you desire. Therefore, Allah Glorified is He taught us the appropriate prayer of remembrance for this blessing. We should say, as it has come to us in the Quran: 'Limitless in His Glory is He who has made (all) this subservient to our use – since (but for Him,) we would not have been able to attain it.' (az-Zukhruf: 13)

Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him taught us prayers for mounting such modes of transport and for travelling (1), just as he taught us to remember Allah Glorified is He every time we start a new action. Allah Glorified is He says in the story of the Ark, ‘In the name of Allah, be its movement and its settling’ (Hud: 41). The remembrance of Allah Glorified is He is the strength by which we seek sustenance and the power to travel or perform our duties.

(1) When he desired to travel, Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him would say upon putting his foot in the stirrup, 'In the Name of Allah! O Allah, You are our travel companion and the One Who stays behind with our family. O Allah, contract the earth for us and ease our travel. O Allah, I seek refuge with You from the hardships of travel or distress upon arrival, and from a bad view of my family or wealth.' This was related by Malik in the Muwatta as an instruction.

So, when you say the prayer for mounting a means of transport and declare that, ‘Limitless in His Glory is He who has made (all) this subservient to our use, since (without Him,) we would not have been able to attain it’ (1), you negate any delusion of strength in yourself. In this prayer, you are admitting that you do not mount this transport by your own power, but rather, by the power of Allah Glorified is He who has made it subservient to you.

Had Allah Glorified is He not done so, you would not have been able to control or mount it. Indeed, a boat could easily sink with everyone in it, while an animal could die in the middle of one's journey. Therefore, always remember the power of Allah Glorified is He and hasten to remember Him when mounting any means of transport.

Furthermore, these animals that you ride and burden with your loads do not owe you anything. Allah Glorified is He taught Prophet Nuh (Noah) peace be upon him how to build the Ark, and taught men how to build their boats. Otherwise, men would not have known it. ‘We carried him [Nuh (Noah)] on that (vessel) made of (mere) planks and nails’ (al-Qamar: 13). Allah Glorified is He says to Prophet Nuh (Noah): ‘But build, under Our eyes and according to Our inspiration, the Ark’ (Hud: 37). Thus, the inspiration first came from Allah Glorified is He.

The horses you ride and the camels that bear your burdens are stronger than you. Indeed, if they were to resist (2) you, you would be unable to compel them. Allah Glorified is He says regarding these beasts: ‘Are they, then, not aware that it is for them that We have created, among all the things which Our hands have wrought, the domestic animals of which they are (now) masters?

(1) It was related by Muslim in his Sahih (2392), by Abu Dawud in his Sunnan (2232), by At-Tirmidhi in his Sunnan (3369) and Ahmad in his Musnad (6029, 6086), all on the authority of Ibn `Umar.

(2) Harunat Ad-Daba Wa Hiya Harun. This refers to the animal that refuses to move when prompted and it only applies to animals with hooves. As for camels, one says ‘Al-Lijan' or ‘Al- Khila’.

And that We have subjected them to men's will so that some of them they may use for riding and of some they may eat' (Ya Sin: 71-72). So, if Allah Glorified is He had not made them subservient to us, we would have been powerless to do so.

We have previously said that a small child can lead a camel, ride it, and make it kneel, and that a camel will obey it without resistance. Clear insight bids you to ponder the strength of Allah Glorified is He which has made this huge creature subservient to a small, powerless child. On the other hand, you may find that a mosquito, for example, can attack your bed and perturb you all night long, leaving you powerless and unable to do anything about it. This is because the Creator Glorified is He has made the stronger camel subservient to you, but did not create this insect to serve you. So reflect, and do not think that you ride these means of transport by some power of your own.

The saying: '…we would not have been able to attain it' (az-Zukhruf: 13) refers to power or dominance. It means that we have no power or control of our own. It was only Allah Glorified is He who made it subservient. 'Hence, verily, to our Lord we must always return' (az-Zukhruf: 14).

Then, Allah Glorified is He says:

وَجَعَلُوا۟ لَهُۥ مِنْ عِبَادِهِۦ جُزْءًا ۚ إِنَّ ٱلْإِنسَـٰنَ لَكَفُورٌ مُّبِينٌ ﴿١٥﴾

Yet they assign some of His own servants to Him as offspring! Man is clearly ungrateful! [15]
(The Quran, az-Zukhruf: 15)

The 'part' (juz`) that some people attributed to Allah Glorified is He is a reference to those who attributed a child to Him such as those who claimed that Prophet `Isa (Jesus) peace be upon him was the son of Allah, while indeed Allah is transcendentally Glorified above such claims. Allah Glorified is He says that these people attributed a 'part' (juz`) to him because a child is part of his father. Prophet Muhammad peace and the blessings be upon him said in a Noble Hadith, 'Fatima is a part of me.'(1)

(1) Al-Bukhari related in his Sahih (3437, 3450, 3483, 4829). Muslim related in his Sahih as well (4482, 4483). This Hadith has come in many variants: 'Fatima is a piece of me, =

Sometimes, these fabricators claimed that the part (child) was Allah's son, and at other times they claimed that the child was Allah Glorified is He Himself. Still, at other times they considered the son as the third of three deities. It is astounding that they made this error regarding Prophet `Isa (Jesus) peace be upon him who Allah Glorified is He had sent to guide them to true faith. They made `Isa (Jesus) peace be upon him himself a means of associating partners with Allah Glorified is He and committing shirk (polytheism).

Some Arabs also claimed that a part of creation was a part of Allah Glorified is He. It is well known that the Arabs incorrectly held the male to be nobler and preferable than the female. The proof of this is Allah's saying, '…for whenever any of them is given the glad tiding of (the birth of) a girl, his face darkens, and he is filled with suppressed anger, avoiding all people because of the tiding which he has received, (and debating within himself:) Shall he keep this (child) despite the contempt (which he feels for it) – or shall he bury it in the dust? Oh, evil indeed is whatever they decide!' (an-Nahl: 58-59)

Although they could have attributed either a male or a female as offspring to Allah Glorified is He and although they themselves preferred males than females, they still attributed to Allah Glorified is He female daughters.

Perhaps you have heard the story (1) of Abu Hamza. He was married to a woman who would not bear him a son, so he left her for another woman. She spoke her mind and said (2),

What is with Abu Hamza, he comes not to us,

Remaining in the house adjacent to ours,

Angry that we bear not for him boys,

By Allah, that matter is not of our choice,

= so whosoever makes her angry, makes me angry'; 'Fatima is indeed a piece of me, and I hate anything to harm her' and 'Fatima! She is a piece of me, whatsoever troubles her troubles me, and it harms me that which harms her.'

(1) The story of Abu Hamza with his wife who only begot him daughters

(2) She was the wife of Abu Hamza Ad-Dabbi, an Abbasid poetess. Her husband left her after she bore him a daughter. One day, he was passing by her quarters when he heard some lines of poetry, at which he took pity on her and made up to her.

We are like the earth to its farmer who sows,
We bear just what' is sowed within us.(1)

This Arabian lady of older times described what has been proven by modern science. Indeed, the woman is not accountable for the gender of the child, but rather, is a noble vessel and a caretaker. It is the man's gamete that determines the matter of gender in the zygote.

Allah says, 'And that it is He who created the two kinds - the male and the female - out of a (mere) drop of sperm as it is poured forth' (an-Najm: 45-46). The drop of fluid is the man's semen that penetrates the ovum and determines the gender.

The attribution of a child to Allah Glorified is He is a greatly heinous affair. Therefore, this verse we are studying is concluded by Allah's saying, 'Verily, most obviously bereft of all gratitude is man!' (az-Zukhruf: 15) We should reflect upon the precise articulation here, which reflects the loathsome nature of their assertion. The word: 'Verily (Inna)' is a particle of emphasis, and 'bereft of all gratitude (la-kafur)' is the emphatic form of kafir (ingrate disbeliever). The word 'most obviously (mubeen)' means that the disbelievers are clearly ungrateful and this ingratitude is hidden from no one.

Has He taken daughters for Himself and favoured you with sons? [16] (The Quran, az-Zukhruf: 16)

Allah Glorified is He responded to them with this mocking question: 'or (do you think), perchance, that out of all His creation He has chosen for Himself daughters, and favoured you with sons?' (az-Zukhruf: 16) If they wrongly believed that females were lesser in status than males, is it conceivable, given that Allah Glorified is He is the Creator, to grant daughters for Himself, and grant sons for them.

(1) This verse is related in Al-Mawsu`a Ash-Shi`riyya as follows:
We only take what he gave us, just like the earth for our planters,
We grow just what is planted in us.
These lines are from Bahr (meter) Ar-Rajz. It has four verses.

Allah Glorified is He also said in another chapter: ‘as it is, they ascribe to Allah something that they (themselves) dislike – and (all the while) their tongues utter the lie that (by doing so) they earn supreme merit! Truly, they earn but the fire, and will be left out (of Allah’s grace)!’ (an-Nahl: 62)

Then, Allah Glorified is He informs us of the proof that their claims are lies and fabrications. He says:

وَإِذَا بُشِّرَ أَحَدُهُم بِمَا ضَرَبَ لِلرَّحْمَٰنِ مَثَلًا ظَلَّ وَجْهُهُۥ مُسْوَدًّا وَهُوَ كَظِيمٌ ١٧

When one of them is given news of the birth of a daughter, such as he so readily ascribes to the Lord of Mercy, his face grows dark and he is filled with gloom [17]
(The Quran, az-Zukhruf: 17)

His saying: ‘(the birth of) what he so readily attributes to the Most Gracious’ (az-Zukhruf: 17) is a reference to the daughters which they attributed to Allah Glorified is He. In their attribution, they likened a part of Creation to Him because the child, as we said, is a part of his father and, therefore, he resembles him. Furthermore, even though they attributed daughters to Allah Glorified is He they themselves (ignorantly) detested having daughters and their faces turned dark if any of them was given tidings of a daughter. Allah described them in the words: ‘…and he is filled with suppressed anger’ (az-Zukhruf: 17). This means that any of them used to become filled with worry, sadness, and anger, on hearing that he became a father to a daughter. How could they attribute to Allah Glorified is He what they did not accept themselves?

Therefore, the Quran described their affair as an unjust distribution. Allah Glorified is He says in the chapter of an-Najm: ‘Why – for yourselves (you would choose only) male offspring, whereas to Him (you assign) females. That (division), lo and behold, is an unfair (deeza) division!’ (an-Najm: 21-22) Allah chose to use the unusual word deeza in this verse which only appeared once in the Quran, to emphasise the bizarre nature of their assertion.

Allah Glorified is He mentioned what they used to say on hearing the tidings of a daughter. The new father used to say:

أَوَمَن يُنَشَّؤُاْ فِي ٱلۡحِلۡيَةِ وَهُوَ فِي ٱلۡخِصَامِ غَيۡرُ مُبِينٖ ﴿١٨﴾

‘Someone who is brought up amongst trinkets, who cannot put together a clear argument?’ [18]

This verse started with the Arabic interrogative particle, or hamza (glottal stop), and this indicates a sudden question. To these (pre-Islamic) Arabs, the female who was raised in embellishment was not equal to the male. The meaning of the phrase spoken by such fathers: ‘What! (Am I to have a daughter –) one who is to be reared in embellishment (and ornaments)’ (az-Zukhruf: 18) is a reference to the fact that daughters are brought up in luxury and decorative attire.

A girl, in our society for example, is an object of concern in her clothing and appearance. They are allowed to wear earrings, bracelets, and beautiful clothes that are not worn by the male children. In addition to that, they are generally weaker in elucidating their arguments in moments of dispute.

So, daughters, such as they ascribe to Allah Glorified is He are brought up in ease and luxury, wearing silk, gold and jewellery. These (pre-Islamic) Arabs saw that females were created to instil desire and were careful about the appearance of their daughters, beautifying them so that they may get married more easily.

However, such elements of jewellery and embellishment were resorted to when the natural beauty was insufficient. The Arabs used to call a beautiful woman ghaniya (independent) because her natural beauty rendered her needless of any adornment.

In contrast to that, to them, having a male birth means having a son who can help his father in the fields and the factory, in debate, quarrel and all kinds of troublesome work. Therefore, the Arabs did not view the daughters equal to the sons.

Of course, this is not a right rule for the sexes. Indeed, we find women whose judgement is clear and are more skilled in debate, surpassing their fellow men. Remember when Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him and his companions peace be upon them were prevented from entering Mecca for the lesser pilgrimage (‘umra) when they were on the verge of it.

Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him was compelled to settle for the Treaty of Hudaybiyya with the disbelievers of Mecca, in which he agreed to withdraw his pilgrimage that year and make Hajj the following year. Upon this agreement, the companions became angry and pained that they were prevented from reaching the Ka`ba when they were on the fringes of Mecca. Even `Umar Allah be pleased with him got riled and asked Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him 'O Messenger of Allah! Are we not on the truth?' Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him replied: 'Of course.' `Umar asked, 'Are they (the disbelievers) not upon falsehood?' Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him replied: 'Of course.' `Umar thus asked, 'Then why are we being disgraced(1) (giving the danniya) in our religion.'

The people momentarily ceased to obey Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him and did not want to follow the orders. Angry from their disobedience, he entered his tent where he found `Umm Salama Allah be pleased with her who said to him, 'How is it that I see you angry, O Messenger of Allah?' He replied, 'The people are on the brink of destruction. I gave them an order that they did not obey.' She said, 'O Messenger of Allah! Excuse them for they are confused. They came from Medina longing for the Ka`ba, and it is grievous for them that they should be prevented from it when they are on the fringes of Mecca. O Messenger of Allah, go to what Allah has ordered you and do it in front of them, for, if they were to see you do it, they would know that the matter is resolved and there can be no dispute about it.' So, when Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him cut his hair in front of them, they themselves did as he did, the problem was solved and they returned to Medina.(2)

(1) Al-Bukhari related it in his Sahih (3529, 2945, 4466); Muslim in his Sahih (3238); and Ahmad in his Musnad (15408) from the Hadith of Sahl ibn Hunayf. Ad-Daniyya means an objectionable quality, i.e., weakness and depravity. Lissan Al-`Arab under dana.

(2) The wording of Al-Bukhari in his Sahih (2529) is that Prophet Muhammad said to his Companions: "Get up, perform your sacrifices and shave your heads." But by Allah, not one of them stood up, even after he had said it three times! When none of them got up, he went into Umm Salama's tent and told her what had happened with the people. Umm Salama said, "O Prophet of Allah, is this what you desire? Go out, but speak not a word to anyone until you have sacrificed your camel and summoned your barber so that he may shave your head. So he went out and spoke to no one until he had done that: sacrificed his camel and summoned his barber, who then shaved his head. When=

Out of mercy for the Muslims' jealousy over their religion, revelation was sent down upon Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him while he was on the road to Medina. These verses clarified to them the Divine wisdom in their withdrawal that year. Allah Glorified is He says: 'It was not for your enemies' sake that He stopped your hands from them, for, they are (the ones) who disbelieved and barred you from the Inviolable Mosque and (barred) the consecrated offering (also) from reaching its lawful destination. And had it not been for (some) believing men and (some) believing women whom you did not know, (for fear) that you should trample (kill them) them, and so dishonour would afflict you on their account without (your) knowing it, that Allah may cause whomever He decides to enter His Mercy. If they (believers and disbelievers) had been made clearly distinct, indeed We would have tormented the ones who disbelieved among them with a painful torment.' (al-Fath: 25)

So, the wisdom behind the withdrawal that year was that there were many Muslims in Mecca who had hidden their Islam. Thus, Allah Glorified is He told the Muslims with Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him that if they had entered by force, fighting would have ensued between them and the disbelievers and some of their Muslim brothers would have been afflicted. In the end, they would have harmed them without knowing it. This is how they came to know the flawless nature of Prophet Muhammad's opinions and his truthfulness in every action. Thus, this advice by Umm Salama was a great example of the wisdom of women.

History is full of examples of women who outstripped men in debate, strength, and character because the Creator did not create things in a mechanical fashion, but rather with power and wisdom. Thus, it is not necessarily the case that all men are strong in debate, or that all women weaker in disputation. The rule necessarily has exceptions.

So, if the rule with women was as narrated in the verse, that they are only reared in embellishment (and ornaments), and are, in conflict, without (demonstrable) argument, the Limitless Power of Allah Glorified is He can create, despite this apparent weakness, strength that surpasses that of men.

= they saw this, they promptly stood up, performed their sacrifices, and started shaving each other so fervently that they nearly shaved their heads off."

For instance, we can see that many women were queens of their people. An example was the Queen of Saba` (Sheba), whose story was told in the Quran along with the story of Prophet Sulaiman (Solomon) peace be upon him. Did she arrive to royalty because there were no men? Of course not! Rather, she excelled in the position of authority because of her intelligence and her sound judgement such that the men accepted her and submitted to her rule. When we read her story in the chapter of an-Naml, we find proof of her superior intelligence, insight, diplomacy, and strength in negotiation.

The hoopoe described her saying: ‘Behold, I found there a woman ruling over them; and she has been given (abundance) of all (good) things, and hers is a mighty throne’ (an-Naml: 23). When the letter of Prophet Sulaiman (Solomon) peace be upon him reached her, she did not settle only for her own opinion. Rather, she consulted her council, as Allah Glorified is He describes: ‘(When the Queen had read Sulaiman’s (Solomon’s) letter,) she said: “O you nobles! A truly distinguished letter has been conveyed unto me”’ (an-Naml: 29). Therefore, she adopted the principle of consultation. ‘She added: “O you nobles! Give me your opinion on the problem with which I am now faced; I would never make a (weighty) decision unless you are present with me.”’ (an-Naml: 32)

Then, she tried to address the issue in an amicable fashion, far removed from violence and bloodshed because she knew the nature of Kings. ‘She said, “Verily, whenever kings enter a country they corrupt it, and turn the noblest of its people into the most abject. And this is the way they (always) behave. Hence, behold, I am going to send a gift to those (people), and await whatever (answer) the envoys bring back.”’ (an-Naml: 34-35)

Furthermore, look at the ingenuity and discretion in her reply when they disguised(1) her throne and asked her, ‘Is your throne like this? She answered,

(1) Nakkaru laha `arshaha (they disguised her throne); al-tankir here means changing, i.e. they changed her throne such that when she saw it she did not recognise it (Al-Fath Al-Qadir by Shawkani). Ibn Jawzi said in Zad Al-Masir, ‘The exegetes have six different opinions regarding this change:

1. That parts were taken off and parts added. This was related from Ibn `Abbas.

2. That they put the gold plating in the place of the silver plating and vice-versa.

3. That they removed the jewels and precious stones from it.

These first three sayings are attributed to Ibn `Abbas. =

"It is as though it were the same (throne)!"' (an-Naml: 42) When the matter ended with her embracing Islam, she said, '…O my Lord! I have been sinning against myself (by worshipping aught but You): but (now) I have surrendered myself, with Sulaiman (Solomon), unto The Lord of all the Worlds' (an-Naml: 44). She did not enter Islam out of fear of Prophet Sulaiman (Solomon) peace be upon him nor to please him. Rather, she submitted with him to Allah Glorified is He as if to say, 'He and I are equal in our submission to Allah'.

In Egypt, there was a lady named 'Shajarat Ad-Dur' (The Tree of Pearls)(1), who was bestowed with worldly wisdom and penetrating insight that enabled her to overcome the political crisis after her husband died. She hid the news of his death and took the reins of power herself so that the strength of the army, at war in another land, would not wane. Shajarat Ad-Dur was the one who took us to the Ka`ba, and she was the one who cloaked it.

Of course, these examples are not restricted to the history of Islam. We also find, in the pre-Islamic age women of manifest wisdom who surpassed their male counterparts. It is narrated of `Umama(2) bint Al-Harith ibn `Umar that she married `Awf ibn Muhallim Ash-Shaybani(3) and bore him a daughter

= 4. That they changed the red parts to green and vice-versa. This was the saying of Mujahid.

5. That they turned it upside down, back to front, took parts off it and added parts to it. This was the opinion of Qatada.

6. That they added statues of fish to it. This was the opinion of Abu Salah.'

(1) She was Umm Khalil, the Queen of Egypt and her agnomen was `Ismat Ad-Din. She was originally one of the slave girls of the righteous King Najm Ad-Din Ayyub. He bought her during his father's reign and she won his favour. She bore him a son, Khalil, after which he freed her and married her. She resided with him in the Levant for a long time and then moved to Egypt where she would sometimes take care of matters of state. She was fully literate, intelligent, and prudent. She hid her husband's death and passed away herself in the year 655 A.H. Az-Zirikli, Al-A`lam 3/158.

(2) She was `Umama bint Al-Harith ibn `Umar with her husband `Awf ibn Muhallim Ash-Shaybani. She was an eloquent noble lady of the pre-Islamic times. Al-A`lam by Az-Zirikli 2/11).

(3) He was from the nobility of the Arabs in Pre-Islamic times. He was obeyed by his people. He died in the year 45 before the Hijra, 580 CE Az-Zirikli, Al-A`lam 5/96. No-one entered his shrine hungry except that they were fed or fearful except they were given security Kitab Al-Muhabbir.

named Umm `Unas. She was very attractive, so much so that the Arabs would tell tales of her eloquence and beauty. The Prince of Kinda, an Arab nobleman named `Amr ibn Hujr, desired to marry her. He asked his companion, Ibn Sinan, ‘Can you think, O Ibn Sinan, of any living Arab who would reject me were I to propose?’ Ibn Sinan said, ‘Yes. I know one who will turn you down.’ ‘Who?’ he asked. ‘`Awf ibn Muhallim’, he replied. The Prince of Kinda said, ‘Then, let us go to him.’

When they arrived at his house, `Awf said to them, ‘Welcome! Welcome `Amr! What has brought you to us?’ The Prince said, ‘I have come as a suitor.’ `Awf, the father, replied, ‘But that is not your place’, which meant that the prince was not a match for his daughter. `Awf’s wife overheard this conversation and exclaimed to him, ‘`Awf, who was that man who rode out to you but to whom you spoke only briefly?’ He said, ‘It was `Amr ibn Hujr, a nobleman from the Arabs.’ She said, ‘And why did you not be hospitable and take him in?’ ‘Because he disapproved of me,’ he said. ‘Why?’ she asked. ‘He came as a suitor’, he said. His wife said: ‘If he is a nobleman from the Arabs, and he came as a suitor, then who will marry your daughters if the noblemen of the Arabs cannot? Catch up with him and accept him.’ So, `Awf went and caught up with `Amr and his companion, Ibn Sinan, calling out to him, ‘O `Amr, come back with me for I have for you something you desire.’ `Amr and his friend turned around. `Awf continued, ‘You came to me while I was angry, and I said what I said, but now I have changed my mind.’ So, he took them back to his house.

Now, `Awf had three daughters: an elder, middle and a younger daughter. He went to the eldest and said to her, ‘My daughter. `Amr ibn Hujr has come to propose to you.’ ‘No, father,’ she said. ‘But why?’ he asked. She said, ‘Because I am an unattractive woman and my character is harsh. Harith is neither your neighbour nor am I his cousin, and I fear that, should something happen, he would divorce me and I would be disgraced.’ He said, ‘You may go. May Allah bless you.’ Then, he went to the next daughter and said to her what he said to her sister. She said, ‘No, father, for I am not pretty, nor am I good in housework, and I fear that were he to divorce me, I would be disgraced.’ He said to her, ‘You may go. May Allah bless you.’ Then, he went to the youngest daughter and said to her what he said to her sisters. She replied, ‘Yes, father, for my character is fair, my appearance is good and I am skilled with housework. So, if he would divorce me, then may Allah withhold His blessings from him and leave him no offspring.’

So, `Awf went to `Amr and said to him, ‘I allow you to marry my youngest daughter, willingly.’ He then prepared some quarters in his house so that `Amr might approach his bride there. But, when he approached her she said, ‘I did respect and love you, but now I have no need of you.’ Her groom asked, ‘But why?’ She answered, ‘Should we do this here, in the presence of my father and sisters? By Allah, it shall not happen!’ He said, ‘Then let us go to our home.’ So, he told his friend Ibn Sinan to ride with the caravan while he lagged behind at the side of the road, where he approached her once again. She said, ‘Is this how it is going to be done, as if I am a captive slave girl? By Allah, nothing will ever happen until you go to your neighbourhood, slaughter camels and cattle, feed the people and do as the likes of you should do for the likes of me.’

So, when they reached his district, he slaughtered animals and fed the people. Then he wanted to approach her and she said to him, ‘O `Amr. Are you thinking about women when there are two tribes of Arabs fighting? Go and make peace between them first, and you will find that you have missed nothing with your wife. So, `Amr went and made peace between the two fighting tribes, paying blood money for the dead soldiers on each side, with a total of 3,000 camels from his own wealth.

He then returned to his wife, who, when she saw what he had done, said, ‘Now, O Harith! Now!’(1) These are examples of women who had sound minds and arguments.

When `Amr wanted to propose to Umm Unas(2) bint `Awf, he invited a woman from Kinda named `Isam and said to her, ‘Go, so that you may discover the truth about `Awf's daughter for me.' So, the woman, `Isam, went to `Awf's house and was met by `Umama, who perceived the reason for her visit. She prepared a tent for her daughter and said to her, 'Wait in here, for `Isam wants to see you. Do not hide anything that she may wish to see of your face or being, and speak to her of that she desires, for she has come for that reason.'

(1) This story is told in full by Abu Al-Farj Al-Asfahani in his Kitab Al-Aghani and by Ibn Hamdun in At-Tadhkira Al-Hamduniyya in the third chapter on ‘Nobility and Leadership’.

(2) Umm Unas bint `Awf, Her father wanted to bury her alive, but then he said, ‘Let her be, for maybe she will give birth to many people (unas)’. Thereafter she became known as Umm Unas (the mother of many people).

So `Isam entered upon Umm Unas and found her as she had hoped, with nothing hidden from her, and said, 'He has abandoned deception who reveals his cloak.'(1) This became a proverb among the Arabs until this very day.

When she returned to `Amr, he said to her, 'What happened, `Isam?'

She said, 'The butter has separated from the milk.' This meant that the results of the visit were promising. 'Tell me more', he said to her. 'I will tell you straight and true', she said. She then began to describe Umm Unas from head to toe, but we will suffice here with what is not prohibited.

She described her by saying, 'I saw a forehead like a burnished mirror, decorated by hair like the plaited tails of stallions. Were she to brush it, one would imagine it to be like pure flowing water, and were she to undo it, one would say it was like bunches of grapes glistening from the rain. Beneath it are two eyebrows, arched as if drawn with a pen or blackened with charcoal, over the wide(2) eyes of a gazelle that has neither been hunted by man(3) nor startled by a lion. Between them a nose like the blade of an unsheathed sword, neither too short, nor too long, flanked by two rosy cheeks, on skin as white as pearls. Upon her is a mouth like a ring, with an inviting smile, bright white teeth and an eloquent tongue, decorated with two red lips like a rose, moistened as though with honey. Beneath that is a neck like a vase of silver resting upon submissive shoulders', and so, she continued describing her in that manner.(1)

(1) This story was mentioned by Ibn `Abd Rabbih in Al-`Iqd Al-Farid, by Zamakhshari in Al-Mustaqsa Fi Amthal Al-`Arab, by Abu Hatim As-Sijistani in Al-Muhammarun Wal-Wasaya, by Abu Hilal Al-`Askari in Jamharat Al-Amthal and by Al-Maydani in Majma` Al-Amthal.

(2) Al-`Abhara means 'full-bodied, combining beauty, body and form', Lisan Al-`Arab, and it also means a beautiful woman. Khizanat Al-`Adab by `Abd Al-Qadir Al-Baghdadi.

(3) Al-Qanid means a hunter, and lam yar`aha qanid means 'a hunter has never scared it'. Thus, the eye of the gazelle which has never been scared by a hunter is wide, calm, and peaceful, as was the eye of this woman.

Before Umm 'Unas left her father's house for her husband's house, her mother did not fail to give her daughter the following sound advice that would guarantee her a happy marriage if she should follow it. Listen to her words(2), as she said, 'My dear daughter, were advice to be left unsaid due to tact, it would be left for you, as you do not need advice. However, advice is a reminder for the heedless and a source of strength for the wise. Were a woman to have little want of a husband due to the wealth of her parents or because of their dire need for her, then none would need him less than you, but women were created for men, and men for women. My dear daughter, you are departing the environment from whence you came and abandoning the nest where you grew up, to an abode you know not, and a companion with whom you are unfamiliar. If you guard ten things, they will be a treasure for you. The first and second are that you should seek his good pleasure through being contented and that you should pay attention to his words and obey them. The third and fourth are that you should examine yourself regarding what he may see or smell. His eye must not fall upon something foul and his nose should never smell any but the finest odours. As for the fifth and sixth, you must be aware of the times of his sleep and his food, for repeated hunger is an inflammation and disturbed sleep is a source of vexation. The seventh and the eighth are that you should guard his wealth and be considerate of his family and his followers. The core principle in wealth is economising appropriately and the core principle with family is maintaining a good opinion. Finally, the ninth and the tenth are that you should disobey him in nothing and divulge not his secrets, for if you oppose his will, you will provoke his anger, and if you share his secret you are not safe from his departure. Apart from that I caution you against being joyful in his presence when he has worries, or depressed when he is joyful.'

(1) Ibn `Abd Rabbih Al-Andalusi related it in Al-`Iqd Al-Farid in the section 'The Character and Characteristics of Women', Al-Muhibb Ad-Dimishqi (d. 1699AH) in Khulasat Al-Athar Fi A`yan Al-Qarn Al-Hadi `Ashar, Al-Maydani in Majma `Al-Amthal (under ma wara`ak ya `Isam) and An-Nuwayri in Nihayat Al-Arab Fi Funun Al-Adab under the letter mim, regarding the saying, ma wara`ak ya `Isam.

(2) Al-Asbahani mentioned this counsel in Al-Mustatraf Fi Kul Fann Mustazhraf, in the first section of the chapter 'Women and their Qualities'.

This is a template for women of sound mind and intelligence. Were the wives of the world to take this advice, we would be free of much of the evil of marital discord that we endure every day. Allah then says:

وَجَعَلُواْ ٱلۡمَلَٰٓئِكَةَ ٱلَّذِينَ هُمۡ عِبَٰدُ ٱلرَّحۡمَٰنِ إِنَٰثًاۚ
أَشَهِدُواْ خَلۡقَهُمۡۚ سَتُكۡتَبُ شَهَٰدَتُهُمۡ وَيُسۡـَٔلُونَ ﴿١٩﴾

They consider the angels – God's servants – to be female. Did they witness their creation? Their claim will be put on record and they will be questioned about it [19] (The Quran, az-Zukhruf: 19)

This is another of their claims and fabrications against Allah Glorified is He. This verse comes after the verse where they ascribe a son to Allah Glorified is He: 'They attribute to Him a part (juz`) (offspring) from among some of His servants! Verily, most obviously bereft of all gratitude is man!' (az-Zukhruf: 15) Then they ascribed daughters to Allah Glorified is He while preferring sons for themselves. Allah Glorified is He proceeded to shed a light on the corruption of their beliefs and refuted them with evidence and proof from their everyday lives.

Here they described the angels, who are the servants of the All-Merciful, as females, which in itself is another lie. Allah Glorified is He refuted their claim by saying, 'Did they witness their creation?' (az-Zukhruf: 19) How did they arrive at this conclusion? Did they see the creation of the angels such that they might assert this? Then He warned them by saying: 'This false claim of theirs will be recorded, and they will be called to account' (az-Zukhruf: 19). Therefore, their words will be written down and recorded, and on the Day of Judgement, they will be asked about it and taken to account for all their fabrications. Allah Glorified is He says in another chapter: 'I did not make them witnesses of the creation of the heavens and the earth, nor their own creation; nor choose I misguided people as (My) helpers' (al-Kahf: 51).

We can see the truth of this verse in our daily lives, as we can see such deceptive characters, in every age, misguiding the people and diverting them away from the truth. At the forefront of these evil people are those who attribute sons or daughters to Allah Glorified is He or those who describe the angels as female, or those who say that man is descended from random chance in a particular fashion.

We ask all of these, ‘Did you see their creation’? Allah Glorified is He the Creator, says, ‘I did not make them witnesses of the creation of the heavens and the earth, nor their own creation’ (al-Kahf: 51). So, do not lend credence to these people for they are deceptive liars. Allah Glorified is He has made them subservient to His creation, and made them a proof of the truthfulness of His Speech.

Among these deceptive persons are those who deny the Hadiths of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him by saying, ‘We only accept what is in the Quran and do not recognise the Sunnah as an authority’. This group of people has come as a proof of the truthfulness of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him who, fourteen centuries ago, prophesised that they will be present. Prophet Muhammad peace and the blessings be upon him said: ‘The time is close when a man among you, lying on his couch, will say, ‘Between you and us is the Book of Allah Glorified is He. So, what we find in it to be permissible, we shall consider it permissible, and what we find in it to be forbidden, we shall treat it as forbidden.’

Indeed, what Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him said is just as Allah Glorified is He Himself said:(1)

They say, ‘If the Lord of Mercy had willed it, we would not have worshipped them,’ but they do not know that – they are only guessing [20] (The Quran, az-Zukhruf: 20)

This is another of their false claims and fabrications against Allah Glorified is He. Thus, Allah Glorified is He replied to them that their speech is false and baseless, uttered without comprehension or knowledge, as He says, '…they do nothing but guess' (az-Zukhruf: 20). They are being dishonest in their claims.

(1) It was related on the authority of Al-Miqdam ibn Ma`ddi Karrib that Prophet Muhammad said, ‘The time is close when a man, lying on his couch, will narrate my sayings and say, “between you and I is the Book of Allah. So, what we find within it to be permissible, let us treat it as permissible, and whatever we find in it to be forbidden, let us treat it as forbidden.” Indeed, what the Messenger of Allah has forbidden is the same as what Allah has forbidden.’ Ahmad narrated it in his Musnad (4/133), and At-Tirmidhi (2664), Ibn Majah (12) and Daraqutni (4/286) in their books, the Sunnan, and this wording is from Daraqutni.

Then, Allah Glorified is He says:

أَمْ ءَاتَيْنَٰهُمْ كِتَٰبًا مِّن قَبْلِهِۦ فَهُم بِهِۦ مُسْتَمْسِكُونَ ﴿٢١﴾

Or have We perhaps given them a book before this one, to which they hold fast? [21] (The Quran, az-Zukhruf: 21)

Why did they claim these things? Did a messenger bring them a book that said these things they claimed or permitted them to worship idols: '…to which they are still holding fast' (az-Zukhruf: 21) devotedly, Allah Glorified is He then says:

بَلْ قَالُوٓا۟ إِنَّا وَجَدْنَآ ءَابَآءَنَا عَلَىٰٓ أُمَّةٍ وَإِنَّا عَلَىٰٓ ءَاثَٰرِهِم مُّهْتَدُونَ ﴿٢٢﴾

No indeed! They say, 'We saw our fathers following this tradition; we are guided by their footsteps' [22] (The Quran, az-Zukhruf: 22)

So, their case is a case of blind imitation of their forefathers, without deliberation or explanation. They said, 'Behold, We found our forefathers agreed on a way (ummah)' (az-Zukhruf: 22). Their forefathers were on a specific religion or belief system. The word ummah is derived from the verb umm, which means 'to intend a particular direction'. 'And, verily, it is in their footsteps' and their methods, '…that we find our guidance' (az-Zukhruf: 22). Their forefathers' method is the one that directs their actions and guides them.

The Bounteous Quran dealt with this subject in many other chapters. In one verse, Allah Glorified is He says, 'But when they are told, "Follow what Allah has revealed", some (of them) answer, "Nay, we shall follow (only) that which we found our forefathers believing in and doing." Why (would they do that), even if their forefathers did not use their reason at all, and were devoid of all guidance?' (al-Baqara: 170) Allah Glorified is He says in another verse: 'For when they are told, "Come unto that which Allah has revealed, and unto the Apostle", – they answer, "Enough for us is that which we found our forefathers believing in and doing." Why (would they do that), even though their forefathers knew nothing, and were devoid of all guidance?' (al-Ma'ida: 104)

Ponder the precision of the Quranic articulation in these two verses, and how each verse is concluded with an ending appropriate to it. To begin with, we see that the general meaning of the two verses is the same. However, in the first verse, they are mentioned saying, ‘Nay, we shall follow that which we found our forefathers believing in and doing’ (al-Baqara: 170). In the second verse, they are mentioned saying: ‘Enough for us is that which we found our forefathers believing in and doing’ (al-Ma‘ida: 104), where they used the rhetorical devices of limitation (qasr) and restriction (hasr). They limited their worship to the way of their fathers. Therefore, their rejection in the second verse is stronger than the first verse, and we find that the ending of the verse is suited to this rejection.

In the first verse, Allah Glorified is He refuted their saying with a mocking question: ‘Why, even if their forefathers did not use their reason at all, and were devoid of all guidance?’ (al-Baqara: 170) Then, in the second verse: ‘Why, even though their forefathers knew nothing, and were devoid of all guidance?’ (al-Ma‘ida: 104) So, what is the difference between the phrase: ‘did not use their reason at all’ (al-Baqara: 170), and the phrase: ‘knew nothing’ (al-Ma‘ida: 104)? The former phrase refers to the one who is capable of deriving judgments on his own by virtue of his intellect. The second phrase, however, refers to the one who is incapable of such derivation, but rather relies upon that of other peoples’ directions. Allah Glorified is He says:

وَجَدۡنَآ ءَابَآءَنَا عَلَىٰٓ أُمَّةٖ وَإِنَّا عَلَىٰٓ ءَاثَٰرِهِم مُّقۡتَدُونَ ﴿٢٣﴾

Whenever We sent a messenger before you to warn a township, those corrupted by wealth said, in the same way, ‘We saw our fathers following this tradition; we are only following in their footsteps’ [23]
(The Quran, az-Zukhruf: 23)

Allah’s saying: ‘a warner’ refers to every messenger sent to any of the various nations. Never was a messenger sent except that he was faced with such stubbornness and denial. ‘Its people who had lost themselves entirely in the pursuit of pleasures' (az-Zukhruf: 23) are al-mutrafun, or those who lived in ease and perpetually followed their passions. These people were often the leaders of disbelief and were at the forefront of those who denied the messengers.

The phrase: 'Our forefathers agreed on a way (ummah) (regarding what to believe)' (az-Zukhruf: 23) means that they agreed upon a religion or a certain course of action. 'And, verily, it is but in their footsteps that we follow' (az-Zukhruf: 23) by doing the same things that the forefathers did. Allah Glorified is He says:

قَٰلَ أَوَلَوۡ جِئۡتُكُم بِأَهۡدَىٰ مِمَّا وَجَدتُّمۡ عَلَيۡهِ ءَابَآءَكُمۡۖ
قَالُوٓاْ إِنَّا بِمَآ أُرۡسِلۡتُم بِهِۦ كَٰفِرُونَ ٢٤

The messenger said, 'Even though I bring you a truer religion than what you saw your fathers following?' and they replied, 'But we do not believe the message you bring' [24] (The Quran, az-Zukhruf: 24)

This is a clear evidence of their determination to dismiss the message and holding firm to the misguidance upon which they and their fathers were. Then, Allah Glorified is He says:

We punished them: think about how those who rejected the Truth met their end [25] (The Quran, az-Zukhruf: 25)

This was Allah's punishment to anyone who rejected the messengers. He said in another chapter: 'For, long ago has Our word gone forth unto Our servants, the message-bearers, that, verily, they, indeed, would be succoured, and that, verily, Our hosts, indeed, would (in the end) be victorious' (as-Saffat: 171-173). Then, Allah Glorified is He mentions that which refutes these disbelievers' choice to blindly imitate their forefathers. The next verse nullifies their logic and Allah Glorified is He clarifies their lies as He says:

وَإِذْ قَالَ إِبْرَٰهِيمُ لِأَبِيهِ وَقَوْمِهِۦٓ إِنَّنِى بَرَآءٌ مِّمَّا تَعْبُدُونَ ﴿٢٦﴾

Abraham said to his father and his people,
'I renounce what you worship [26]
(The Quran, az-Zukhruf: 26)

Allah Glorified is He chose to expose their forgery and reveal the lies of the disbelievers when they said: 'Nay, we shall follow (only) that which we found our forefathers believing in and doing' (al-Baqara: 170). He gave them a real example from their everyday lives.

Look at Prophet Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon him the 'Father of the Prophets'. Prophet Ibrahim peace be upon him commanded the respect of all the Arabs to the point that they held him sacred and boasted that they descended from him. They used to exclaim, 'We are descended from Ibrahim (Abraham)!' However, Prophet Ibrahim (Abraham) did not follow the way of his uncle in worshiping idols. So, the question to the disbelievers was, 'Why do you follow your forefathers and not follow Prophet Ibrahim (Abraham)'?

Therefore, through the story of Prophet Ibrahim (Abraham), Allah refutes their imitation logically and practically. If one were to seek out the first man, he would only seek the path of Adam peace be upon him and Adam followed certain commandments and applied them so that his children would also apply these rules after him. So, how did the deviation from this methodology occur?

With the passage of time, there must have been people who abandoned the commandments and turned them upside down so that they could follow their own whims. Therefore, some people started worshipping idols because they believed that they were not subject to the heavenly path, nor answerable to its commandments and prohibitions. They found that the worship of earthly idols placed no responsibility upon them, and thus, they ended up worshipping them.

Allah Glorified is He says: 'And when Ibrahim spoke to his father' (az-Zukhruf: 26). This phrase has been the subject to much discussion amongst the scholars.(1) Was this his real father or was it his uncle, Azar?

(1) Alusi said in his exegesis, Ruh Al-Ma`ani (Al-An`am 74), 'Ibn Abu Hatim related on the authority of Ibn `Abbas that Ibrahim's (Abraham's) father was called Azar and his mother was called Muthla. The opinion of Mujahid was that Azar was not his name,=

Whoever researches the use of the phrase abeeh (his father) in the Quran will find that it is mentioned eight times, the first of which is in the chapter of al-An`am, in which Allah Glorified is He says: ‘And, lo, (thus) spoke Ibrahim (Abraham) unto his father, Azar’ (al-An‘am: 74). The last mention was in the chapter of al-Mumtahanah. Apart from that, the phrase was just mentioned once in the Quran in the story of Prophet Yusuf (Joseph) peace be upon him: ‘Lo! Thus, spoke Yusuf (Joseph) unto his father’ (Yusuf: 4).

Thus, the name of Azar only came in the verse in the chapter of a-An`am which is the first mention of the word abeeh. It is as though Allah Glorified is He has stopped the debate in this issue, choosing to show us that Azar was his uncle. This was clearly indicated by His saying: ‘unto his father, Azar’ (al-An‘am: 74). In all the other instances, Allah Glorified is He says: ‘to his father’ only. In this way, his father was the one we are already familiar with from the chapter of al-An`am. It is a common occurrence in our language that we refer to the uncle as a ‘father’. For example, when someone asks, ‘Is your father here?’ we understand that he is referring to our true father. However, if he says, ‘Is your father, Muhammad, here?’ this would mean your uncle because the caller has defined his intention by using the name after the description.

Furthermore, the Quran included the uncle in the word ‘fathers’ (aba`) in Allah’s saying: ‘Nay, but you (yourselves, O children of Israel,) bear witness that when death was approaching Ya`qub (Jacob), he said unto his sons, “Whom will you worship after I am gone?’ They answered, ‘We will worship your Lord (Allah), the Lord of your forefathers Ibrahim (Abraham), Ismail (Ishmael) and Ishaq (Isaac), the One God; and unto Him will we surrender ourselves.”’ (al-Baqara: 133) Here, the word ‘forefathers’ (aba`) was plural, referring to Ibrahim (Abraham), Ismail (Ishmael) and Ishaq (Isaac) peace be upon them. If a group share in a predicate which is plural, then it is applied to each of them individually. Thus, Prophet Ibrahim (Abraham) was a father to them, and Ismail (Ishmael) was a father and Ishaq (Isaac) was a father peace be upon them. Metaphorically, these three were all Ya`qub's (Jacob's) fathers (aba`). However, literally, we know that Ismail (Ishmael) was Ishaq's (Isaac's) brother, so if Ishaq (Isaac) was a father, then Ismail (Ishmael) could not, literally, be a father. Rather, Ismail (Ishmael) was an uncle. Thus, we see that an uncle can be named a father, according to the Quranic language.

= and this was also the opinion of Sa`id ibn Musayyib and others. Those who discussed this point differed about it. Some said that Azar was a nickname for his father, while others said that it was the name of his grandfather, and others claimed that it was the name of his uncle, as both the grandfather and uncle can be metaphorically called ‘a father’. Still others said that it was the name of an idol, and some claimed that it was an adjective in their language that meant either erroneous, stooping or a frail old man.”

For this reason, when Allah Glorified is He spoke about Prophet Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon him he said: 'unto his father, Azar' (al-An'am: 74), to clarify for us that Azar, who debated with Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon him and argued with him about the oneness of Allah Glorified is He was not his true father. Ibrahim (Abraham) Rather, it was his uncle.

Ibrahim (Abraham) We also find proof for this in the Hadith of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him where he said of his own origin: 'I continued to be transferred from the loins of the pure to the wombs of the pure. I am the elected from the elected.'(1) The Prophet's peace and blessings be upon him lineage stretches back to Prophet Ibrahim (Abraham), and thus Ibrahim's (Abraham's) father could not have been a disbeliever who worshipped idols.

As for Prophet Ibrahim's (Abraham's) saying: 'Verily, I am innocent (bara`) from (the idols) which you worship' (az-Zukhruf: 26), the word bara` (innocent) follows a similar connotation to the Arabic word baree` which also indicates innocence and purity. The difference between the two Arabic words is that bara` can be said of one, two or more people, be they men or women. On the other hand, the word baree` has to be transformed into the dual or plural forms and has to be changed to mean the masculine or feminine meaning.

In another place in the Quran, Prophet Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon him described the idols as enemies, as he said: 'Verily, these are my enemies, (and none is my helper) except the Lord of all the Worlds' (ash-Shu'ara': 77).

(1) This Hadith has been mentioned in this form in most of the books of exegesis, but they did not mention its narrator, chain of narration or the person who related it, nor did any of them trace it back to any book. However, Ibn `Asakir has related in the Tahdhib Tarikh Dimashq on the authority of Anas who said, 'Prophet Muhammad recited: "Indeed, there has come unto you (O mankind) an Apostle from among yourselves" (at-Tawba: 128), with a fatha on the letter fa`, and said, "I am the purest of you in lineage, marriage and descent. Since the time of Adam, there has not been one fornicator amongst my forefathers, we are all the offspring of marriages."' (1/278)

Thus, he was telling them that he was disassociating himself with them, as long as they worship partners with Allah Glorified is He or continue to disbelieve in His Oneness.

Allah Glorified is He says, narrating the words of Prophet Ibrahim (Abraham):

إِلَّا ٱلَّذِى فَطَرَنِى فَإِنَّهُۥ سَيَهْدِينِ ﴿٢٧﴾

I worship only Him who created me, and it is He who will guide me [27] (The Quran, az-Zukhruf: 27)

The meaning of the phrase: '…Him (Allah) who has brought me into being (fatarani)' (az-Zukhruf: 27) is that Allah Glorified is He created him and shaped him. Then, his saying: '…and, behold, indeed, (it is who) will guide me!' (az-Zukhruf: 27) shows us that life's path must be outlined by Allah Glorified is He the One Who created and guided all the bodies in existence.

It is not conceivable that, after Allah Glorified is He had created everything, people then choose their own way in life. We previously mentioned that the artisan puts together a manual for the maintenance of his product. It is he who is most knowledgeable about what is good for it. Notice also that Allah Glorified is He says here, narrating the words of Prophet Ibrahim (Abraham): '…and, behold, indeed, (it is He who) will guide me (sa-yahdeen)!' (az-Zukhruf: 27) using the Arabic article sa before the verb yahdeen, to indicate the future.

In another place Allah Glorified is He says, 'and (it is He) who guides me' (ash-Shu'ara': 78), in the present tense. Thus, we can see that Allah's guidance is a matter of the present and the future.

Allah Glorified is He uses brevity in expression here to indicate that the path and guidance can only come from the Creator. He says, '…and, behold, indeed, (it is who) will guide me!' (az-Zukhruf: 27) On the other hand, Allah Glorified is He says in the chapter of ash-Shu`ara`: 'Who has created me and He (huwa) [is the One] who guides me, and He (huwa) is the One who gives me to eat and to drink, and when I fall ill, He (huwa) is the One who restores me to health' (ash-Shu'ara': 78-80). Here Allah Glorified is He used the separated personal pronoun huwa in front of the main verbs or action in these verses, like the actions of guidance, feeding, and treatment, to indicate that these verbs are restricted to Allah Glorified is He alone, as some people might attribute them to powers besides Allah Glorified is He.

On the other hand, the Quranic verbs that no imagination can attribute to anyone but Allah Glorified is He came in an abbreviated form, without using the restrictive pronoun huwa. For instance, in Allah's words: 'and who will cause me to die and then will bring me back to life' (ash-Shu'ara': 81), the word huwa is not used, as no imagination will attribute life or death to anyone but Allah Glorified is He.

Then, Allah Glorified is He says:

وَجَعَلَهَا كَلِمَةًۢ بَاقِيَةً فِى عَقِبِهِۦ لَعَلَّهُمْ يَرْجِعُونَ ﴿٢٨﴾

And he bequeathed these words to his descendants so that they might return [to God] [28]
(The Quran, az-Zukhruf: 28)

Allah Glorified is He then says, 'And he [Ibrahim (Abraham)] uttered this' (az-Zukhruf: 28). This refers to Prophet Ibrahim (Abraham) stating his innocence from their attribution of partners with Allah Glorified is He (polytheism or shirk). It could also be a reference to his statement of belief, as it is related in Allah's saying: 'And this very thing did Ibrahim bequeath unto his children, and (so did) Ya`qub (Jacob), "O my children! Behold, Allah has granted you the purest faith; so do not allow death to overtake you except after you have become Muslims (surrendered yourselves unto Him)"' (al-Baqara: 132).

He wanted this creed to be, 'destined to endure' (az-Zukhruf: 28), and lasting 'among those who would come after him' (az-Zukhruf: 28) of his descendants. Indeed, this statement will still be alive and circulating on people's tongues for a long time because of its purity. Allah Glorified is He has guaranteed the longevity of such pure statements in His saying: 'Are you not aware how Allah sets forth the parable of a good word? (It is) like a good tree, firmly rooted, (reaching out) with its branches towards the sky, yielding its fruit(1) at all times by its Lord's leave. And (thus it is that) Allah propounds parables unto men, so that they might bethink themselves (of the truth)' (Ibrahim: 25-25).

(1) Al-Akl is what may be eaten or fruits that suitable for eating. Al-Qamus Al-Qawim 1/23). Al-Akl can be the fruit of palms or of trees, indeed, anything that can be eaten may be termed akl. Lisan Al-`Arab under Akal

He named it a kalima (word) because it is a part of speech (kalam) and because the word kalima in Arabic can be used to refer to a lot of speech. For instance, we say, 'That person gave a word (kalima) at the party'. This means that he gave a speech composed of many words. Ibn Malik said in his Alfiyya, 'And speech (kalam) can be intended by a word (kalima).' This means that we can use the word kalima to mean a great deal of speech.

I have let these people and their fathers enjoy long lives, and now I have given them the Truth and a messenger to make things clear [29] yet when the Truth came to them, they said, 'This is sorcery. We do not believe in it' [30] (The Quran, az-Zukhruf: 29 - 30)

As we have previously said, with the passage of time, the true path becomes obfuscated and people continue to turn away from it until necessity calls for a new prophet to bring them back to the correct way. Allah Glorified is He has created a natural immunity in the human soul because man is Allah's vicegerent on earth. Man is the one who will populate the world so he must be furnished with the means to act positively and behave uprightly.

It is because of this that we see that men of sound mind will immediately feel remorse and repent when, due to a moment of forgetfulness, he falls into disobedience. Uprightness is a seed in a man's soul. If he is afflicted in his soul and loses this immunity, then the immunity should be provided by the society that knows and understands its communal role in enjoining good and forbidding evil. If the society also loses its resilience, then this is the last straw and nothing remains except for heavenly intervention, when another messenger is sent with a new revelation.

So, this deviation from the path occurred after Prophet Ibrahim (Abraham) and Prophet Ismail's (Ishmael's) times, and therefore, the Message of Prophet Muhammad peace be upon him was revealed. Prophet Ibrahim (Abraham) wanted this creed to remain amongst his descendants: '…so that they might return' (az-Zukhruf: 28) to Allah's way.

However, this did not happen, as Allah Glorified is He says: 'I allowed them (the disbelievers) to enjoy their lives freely' (az-Zukhruf: 29), and: '…their forbearers' (az-Zukhruf: 29) by giving them luxury, safety, power and status. 'Are they, then, not aware that We have set up a sanctuary secure (for those who believe in Us), while, all around them, men are being carried away (by fear and despair)?' (al-'Ankabut: 67) He gave them rank and high status amongst the Arabs due to their proximity to the Ka`ba.

This continued to be the case: 'until the truth came to them' (az-Zukhruf: 29), found in the Quran, as well as: 'a clear (mubeen) apostle' (az-Zukhruf: 29) who is Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him. The word mubeen in this verse means that the truth will be manifest at his hands and in everything about him.

However, they did not believe the Messenger peace and blessings be upon him or have faith in the truth. 'But now that the truth has come to them, they say, "All this is mere spellbinding eloquence – and, behold, we deny that there is any truth in it!"' (az-Zukhruf: 30) They considered the Quran to be a form of magic that puts anyone who heard it under its spell. At other times, they accused Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him of being a sorcerer.

As we have previously said, it is very easy to refute this claim of theirs. If Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him had been a sorcerer and the Quran was a magical spell on the believers, then why did he not just put a spell on them as well and accomplish his matter? Thus, the existence of disbelief is a confirmation of the truthfulness of Prophet Muhammad, and that he is not a sorcerer, but a truthful prophet from Allah Glorified is He.

When this accusation failed, they said, 'It is but a human being that imparts (all) this to him!' (an-Nahl: 103) The disbelievers had claimed that a Persian man taught Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him the Quran.(1)

(1) In the explanation of verse 103 of the chapter of an-Nahl in Zad Al-Masir, Ibn Al-Jawzi mentioned nine different opinions regarding the person who they claimed was teaching Prophet Muhammad. They claimed one of the following: =

So, Allah Glorified is He tells them: ‘The tongue of him to whom they so maliciously point is a foreign (non-Arabic) tongue, whereas this (The Quran) is a clear Arabic speech’ (an-Nahl: 103). Then they claimed that he was insane, to which Allah Glorified is He says to Prophet Muhammad: ‘You (O Muhammad) are not, by your Lord’s grace, a madman! And, verily, to you shall be a reward never-ending, for, behold, you keep indeed an exemplary character’ (al-Qalam: 2-4). A crazy person cannot have exemplary character because it is a person’s character that controls his behaviour. So, after Allah Glorified is He had refuted their claims and accusations in such a way as to reveal their foolishness, they still continued their disbelief.

وَقَالُوا۟ لَوْلَا نُزِّلَ هَٰذَا ٱلْقُرْءَانُ عَلَىٰ رَجُلٍ مِّنَ ٱلْقَرْيَتَيْنِ عَظِيمٍ ﴿٣١﴾

And they said, ‘Why was this Quran not sent down to a distinguished man, from either of the two cities?’ [31]

This is effectively an acknowledgement that the Quran is true, and that they had no more objections to it. Rather, their problem was now with Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him himself. They saw him as an average person, unlike the way they saw their dignitaries. They did not see him as one of the leaders from either of their two great cities, Mecca and

4. That it was a foreign youth, the servant of a lady of Quraysh called Jabir. Jabir was in the habit of visiting Prophet Muhammad to learn from him. This prompted the polytheists to say, ‘This is the one that Muhammad is learning from’.

5. That they meant Salman Al-Farisi. This however is very weak because Salman became Muslim in Medina whereas this verse is Meccan.

6. That it was a blacksmith called ‘Buhannas the Christian’.

7. That they meant a youth owned by `Amir ibn Al-Hadrami. He was a foreign Jew called Basar and his nickname was Abu Fakiha.

Ta`if. For instance, in Ta'if, they considered `Urwa ibn Mas`ud Ath-Thaqafi as a great man, and in Mecca, they regarded Al-Walid ibn Al-Mughira highly, along with others. Allah Glorified is He replied to them:

أَهُمۡ يَقۡسِمُونَ رَحۡمَتَ رَبِّكَۚ نَحۡنُ قَسَمۡنَا بَيۡنَهُم مَّعِيشَتَهُمۡ فِي ٱلۡحَيَوٰةِ
ٱلدُّنۡيَاۚ وَرَفَعۡنَا بَعۡضَهُمۡ فَوۡقَ بَعۡضٖ دَرَجَٰتٖ لِّيَتَّخِذَ بَعۡضُهُم بَعۡضٗا
سُخۡرِيّٗاۗ وَرَحۡمَتُ رَبِّكَ خَيۡرٞ مِّمَّا يَجۡمَعُونَ ﴿٣٢﴾

Are they the ones who share out your Lord's grace? We are the ones who give them their share of livelihood in this world and We have raised some of them above others in rank, so that some may take others into service: your Lord's grace is better than anything they accumulate [32]
(The Quran, az-Zukhruf: 32)

So, given that it is Allah who has allotted them the simplest of things, that being their livelihood in the world, do they then want to be the ones to distribute Allah's Grace and Mercy in accordance with their own passions? Rather, Allah dispenses His Mercy to whomsoever He pleases. The matter is entirely in His hands and no one can interfere with its distribution.

His saying: '...it is We who distribute their means of livelihood among them in the life of this world, and raise some of them by degrees above others...' (az-Zukhruf: 32) reveals the incapacity of man, and that life cannot be set straight except by adopting Allah's path.

Part of the wisdom of Allah's distribution of the means of livelihood is that He made some people rich and others poor, some leaders and others servants. Had it not been for this distribution, the organisation of society would not be possible and there would be nobody willing to do hard work or base jobs.

Previously, we explained that the organisation of society and its progression is not based upon giving charity, but upon need. It is the need of the poor man that drives him to work,

The grace indicated by the verse, '…But is it they who distribute thy Lord's Grace...?' (az-Zukhruf: 32), is prophet hood. They wish they could make it a matter of choice between themselves; that is, they could elect their prophet from their own nobles and leaders. Allah corrects them, however, saying: 'How can you desire this when you are incapable of distributing even the most basic of things'?

Notice that the phrase, '...and raise some of them by degrees above others...' (az-Zukhruf: 32) is undefined. It means that everyone is both raised up and at the same time others are raised over him. In one aspect, one is elevated and in another aspect, someone else is above him. This is how creatures complement one another, mutual benefits are made and the needs of the society are fulfilled. As the poet said,

The people to the people, be they Bedouin or civilised,

Are one to another because of their ignorance, servants.

One is elevated as much as he is proficient at the job they are doing, and is surpassed in those things he knows little of. This is the meaning of His saying: '...that they might avail themselves of one another's help...' (az-Zukhruf: 32).

What is meant by 'Lord's Grace' in His saying, '...and this Lord's grace is better than all [the worldly wealth] that they may amass' (az-Zukhruf: 32) is the divine mission and the system which serves to guide creation in the way of truth. In reality, this grace is better than the transient goods over which people compete in the world because whatsoever man may attain of ease, comfort, and relaxation in this world, nevertheless, he will die and leave it all, and nothing will remain for him.

On the contrary, Allah's system gives you eternal triumph, pleases you in this world, and makes you succeed in the afterlife. Thus, Allah's system is better and remaining, more beneficial and more enduring. This system guarantees validity of one's worldly life, peace, and safety in the hereafter; therefore, it is '...better...' (az-Zukhruf: 32), than the glittery things of this world

Then, the True Lord Glorified is He speaks about the disbelievers who own the world, and who adopt every type of embellishment, luxury, and finery; they interfere even with the provisions and development of the Muslims. He clarifies that this is just ornamentation and a transient external facade, while the final successful outcome must necessarily be in favour of the believers.

فِضَّةٖ وَمَعَارِجَ عَلَيۡهَا يَظۡهَرُونَ ٣٣ وَلِبُيُوتِهِمۡ أَبۡوَٰبٗا وَسُرُرًا عَلَيۡهَا يَتَّكِـُٔونَ ٣٤
وَزُخۡرُفٗاۚ وَإِن كُلُّ ذَٰلِكَ لَمَّا مَتَٰعُ ٱلۡحَيَوٰةِ ٱلدُّنۡيَاۚ وَٱلۡأٓخِرَةُ عِندَ رَبِّكَ لِلۡمُتَّقِينَ ٣٥

If it were not that all mankind might have become a single nation [of disbelievers], We could have given all those who disbelieve in the Lord of Mercy houses with roofs of silver, sweeping staircases to ascend [33] massive gates, couches to sit on [34] and golden ornaments. All of these are mere enjoyments of this life; your Lord reserves the next life for those who take heed of Him [35] (The Quran, az-Zukhruf: 33-35)

The meaning of '...one [evil] community...' (az-Zukhruf: 33) is one community holding one creed of disbelief. So, had it not been for the fact that mankind, seeing the disbelievers luxuriating, would be tested by such a status, Allah would have given the disbeliever luxuries that no one could surpass because they would be but the luxuries of this world, transient and perishing, along with the world itself. Albeit, while the disbelievers get their share in this world, the believers get theirs in the afterlife

The Quran is also informing us here of the developments that have taken place fourteen centuries after its revelation. Al-Ma`arij (stairways) means elevators, ladders and things upon which one may go up. '...And [silver] stairways whereon to ascend' (az-Zukhruf: 33), i.e. mount and rise.

It seems that the True Lord is making light of the disbelievers' luxuries, indicating that there is no need for us to be deceived by them, nor to wish for the transient embellishments of which they partake.

After this, He explains that there comes a time upon these extravagant people when they desire to return to their original state of natural simplicity. Thus, you see them on the weekend, for example, going outdoors to wander freely in the bosom of nature, eating from what the earth puts forth and living on minimal provisions. Why? That is because they have become bored by their excessive urban, luxurious lifestyle and the defects and negative aspects that beset it.

وَمَن يَعْشُ عَن ذِكْرِ ٱلرَّحْمَٰنِ نُقَيِّضْ لَهُۥ شَيْطَٰنًا فَهُوَ لَهُۥ قَرِينٌ ﴿٣٦﴾

We assign an evil one as a comrade for whoever turns away from the revelations of the Lord of Mercy [36] (The Quran, az-Zukhruf: 36)

'...Who chooses to remain blind to the remembrance of the Most Gracious...' means that he outright rejects it or neglects it, turning a blind eye, and because he has been heedless regarding something important wherein negligence is unacceptable, Allah punishes him: '...To him We assign an [enduring] evil impulse...'. That is, We prepare and designate a devil for him, '...to become his other self', i.e. that will stick with him, whispering to and misleading him.

As we mentioned previously, the True Lord Glorified is He is in no need of His creation. He is the Lord of the believers and the Lord of the disbelievers, and assists each according to their desire. Whosoever wants to be guided to faith, Allah helps them with it and increases their faith more and more, and whosoever prefers disbelief, He seals his heart such that faith cannot enter it and neither can the disbelief be taken out. Therefore, Allah describes Himself here as 'The Most Gracious'.

This also explains why the most common time for Satan to attack man is at the times of prayer, in order to corrupt the relationship between a believer and his Lord. We said that Satan attends the mosque, not the wine-shop. The Quran tells us that he said, '...I shall most certainly lie in ambush for them all along Thy straight way' (al-A'raf: 16).

We have previously mentioned the story (1) of the man who hid some money away but subsequently forgot where. He informed his friend of this issue; his friend told him: 'Go to Abu Hanifa (2), for he has an answer to every question. I sought his legal opinion over the divorce of my wife as I had said to her while she was on a ladder, ‘If you come down you are divorced and if you go up then you are divorced.’ To which he (Abu Hanifa) replied, ‘Tell her to jump off the ladder.’

(1) The story of the man who asked Imam Abu Hanifa Allah rest his soul about the money he lost and the latter advised him to pray the night prayer

(2) Abu Hanifa an-Nu`man ibn Thabit is the Imam of the Hanafis, an independent jurist of the highest level (faqih mujtahid muhaqqiq). He is one of the four Imams of Sunni Islam, and it is said he was Persian. He sold silk for a living and sought knowledge as a youth. He was born in 80 A.H. and passed away in Baghdad in the year 150 A.H. at the age of 71.

So, the first man went to Abu Hanifa and said to him: ‘I put some money somewhere, but I ca not remember where. What can I do?’

Abu Hanifa said to him, ‘There is no branch of knowledge that deals with this, but I have a plan for you. When night time comes, go and pray two circuits of prayer for Allah, for the Messenger Muhammad peace and blessing be upon him would hasten to pray(1) if some matter befell him.’

The man did as he had been told and while he was praying, Satan came to him and whispered to him, reminding him of the money’s location. In the morning, the man returned to Abu Hanifa and told him what happened. Abu Hanifa laughed and said: ‘By Allah, I knew he would not be able to leave you to finish the night alone with your Lord. I hope you will finish your prayer out of gratitude to Allah.’ The man said: ‘Allah willing, I shall.’

وَإِنَّهُمْ لَيَصُدُّونَهُمْ عَنِ ٱلسَّبِيلِ وَيَحْسَبُونَ أَنَّهُم مُّهْتَدُونَ ﴿٣٧﴾

Evil ones bar people from the right path, even though they may think they are well guided [37] (The Quran, az-Zukhruf: 37)

These are indeed evil companions since they ‘bar all such from the path [of truth] ...’, i.e. they obstruct them and turn them away from the truth and the straightway, ‘...making them think that they are guided aright!’ (az-Zukhruf: 37) Hence, Allah says in another verse: ‘And a Day on which the evildoer will bite his hands [in despair], exclaiming: “Oh, would that I had followed the path shown to me by the Apostle! Oh, woe is me! Would that I had not taken so-and-so for a friend! Indeed, he led me astray from the remembrance [of Allah] after it had come unto me!” For [thus it is:] Satan is ever a betrayer of man.’ (al-Furqan: 27-29)

(1) Imam Ahmad related it in his Musnad [5/388) and Abu Dawud in his Sunnan [1319) on the authority of Hudhayfa Allah rest his soul. The meaning is thus that if a serious matter befell Prophet Muhammad peace and blessing be upon him or if he became concerned he would pray.

These evil companions are only companions in this world, but in the afterlife, they will be enemies, each one blaming the other: ‘On that Day, [erstwhile] friends will be foes unto one another – [all] save the Allah-conscious.’ (az-Zukhruf: 67)

Similarly, Satan will deny his followers and abandon them in the afterlife: ‘...Yet I had no power at all over you: I but called you – and you responded unto me. Hence, blame not me, but blame yourselves...’ (Ibrahim: 22).

Our Lord has taught us how to protect ourselves from Satan; He said: ‘And if it should happen that a prompting from Satan stirs thee up [to blind anger], seek refuge with Allah...’ (al-A‘raf: 200).

When such a person comes to Us, he will say [to his comrade], ‘If only you had been as far away from me as east is from west. What an evil comrade!’ [38]
(The Quran, az-Zukhruf: 38)

As for Allah’s saying, ‘...the distance of east and west...’ (az-Zukhruf: 38), it means the distance between east and west. This is a rhetorical device used in the Arabic language known as taghlib (giving precedence over). The east and west are opposites; when talking of two opposites, the Arabs often mention the term referring to one opposite of them, giving precedence to it over the other in wording. For example, when describing the two companions, Abu Bakr and `Umar Allah be pleased with them they sometimes say ‘`Al-`Umarayn’ (the two `Umars). Further, when we ponder on east and west from a geographic and astronomical perspective, we find that the east in a certain geographic area is the west in another area, and vice versa. Thus, they are both easts and they are both wests.

وَلَن يَنفَعَكُمُ ٱلۡيَوۡمَ إِذ ظَّلَمۡتُمۡ أَنَّكُمۡ فِي ٱلۡعَذَابِ مُشۡتَرِكُونَ ﴿٣٩﴾

[It will be said to them], ‘You have done wrong. Having partners in punishment will not console you today’ [39]
(The Quran, az-Zukhruf: 39)

Indeed, it will be a widespread affliction affecting all of them. When a single man is afflicted from among many, it is harder for him to bear, as it is more tortuous to be grieving when others are rejoicing. When troubles beset a large number of people, however, it is easier to bear the burden due to the shared experience, even if it is grief that is being shared. This meaning was conveyed by Al-Khansa`(1) in her elegy on her brother Sakhr when she said,

Were it not for so many weeping around me,
Over their brothers, I would surely have killed me,
And though they weep not like my brother but,
Reassuring myself over him, I seek to console me(2)

Another poet said,

It eased the shock of afflictions upon me,
That though broken I am not in their bitterness lonely.

Indeed, if a distress is widespread, its bad impact on an individual is easier to bear than when it afflicts only that certain individual. This is restricted to worldly calamities. As for the crisis of the Hereafter, nothing eases nor lightens it: 'On that Day it will not profit you in the least...' (az-Zukhruf: 39), i.e. the Day of Judgment, '... [to know] that, since you have sinned [together], you are now to share your suffering [as well]'. (az-Zukhruf: 39)

(1) Al-Khansa` is the nickname of the female Companion Tumadir bint `Amr ibn Al-Harith, from the tribe of Bani Salim of Najd. She lived most of her life in the pre-Islamic age of ignorance but reached the days of Islam and entered it and managed to visit the Messenger of Allah peace and blessings be upon him. Most her poetry and the best of it was her elegy about her brothers Sakhr and Mu`awiya. She had four sons who fought at the Battle of Qadisiyya (16 AH). She kept urging them to fight courageously for Allah's Cause till they were all killed, at which she said, 'All praise is for Allah who honoured me by their deaths.' She passed away in 24 A.H. Az-Zirikli, Al-A'lam.

(2) These two verses are from a 15-couplets poem of Al-Khansa` from the metre 'Al-Wafir'. After she produced the first couplet, she imagined that someone said to her, 'You have equalled your brother to the dead brothers of common people. How can you show more concern over them than your brothers? Thus, she guarded against this by saying, 'And though they weep not like my brother but, reassuring myself over him, I seek to console me.'

أَفَأَنتَ تُسْمِعُ ٱلصُّمَّ أَوْ تَهْدِى ٱلْعُمْىَ وَمَن كَانَ فِى ضَلَٰلٍ مُّبِينٍ ﴿٤٠﴾

Can you [Prophet] make the deaf hear? Or guide either the blind or those who are in gross error? [40]

This verse is addressed to the Messenger Muhammad peace and blessing be upon him it means: ‘O Muhammad, conserve your energy and do not fatigue yourself nor take excessive pains trying to guide these people’.

Allah described them as deaf and blind, while they could, in reality, see and hear. Nevertheless, they heard the truth but they did not follow it and they saw the straightway but they did not adopt it. Thus, they are like the deaf man who cannot hear and the blind man who cannot see. Therefore, Allah said of them in another verse, ‘...Yet, verily, it is not their eyes that have become blind – but blind have become the hearts that are in their breasts!’ (al-Hajj: 46) So, these people are stubborn and arrogant and denying the truth. This is the meaning of error in His saying ‘or he who is in clear error?’ (az-Zukhruf: 40) Can there be an error clearer or more obvious than that of the one who sees the truth but does not follow it?

The True Lord Glorified is He would not address Prophet Muhammad peace and blessing be upon him in this way, had he not actually been overexerting himself such that he was on the verge of working himself to death in order to save them. For this reason, his Lord addresses him thus: ‘But would you, perhaps, torment thyself to death with grief over them if they are not willing to believe in this message?’ (al-Kahf: 6) He also says, ‘...you are not bound to do more than deliver the message...’ (ash-Shura: 48). This was because of the deep love that the Messenger Muhammad had for the divine message, the prophetic methodology, and his ummah in its entirety. He wanted them to taste, as he did, the sweetness of faith, thus, applying to himself his saying: ‘…love for your brother what you love for yourself.’

أَوۡ نُرِيَنَّكَ ٱلَّذِى وَعَدۡنَٰهُمۡ فَإِنَّا عَلَيۡهِم مُّقۡتَدِرُونَ ﴿٤٢﴾

Either We shall take you away and punish them – indeed We will [41] or We shall let you witness the punishment We threatened them with; We have full power over them [42] (The Quran, az-Zukhruf: 41- 42)

That is to say, 'Be at peace O Muhammad. For if you die, We shall show you Our revenge upon them and their punishment in the afterlife, and if you continue living you will see some of their punishment visited upon them in this world.

His saying: '...what We have promised them...' (az-Zukhruf: 42) refers to the punishment of this world, before the punishment of the Hereafter. The word muqtadirun (having full power) in His saying: '...verily, We have full power over them!' (az-Zukhruf: 42), is a form of hyperbole of the word qadir (powerful). Hence it means, 'We have complete control over them and are completely capable of inflicting punishment upon them. There shall be no escape for them'.

Hold fast to what has been revealed to you – you truly are on the right path [43] (The Quran, az-Zukhruf: 43)

This verse means to adhere rigorously to the revelation you receive, and to not be deceived by those who turn away from Allah's religion because you are upon truth, while they are upon falsehood. The meaning of '...behold, thou art on a straight way' (az-Zukhruf: 43) is the true and middle course

وَإِنَّهُۥ لَذِكۡرٞ لَّكَ وَلِقَوۡمِكَۖ وَسَوۡفَ تُسۡـَٔلُونَ ﴿٤٤﴾

For it is a reminder for you and your people: you will all be questioned [44] (The Quran, az-Zukhruf: 44)

His saying, '...and, verily, this...' refers to the Holy Quran with which the Prophet Muhammad was sent. This Book contains a complete way of life and is a lasting miracle, enduring until the Day of Judgement. This Quran '...shall indeed become [a source of] eminence for thee and thy people...' (az-Zukhruf: 44), i.e. an honour and a source of greatness and pride for both you and your people, the Arabs because it was revealed in Arabic. How many a people have been distinguished by a great language?(1) It is an honour for the Arabic language and an honour for every Arab that the Quran should be revealed in their language. Human beings by their nature incline to boasting, to the love of prestige and to the spread of their fame. It is not hidden from anyone nowadays that it was the Quran that has given the Arabic language its high position among the languages of the world. Had it not been for the Quran, Arabic would have drifted into oblivion as many languages before it. Moreover, we find that there are many people from other nations that take it upon themselves to learn and perfect their Arabic to help them memorise the Quran and study its meanings and exegesis

دُونِ ٱلرَّحۡمَٰنِ ءَالِهَةٗ يُعۡبَدُونَ ٤٥

Ask the prophets We sent before you: 'Did
We ever appoint any gods to be worshipped besides the Lord of Mercy?' [45]
(The Quran, az-Zukhruf: 45)

Let us now pause to reflect upon the verse: '...ask any of Our apostles whom We sent forth before thy time...' (az-Zukhruf: 45). How can Messenger Muhammad peace and blessing be upon him ask them when they have passed away? Why does his Lord Glorified is He tell him to do this? If the True Lord orders His Messenger to do something, then surely he can but obey.

Indeed, the True Lord Glorified is He gave Prophet Muhammad peace and blessing be upon him this opportunity when he went on the Night Journey and Ascension when he did meet with his brethren, the previous prophets. He led them in prayer in the Holy Mosque of Jerusalem, even though they had already died and he was alive.

(1) Said by the poet Hafizh Ibrahim

It is well established that he spoke to some of them and they spoke back. He spoke to Musa (Moses) peace be upon him and consulted him regarding the fifty prayers, the result of which was that Allah reduced them to five.(1)

If you are saying, ‘How can two opposites exist at the same time? How could, living and dead people talk and consult together’? We say that this is possible because of Allah’s Immeasurable Power. His Power is not limited by the normal laws of life and death. We have stated previously that in order to have peace of mind, we must attribute the action to the ‘true doer’. This is a matter of the Unseen world; we have faith in it and attribute its wondrous aspects to the One who created them.

You remember the story of Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon him when they threw him in the fire. What happened? The empirical law tells us that fire burns, but what if Allah wants it to be cool and safe even as it is alight? When Allah willed it, it became cool and peaceful for Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon him and its law of burning was stopped. Had Allah Glorified is He wished clouds to rain on this fire and put it out, indeed He could have done so. Also, He could have saved Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon him from them in such a way that they never would have caught him. But in order to manifest this miracle, Allah allowed them to catch him and literally throw him in a burning fire, but it did not burn him. This is Allah’s Immeasurable Power.

We also witness this infinite power in the story of Musa’s (Moses’s) peace be upon him staff when he struck the sea with it and the sea parted. The water froze such that each side looked like a huge mountain. This was the same stick with which he struck the rock from which twelve streams sprang. The True Lord shows us glimpses of His Immense Power in these contraventions of the normal empirical rules so that we might carry that understanding further.

(1) Al-Bukhari related it in his Sahih [336] on the authority of Anas ibn Malik that the Messenger of Allah peace and blessing be upon him said: ‘Allah required of my ummah that they pray 50 times, so I returned with this until I met Musa (Moses) peace be upon him who said to me, “What did Allah oblige your ummah to do?” “He requires of them 50 prayers”, I replied. “Go back to your Lord”, he said, “for your ummah will not be able to bear it” ... and so the Hadith continues until Allah said: “...They are five and yet they are fifty. There will be no substitution of My speech.”’ This is also in Sahih Muslim [234].

Some scholars have considered this unlikely, i.e. the meeting of the dead and the living; they interpret the events in such a way that agrees with their desires, saying that it means, ‘ask the followers of the messengers that preceded you’ because they took their religion from them. Those who think this way want to avoid the issue of the dead meeting the living and from the affirmation of a miracle that breaks the norms. Nevertheless, there is nothing strange about this nor is it too amazing because who is doing it? It is Allah.

Or, the question: ‘...ask any of Our apostles whom We sent forth before thy time...’ (az-Zukhruf: 45) is not intended to express the direct literal meaning of a question that requires an answer, but rather, it is intended as a sermon and a call to consideration, such as the preacher says to the audience at the Friday Prayer for instance: ‘Ask the earth who made the rivers flow over it, who made the plants grow on it; ask the budding gardens; ask the flowing water?’ etc. The point here is not that we ask the earth, rather, we ask ourselves, we think and reflect. So, it is the case with His saying: ‘...ask any of Our apostles whom We sent forth before thy time...’ (az-Zukhruf: 45).

Nevertheless, the question still arises, did Messenger Muhammad peace and blessing be upon him ask the other messengers who preceded him the question (1): ‘...whether We have ever allowed that deities other than the Most Gracious be worshipped’ (az-Zukhruf: 45) or not? The reality is that he did not ask. But why did he not? Because he had certainty that obviated any need for him to ask this question. Messenger Muhammad had no need of anyone to confirm for him that there are no other gods to be worshipped beside Allah.

(1) Al-Qurtubi stated in his Tafsir [9/6142]: ‘The commentators have differed regarding the issue of the Prophet peace and blessing be upon him asking the previous prophets into two camps: The first is that he asked them and they replied, ‘We were sent proclaiming Divine unity.’ This was the position of Al-Waqidi. The second is that he did not ask them because of his certainty in Allah Glorified is He. Indeed, Ibn `Abbas and Ibn Zayd stated that the Messenger of Allah peace and blessing be upon him having finished praying with the prophets in the Holy Mosque of Jerusalem on the night of the Night Journey and Ascension was told by Jibril (Gabriel) peace be upon him: ‘Ask, O Muhammad, those we sent before you of the messengers if we set up any gods other than Allah to be worshipped.’ To which the Messenger of Allah replied: ‘I am content. I am not going to ask.’ This was mentioned by Ibn Al-Jawzi in Zad Al-Masir who said, ‘it was related by `Ata from Ibn `Abbas.’ This opinion was held by Sa`id ibn Jubayr, Az-Zuhri and Ibn Zayd.

In this vein, it is related that `Ali Allah be pleased with him said: ‘Were the veil to be lifted from my eyes, I would not increase in certainty.’ That is, ‘I have strong and unshakeable faith in the matters of the Unseen such that it is as though I see them. Were they to actually be revealed to me, my certainty would not increase one iota, because Allah’s informing His Messenger of something is more credible to us than our seeing it.’

Read Allah’s saying: ‘Did you not see how thy Sustainer dealt with the Army of the Elephant?’ (al-Fil: 1) It is well-known that the Messenger Muhammad was born in the Year of the Elephant, so he did not see it. Nevertheless, Allah says, ‘Did you not see...’ (al-Fil: 1) meaning ‘Did you not know’? How did you know it? Either by means of your own senses or by revelation from the Creator of your senses, hence, revelation from the True Lord is more credible and more certain than one’s own eyesight.

As for the question, inherent in: ‘...whether We have ever allowed that deities other than The Most Gracious be worshipped’ (az-Zukhruf: 45), it serves the purpose of negation and rebuttal. Worshipping others beside Allah is not something that the messengers did or taught others. So, it must have originated at the hands of men. They invented this to please themselves in that they might have something to worship but would agree with their desires, and that would not constrict their wishes or passions according to rules of ‘do this and do not do that’. This is how they came to worship idols, the sun, moon, planets, and other things. All these things were worshipped according to them, but Allah has not legislated this in any of the Divine Laws nor has He given any permission for such.

وَمَلَإِي۟هِۦ فَقَالَ إِنِّى رَسُولُ رَبِّ ٱلْعَٰلَمِينَ ﴿٤٦﴾

We sent Moses to Pharaoh and his courtiers and he said,
‘I am truly a messenger from the Lord of the Worlds’ [46]
(The Quran, az-Zukhruf: 46)

We have said previously that the ‘messages’ (ayat) mentioned here are the miracles that prove the truthfulness of the messenger in his transmission from

Allah. Musa (Moses) peace be upon him was, amongst all the messengers, bestowed with the most miracles, and from this we can infer that his people were the most stubborn and heedless amongst Allah's creation. Allah Glorified is He says, 'And, indeed, We gave unto Musa (Moses) nine clear messages' (al-Isra': 101).

Why did the Quran mention part of the story of Musa (Moses) at this point? The scholars say it is because the disbelievers of Mecca had consolidated their position in opposition to the invitation to Islam. They rejected that this invitation should come to them at the hands of Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him specifically. 'And they say, too, "Why was not this Quran bestowed from on high on some great man of the two cities?"' (az-Zukhruf: 31) This meant the city of Mecca, in which there was Al-Walid ibn Al-Mughira, and the city of Ta'if, in which there was `Urwa ibn Mas`ud Ath-Thaqafi, along with other leaders of the people and the rich and respected. Thus, they were not objecting to the Quran; rather, they were objecting to the person to whom the Quran was revealed. For this reason, the True Lord Glorified is He wanted to give an example from the life of the prophets: this is Musa (Moses) peace be upon him he had no authority, and was not rich or high-ranking, but Allah sent him to people whose disbelief was worse than that of the people of Mecca and its leaders; he was sent to Pharaoh who not only rejected the invitation to Allah but actually said, 'I am a god!'

Thus, there is no astonishment that Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him was sent by Allah, even though he was from the public and the poor, to the rich leaders. Can it be said that Al-Walid and `Urwa and the others leaders of disbelief were worse than Pharaoh? Prophet hood is, thus, not something that requires the messenger to be wealthy, famous or powerful. This is Allah's Mercy; He apportions it as He pleases and He elects of His slaves whom He will.

Considering the history of the prophet hood of both Muhammad and Musa (Moses) peace be upon them one finds that Musa (Moses) spent less time living in his community than Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him did. Musa (Moses) was brought up in Pharaoh's household until he was a young man and it was then that Musa (Moses) accidentally killed somebody. Then, a man came to him from the far side of the town to warn him saying: 'and [then and there] a man came running from the farthermost end of the city, and said:

"O Musa (Moses)! Behold, the great ones [of the kingdom] are deliberating upon thy case with a view to kill you! So leave, verily, I am of those who wish you well!" So he went forth from thence, looking fearfully about him, and prayed: "O my Sustainer! Save me from all evildoing folk!"' (al-Qasas: 20-21)

After that, Musa (Moses) went to Midyan where he found: 'Now when he arrived at the wells of Midyan(1), he found there a large group of men who were watering [their herds and flocks]; and at some distance from them he came upon two women who were keeping back their flock. He asked [them]: "What is the matter with you?" They answered: "We cannot water [our animals] until the herdsmen drive [theirs] home – for [we are weak and] our father is a very old man." So he watered [their flock] for them; and then he withdrew into the shade and prayed: "O my Sustainer! Verily, in dire need am I of any good which you may bestow upon me!"' (al-Qasas: 23-24).

The first thing we can draw from these events is the proper etiquette for interacting with Muslim women: when and how they should leave their homes. The reason these two ladies left their house was that their father was a very old man and there was nobody to fulfil their needs for them.

Thus, a woman should not leave her house unless it is a necessity. If she does go out, she covers herself and goes modestly, not mixing with men. After that, it is the responsibility of the believing community to safeguard a woman's rights and help her satisfy her needs because it is a society based on mercy and kinship among all the Muslims.

I remember (2) the first time we travelled to Mecca in 1950; we lived in the house of a wealthy man who would volunteer to take us to work in his private car. One time, while we were driving, we saw in front of one of the houses a wooden board used for the preparation of bread but the door of the house was closed. He stopped, got out of the car, took the board, and drove off. When I asked him about this, he said: 'By Allah, it is a custom of ours that when we see a closed door and there is something in front of it like that, we know that the man of the house is out and the family needs something, so we do it for them'. The result of this was that the man took the board, filled it with bread and some other stuff, and returned it to its owners.

(1) Midyan was a city, also known as Bayala that was in the north-west of the Arabian Peninsula. Its people were traders and Allah sent the Prophet Shu`aib (Jethro) peace be upon him to them to incite them to trade honestly.

(2) The story of the man from Mecca in Saudi Arabia with the dough of the woman

This is the meaning that we have learnt from this story of Musa (Moses): 'so he watered [their flock] for them...' (al-Qasas: 24).

Then, we go back to the story: '...and then he withdrew into the shade and prayed: "O my Lord! Verily, in dire need am I of any good which you may bestow upon me!"' (al-Qasas: 24) That is to say, Musa (Moses) was a poor man; he had no worldly possessions save his physical power. At that time, he was sitting in the shade of a tree with no home. Is there greater poverty or weakness than this? This shows us that he was a penniless man; he possessed nothing of this world. If we compare him to Muhammad peace and blessing be upon him we find that Muhammad peace and blessing be upon him lived longer amongst his people. He grew up among them since birth, he tended the sheep for them for a wage, and, when he grew older, he occupied himself with trading. He was the 'manager', so to speak, to Khadija Allah be pleased with her and he earned money.

So, despite this, Allah sent Musa (Moses), even though he was weaker than Muhammad, to Pharaoh who was stronger and more powerful than Al-Walid, `Urwa and the others. Now, we can see why Musa (Moses) has been mentioned here: 'Thus, indeed, have We sent Musa (Moses) with Our messages unto Pharaoh and his great ones...' (az-Zukhruf: 46).

There was vulnerability in Musa's (Moses's) message to Pharaoh; this was that he had been raised in Pharaoh's house. Hence, the True Lord Glorified is He taught him how to approach Pharaoh when inviting him to Islam because Pharaoh was reminding Musa (Moses) of this favour. '...Did we not bring thee up among us when you were a child? And didst thou not spend among us years of thy [later] life?' (ash-Shu'ara': 18) So, Allah told Musa (Moses) to speak gently to Pharaoh: 'But speak unto him in a mild manner, so that he might bethink himself or [at least] be filled with apprehension.' (Ta Ha: 44)

As for his saying, '...with Our messages...' (az-Zukhruf: 46), it refers to the open miracles that accompanied Musa's (Moses's) message to assist him and establish the truthfulness of his conveyance from Allah. We have mentioned previously that one of the conditions of a miracle is that it be a challenging such that none could have accomplished it and that it relates to matters that the people excel in, so that the challenge might be meaningful. For how could I challenge you regarding something you do not know or in which you have little competence.

Pharaoh's people were adept in magic; therefore, one of the miracles that Allah gave Musa (Moses) was that of his staff. Allah Glorified is He trained him to use it and taught him its secrets before he met Pharaoh. Read the verses: 'Now, what is this in thy right hand, O Musa (Moses)? He answered: "It is my staff; I lean on it; and with it I beat down leaves for my sheep; and [many] other uses have I for it." Allah said, "Throw it down, O Musa (Moses)!" So he threw it – and lo! it was a snake, moving rapidly.' (Ta Ha: 17-20) This situation was a training session for Musa (Moses) on the use of this miracle before Pharaoh. Thus, Musa (Moses) peace be upon him knew that, in addition to his own purposes of using his staff such as supporting himself and beating down leaves, Allah Glorified is He had designated it for other uses beside these normal ones.

We have heard some orientalists saying, 'The Quran repeats the story of Musa's (Moses's) staff in several places'. The reality, however, is that there is no repetition; rather, these are different situations regarding Musa's (Moses's) staff. The first time, as we said, was training for Musa (Moses) so that he would not be overawed by the transformation of the staff when he threw it before Pharaoh.

The second time was in front of Pharaoh alone, and the third time was when the sorcerers had been gathered by Pharaoh. Hence, there is no repetition: they are different instances of one action. The Quran, in revealing this story to us, has also shown us the difference between miracles and magic. Magic employs illusion and deception while a miracle is an actual occurrence. That is why Allah said of the staff: '...and lo! it was a snake, moving rapidly', i.e. really. When He spoke of the sorcerer's ropes however He said: '...[they] seemed to him to be moving rapidly' (Ta Ha: 66). Further proof of this is that when the sorcerers and those who practised these arts or had experience of them saw the staff turn instantaneously into a snake, they fell into prostration, believing in Musa (Moses) and that which he brought because they knew best about these affairs. '...(They] exclaimed: "We have come to believe in The Lord of Musa (Moses) and Harun (Aaron)!"' (Ta Ha: 70)

In another verse, the True Lord Glorified is He says: '...they cast a spell upon the people's eyes, and struck them with awe...' (al-A'raf: 116). The meaning of 'they cast a spell upon the people's eyes' is that this magic went no further than their eyes; it was merely an optical illusion.

Our daily life bears witness to this. I remember (1) when I was the head of a mission from the University of Al-Azhar to Algeria. There, I met the Saudi Ambassador Riyadh Al-Khatib, the son of the great poet Fu`ad Al-Khatib (2), and we became good friends. It came to pass that he was transferred from Algeria to Pakistan and sometime after this, I also travelled to Pakistan and visited him there.

One day, we were talking about magic and he said, 'I have something strange to show you. There is an Indian magician who does such-and-such and such-and-such.' To this I replied, 'By Allah, this is a good opportunity to see what this man does.' The next morning, we went to the village and they brought the Indian magician who sat down and began to put on his show. He brought some cotton and twisted it so that it looked like a piece of rope. He had with him a young boy whom he instructed to climb the rope which he made until all the people seated around could see the boy had actually climbed this rope.

On the following day, having checked the Quran verses about magic in the Book of Allah, I took a camera with me in order to photograph this spectacle. This I did and, when then the following day I had the photographs developed, I found them white, nothing to be seen. My friend asked me,

(1) The story of Ash-Sheikh Ash-Sha`rawi and Riyad Al-Khatib with the Indian sorcerer in Pakistan.

(2) Fu`ad ibn Hasan ibn Yusuf Al-Khatib, a poet with a pure elegant style and a master of rhetoric, a member of Al-Majma` Al `Ilmi Al `Arabi in Damascus. He was born in 1879 C.E. near Beirut. He finished his studies at the American University in the year 1904 C.E. and was known as 'the poet of the revolution of the Hijaz'. He passed away in his hometown of Shuheem in the year 1957 C.E. [his biography is given in detail in Az-Zirikli, Al-A`lam, 5/160].

‘How then do you interpret this illusion that we saw?’ I said, ‘By Allah, we know from the Quran that the jinn can take any form, and perhaps this magician is supported by the jinn. Allah says: ‘Yet [it has always happened] that certain kinds of humans would seek refuge with certain kinds of [such] jinn: but these only increased their confusion.’ (al-Jinn: 6). Thus, it is logically possible that this magician could have entered a pact with some jinni who assists him in this matter, taking whatever form he desires.

The Quran is explicit about the fact that the signs and miracles that Musa (Moses) was sent with were nine: ‘And, indeed, We gave unto Musa (Moses) nine clear signs…’ (al-Isra’: 101). In another verse, Allah says, ‘Although each sign that We showed them was weightier than the preceding one…’ (az-Zukhruf: 48). This means that they must have been many clear and obvious signs.

Regarding His saying: ‘...unto Pharaoh and his great ones...’ (az-Zukhruf: 46), ‘great ones’ (al-mala`) refers to the people but especially the notables and dignitaries amongst them. It comes from the saying, ‘fulan mala`a al-`ayn’ (so-and-so is pleasing). In another verse, Allah says, ‘and [thus, too, did We deal with] Qarun and Pharaoh, and Haman: to them had come Musa (Moses) with all evidence of the truth, but they behaved arrogantly on earth [and rejected him]; and withal, they could not escape [Us].’ (al-’Ankabut: 39)

As to Allah’s saying: ‘...and he said: “Behold, I am an apostle of the Lord of all the Worlds!”’ (az-Zukhruf: 46), it is an abridgement of his message and a summary thereof.

But when he presented Our signs to them, they laughed [47] (The Quran, az-Zukhruf: 47)

The previous verse in the chapter of al-`Ankabut clarified their reaction which is arrogance. Arrogance, here, means that they knew Musa (Moses) was truthful and a man of miracles, yet they were too proud to believe in him. Here, this verse clarifies another aspect of their arrogance: ‘...lo! they derided them’ (az-Zukhruf: 47). Either this laughter was out of astonishment at the miracle they saw, being a breaking of the norms and different from all they had seen from the sorcerers beforehand, or it was out of derision and mockery.

وَمَا نُرِيهِم مِّنْ ءَايَةٍ إِلَّا هِىَ أَكْبَرُ مِنْ أُخْتِهَا ۖ
وَأَخَذْنَٰهُم بِٱلْعَذَابِ لَعَلَّهُمْ يَرْجِعُونَ ﴿٤٨﴾

Even though each sign We showed them was greater than the previous one. We inflicted torment on them so that they might return to the right path [48]
(The Quran, az-Zukhruf: 48)

The meaning of '... each sign...' (az-Zukhruf: 48) here is a miracle. '...was weightier than the preceding one...' (az-Zukhruf: 48), i.e. each miracle was clearer and grander than its forerunner. This also means that the miraculous nature of these signs was clear in each instance because they were so numerous. Each sign or miracle was great in one way or another because the purpose of the signs was their miraculous incapacitating nature, doing something beyond the realms of human power or possibility; so long as a sign performed this duty, it must be considered great.

As for His saying: '...We took them to task over the Punishment through suffering...' (az-Zukhruf: 48), it means, 'We punished them over their rejection of the punishment of the next world. The True Lord Glorified is He has explained this punishment in another chapter saying: 'And most certainly did We overwhelm Pharaoh's people with drought and scarcity of fruits, so that they might take it to heart' (al-A'raf: 130).

Consider the endings of these two verses: the first: '...so that they might return [to Us]' (az-Zukhruf: 48), and the other: '...so that they might take it to heart.' (al-A'raf: 130) So, The True Lord Glorified is He does not punish His creation because He needs to; He only punishes them so that they may turn back to Him. Hence, we can see that even His punishment here is a mercy for them.

He was harsh so they would take heed, and whoever is judicious,
Let him sometimes be harsh on those he would show mercy.(1)

(1) This couplet is from a poem by Abu Tammam in the Kamil metre. It has 60 couplets of which this is the 39th. Abu Tammam was Habib ibn Aws At-Ta`I, and he was born in Syria in188 AH. His poetry has a powerful and pure style. He wrote several books including, Fuhul Ash-Shu`ara`, Diwan Al-Hamasa and Naqa`id Jarir Wa Al-Akhtal. He passed away in the year 231 A.H. Al-Mawsu`a Ash-Shi`riyya

His saying: '...so that they might return [to Us]' (az-Zukhruf: 48), i.e. return to us by getting rid of arrogance, false argumentation and the stubbornness. But did they turn back? Not at all, they persisted in their denial and disbelief, even after Allah afflicted them, for many years, by drought and famine, resulting in the loss of the fruits of their labour and suffering from a constrained livelihood. Then, after all of that: 'Thereupon We let loose upon them floods, and [plagues of] locusts, and lice(1), and frogs, and [water turning into] blood – distinct signs [all]: but they gloried in their arrogance, for they were people lost in sin' (al-A'raf: 133). These were clear and obvious signs. As a result, they found themselves most terribly constrained, emaciated, and extremely busy affording their daily provision. Therefore, they went to Musa (Moses) and said:

وَقَالُواْ يَـٰٓأَيُّهَ ٱلسَّاحِرُ ٱدۡعُ لَنَا رَبَّكَ بِمَا عَهِدَ عِندَكَ إِنَّنَا لَمُهۡتَدُونَ ﴿٤٩﴾

They said, 'Sorcerer, call on your Lord for us, by virtue of His pledge to you: we shall certainly accept guidance' [49] (The Quran, az-Zukhruf: 49)

The word sorcerer here does not only mean that they were admitting his superiority in the field of magic, but it also means a man who is proficient in all things; someone who is their superior in magic, knowledge and understanding of the affairs of this world; it means he was unique.

This reminds us of an occurrence in the life of Messenger Muhammad peace and blessing be upon him Az-Zabraqan ibn Badr(2) and `Amr ibn

(1) Ibn Jawzi said in Zad Al-Masir [Al-A`raf 133] that there are seven positions regarding al-qumal (lice):

1. That they were woodworms.
2. That they were nymphs, i.e. baby locusts. This was the position of Mujahid, `Ata` and Ibn `Abbas.
3. That they were small black insects.
4. That they were dung-beetles.
5. That they were lice.
6. That they were fleas.
7. That they were hamnan, a type of tick. This was the position of Abu `Ubayda.

(2) Az-Zabraqan ibn Badr At-Tamimi As-Sa`di was a companion and a leader among his people. Messenger Muhammad peace and blessing be upon him put him in charge of=

Al-Ahtam(1), two of the leaders of the Arabs, came to him. The Prophet Muhammad said to `Amr ibn Al-Ahtam: ‘What do you say of Az-Zabraqan ibn Badr?’ `Amr ibn Al-Ahtam replied: ‘He is obeyed by his people, powerful, smart and prudent(2), and is capable of protecting his people.’ Az-Zabraqan added: ‘O Messenger of Allah, By Allah, he certainly knows more of me than he has given in this description, but he is envious of me.’ To this ‘Amr replied: ‘By Allah, O Messenger of Allah, he is a man of little virtue(3), weak-minded(4), his imagination is twisted and his forefathers were idiots.’

At this, the Messenger Muhammad said to `Amr ibn al-Ahtam, ‘What caused you to say the things you have just said?’ ‘O Messenger of Allah’, he said, ‘I was cheerful so I said the best things I knew about him. Then I became angry, so I said the worst things I knew about him.’ So, Messenger Muhammad peace and blessing be upon him said, ‘Indeed some speech can be bewitching’ (Inna min al-bayan lasihra)(5).’

The relation here is that the word sihr (magic or bewitching) can carry the meaning of superiority generally in any aspect of life. Therefore, when they saw Musa’s actions, they humbled themselves before him and conceded that he was superior to them and, even though they did not believe in him, they conceded his pre-eminence. Indeed, because of the truthfulness of his call, they came to him and asked him to pray for them and to alleviate the afflictions they suffered in their livelihood.

= collecting the charity his people gave. He lost his sight at the end of his life and he passed away during the reign of Mu`awiya in the year 45 A.H. He was an eloquent poet but was somewhat coarse as the Bedouin Arabs tended to be. Az-Zirikli, Al-A`lam 3/41

(1) `Amr ibn Al-Ahtam’s full name was `Amr ibn Sinan At-Tamimi Al-Manqari Abu Rib`i. He was one of leaders, poets, and orators in the pre-Islamic era and in Islam. He was from Najd and came to visit the Prophet peace and blessing be upon him whereupon he entered Islam. His poetry is good. He passed away in the year 57 A.H. Az-Zirkili, Al-A`lam 5/78

(2) Possessing ability, perceptiveness, patience, and sound judgement

(3) i.e., it is little.

(4) i.e., Impatient and slow when under pressure

(5) It was related by Al-Hakim in Al-Mustadrak [6645, 6646] on the authority of Ibn `Abbas and Abu Bakra Al-Ansari, according to whom Messenger Muhammad peace and blessing be upon him said, ‘Indeed, some oratory is bewitching, and some poetry contains wisdom.’ It was also related by At-Tabarani in Al-Mu`jam Al-Kabir [1820] (part of a lost manuscript) and also in Al-Mu`jam As-Saghir [7886]

They said: '...O thou sorcerer! Pray for us to thy Sustainer...' (az-Zukhruf: 49). We can see, therefore, that they recognised he had a connection to his Lord. Nevertheless, they did not consider his Lord to be their Lord, the proof being their saying, '... Pray for us to thy Sustainer...' (az-Zukhruf: 49). They did not for example say, 'our Sustainer' '...On the strength of the covenant [of prophet hood] which He has made with thee...' (az-Zukhruf: 49) because your Lord consents to your wishes and does what you ask of Him, and He promised that He would remove the punishment from those who believe in you '...For, verily, we shall now follow the right way!' (az-Zukhruf: 49); i.e. if you relieve us of the punishment that afflicts us, we will be guided believe in you.

But as soon as We relieved their torment they broke their word [50] (The Quran, az-Zukhruf: 50)

So, their saying: '...for, verily, we shall now follow the right way!' (az-Zukhruf: 49), was just empty words, spoken in hypocrisy; they had no portion of the truthful reality. This is obvious because although, the True Lord Glorified is He relieved them of the punishment, they just went back to their old ways. The meaning of '...they would break their word' (az-Zukhruf: 50) is that they would return to what they were previously doing and break the oath they drew upon themselves that they would accept guidance.

وَهَٰذِهِ ٱلْأَنْهَٰرُ تَجْرِى مِن تَحْتِىٓ ۖ أَفَلَا تُبْصِرُونَ ﴿٥١﴾

Pharaoh proclaimed to his people, 'My people, is the Kingdom of Egypt not mine? And these rivers that flow at my feet, are they not mine? Do you not see? [51] (The Quran, az-Zukhruf: 51)

Now Pharaoh's status amongst his people had become unstable and he sensed danger. When he saw the people looking to Musa (Moses) peace be upon him he felt that Musa (Moses) was pulling the rug from underneath his feet especially after the event when the sorcerers believed in the Lord of Harun (Aaron) and Musa (Moses) without waiting for Pharaoh's permission. After the drought had befallen them and they turned in despair to Musa (Moses) and asked him to remove their affliction. For these reasons, we now see Pharaoh trying to re-establish himself and improve his image amongst his people.

'And Pharaoh issued a call to his people...' (az-Zukhruf: 51); what did his crier call out? He cried out '... "O my people! Does the dominion over Egypt not belong to me since all these running waters(1) flow at my feet? Can you not, then, see?"' (az-Zukhruf: 51). That is, do not forget my status, my dominion and power over you, and do not concern yourselves with the affair of Musa (Moses) because I am still the king of Egypt, and the rivers run beneath me, i.e., I am the one who provides your blessings.

'...Can you not, then, see? (az-Zukhruf: 51) We notice that his announcement contains nothing of his claim to divinity; he did not say, 'I am your Lord Most High' because he has abandoned such slogans now that there is no place for them after what happened with Musa (Moses).

Look now to the phrasing of his announcement: '...Does the dominion over Egypt not belong to me...?' (az-Zukhruf: 51) It is a rhetorical question confirming his status as King of Egypt, i.e. 'Tell me, am I not still your king'? He did not use, for instance, a plain statement such as, 'I am the king of Egypt', and we can see from this that Pharaoh is speaking from a position of weakness. This is clear because he was previously saying '...I am your Lord Most-High!' (an-Nazi'at: 24), and now he is saying, '...Does the dominion over Egypt not belong to me...?' (az-Zukhruf: 51)

The word mulk (dominion) consists of the letters mim, lam and kaf. We see that sometimes this mim has a kasra, sometimes a fatha and others a

(1) There have been many opinions expressed about the meaning of al-anhar (running waters), amongst them:

- That they were four branches of the Nile: Nahr Al-Malik, Nahr Tulun, Nahr Damietta and Nahr Tanis.
- That they were generals, leaders, and tyrants who marched under his banner. This was the opinion of Ad-Dahhak.
- That they were his treasures and he spoke of them as such because of their visibility and abundance [Tafsir Al-Qurtubi 9/6145)] Sheikh Ash-Sha'rawi Allah rest his soul has more to say about this verse that will soon follow.

damma. When it has a kasra it says milk meaning anything one possesses. Even the clothes one wears are termed milk. The word mulk, with a damma refers to authority and control over those who have possessions (milk). Malk with a fatha, however, means choice or will, as in the verse: '...We did not break our promise to thee of our own free will...' (Ta Ha: 87), that is, by our choice.

When we form an active participle (ism al-fa`il), we can say maalik or malik. Malik (owner) can be said of anyone, even if he only possesses his own clothes. As for malik (king), however, it is only said of one who rules and governs other owners.

When we read, for example, in the chapter of al-Fatiha: 'Lord of the Day of Judgment!' [maliki yawm ad-din] (al-Fatiha: 4), (it is translated into 'Lord' here, not 'owner') we do not say malik. It is true that this is one of the variant readings of the Quran(1), 'King of the Day of Judgement' (maliki yawmi`-d-din), but nevertheless, malik is the most common reading. What then is the wisdom in preferring a word of lesser meaning to a stronger one?

The scholars say that the True Lord Glorified is He chose the word maalik to establish that it is He Who owns the Day of Judgement, while others may possess the earth and what lies thereon in this life. So, His saying: 'Lord of the Day of Judgment!' (maliki yawmi'-d-din) (al-Fatiha: 4) means that none other than He holds ownership of this day. It is Allah's alone. For this reason, He said: '...With whom will sovereignty rest on that Day? With Allah, The One Who holds absolute sway over all that exists!' (Ghafir: 16); it is His alone, not other's. Hence, the word maalik is required here; it is the word that conveys the desired meaning. It is more indicative of the meaning, even though ownership is less than kingship.

(1) The word malik can be recited in the chapter of al-Fatiha in several ways:
- Malik – related by `Asim, Al-Kasa`i, Khalaf and Ya`qub, malik with an alif.
- Malika – related by Ibn Samiqa` and Ibn Abu `Abla, as above except that the kaf is mansub.
- Malki – related by Abu Hurayra and `Asim Aj-Jahdari, with a sukun on the lam, no alif and a kasra on the kaf.
- Malika – related by Abu `Uthman An-Nahdi and Ash-Sha`bi, with a kasra on the lam, no alif and the kaf mansub.
- Maliku – related by Sa`d ibn Abu Waqqaș, `Aisha and Muwarraq Al-`Ajali, as above except that the kaf is marfu`.
- Malik – related by Abu Raja` Al-`Ataridi. [Ibn Al-Jawzi, Zad Al-Masir – the chapter of al-Fatiha]

As we mentioned previously, for example, concerning the words kabir (big) and akbar (bigger/biggest), akbar is a comparative adjective formed from kabir and its meaning is stronger. In the call to prayer, we say, 'Allahu akbar', but akbar is not one of Allah's names, rather a name of His is Al-Kabir (the Great). Why then do we use akbar instead of Al-Kabir? The scholars say that there is wisdom behind why we say Allahu Akbar and that it is that the lesser word here finds its place. This is because when you are calling people to prayer you are asking them to leave their business. Legitimate work is the basis of people's lives. People's jobs and necessities are not insignificant things of no bearing in Allah's religion. Rather, they are matters which are ordained by the Sacred Law.

Thus, work is important and essential, but when the time for prayer comes, be sure that Allah is Greater, i.e. greater than working and striving to earn livings.

This issue has been clarified for us by the True Lord Glorified is He in the chapter of al-Jumu`a: 'O you who have attained to faith! When the call to prayer is sounded on the day of congregation, hasten to the remembrance of Allah, and leave all worldly commerce...' (al-Jumu'a: 9). Then: 'And when the prayer is ended, disperse freely on earth and seek to obtain [something] of Allah's bounty...' (al-Jumu'a: 10).

So, Allah removes you from your work to pray and then He returns you back again because through work the earth is populated and the needs of creation are addressed. Then, we can see that the desired meaning is best articulated by the word akbar (Greater).

'And Pharaoh issued a call to his people...' (az-Zukhruf: 51); it was not Pharaoh himself who called out, but rather, he ordered that this announcement should be made amongst the people, and hence, because the announcement was made on his orders, it was attributed to him.

His saying: '...Does the dominion over Egypt not belong to me...' (az-Zukhruf: 51) refers to the whole country, not just the capital city as we say today when using the word Misr to refer to Cairo. Misr (Ancient Egypt) that Pharaoh ruled stretched from Alexandria to Aswan.

Misr is a proper name for this place; the word is comprised of three letters, the first of which bears a kasra and the middle one bears a sukun. A sukun makes the pronunciation of a word light and so this word is easy to utter. Furthermore, it has the simplest form that a noun can take in the language because the noun in Arabic can have no less than three letters, while the most is five letters if it is stripped of any ancillary letters.

Reflecting in this regard, we can see that Mecca, Allah's Sacred City and the place of his Sacred House, is mentioned in the Gracious Book twice: 'And He it is who, in the valley of Mecca, stayed their hands from you, and your hands from them...' (al-Fath: 24), and in His saying: 'Behold, the first house ever set up for mankind was indeed the one at Bakka: rich in blessing, and a [source of] guidance unto all the worlds' (Al-'Imran: 96), it comes by the name of Bakka.

As for Misr (Egypt), it is mentioned by the True Lord Glorified is He in His Book five times: '...Does the dominion over Egypt not belong to me...' (az-Zukhruf: 51), in: 'And the man from Egypt who bought him said...' (Yusuf: 21), in: '...Enter Egypt! If Allah so wills, you shall be secure [from all evil]!' (Yusuf: 99), in: 'and [thus] did We inspire Musa (Moses) and his brother: "Set aside(1) for your people some houses in the city..."' (Yunus: 87) and in: '...Go back in shame to Egypt, and then you can have what you are asking for...' (al-Baqara: 61).

In the last verse Misr is mentioned with a fatha at the end and a tanwin (Misran). Some of the exegetes say that this is because it means 'a city among others, inside it is that which you desire'. Even if we accept this interpretation, then Ancient Egypt is still included in it because it was a city among others.

'...all these running waters flow at my feet...' (az-Zukhruf: 51): the words '...at my feet...' (az-Zukhruf: 51) indicate authority and power. Indeed, his palaces were built directly on the Nile bank and the river was running beneath them. He used the plural of rivers even though we know that there is but one river in Egypt, the River Nile, and that it splits into two, the Damietta branch and the Rosetta branch. So, why did the verse say: '...all these running waters...' (az-Zukhruf: 51)?

(1) Tabawwa`at al-manzil means he took a house as his residence. The meaning of Allah's saying, 'And [thus] did We inspire Musa (Moses) and his brother: "Set aside for your people some houses in the city..."' (Yunus: 87), is 'go and take up residence there' [Al-Qamus Al-Qawim 1/88].

The scholars say that this is because in the days of the Pharaohs there were five rivers, that is, they created five branches from the river so that there would be more shores. Thus, they had ten shores on which they built their palaces.

I remember(1) here that we had an esteemed sheikh; Sheikh `Umar Al-`Amrusi from the city Tanta Al-Jazira. I used to sit with him and benefit from his knowledge, along with Sheikh Sayyid Sharaf and Dr Yasin `Abd Al-Ghaffar(2). One day he asked me, knowing that I was studying at Al-Azhar, 'O Sha`rawi, what do you know of the verse: "...all these running waters flow at my feet..." (az-Zukhruf: 51)? I replied, 'In history we read that during the days of the pharaohs there were five rivers, one river named Al-Malik (the king) because the king's palace was upon its shore, one named Dimyat and a river named Tannis.(3) But we found it strange that there was one river named Tulun, given that we know that Ahmad ibn Tulun(4) was in the ninth century CE, so how did it get that name? After researching, we found that it was Ibn

(1) The story of Sheikh `Umar Al-`Amrusi and his asking Ash-Sheikh Ash-Sha`rawi may Allah rest their souls about the rivers

(2) Dr Yasin `Abd Al-Ghaffar established The Liver Institute (Ma`had Al-Kabid) in 1990 CE. He is from the governorate of Al-Manufiyya and was born on the 26th January 1917 CE and passed away in May 1999 CE at the age of 82. He received his degree in medicine and surgery in 1940 CE and membership of the Royal Society in London in 1944. He took his doctorate from Cairo University in 1945 and received an honorary doctorate from Alexandria University in 1991. He was given numerous positions and achieved many distinctions.

(3) Tannis is an ancient city. It is a word from Hieroglyphics referring to the making of silk. It is now the city Al-Manzila, one of the centres of governorate of Ad-Daqhaliyya in the north east of Egypt.

(4) Ahmad ibn Tulun Abu Al-`Abbas Al-Amir was well-known in Egypt, in the Levant and in the frontier outposts. His roots were Turkish, but he was Arabised. He was born in the year 220 A.H. and was courageous, lived a good life and was described as a fierce opponent. He built the well-known mosque in Cairo and Qala`a Yafa in Palestine. It is said against him that he was hot-tempered. He passed away in Egypt after being ill in the year 270 A.H. at the age of 51 Az-Zirikli Al-A`lam 1/140.

Tulun who filled this branch of the river in and so it was named after him. The fifth river was named Al-Khalij. They created extra branches from the main river so that they would have more space to extend the building along the river, and this, if it is an indication of anything, shows the luxurious nature of their lifestyles at that time.'

As for Sheikh `Umar, he had a different opinion about the meaning of this verse. 'Listen my sons', he said, 'the pharaohs organised Ancient Egypt in such a way as to imitate the organisation of paradise, thus they created four rivers. Listen to the Quran: '...The parable of the Paradise which the Allah-conscious are promised – [a paradise] wherein there are rivers of water which time does not corrupt, and rivers of milk the taste whereof never alters, and rivers of wine delightful to those who drink it, and rivers of honey of all impurity cleansed...' (Muhammad: 15).

The question is, where did the Pharaohs get this knowledge of paradise from, such that they could adapt it to the land of Egypt? The scholars say that they used to take their lead from their priests in their worldly affairs and politics. These soothsayers had some knowledge and studied the previous revelations. The scholars even say that the knowledge that the pharaohs had and used to build the pyramids, the sphinx, the temples that are still standing now, the secrets of the construction of which, despite all the advances in science, we still have not uncovered, the process of mummification and other secrets, they learnt it all from the soothsayers. That knowledge, so long as it came from the soothsayers, had its origin in revelation. The proof of this is that when the era of the soothsayers ended and they were no longer to be found, this knowledge disappeared, even until now.

I remember when, during the governance of the architect Hasbullah Al-Kafrawi(1), I suggested to him the re-digging of these rivers, such that all of them would meet at the Barrages so that we could increase the area of shores for ourselves. I suggested that, in order to solve the housing crisis, instead of building on arable land, we could build residences and government buildings over the branches of the waterways and canals because they occupy a considerably large area. Most of these waterways have paths on the right and left sides and we could build reinforced pillars upon the canals and build all the government institutions on them instead of cramming them together in the capital. He promised me that he would study these suggestions, but nothing ever came of it.

(1) He was from the town of Kafr Sulaiman, in the governorate of Kafr Sa`d in the governorate of Damietta. He gained a degree in civil engineering from the University of Alexandria in the year 1950 CE. He was a former Minister of Housing for 16 years from 1977 to 1993. He was appointed the governor of Damietta in 1976, the Urban Communities Authority in 1980, and the syndic of the Engineering Syndicate in 1991.

Regarding the verse: '...all these running waters flow at my feet...' (az-Zukhruf: 51), the exegetes say that these rivers literally ran right under his palaces. They said that he even made a stream flow underneath the bed in which he slept.(1)

أَمۡ أَنَا۠ خَيۡرٞ مِّنۡ هَٰذَا ٱلَّذِى هُوَ مَهِينٞ وَلَا يَكَادُ يُبِينُ ﴿٥٢﴾

Am I not better than this contemptible wretch who can scarcely express himself? [52]
(The Quran, az-Zukhruf: 52)

Pharaoh compares himself to Musa (Moses) trying to establish his superiority saying, 'Am I not better than this one' meaning Musa (Moses); Pharaoh referred to Musa (Moses) using the demonstrative 'this' out of contempt. Mahin (contemptible) means, weak and disdained because Musa (Moses) was neither able to protect himself, nor did he have an army to defend him.

'...who can scarcely express himself?' (az-Zukhruf: 52) It means that he cannot communicate and express himself, and speak eloquently or fluently because he had lisp. Thus, he asked his Lord to assist him in this matter by sending his brother Harun (Aaron) peace be upon him with him. 'And my brother Harun (Aaron) is more fluent than me in tongue, so send him with me as support(2), verifying me. Indeed, I fear that they will deny me.' (al-Qasas: 34)

(1) Al-Alusi mentioned it in Ruh Al-Ma`ani. He said, 'More than one has said that the rivers branched off from the Nile and flowed beneath his palace where he could watch them. It is also said that he had a huge raised bed under which streams branching off from the Nile flowed.

(2) Ar-Rid` means assistant or supporter [Al-Qamus Al-Qawim, 1/260]. The word `arda`adu` means that he helped him. Tarada` `al-qawm means that the people helped each other,=

It is related that the cause of this lisp was that when Musa (Moses) peace be upon him was young, he made a bold remark against Pharaoh, which resulted in Pharaoh doubting and fearing Musa (Moses). His people said to him that Musa (Moses) was only a child who does not realise what he was saying. In order to prove their opinion, they brought Musa (Moses) a date and an ember, but he took the ember which burnt his tongue and resulted in this lisp.(1)

فَلَوْلَآ أُلْقِىَ عَلَيْهِ أَسْوِرَةٌ مِّن ذَهَبٍ أَوْ جَآءَ مَعَهُ
ٱلْمَلَٰٓئِكَةُ مُقْتَرِنِينَ ﴿٥٣﴾

Why has he not been given any gold bracelets?
Why have no angels come to accompany him? [53]
(The Quran, az-Zukhruf: 53)

Pharaoh's materialistic conception of a messenger is that he comes clad in golden bracelets to prove his strength, power, and greatness, or that he should come accompanied by angels to affirm him and attest to his truthfulness.

فَٱسْتَخَفَّ قَوْمَهُۥ فَأَطَاعُوهُ ۚ إِنَّهُمْ كَانُوا۟ قَوْمًا فَٰسِقِينَ ﴿٥٤﴾

In this way he moved his people to accept and they obeyed him – they were perverse people [54]
(The Quran, az-Zukhruf: 54)

Al-Istikhfaf refers to haste, frivolity, and lack of reflection in one's affairs. Pharaoh moved his people to accept his speech and his people obeyed him and followed his misguidance. No one agrees to corruption except the one who benefits from it. In addition, it could mean that he found the people predisposed to frivolity, imprudence and a general lack of deliberation concerning their affairs, so he lied to them.

= and 'fulan rid` li fulan' means that so-and-so assists so-and-so and supports him [Lisan Al-`Arab under rada'].

(1) Ibn Kathir mentioned it in his Tafsir of Allah's saying: 'And my brother Harun (Aaron) is more fluent than me in tongue...' (Saba': 52). Ibn Al-Mundhir related on the authority of Ibn `Abbas regarding Allah's saying: '...who can scarcely express himself?' (az-Zukhruf: 52), that Musa (Moses) had a lisp. Ash-Shawkani also mentioned it in Fath Al-Qadir and As-Suyuti in Ad-Dur Al-Manthur.

فَلَمَّآ ءَاسَفُونَا ٱنتَقَمْنَا مِنْهُمْ فَأَغْرَقْنَٰهُمْ أَجْمَعِينَ ﴿٥٥﴾
فَجَعَلْنَٰهُمْ سَلَفًا وَمَثَلًا لِّلْءَاخِرِينَ ﴿٥٦﴾

When they provoked Us, We punished and drowned them all [55] We made them a lesson and an example for later people [56] (The Quran, az-Zukhruf: 55 - 56)

The word asafuna means 'provokes us', the result of which was: '...We punished...' (az-Zukhruf: 55); this punishment was inflicted by drowning them all. Thus, Allah made them an example and lesson for later people. '`Ibra lil`akhirin', which is mentioned in the Arabic text of the verse, means an example for other disbelievers.

وَلَمَّا ضُرِبَ ٱبْنُ مَرْيَمَ مَثَلًا إِذَا قَوْمُكَ مِنْهُ يَصِدُّونَ ﴿٥٧﴾

When the son of Mary is cited as an example, your people [Prophet] laugh and jeer [57] (The Quran, az-Zukhruf: 57)

The verb in this verse, duriba (is cited as an example), is in the passive voice. Who cites the son of Maryam (Mary) as an example? It was Allah who cites the son of Maryam (Mary) as an example because he was born of with no father. He was formed by Allah blowing His Spirit into Maryam (Mary). Thus, the Christians attributed him to Allah, Who is too Exalted to have sons. Allah refuted them by saying that the creation of `Isa (Jesus) was like that of Adam peace be upon them.

'Indeed, the example of `Isa (Jesus) to Allah is like that of Adam. He created Him from dust; then He said to him, "Be," and he was.' (Al-'Imran: 59) `Isa (Jesus) peace be upon him had no father, but Adam had neither father nor mother, and the one who can do a difficult action can of course make a less difficult one. Thus, they should be tempted by it.

After the revelation of Allah's saying: 'Indeed, you [disbelievers] and what you worship other than Allah are the firewood of hell. You will be coming to [enter] it.' (al-Anbiya': 98) It has become clear that anyone who worships others beside Allah has strayed, will be along with his god: '...the firewood of Hell...' (al-Anbiya': 98) that kindles it.

A man named `Abdullah ibn Az-Zab`ary came to Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him before embracing Islam and said, ‘O Muhammad, are these verses just for us or for all created beings?’ He replied, ‘For all created beings.’ `Abdullah said, ‘How can this be when `Isa (Jesus), `Uzayr (Ezra) and the angels were worshipped besides Allah? Will they and their worshippers be admitted into the Fire?’(1) Then, Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him did not reply to him until the revelation of Allah’s saying: ‘Indeed, those for whom the best [reward] has preceded from Us - they are from it far removed.’ (al-Anbiya’: 101)

When `Ali Allah be pleased with him was informed with this incident, he said that the Arabic word ma (that) is used in Arabic to refer to inanimate beings and animals, so it does not include `Isa (Jesus), `Uzayr (Ezra) or the angels. This reveals `Ali’s wisdom, as he was brought up and educated by Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him since he was young. He gained knowledge from the light of prophet hood. Thus, Prophet Muhammad said, ‘I am the city of knowledge whose gate is `Ali.’(2)

`Ali was one of the great jurists who derived legal rulings with deep insight, even in the company of the greatest Companions. Although a verse in the Quran was revealed corresponding to `Umar ibn Al-Khattab’s opinion, `Umar was puzzled concerning a certain matter which was settled by `Ali. When the issue of the woman who bore a child after only six months of pregnancy was brought to `Umar, he judged that the had (ordained punishment for violating Allah's Law) should be enforced, because it is well known that the term of pregnancy is nine months. However, `Ali said, 'O Commander of the Believers, there is no sin on her as Allah says: '...and his gestation and weaning [period] is thirty months...' (al-Ahqaf: 15) and: 'Mothers may breastfeed their children two complete years for whoever wishes to complete the nursing [period]...' (al-Baqara: 233). It is possible that the period of pregnancy could be six months.(1)

(1) Ar-Razi mentioned in his exegesis, Mafatih Al-Ghayb, when explaining the chapter of Al-Anbiya`, `Abdullah ibn Az-Zab`ari approached and saw the polytheists of Quraysh whispering to each other, so he asked them, ‘What are you discussing?’ Al-Walid ibn Al-Mughira informed him of the Messenger of Allah’s saying, ‘... Indeed, you [disbelievers] and what you worship other than Allah are the firewood of Hell...’ (al-Anbiya’: 98). At this `Abdullah said, ‘Truly, if I come across him I would confront him, call him!’ Thus, Ibn Az-Za`bari said to Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him ‘Did you say this?’ Prophet Muhammad replied, ‘Yes.’ He said, ‘By the Lord of the Ka`ba, I defy you. Do the Jews not worship `Uzair (Ezra), the Christians worship `Isa (Jesus) and Banu Malih worship the angels?’ At this point, there are two different narrations, one of which said that Messenger of Muhammad kept silent and did not answer, so the people laughed. In the other narration, it is said that he replied saying, ‘Rather they worship the devils who told them to do that.’

(2) It is related by Al-Hakim in Al-Mustadrak (4612), At-Tabarani in Al-Mu`jam Al-Kabir (10989), and At-Tabari in Tahdhib Al-Athar (1415). Al-Hakim said that the Hadith had an authentic chain of narrators, but was not related by Al-Bukhari or Muslim. The rest of the Hadith is ‘...so whoever desires the city let him come through the gate.’ In another narration, it is said, ‘...so whoever desires knowledge then let him approach it by its gate.’

Another time he visited `Umar and found he had a whip with him with which he was planning to beat Hudhayfa. Therefore, he said to him, 'Why do I see you angry, O Commander of the Believers? He said, 'I asked Hudhayfa how he was this morning and he said, 'I find myself loving trial, hating the truth, praying without ablution and I have here on earth what Allah does not have above Heaven!' Thus, `Ali replied, 'By Allah, he told the truth, O Commander of the Believers.' `Umar said, 'Would you also say the same, Abu Al-Hasan?' He replied, 'as for trial, Allah says, 'Your wealth and your children are but a trial...' (al-Anfal: 28), the truth that he hates is death. He sends blessings and prayers upon Prophet Muhammad without ablution, and he has here on earth a wife and child, but Allah has neither a wife nor a child.' Then, `Umar said, 'It is evil to be in a place where Abu Al-Hasan is not present.'(2)

Among the subtleties related about `Ali Allah be pleased with him is that once he was passing by a group who were differing over which of Allah's created beings is the most powerful, so they asked him, 'Which of the forces of Allah is the strongest, Abu Al-Hasan?' It seems that he had some prior knowledge of the issue and that he would be asked this question, so he indicated the number ten before counting, and said, 'The towering mountains, but iron can cut the mountains, and fire can melt iron, yet water can put out fire. Nevertheless, the clouds can carry water and the wind drives the clouds, but the son of Adam can beat the wind, wearing heavy clothes and going about his business. Still, the son of Adam sometimes drinks intoxicants, which can be overcome by sleep, and anxiety can vanquish sleep. Thus, the most powerful of Allah's forces is anxiety.'

(1) Ibn Kathir said in his Tafsir (4/157), 'The shortest period of pregnancy is six months and the inference of this ruling is correct and was accepted by `Uthman and others.'

(2) It is related by Ismail Haqqi in his exegesis. He said, 'It was narrated that a man came to `Umar and said, 'Truly I love trial, hate the truth, bear witness to what I have not seen.' Consequently, `Umar ordered to arrest him. The matter reached `Ali, who asked about the reason for arresting him. `Umar ibn Al-Khattab replied, 'Had it not been for `Ali, `Umar would have been destroyed.'

On many occasions, some of our brothers asked us to narrate to them the speech that `Ali gave when Fatima, the daughter of Prophet Muhammad, passed away. Whenever I finished the story, they would ask me to repeat it again.

When Fatimah passed away, she was buried next to Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him and the Companions. After the burial was over, some people said to `Ali, 'O `Ali, if we permit all of Messenger Muhammad's children to be buried next to him, the mosque will be too crowded for people.' He replied, 'Leave her in this place this day and I will move her at night so as to avoid trouble.' When night came, he moved her.

Among the things that `Ali said while he was burying Fatima by her father's side was, 'Peace be upon you, O Messenger of Allah, from me and your daughter who now comes down by your side, so quick to join you. How little is my patience for the loss of your beloved, and my strength is weakened; however, I find some relief in consoling myself over this affliction. I lay you down in the niche of your grave, O Messenger of Allah, and my heart was overwhelmed. My nights are sleepless and my sorrow is endless, until Allah should choose to take me to the residence wherein you abide. Your daughter will inform you as to the state of your nation, so question her and seek news of the situation, even though your passing away was recent and your remembrance has not been abandoned.'

When he decided to depart, he said, 'Peace be upon you both, peace from the one who bids farewell, not out of weariness nor for rest, as if I turn away it is not out of boredom; if I stay standing here, it is not out of thinking bad of what Allah has promised the patient among His slaves.

The word yasudun, which is mentioned in the Arabic text of the verse, means that they raise their voices in laughter and mockery at Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him.

وَقَالُوٓاْ ءَأَٰلِهَتُنَا خَيۡرٌ أَمۡ هُوَۚ مَا ضَرَبُوهُ لَكَ إِلَّا جَدَلَۢاۚ بَلۡ هُمۡ قَوۡمٌ خَصِمُونَ ٥٨

Saying, 'Are our gods better or him?'– they cite him only to challenge you: they are a contentious people [58]
(The Quran, az-Zukhruf: 58)

The purpose of their talk about `Isa (Jesus), `Uzair (Ezra) and the angels, and their questions about whether they would go to hell with their worshippers, was nothing but dispraised argumentation. This is because they sought to justify their falsehood, and so this type of argumentation is forbidden. As for desirable argumentation, as prescribed by the Lawgiver, it is constructive argument that leads to the truth. Thus, Allah says about them, '...they are a contentious people.' (az-Zukhruf: 58) The word khasim refers to extreme antagonism and false argumentation, quarrel and obstinacy. We say, 'khasamany fulan fakhasamtuh' meaning 'So-and-so was antagonistic towards me, so I sought to overcome him'.

إِنۡ هُوَ إِلَّا عَبۡدٌ أَنۡعَمۡنَا عَلَيۡهِ وَجَعَلۡنَٰهُ مَثَلٗا لِّبَنِيٓ إِسۡرَٰٓءِيلَ ٥٩

But he is only a servant We favoured and made an example for the Children of Israel [59]

'But he is only...' (az-Zukhruf: 59) refers to `Isa (Jesus) as a slave of Allah just like the rest of the created beings and not a god as they claimed. '...We bestowed favour, and We made him an example for the Children of Israel.' (az-Zukhruf: 59)

The word mathala means an example or an amazing wonder that will remain until the end of time. Was it not amazing that `Isa (Jesus) spoke while still in the cradle? For when his mother was asked about him, she did not want to speak because she knew her speech would not repel the people's accusations, so she pointed towards him and then they were surprised, '...How can we speak to one who is in the cradle a child?' (Maryam: 29) Then, `Isa (Jesus) spoke when he was still a baby, '...indeed, I am the servant of Allah...' (Maryam: 30). Thus, his very first words were to affirm that he is a slave of Allah, a matter that some Christians hide because it contradicts their beliefs about `Isa (Jesus). It is also strange that he said after that: '...He gave me the Scripture and made me a prophet' (Maryam: 30) using the past tense, even though he was still in the cradle. How did he say that even though Allah sent him as a prophet and revealed to him the Book after he grew up, reached the age of legal accountability, and was ready to convey Allah's Message? Whatever Allah wants will inevitably happen, and Allah informed him of these things while he was still a baby.

The word, '...servant...' (az-Zukhruf: 59) involves receiving Allah's Grace so long as one is sincere in his worship of Allah. This level of sincerity is what can raise the righteous slave (Al-Khidr) up to the point where even Musa (Moses) follows him to learn from him. Allah says about him: 'And they found a servant from among Our servants to whom we had given mercy from us and had taught him from Us a [certain] knowledge.' (al-Kahf: 65)

In the chapter of al-Isra`, Allah Glorified is He says: 'Exalted is He who took His Servant by night...' (al-Isra': 1). Thus, slavery entails receiving grace from Allah: and the grace of the Message and what lies beyond it. In this verse slavery also entailed receiving grace from Allah: '...We favoured...' him (az-Zukhruf: 59). Why did Allah favour him? Allah favoured him by electing him for conveying His Message, and by creating him in an unparalleled manner in which no one of the created being were created. Thus, Allah says: '...And We made the son of Maryam (Mary) and his mother a sign...' (al-Mu'minun: 50). It means a wondrous miracle showing Allah's Omnipotence.

In the verse under consideration, Allah says: '...and made an example for the Children of Israel.' (az-Zukhruf: 59) because they are a materialistic people who did not believe in matters of the Unseen. They always sought tangible things which they can experience with their senses. Did they not say to Musa (Moses): '...Show us Allah manifestly' (an-Nisa': 153), although Allah cannot be seen, 'Vision perceives Him not, but He perceives [all] vision; and He is the Subtle, the Acquainted....' (al-An'am: 103). When Allah sent down manna and quails upon them, which are of the best types of food, they said: 'O Moses, we can never endure one [kind of] food. So, call upon your Lord to bring forth for us from the earth its green herbs and its cucumbers and its garlic(1), and its lentils and its onions. [Moses] said, “Would you exchange what is better for what is less?”’ (al-Baqara: 61)

وَلَوْ نَشَآءُ لَجَعَلْنَا مِنكُم مَّلَٰٓئِكَةً فِى ٱلْأَرْضِ يَخْلُفُونَ (٦٠)

If it had been Our will, We could have made you angels, succeeding one another on earth [60]
(The Quran, az-Zukhruf: 60)

Had Allah willed, He could have replaced the children of Israel with angels to inhabit the earth instead of them. This would only take place with the children of Israel’s destruction and annihilation. This is not difficult for Allah. This verse includes a proof of Allah’s Omnipotence, and that He does what He wills.

وَإِنَّهُۥ لَعِلْمٌ لِّلسَّاعَةِ فَلَا تَمْتَرُنَّ بِهَا وَٱتَّبِعُونِ ۚ هَٰذَا صِرَٰطٌ مُّسْتَقِيمٌ (٦١)

This [Quran] gives knowledge of the Hour: do not doubt it. Follow Me for this is the right path [61]
(The Quran, az-Zukhruf: 61)

‘This…’ (az-Zukhruf: 61), refers to `Isa (Jesus) peace be upon him, ‘...is a sign of the Hour...’ (az-Zukhruf: 61). This means that the re-emergence of `Isa (Jesus) indicates the approach of the Hour. ‘...do not doubt it...’ (az-Zukhruf: 61). This means that people should not doubt it or debate concerning its occurrence, as it is a true fact without doubt. ‘...Follow me...’ (az-Zukhruf: 61) means ‘accept what I am saying and follow my footsteps, as I am role model for you regarding worship and aspects of life. ‘...for this...’ (az-Zukhruf: 61), i.e. what I have brought to you ‘...is the right path.’ (az-Zukhruf: 61)

(1) Regarding the word fum, which is mentioned in the Arabic text of the verse, there are three sayings:
That it is wheat, which is the opinion held by Ibn `Abbas and As-Suddi who related it from his sheikhs.
That it is garlic, which is the opinion held by `Abdullah and Ubayy, and was chosen by Al-Farra.’
That it is grains, which is the opinion mentioned by Ibn Qutayba and Az-Zajjaj. [from Zad Al-Masir by Ibn Al-Jawzy]

Allah Glorified is He has set clear signs which indicate the approach of the Hour because it lies in the Unseen and none but Allah can know it. All we know about the Hour are the signs that indicate its coming.

Regarding Prophet `Isa (Jesus), we believe that he is alive in the heavens, and that he will come back down to earth. In the Hadith pertaining to the Prophet's Night Journey, it is mentioned that `Isa (Jesus) peace be upon him prayed behind Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him. Even though he is alive in the heavens, he will return to earth, die and be buried. To those who object to this issue and ask how `Isa (Jesus) is alive in the heavens, we say that Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him was taken on the Night Journey and ascended the heavens where he stayed for a period of time, be it short or long. Therefore, as for `Isa (Jesus), the only difference is the period of time, as the one who can stay in the heavens for one or two hours can stay there longer.

وَلَا يَصُدَّنَّكُمُ ٱلشَّيْطَٰنُ إِنَّهُۥ لَكُمْ عَدُوٌّ مُّبِينٌ ﴿٦٢﴾

Do not let Satan hinder you, for he is your sworn enemy [62] (The Quran, az-Zukhruf: 62)

It means that people should not let Satan prevent them from the Truth and guidance because: 'he is your sworn enemy.' (az-Zukhruf: 62) This indicates that his enmity is plain, old and unwavering since the time of Adam peace be upon him. Thus, they should not give him any opportunity to prevent them from the Truth or to handle dubious affairs because he seeks disagreement and tries to cause them to fall into misguidance. Allah states what Satan says: '...I will surely sit in wait for them on Your straight path.' (al-A'raf: 16) He seeks to spoil their acts of worship.

Allah has instructed us to defend ourselves against him: 'And if an evil suggestion comes to you from Satan, then seek refuge in Allah. Indeed, He is Hearing and Knowing.' (al-A'raf: 200) Allah's Name will repel Satan's whispers and insinuations because Satan's insinuations cannot stand mentioning Allah's Name.

As we said previously, if a thief was prowling around your house and heard you speak, he would retreat and leave the place even if you were unaware of his presence when you spoke. Accordingly, when you feel Satan's insinuations encroaching upon you, you have only to remember Allah and seek refuge with Him from Satan's insinuations. You should say, 'I seek refuge with Allah from the accursed Satan' out loud. Satan has admitted that he has no power over those who believe in Allah and are sincere to Him: '[Satan] said, "By Your Might, I will surely mislead them all, except, among them, Your chosen servants. (Sad: 82-83)

بَعۡضَ ٱلَّذِى تَخۡتَلِفُونَ فِيهِۖ فَٱتَّقُواْ ٱللَّهَ وَأَطِيعُونِ ٦٣

When Jesus came with clear signs he said, 'I have brought you wisdom; I have come to clear up some of your differences for you. Be mindful of God and obey me [63] (The Quran, az-Zukhruf: 63)

The word al-bayyinat which is mentioned in the Arabic text of the verse refers to signs and miracles. '...he said, "I have brought you wisdom..."' (az-Zukhruf: 63). 'Wisdom' here refers to the Gospel and its rulings. '...I have come to clear up some of your differences for you...' (az-Zukhruf: 63). 'Differences' refers to that which they differed about before the coming of `Isa (Jesus) and after his transfer. They said about him that he is, 'the Son of Allah' and 'the third of three', and the Jews had more than this to say.

Allah says that He gave `Isa (Jesus) wisdom which refers to the Gospel. The word 'wisdom' means putting everything in its correct place. `Isa (Jesus) came after Judaism which was given completely to materialism, as I formed the starting point for everything. We mentioned previously that materialism led them to ask their messenger to see Allah, '...they said, "Show us Allah manifestly"...' (an-Nisa': 153). Accordingly, they have no room for matters of the unseen in their lives. Even regarding their food and drink, when Allah sent down the manna and quails upon them, they were not content with them, as they wanted food that they could prepare. Thus, Allah said to them: '...Enter a city(1) so you will have what you ask for...' (al-Baqara: 61).

(1) Regarding '...Enter a city so you will have what you ask for...' (al-Baqara: 61), with nunnation on the word Misr, there are two sayings: =

In addition, we do not find the Last Day mentioned either in the Torah or in the Talmud, even though belief in the Last Day is a pillar of true faith. However, they do not believe in it because of their materialism. Thus, the Message that `Isa (Jesus) brought was overwhelmingly spiritual to compensate for the lack of spirituality in Judaism and to reset the balance in creation. In addition, we do not find social regulations in the Gospels. If they needed something like this, they had to take it from the Torah, despite the adversity that existed between the Christians and the Jews. Then, the matter ended up by combining the Torah with the Gospel into one book. Once `Isa (Jesus) was asked about inheritance and he replied, ‘I was not sent to leave an inheritance.’

When materialism prevailed, Allah repelled it with spirituality restoring the balance in life, as spirituality keeps materialism moving on. Thus, `Isa (Jesus) was sent with a Message to nurture religious emotions and raise the level of spirituality.

Life needs both materialism and spirituality; material undertakings deal with nature and the universe. There are things in the universe which give out without necessity to interact with them, such as the sun, the moon, the stars, water, and air. One merely receives their benefits. There are other things that will give you nothing unless you interact with them; the earth, for example, must be ploughed, sowed, and cultivated in order for it to give you crops.

As the Jews went to extremes in materialism, the Christians went to extremes in spirituality. Prophet `Isa (Jesus) peace be upon him said, when he saw some people stoning a woman,(1) ‘Let he who is without sin stone her’. He also said (2), ‘If someone slaps you on the right cheek offer him your left cheek’. This is from the monasticism that Allah did not enjoin on them;

= It is the name of an unknown city. This opinion was held by Ibn Mas`ud and Ibn `Abbas, as they viewed that the children of Israel were ordered to go to a city because what they asked for was found in a city.
It is the country named Misr (Egypt). This opinion was held by Abu Al-`Aliyah and Ad-Dahhak. [Ibn Al-Jawzi, Zad Al-Masir]

(1) This is mentioned in the Gospel of John [7: 8]. The full text is, ‘Let he who is without sin throw the first stone.’

(2) This is mentioned in the Gospel of Matthew, 55: 39. The full text is, ‘Do not repel evil with evil, rather if someone slaps you on the right cheek, then offer him the other.’

rather, they themselves undertook it voluntarily as a means to get closer to Allah. The problem with this was that they did not give it its due. Allah says: ‘Then We sent following their footsteps Our messengers and followed [them] with `Isa (Jesus), the son of Maryam (Mary), and gave him the Gospel. And We placed in the hearts of those who followed him compassion and mercy and monasticism, which they innovated; We did not prescribe it for them except [that they did so] seeking the approval of Allah. But they did not observe it with due observance. So, We gave the ones who believed among them their reward, but many of them are defiantly disobedient.’ (al-Hadid: 27) Thus, the reason for objection here is not their monasticism itself, but the fact that they did not give it its due observance. While Judaism went to extremes in materialism, Christianity was purely spirituality, with no rules for organizing the society. There was a necessity to reconcile the two extremes, and society needed renewal of religion and a new Message to bring the spiritual and material sides together, which is the message of Islam.

Reflect on the way the Quran presents an example for Prophet Muhammad and his nation once in the Torah and in the Gospel: ‘Muhammad is the Messenger of Allah; and those with him are forceful against the disbelievers, merciful among themselves. You see them bowing and prostrating [in prayer], seeking bounty from Allah and [His] pleasure. Their mark is on their faces from the trace of prostration. That is their description in the Torah. And their description in the Gospel is as a plant which produces its offshoots and strengthens them so they grow firm and stand upon their stalks, delighting the sowers - so that Allah may enrage by them the disbelievers...’ (al-Fath: 29).

This is how the Islamic Ummah joined between material and spirit. The Muslim is not excessively severe or merciful, rather, his disposition changes according to the circumstances. With whom is he severe and whom does he treat mercifully?

Reflect upon the precision of the Quranic expression when it gives an example of the Islamic nation in the Torah and the Gospel. It presents the spiritual side of Islam to the Jews, as they are materialistic people. ‘...You see them bowing and prostrating [in prayer], seeking bounty from Allah and [His] pleasure. Their mark is on their faces from the trace of prostration...’ (al-Fath: 29).

The Quran portrays the materialistic side of Islam in the Gospel: '...as a plant which produces its offshoots and strengthens them so they grow firm and stand upon their stalks, delighting the sowers - so that Allah may enrage by them the disbelievers...' (al-Fath: 29).

Thus, as Islam combines materialism with spirituality, it becomes the religion fit for leading life. Spirituality without materialism is unsustainable, as the worshipper cannot persevere in worshipping without having something to eat and wear. How will he get, for example, a loaf of bread? How can he get a garment to wear? The bread can be obtained when a farmer sows the seeds of wheat and harvests it, then the miller grinds them then the flour is baked in the bakery. Thus, a loaf of bread is produced with the help of many workers. The garment also needs work and material movement.

Thus, Allah has made the Quran a guardian over the previous books: '...a guardian over it...' (al-Ma'ida: 48). Allah also says: 'It is truly exalted in the Source of Scripture kept with Us and full of wisdom.' (az-Zukhruf: 4) This means that it is elevated above all the other Heavenly Books.

Allah's saying: '...I have come to clear up some of your differences for you...' (az-Zukhruf: 63), refers to certain things that were forbidden to the Jews, but which Allah made permissible for them, such as camels. Allah says, '…to make lawful for you some of what was forbidden to you…' (Al-'Imran: 50). Allah also says, 'And to those who are Jews We prohibited every animal of uncloven hoof; and of the cattle and the sheep We prohibited to them their fat, except what adheres to their backs or the entrails or what is joined with bone...' (al-An'am: 146).

إِنَّ ٱللَّهَ هُوَ رَبِّى وَرَبُّكُمۡ فَٱعۡبُدُوهُۚ هَٰذَا صِرَٰطٞ مُّسۡتَقِيمٞ ﴿٦٤﴾

God is my Lord and your Lord. Serve Him: this is the straight path [64] (The Quran, az-Zukhruf: 64)

Notice in this verse the use of the pronoun huwa (He) which emphasises that Allah alone is my Lord and yours. '...So worship Him...' (az-Zukhruf: 64) because what he was calling them to is the Truth. '...this is the straight path.' (az-Zukhruf: 64) with no crookedness therein.

We said previously that the straight path is the direct path that will lead you to your destination via the shortest distance with the least amount of trouble. The path to Allah takes you from religious duties enjoined by Allah to Allah's reward, as the final return is to Him alone.

ظَلَمُواْ مِنۡ عَذَابِ يَوۡمٍ أَلِيمٍ ٦٥

Yet still the different factions among them disagreed – woe to the evildoers: they will suffer the torment of a grievous day! [65]
(The Quran, az-Zukhruf: 65)

The word al-ahzab (factions) which is mentioned in the Arabic text of the verse is the plural of hizb which refers to a group of people who share a common thought or belief. That these factions differed with each other is an indication that they were in error and were of satanic inspiration, as Allah's faction has one creed which derived from the Book of Allah. '...those are the party of Allah. Unquestionably, the party of Allah - they are the successful.' (al-Mujadala: 22)

'...woe to the evildoers: they will suffer the torment of a grievous day.' (az-Zukhruf: 65) The word wayl (woe) refers to ruin, inflicted on them by Allah. We said that an action is measured by the strength of its doer, so what about punishment inflicted by Allah?

Scholars say that wayl is the name of a valley in hell for: '...the evildoers...' (az-Zukhruf: 65). This means that they oppressed themselves by following their vain desires and indulging in acts of disobedience. Perhaps they oppressed other people as well.

'...they will suffer the torment of a grievous day.' (az-Zukhruf: 65) If the Day on which the torment will happen is a grievous day, then what about the torment itself? The punishment is permanent, endless, massive, and grievous. This torment is also described as humiliating for the one whom Allah wants to humiliate and disgrace. Thus, every sinner has a type of torments that suits him.

What are they waiting for but the Hour, which will come upon them suddenly and take them unawares? [66] (The Quran, az-Zukhruf: 66)

They are only waiting for the Hour, i.e. the Day of Judgement '...which will come upon them suddenly and take them unawares' (az-Zukhruf: 66). If one knows that it will come suddenly, he must prepare himself for it '...None will reveal its time except Him...' (al-A'raf: 187). We have already said that the obscurity of the time of the Day of Judgement and death entails elucidation and clarity. As their time is unknown, this gives a strong warning so that one must be prepared and waiting for it at any time. In addition, the obscurity of the cause or place of death serves the same objective. '…no one knows in which land he shall die...' (Luqman: 34). If there is no other cause of death, then death itself is the cause.

ٱلْأَخِلَّآءُ يَوْمَئِذٍۭ بَعْضُهُمْ لِبَعْضٍ عَدُوٌّ إِلَّا ٱلْمُتَّقِينَ ﴿٦٧﴾

On that Day, friends will become each other's enemies. Not so the righteous [67] (The Quran, az-Zukhruf: 67)

This is a reference to the Day of Judgement when the criterion of brotherhood and friendship will be turned upside down. The word akhilla` is the plural of khalil which refers to the friend whom you love so much to the extent that you have become one with his flesh and blood, as the poet(1) said:

And when we met yearning almost reached its limit,
Two friends melting together in ardour and reproof,
As though a friend melted and mixed with his friend,
During the embrace and disappeared (2)

(1) He was Ismail Sabri Basha, one of the best poets of the modern era. He was distinguished by his beautiful poems and elegant style. He was born in 1854 CE and studied law in France. He used to write his poetry in the margins of books and magazines. He passed away in Cairo in 1923 CE at the age of 69. [Al-Mawsu`a Ash-Shi`riyya]

(2) These two lines of poetry were written by Ismail Sabri from a poem in the Tawil metre. In Al-Mawsu`a Ash-Shi`riyya, there is a slight difference in the wording used; it contains,= Friendship can be either in goodness or in evil. Friendship in goodness is that which helps you follow Allah's path, and the true friend is the one who helps you if you follow the upright path and advises you if you do not follow the upright path. Allah describes the believers as follows: 'Except for those who have believed and done righteous deeds and advised each other to truth and advised each other to patience.' (al-'Asr: 3) The true friends who do what is mentioned in this verse are referred to in Prophet Muhammad's saying, 'Seven are (the persons) whom Allah will give shade of His Thrown on the Day when there would be no shade other than His Throne's shade: Amongst them are two persons who love and meet each other and depart from each other for the sake of Allah.'(1) This is true and sincere friendship, which continues from the worldly life world to the Day of Judgement.

As for those who accompany each other in doing evil acts and breaching what Allah has made inviolable, their companionship in the Hereafter will turn to enmity and hatred, as each one will blame the other. The evil they used to do in the worldly life will destroy them in the Hereafter, and the acts of disobedience that combined them in the worldly life will cast them into everlasting torment. Each one will see the other as an enemy because he did not warn him or prevent him from evil. Therefore, Islam attaches importance to choosing good companions and friends and has taught us how to choose righteous companions.

The Hour of Recompense will disclose the spurious relationships; nothing will remain but the bonds of goodness which bind one a person to his fellow. The Gracious Quran has described in more than one verse what will happen between this type of friends in the worldly life who will turn into enemies in the Hereafter. Among these verses is Allah's saying, 'And those who disbelieved will [then] say, "Our Lord, show us those who misled us of the jinn and men [so] we may put them under our feet that they will be among the lowest.' (Fussilat: 29)

= 'two sad ones overflowed' instead of 'Two friends melting together', and 'As though a melted and mixed with his beloved' instead of 'As though a friend melted and mixed with his friend.

(1) It is related by Muslim in his Sahih (1031) on the authority of Abu Hurayra. The first of the seven is a just leader. It is also related by Malik in his Muwatta` (1501) and Al-Bukhari in his Sahih (620, 1334, 6308).

Allah says:

يَٰعِبَادِ لَا خَوۡفٌ عَلَيۡكُمُ ٱلۡيَوۡمَ وَلَآ أَنتُمۡ تَحۡزَنُونَ ﴿٦٨﴾

‘My servants, there is no fear for you today, nor shall you grieve’[68] (The Quran, az-Zukhruf: 68)

The plural of the word `abd (slave/servant) can be either `abid or `ibad, and each of them has its own meaning; the word `abid includes all types of people: the believer, the disbeliever, the obedient and the disobedient. They are all `abeed (slaves) because they are all subject to Allah in matters which they cannot escape, such as sickness, death, etc. Thus, people are all slaves in this sense.

However, the word `ibad refers to the elect who have worshipped Allah willingly sincerely, and have abandoned their desires for of the sake of doing what pleases their Lord, so they deserve this status. In Allah’s saying: ‘...My servants...’ (az-Zukhruf: 68), He has attributed His slaves to Himself. The word `ibad does not come with a meaning other than the above except in one verse about the Day of Judgement where Allah says, ‘...did you mislead My servants...’ (al-Furqan: 17)? Allah has named them `ibad (servants) even though they are astray. The scholars said that this is because the subject in this verse is the Day of Judgement when no one has a choice whether to believe or disbelieve, and all people are obedient.

Allah honours us by addressing us with: ‘...My servants...’ (az-Zukhruf: 68) because He ascribes us to Himself; as a poet (1) said:

Of the things that raised me in honour and dignity,

And caused me to almost set foot upon the stars,

My inclusion in Your saying, ‘O My slaves’,

And that you made Ahmad a Prophet for me.(2)

(1) He is Muhammad Al-Hilali Al-Hamawi, one of the poets of the modern era, and the author of Al-Manzhumat Al-Hilaliyya. He was born in 1820 CE and passed away in 1894 CE at the age of 75. He wrote 308 poems with a total of 6059 lines of poetry [Al-Mawsu’a Ash-Shi’riyya].

(2) These two lines of poetry are from a poem in the Wafir metre which has six lines [Al-Mawsu’a Ash-Shi’riyya].

Allah says, '…there is no fear for you today, nor shall you grieve.' (az-Zukhruf: 68) How could there be any fear when we are Allah's slaves? How could fear afflict us when we cling to Allah? The believers say that no anguish will afflict them because Allah manages all affairs. His saying: '…there is no fear for you today, nor shall you grieve' (az-Zukhruf: 68) means that they shall not grieve over the bounties they did not receive in the worldly life because will obtain better bounties that will last more than the bounties of the worldly life.

ٱلَّذِينَ ءَامَنُواْ بِـَٔايَٰتِنَا وَكَانُواْ مُسۡلِمِينَ ٦٩

Those who believed in Our revelations and devoted themselves to Us [69] (The Quran, az-Zukhruf: 69)

This verse shows us the difference between iman (faith) and Islam (devotion), the former is relevant to the heart whereas the later refers to putting Allah's religious instructions and commands into practice. Thus, we see that the hypocrites may be the first people to come to perform prayer even though faith does not settle in their hearts. Allah says, 'The Bedouins say, "We have believed." Say, "You have not [yet] believed; but say [instead], "We have submitted..."' (al-Hujurat: 14). They used to pray in the front row to repel any accusations of hypocrisy.

It is amazing that hypocrisy manifested itself in Medina although it is the city of the Ansar (Helpers from Medina) and the place from which Islam spread, and did not manifest in Mecca, the stronghold of disbelief and idols and the city with the fiercest enmity towards Islam. After reflecting upon this phenomenon, we say that hypocrisy does not manifest itself except in front of a power that causes fear. In Medina, Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him became a power to be feared and had supporters and an army. When he was in Mecca, he was in a position of weakness and was suffering persecution, so why would anyone dissemble to him?

Allah's saying: '...those who believed in Our revelations...' (az-Zukhruf: 69) means that their hearts were convinced with them. There are different degrees for conviction: '`ilm al-yaqin' (certainty of knowledge) when someone whom you trust informs you of something, '`ayn al-yaqin' (certainty of the eye) when you see something which causes you to be certain and ‘haq al-yaqin’ (true certainty) when you experience something with your own senses.

I remember when once I went to Indonesia, I saw bananas, one of which is half a metre long. I was astonished and decided to take some back with me to Egypt to show to my children. When I went back, I told them about these things I had seen in Indonesia. Actually, they too were surprised, as they know that I do not lie to them. This is an example of the certainty of knowledge. Then, I told them to open a certain bag. They opened it and found therein bananas just as I had described. This is the certainty of the eye. Finally, when they got them out, touched, and tasted them, they reached true certainty.

Does the one who believes with the certainty of knowledge carry out the instructions of his faith? The one who carries out these instructions is a true believer while the one who does not is a hypocrite because he does not act according to the instructions of his faith.

When the Bedouins heard this verse, they were filled with hope that they would attain faith in the future because they knew the meaning of the particle lamma (not yet), it negates the past and the present but not the future. Allah’s saying: ‘The Bedouins say, “We have believed.” Say, “You have not [yet] believed; but say [instead], “We have submitted,” for faith has not yet entered your hearts’ (al-Hujurat: 14) means that faith will enter their hearts in the future.

‘Enter Paradise, you and your spouses: you will be filled with joy’[70] (The Quran, az-Zukhruf: 70)

This is the reward of those who believed in and submitted to Allah. Allah will say to them on the Day of Judgement: ‘Enter Paradise, you and your spouses: you will be filled with joy!’ (az-Zukhruf: 70) Spouses are mentioned in this verse because with every pleasure a man gains, he becomes overwhelmed by the passions that accompany puberty, so he inclines towards gaining a spouse with whom he can share his joys and delights, and the same applies to women. The spouse then, be it a husband or a wife, is the first companion that is desired, and then the source of tranquillity, love and mercy. Tranquillity and love are well known between couples, but what about mercy? Mercy manifests between the spouses as they reach old age, when each of them is in need of compassion and kindness before all other feelings.

Allah says: '...you will be filled with joy.' (az-Zukhruf: 70) The word 'al-hubur' refers to extreme happiness that overcomes someone when they experience such joy that nothing can spoil, as mentioned in Allah's saying: 'You will recognize in their faces the radiance of pleasure.' (al-Mutaffifin: 24)

ٱلْأَنفُسُ وَتَلَذُّ ٱلْأَعْيُنُ ۖ وَأَنتُمْ فِيهَا خَـٰلِدُونَ ﴿٧١﴾

Dishes and goblets of gold will be passed around them with all that their souls desire and their eyes delight in. 'There you will remain [71] (The Quran, az-Zukhruf: 71)

The verse tackles the delights of paradise. The word sihaf is the plural of safeeha which means a large plate that a whole family can use while eating. The bigger plate is called qas`a, and jafna` is bigger than qas`a. In this regard, it is narrated on the authority of Ibn Jad`an(1) that Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him had a large jafna (large dish) under which he shaded himself from the heat of the sun.(2)

It is also mentioned in the story of our Prophet Sulaiman (Solomon) peace be upon him and the jinn that Allah placed in his service Allah says: 'They made for him what he willed of elevated chambers, statues, bowls like reservoirs, and stationary kettles....' (Saba': 13). In paradise, the dishes are made of gold.

(1) `Abdullah ibn Jad`an At-Tamimi Al-Qurashi, who was famous for his generosity in the pre-Islamic period, met Prophet Muhammad before his mission as a prophet. There are many narrations about him, some of which were related by Al-Asfahani and others. Al-Ya`qubi named him as one of the Arab leaders in the pre-Islamic period. [Az-Zirikli, Al-A'lam 4/76]

(2) Ismail Haqqi states in his exegesis, '`Abdullah ibn Jad`an, one of the leaders of Quraysh and `Aisha's cousin, had a jafna (large dish) under which he would seek shade. It was so big that a man riding a camel could take from it, and one time a child fell in it and drowned. He used to feed the poor every day from that dish.'

In '...and goblets of gold...' (az-Zukhruf: 71), the word akwab (goblets) is the plural of kub which refers to a drinking vessel that has no handle, However, the word `abariq is the plural of `ibriq which is a drinking vessel that is open at the top and has a handle, and the word ka`s refers to a kub (goblet) that it is full of a drink. There they have '...all that their soul's desire and their eyes delight in...' (az-Zukhruf: 71). This is a concise description for many things whose details would take a great deal of time to describe. What is served on these plates and in these cups is whatever the heart desires of food and drink, as far as taste is concerned.

In '...and their eyes delight in...' (az-Zukhruf: 71), the colour of these foods and drinks delight the eye; merely looking at them is an enjoyable experience, so what about their taste? When you host a guest who is dear to you, you ask him what he would like to eat in order to offer him what he wants and to fulfil his desire, not just to fill his belly. Notice also that Allah mentions dishes first then goblets because people usually eat first and then drinks. Thus, the verse includes order according to priority.

Allah mentions the pleasure of looking at food because one can find a pleasure in looking at food that sometimes surpasses that of eating. Thus, Allah says in another verse: '...Look at [each of] its fruit when it yields and [at] it is ripening...' (al-An'am: 99) combining the pleasure of the food and that of looking at it.

Allah says: '...There you will remain' (az-Zukhruf: 71) because it is an eternal dwelling with no death, and the blessings will never cease. This means that these blessings will never be disrupted, as Allah says, 'either limited [to season] or forbidden.' (al-Waqi'a: 33) This is a gift from Allah, so it will never cease.

This is the Garden you are given as your own, because of what you used to do [72]

His saying: '...which you have inherited...' (az-Zukhruf: 72) means that you have received it as an inheritance. Inheritance is only given after the death of its owner. For example, a person dies leaving his possessions and his legacy for his children and family. These people receive the departed person's possessions without holding a contract or paying a price, but from whom have they inherited?

Allah says in another verse: 'Those are the inheritors. Who will inherit al-firdaus. They will abide therein eternally.' (al-Mu'minun: 10-11) Scholars said that when Allah the Glorified and Exalted created everything, He knew the number of all things, and wrote all things in that ancient time. It is authentically related that the Pen dried after that.(1)

When Al-Ma`mun was asked, 'What does your Lord do when it is authentically related that the Pen has dried?' He said, 'There are affairs that He manifests and others He does not reveal, He elevates some peoples, and He lowers others.'(2)

Scholars also said, with regard to the aforementioned inheritance, that the believers will inherit disbelievers and will take their places in paradise. This is because Allah has reserved for each person a place in paradise and a place in the fire, so that even if all people were obedient believers, there would be sufficient space for them in paradise. If they all disbelieved, there would be enough places for them in Hell.

Thus, when the people of the hell will enter it, their places in paradise will be inherited by the believers, as Allah gives them these places out of His Generosity and Bounty. He will also admit them into paradise as a reward for their faith and good deeds in the worldly life.

(1) At-Tirmidhi relates in his Sunnan [3566] on the authority of `Abdullah ibn `Amr ibn Al-`As who said that Messenger Muhammad said, 'Indeed Allah created His creation in darkness, then He cast His Light upon them, so whoever is touched by that light he is guided, and whoever is not, he goes astray. It is for this reason that I say that the pens have dried with Allah's Knowledge' At-Tirmidhi said that the Hadith is Hasan (good) and Ahmad related it in his Musnad (6356, 6559).

(2) Ash-Shawkani stated in Al-Fayd Al-Qadir (2/292) that `Abdullah ibn Tahir, the governor of Khorasan, asked Al-Ma`mun Al-Husayn ibn Fadl about Allah's saying: '...every day He is bringing about a matter.' (ar-Rahman: 29) He replied, 'They are affairs that He manifests and others He does not reveal.' Then, he stood up and kissed his head. Az-Zamakhshari also mentioned this in Al-Kashshaf and Al-Fawakih Ad-Dawani `Ala Risalit ibn Abu Zaid Al-Qayrawani. [1/156]

Allah says, '...which you inherited because of what you used to do.' (az-Zukhruf: 72) Thus, good deeds are the main factor for entering paradise and inheriting the places that were reserved for the people will be admitted intoh.

We notice in the question of inheritance that possession of the inherited object is transferred from the one inheriting to the inheritor, and becomes lawful to him regardless of its source, whether lawful or unlawful. If a person earns money from unlawful means, he will bear alone its burden and sin on the Day of Judgement. When this wealth is transferred to the inheritor, it becomes lawful for him and there is no sin on him because the responsibility is not transferred. Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him settled this issue when he said, 'The worst of you is he who dies with evil and yet leaves his family with plenty of wealth.'(1)

Thus, the inheritor should not inquire about the source of this wealth he has inherited. He is like the wife who need not ask her husband about the source of the money he spends on her. Similarly, the prepubescent child need not ask about the source of the money spent on him. When this child reaches puberty, and becomes able to earn his living, he is entitled to ask this question because he is able to earn a lawful living himself.

This is based on an analogy with the verse: 'and when the children among you reach puberty, let them ask permission [at all times] as those before them have done….' (an-Nur: 59) After the son reaches puberty, he is no longer entitled to receive expenditure from his father; yet if his father does, this will be out of his generosity.

The father's kindness in our society has had a negative effect upon our economy; the fathers' excessive affection towards their children has prolonged their period of childhood and extended it to the age of twenty-five or even thirty. All this time the child is dependent upon his father and expects his father to bring him a flat, furniture and all the necessities of marriage. Our youths have inclined towards relaxation and left the responsibilities to their fathers. This has led to the waste of much energy.

(1) It is related by Al-Qada`i in his Musnad (Ash-Shihab) [2/24] (304) from the Hadith narrated by Ibn `Umar with the following wording: 'Woe to he who leaves his family with plenty but goes on to his Lord with evil.' Al-`Ajaluni attributed it to Kashf Al-Khafa` by Ad-Daylamy [H 2977]. Al-Albany said that it is a fabricated Hadith in Silsilat Al-Ahadith Ad-Da`ifa Wal-Mawu`a (4/157).

Thus, the West has overcome us in this field. At this age, their youths get engaged in life and work. Each one carries his own responsibility and becomes completely independent of his family. It is true that they have made mistakes in this field as have dealt with girls and boys on equal footings. Girls differ in this regard, as fathers take care of their daughters until they get married. Girls should only leave their fathers' houses to her husbands' houses.

لَكُمْ فِيهَا فَاكِهَةٌ كَثِيرَةٌ مِّنْهَا تَأْكُلُونَ ﴿٧٣﴾

And there is abundant fruit in it for you to eat [73] (The Quran, az-Zukhruf: 73)

Allah has mentioned the food and drink in paradise and that they are served on dishes and goblets which were well known to the Arabs. In this verse, Allah mentions that among the blessings of paradise are fruits with which the Arabs were not very familiar with and knew but few types. Therefore, fruits have been mentioned after the food and drink. Eating fruit after food and drink is evidence of indulgence and luxury. The word `al-fakiha (fruit) is derived from the word `at-tafakkuh (amusement), so it is not a necessity but rather a luxury.

Allah has provided us with the necessities of life: food, drink, and clothing and has given us things that make our lives easier. For example, Allah says, 'O children of Adam, We have bestowed upon you clothing to conceal your private parts and as adornment. But the clothing of righteousness - that is best...' (al-A'raf: 26). The clothes that cover people's private parts are a necessity but the adornment is for luxury. Allah draws our attention to that which is more important than material clothing: the spiritual clothing that protects one in the worldly life and the Hereafter, which is the clothing of righteousness.

Having given us a concise image of the people of paradise and the blessings it contains, Allah Glorified is He will show us its opposite so that the image becomes clearer, and this is one of the characteristics of the Quranic style. This is because when mentioning things that rejoice the soul, and then things that cause the soul to become gloomy, the difference between the two becomes clear. For example, Allah Glorified is He says, ‘Indeed, the righteous will be in pleasure. And indeed, the wicked will be in Hellfire.’ (al-Infitar: 13-14) In the chapter under discussion, Allah says:

لَا يُفَتَّرُ عَنْهُمْ وَهُمْ فِيهِ مُبْلِسُونَ ﴿٧٥﴾

But the evildoers will remain in Hell’s punishment [74] from which there is no relief: they will remain in utter despair [75] (The Quran, az-Zukhruf: 74-75)

Allah lays down three facts regarding the disbelievers: That they will stay in hell’s punishment eternally: ‘from which there is no relief...’ (az-Zukhruf: 75) means that punishment will never be mitigated. ‘…they will remain in utter despair.’ (az-Zukhruf: 75)

They will be sorrowful, without hope of salvation, despairing of any goodness and with no hope of getting out of hell. Thus, they will be encompassed by every type of pain, sorrow, despair, and hopelessness.

وَمَا ظَلَمْنَٰهُمْ وَلَٰكِن كَانُوا۟ هُمُ ٱلظَّٰلِمِينَ ﴿٧٦﴾

We never wronged them; they were the ones who did wrong [76] (The Quran, az-Zukhruf: 76)

The punishment they received is the recompense for their actions, not some form of oppression, as Allah has shown and clarified for them the paths of good and evil. ‘And have shown him the two paths?’ (al-Balad: 10) Allah also said, ‘and inspired it [with discernment of] its wickedness and its righteousness.’ (ash-Shams: 8) However, they oppressed themselves when they rushed to satisfy their vain and unlawful desires. Thus, Allah deprived them from the eternal and lawful pleasures of the afterlife. The worst oppression is the oppression of oneself, as it entails transgression and stupidity.

وَنَادَوْا۟ يَٰمَٰلِكُ لِيَقْضِ عَلَيْنَا رَبُّكَ ۖ قَالَ إِنَّكُم مَّٰكِثُونَ ٧٧
لَقَدْ جِئْنَٰكُم بِٱلْحَقِّ وَلَٰكِنَّ أَكْثَرَكُمْ لِلْحَقِّ كَٰرِهُونَ ٧٨

They will cry, 'Malik, if only your Lord would finish us off' but he will answer, 'No! You are here to stay [77] We have brought you the Truth but most of you despise it [78]
(The Quran, az-Zukhruf: 77-78)

In these verses, Allah speaks about the people of hell (we seek refuge with Allah), as they call upon Malik, the keeper of Hell, '...Malik, if only your Lord would finish us off...' (az-Zukhruf: 77). This means that they want to die so that they can rest from this endless punishment. Allah Glorified is He says, '...Every time their skins are roasted through We will replace them with other skins so they may taste the punishment...' (an-Nisa': 56). Modern science has established that the skin is responsible for sensing. The proof is that if one is given an injection, pain is only experienced when the needle is penetrating the skin. The Quran has preceded all these sciences in clarifying this fact. Thus, the people of hell seek death so that they may be saved from this punishment.

We notice that the verb liyaqdi, which is mentioned in the Arabic text of the verse, is in the form of an imperative, as it is preceded by 'lam al-amr' (a letter indicating imperative case). Can Allah be ordered about, especially by the people of Hell? We say that if a request that comes from one of a higher rank to one of a lower, it is called an order; if it comes from one of the same rank then it is a request; if it comes from the lower to the higher it is a supplication. Thus, we do not order Allah; rather, we supplicate Him.

He will reply 'Indeed, you will remain,' (az-Zukhruf: 77) persisting in the fire, living eternally therein, for you have no excuse. 'We had certainly brought you the truth,' i.e., the true religion and the true way; 'but most of you despise it. (az-Zukhruf: 78) And this is the meaning of, 'And We did not wrong them, but it was they who were the wrongdoers.' (az-Zukhruf: 76)

After this, the subject of speech is directed towards the Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him. Very often his Lord would address him to console him and lighten his burden, for he endured much obstinacy and affliction from his people. They hurt his body and soul when they incited the weak-minded among them to stone him until his feet bled.(1) They flung rubbish and camel entrails on his back while he was praying.(2) They hurt him spiritually when they called him a sorcerer, a soothsayer, a liar, a poet and a madman. The True Lord Glorified is He clarifies for him that he has come after an interlude in the line of messengers peace be upon them after the world has been corrupted and evil has spread far and wide. Behind this corruption are people who benefit from it and defend it; and it is only natural that they should oppose you and stand in the way of your mission, for they desire to maintain their positions and benefit from the vice.

The distaste of these people for the Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him reached such a level that they planned his demise and an end to his mission. Allah Glorified is He says, 'and [remember, O Muhammad), when those who disbelieved plotted against you to restrain you or kill you or evict you [from Mecca] But they plan, and Allah plans. And Allah is the best of planners.' (al-Anfal: 30)

(1) This was related by Ibn Al-Qayyim in his book Zad Al-Ma`ad [3/28]. He said, 'The Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him went to Ta`if in the hope that they would aid and assist him against his people ... but they incited the weak-minded amongst them such that they stood in two rows, one on either side of him, and threw stones at him until his feet started bleeding.'

(2) This was related by the author of Subul Al-Huda Wa-Rashad in his book [2/436] and he attributed it to Al-Bukhari, Muslim, Al-Bazzar and At-Tabarani on the authority of Ibn Mas`ud Allah be pleased with him that he said, 'I saw the Messenger of Allah peace and blessings be upon him supplicate against Quraysh on more than one occasion. Once he was praying and there was a band of men from Quraysh seated nearby along with the innards of a camel that had been slaughtered the day before. Abu Jahl asked, "Who will take the entrails of this camel and put them on the shoulders of Muhammad when he prostrates?" So they sent the worst of them, `Uqba ibn Abu Mu`it, and he brought the innards and threw them onto his back, at which they fell over each other laughing. Meanwhile, the Prophet peace and blessings be upon him did not so much as raise his head, but Fatima Allah be pleased with her came along, removed the mess from his back and prayed against whoever had done this.

(3) Al-Qurtubi mentions in his Tafsir [9/6166] in something he relates form Muqatil, 'This verse was revealed in response to their conspiracy against the Prophet peace and blessings be upon him in Dar An-Nadwa, when they decided to put into practice what=

أَمۡ أَبۡرَمُوٓاْ أَمۡرٗا فَإِنَّا مُبۡرِمُونَ (٧٩)

Have these disbelievers thought up some scheme? We too have been scheming [79] (The Quran, az-Zukhruf: 79)

That is to say, they have conspired regarding you O Muhammad, and have formed a plan, but do not be concerned for we await them in ambush; 'We are devising [a plan]' We have a plan just as they have a plan, and while we know what they are thinking and none of it is hidden from us, yet they do not know what we have in store for them; so which of the two parties is the stronger?

أَمۡ يَحۡسَبُونَ أَنَّا لَا نَسۡمَعُ سِرَّهُمۡ وَنَجۡوَىٰهُمۚ بَلَىٰ وَرُسُلُنَا لَدَيۡهِمۡ يَكۡتُبُونَ (٨٠)

Do they think We cannot hear their secret talk and their private counsel? Yes we can: Our messengers are at their sides, recording everything [80] (The Quran, az-Zukhruf: 80)

Do they think that we do not hear their decisions and the plans they are concluding to harm the Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him? Or that we do not hear their hidden thoughts and private conversation? Allah hears their hidden thoughts and their whispers; none of their affair is hidden from Him. Indeed, there is more than that, 'and Our messengers are with them recording.' We hear them and are keeping count of all they say, for We have messengers and angels who write and record all they say and do.

If one were to ask, 'If the True Lord knows and hears all, and nothing of their affair is hidden from Him, then what is the point in writing down their hidden thoughts and whispers and recording them'? We say that this writing down benefits the angels, and it is for their sake. Thus, even if they did not see the events occur as they are recorded in the Preserved Tablet, they will know that Allah is Wise and Omniscient, and thus increase in certainty above and beyond their current certainty and faith on top of their faith.

= Abu Jahl had suggested of selecting a man from each tribe to partake in the murder of the Prophet peace and blessings be upon him so that any requests for retribution would be weakened. Allah killed them all at the Battle of Badr.

قُلْ إِن كَانَ لِلرَّحْمَٰنِ وَلَدٌ فَأَنَا أَوَّلُ الْعَابِدِينَ ﴿٨١﴾

Say [Prophet], ‘If the Lord of Mercy [truly] had offspring I would be the first to worship [them], but [81] (The Quran, az-Zukhruf: 81)

This is an order to the Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him, ‘Say!’ O Muhammad to those who claim that the All-Merciful has a son. ‘Say’ by way of assumption, ‘if the Most Merciful had a son, then I would be the first of [his) worshippers.’ (az-Zukhruf: 81) On the basis that the meaning of ‘if’ is conditional, then the meaning is:(1) ‘Were the All-Merciful to have a son, (and it is Allah who is informing me of this fact), then I would worship him before all others, for I take my orders and my understanding from Allah, not you’.

Some of the scholars,(2) however, said that the ‘if’ here is a particle of negation, which would mean, ‘Say, “the All-Merciful has no son. And I am the first to negate such for I am the foremost amongst His worshippers and the foremost among those who believe in the oneness of Allah’.

In the Quran, the True Lord Glorified is He has described Himself with two adjectives. Some people imagine that these have a single meaning, but so long as two different words are used, then each word must have a meaning specific to it that the other does not afford. The True Lord has described Himself as being ‘One’ and as being ‘Singular’.

His being one means that He is alone, there is no other with Him, and thus it negates multiplicity, As for His being Singular, it means that He is One in and of Himself; He is not composed of parts. We see that when something that is comprised of parts, each part in it is in need of the other parts.

(1) This is merely posing a hypothetical situation for the purposes of argumentation alone, for it is impossible for Allah to have a son. It is as you might say to someone you are debating, ‘If what you say could be proven then I would be the first to believe it’; and this is way of expressing extreme incredulity. It is like saying, ‘there is no way anyone can believe this’.

(2) Among these were Ibn `Abbas, Al-Hasan and As-Suddi. Thus, it reads, ‘Say! The All-Merciful has no son’ and this is the end of a sentence. Then a new one starts, ‘I am the first of the worshippers’, meaning, the first of the monotheists among the people of Mecca, believing that Allah has no son.

So, as long as Allah Glorified is He is Singular in and of Himself, He cannot have a son, for the son is a part of his father. We find in a Qudsi Hadith that Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him said, ‘Fatima is a piece of me’(1), that is, a part of his spirit.

If we take this principle and trace the ancestry of each one of us, we will necessarily arrive at our forefather Adam peace be upon him. We would find that each of us has a portion or an atom that is from our forefather Adam, and it is this atom that witnessed that first covenant that Allah Glorified is He took from Adam’s offspring when they were in the atomic stage: ‘And [mention) when your Lord took from the children of Adam - from their loins - their descendants and made them testify of themselves, [saying to them), “Am I not your Lord?” They said, “Yes, we have testified.” [This) - lest you should say on the day of Resurrection, “Indeed, we were of this unaware.” Or [lest) you say, “It was only that our fathers associated [others in worship) with Allah before, and we were but descendants after them. Then would You destroy us for what the falsifiers have done?”’ (al-A‘raf: 172-173)

This atom is the seed of goodness and the site of faith in a man and from it good works originate. Do you not see man filled with remorse over his sins and resolves to repent? It is a result of the effect this atom has on the human soul, for it was the first to hear Allah’s call and Allah’s message.

The Quran tells us that the jinn are more aware of Allah’s unity than men are. For while men have transgressed against the True Lord Glorified is He and attributed a son to Him, the jinn negated that and considered Allah above taking a son or a consort. Read Allah’s saying, ‘And [it teaches) that exalted is the nobleness of our Lord; He has not taken a wife or a son’ (al-Jinn: 3), that is to say that it is from His Magnificence that He has neither a wife nor son. The one who reflects will see that the taking of wives and children is one of the sources of corruption in the world. Allah Glorified is He says, ‘O you who have believed, indeed, among your wives and your children are enemies to you, so beware of them.’ (at-Taghabun: 14)

(1) It was related by Al-Bukhari in his Sahih [3437, 3450 and 3483] and Muslim in his Sahih [4483] on the authority of Al-Musawwir ibn Makhrama. The wording in Muslim is, ‘Fatima is but a part of me, what harms her, harms me.’

We, in our human customs, might say something like, ‘Marry a virgin so that she may bear you a son who will look after you in your old age.’ But does The True Lord Glorified is He take a son because He has a need such as ours? In addition to that, those who say that `Isa (Jesus) peace be upon him is the son of Allah, what do they say about the time before `Isa (Jesus)? Did Allah not have a son at that time? And what about it after `Isa (Jesus)? Where has Allah’s ‘son’ gone? Thus, we see that all this is nothing but lies against Allah.

سُبۡحَٰنَ رَبِّ ٱلسَّمَٰوَٰتِ وَٱلۡأَرۡضِ رَبِّ ٱلۡعَرۡشِ عَمَّا يَصِفُونَ ﴿٨٢﴾

Exalted be the Lord of the heavens and earth, the Lord of the Throne – He is far above their false descriptions [82]
(The Quran, az-Zukhruf: 82)

It is appropriate that this verse should start with the phrase, ‘Exalted is the Lord of the heavens and the earth,’ after the subject of the previous verse which negated the possibility of Allah Glorified is He taking a son. The word ‘Exalted’ means that Allah Glorified is He is transcendent above anything that comes to one’s mind.

It is for this reason that the word comes only in the context of astonishing things that are beyond the human intellect, such as: ‘Exalted is He who created all pairs - from what the earth grows and from themselves and from that which they do not know.’ (Ya Sin: 36), and, ‘Exalted is He who took His Servant by night from Al-Masjid Al-Haram to Al-Masjid Al-Aqsa.’ (al-Isra’: 1)

Thus, when one’s intellect reaches its limit in questions such as these say, ‘Exalted is Allah’, and affirm Allah’s Transcendence above similarity to creation, and do not judge His Strength by your strength, nor His actions by your actions, nor His Power by your power, but declare Allah’s Transcendence in His names, attributes and actions.

After this, reflect upon how the True Lord Glorified is He mentions in this verse those attributes which are appropriate to the negation of having a son. He says, ‘the Lord of the heavens and the earth.’ Does the One Who owns the heavens and the earth and that which lies within them need a son? In another verse, He says, ‘The creation of the heavens and earth is greater than the creation of mankind, but most of the people do not know.' (Ghafir: 57) Greater still than the heavens and the earth is the Throne, for He is Lord of the Throne. Thus, we see that Allah Glorified is He has absolutely no need of a son. As for Allah's saying, 'above what they describe,' it means by way of lies, or what they attribute to Allah in terms of Him taking a son.

We say that Allah's Transcendence is pre-eternal. Allah is transcendent and this is one of the attributes of His Essence. He was Transcendent before He created anyone to declare such, and when He brought the creation into existence it declared His Transcendence, 'Whatever is in the heavens and whatever is on the earth exalts Allah, and He is the Exalted in Might, the Wise.' (al-Hashr: 1) This extolling of Allah's Glory is persistent throughout the present and into the future, 'Whatever is in the heavens and earth is exalting Him.' (al-Hashr: 24) So, as long as the creation is one system glorifying Allah, then do not deviate from this system yourself and glorify Him too; 'Exalt the name of your Lord, the Most-High.' (al-A'la: 1)

فَذَرْهُمْ يَخُوضُوا۟ وَيَلْعَبُوا۟ حَتَّىٰ يُلَـٰقُوا۟ يَوْمَهُمُ ٱلَّذِى يُوعَدُونَ ﴿٨٣﴾

Leave them to wade in deeper and play about, until they face the Day they have been promised [83]

This is a command to the Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him, 'So leave them', i.e. quit them and that which they busy themselves with of false speech. The word 'vainly' refers to those who venture into talking about that of which they have no knowledge. It is usually used to refer to false speech, and it has connotations of one walking and stumbling in areas unknown, not perceiving what dangers might face him therein. Such a person wrongs himself; one should get a good feel for something before he delves into it and one should be especially careful not to delve into falsehood.

As for Allah's saying, 'and amuse themselves,' Allah has commanded people to be serious about their lives but yet they mess about, Seriousness is the opposite of amusement. The difference between amusement and play is that play is when a person under the age of legal responsibility does something whose only purpose is distraction.

If, however, the person is legally responsible and he does something which has no benefit then this is called amusement. We see that Allah Glorified is He says, ‘But when they saw a transaction or amusement, [O Muhammad], they rushed to it and left you standing.’ (al-Jumu‘a: 11) Thus, amusement is one’s busying oneself with useless play instead of the obligations.

Regarding Allah’s saying, ‘until they meet their Day which they are promised,’ we see that Allah has promised them of this Day and has not created them in vain nor left them to their own devices. Indeed, He has shown them truth and falsehood and promised each a reward in accordance to what each deserves.

So, those who go to the fire have not been wronged by Allah and neither did He take them unawares; rather, He threatened and warned them of this outcome. The Quran is replete with such promises and threats; read for example, ‘As for he who gives and fears Allah and believes in the best [reward], We will ease him toward ease. But as for he who withholds and considers himself free of need and denies the best [reward), We will ease him toward difficulty.’ (al-Layl: 5-10)

The True Lord Glorified is He first mentions the good for His servant in His promises and His threats. Yes, indeed, even His threats contain goodness, for the one who warns you of evil before it afflicts you has paid you good service and deserves to be thanked. In this light, we can understand His saying in the chapter of ar-Rahman where He enumerates His blessings upon us, ‘There will be sent upon you a flame of fire and smoke, and you will not defend yourselves. So which of the favors of your Lord would you deny?’ (ar-Rahman: 35-36) So can the fire, the flashes and smoke be considered as being from amongst the many blessing of Allah? Yes, they are from His blessings because He warns you against the things that would lead to your falling into them and thus distances you from them.

Returning to the verse, ‘So leave them to converse vainly and amuse themselves until they meet their Day which they are promised,’ we see that it is an invitation to the Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him to lighten the load upon himself and not overburden himself on account of the obstinacy of his people and their persistence in error. The True Lord Glorified is He is consoling His Messenger and easing his burden. He addressed him in many other verses in similar fashion such as His saying, ‘So do not let yourself perish over them in regret. Indeed, Allah knows of what they do.’ (Fatir: 8)

وَهُوَ ٱلَّذِى فِى ٱلسَّمَآءِ إِلَٰهٌ وَفِى ٱلْأَرْضِ إِلَٰهٌ ۚ وَهُوَ ٱلْحَكِيمُ ٱلْعَلِيمُ ﴿٨٤﴾

It is He who is God in heaven and God on earth; He is the All Wise, the All Knowing [84] (The Quran, az-Zukhruf: 84)

Some people think that Allah Glorified is He is in the sky; if he calls on Him, he does so in a loud voice so that He may hear him, but Allah Glorified is He pervades all places and all times; there is no place that can enclose Him and no time that can contain Him, for He is the Creator of time and the Creator of space; and the created cannot encompass its Creator. It is for this reason that we do not say of Allah ‘when?’ or ‘where?’ So, Allah is everywhere(1). Divinity is one of His essential attributes, and one of the attributes of perfection; it cannot be separated from Him and never leaves Him, neither in the heavens, nor on earth.

Some orientalists take issue with this verse because of the repetition of the indefinite noun, ‘deity’. The word is repeated in the indefinite and the rule in grammar is that if a word is repeated in the indefinite, the second word refers to something other than the first, as one might say, ‘I met a man and was kind to a man’. The second man is different from the first. If, however, a definite noun is repeated, the second one is the same as the first. One might say, ‘I met the man and was kind to the man’. So, it is the same man. Thus, this rule of grammar poses a problem for us in relation to this verse, for who would say that there is one Allah in the heavens and one Allah on earth?

We find also in the Hadith of the Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him evidence to support this rule, for when he read the verse, ‘And, behold, with every hardship comes ease. Verily, with every hardship comes ease!’ (ash-Sharh: 5-6), he peace and blessings be upon him said, ‘One hardship cannot overcome two eases(1)’ because the word hardship is mentioned in the definite, while the word ease is mentioned in the indefinite.

(1) From Proofreader: This information is per the knowledge and belief of Sheikh Ash-Sha`rawi may Allah rest his soul, and it was stated by him to further clarify certain points, but it does not necessarily confirm to the scientific facts and information proven true.

Moving on to Allah’s saying, ‘And He is the Wise, the Knowing.’ (az-Zukhruf: 84) Wise refers to the one who puts things in their correct place with wisdom, and All Knowing refers to the one who knows what is best for His creation. He knows what will help them in their daily-lives and in preparing for their return to Him. For Allah Glorified is He would not give us material nourishment of food, drink, and air and then leave us without a methodology and without a set of values to nourish our souls as He nourished our bodies.

For this reason, this path is said to be spiritual, for it is to the heart what the spirit is to the body. The difference between the two is that the spirit has an appointed time of death, at which it will be separated from the body, whereas the spirituality of values and the path to Allah is everlasting; it accompanies the individual in this world and the next.

وَعِندَهُۥ عِلْمُ ٱلسَّاعَةِ وَإِلَيْهِ تُرْجَعُونَ ﴿٨٥﴾

Exalted is He who has control of the heavens and earth and everything between them; He has knowledge of the Hour; you will all be returned to Him [85] (The Quran, az-Zukhruf: 85)

‘The word ‘blessed’ means an increase in good such that a little gives you much more than you expected. His saying, ‘to whom belongs the dominion of the heavens and the earth’ (az-Zukhruf: 85), and in another verse, ‘To Him belongs what is in the heavens and what is on the earth’ (al-Hajj: 64) means that He possesses the container and its contents. In the chapter of Ta Ha, Allah Glorified is He says, ‘To Him belongs what is in the heavens and what is on the earth and what is between them and what is under the soil.’ (Ta Ha: 6)

(1) Al-Hakim rated it as mursal in his Mustadrak [Hadith 3910] on the authority of Al-Hasan Al-Basri who said, ‘The Prophet peace and blessings be upon him went out one day happy and joyful, saying with a smile on his face, ‘one hardship will not overcome two eases, “And, behold, with every hardship comes ease: verily, with every hardship comes ease!” (ash-Sharh: 5-6) Al-Bayhaqi also related it like this in Shu'ab Al-`Iman [9657].

We see that the verses encompass the entire universe and deem it all the property of Allah; the whole universe, its heavens and its earth, all that is in the heavens, all that is in the earth, all that is between the heavens and the earth, and what is under the earth; all of it is Allah's property.

At the end of the verse we find that there is a great deal of good buried beneath the ground; if Allah so wills He makes his servants aware of it in accordance with their technological development and progress. There is, as we speak, hidden under the earth water, petrol, minerals, precious stones, and other valuable things. It is as if the True Lord is alerting us, when he says, 'and all that is beneath the soil,' to concern ourselves with what lies underground and unearth it, and to explore it in order to extract the plenty that lies therein. For this reason, we see the geologists, archaeologists and petro-geologists roaming the world from one end to the other searching for these riches, even in the oceans which are included in the meaning of this verse because they are part of the earth they approximate to three quarters of the earth's surface.

Next comes Allah's saying, 'and with whom is knowledge of the Hour and to whom you will be returned.' In both phrases in this verse, Allah has used the rhetorical device of restriction, putting the prepositions and their objects at the beginning of each phrase to emphasise that this knowledge is restricted to Allah alone and none other. Similarly, when He said, 'and unto whom you all shall be brought back!' (az-Zukhruf: 85) It means Him alone and none other – you will not be returned except to Him. Thus, this is like a summarised message to mankind: remember your end and your afterlife, remember the reward after the work, and do not be deluded by your blessings for after them you will be called to account and given recompense. Allah Glorified is He says, 'No! [But) indeed, man transgresses. Because he sees himself self-sufficient; Indeed, to your Lord is the return.' (al-'Alaq: 6-8) Hence, everything is both from Allah and is going back to Allah: from Allah in terms of creation, continuance and sustenance, and returning to Allah in terms of recourse and after death.

إِلَّا مَن شَهِدَ بِٱلۡحَقِّ وَهُمۡ يَعۡلَمُونَ ٨٦

Those gods they invoke besides Him have no power of intercession, unlike those who bore witness to the truth and recognized it [86] (The Quran, az-Zukhruf: 86)

Those they call upon instead of Allah, such as the sun, the moon, the stars and idols, all these objects of worship are false. The proof of this is that they are incapable of intercession for others and neither can they defend themselves from harm. They are incapable of intercession because the power of intercession is with whom? It is with Allah. How would Allah accept their intercession when they are the cause of the misguidance of those who ‘but only those who testify to the truth [can benefit], and they know’? This exception means that none will intercede with Allah except he who has borne witness to the truth.

If you [Prophet] ask them who created them they are sure to say, ‘God,’ so why are they so deluded? [87] (The Quran, az-Zukhruf: 87)

So, these believe and admit that Allah is their creator. In another verse, ‘If you asked them, “who created the heavens and earth and subjected the sun and the moon?” they would surely say, “Allah.” Then how are they deluded?’ (al-’Ankabut: 61) It is strange of them that after admitting this that they should not fully believe in Allah and His Messenger. Hence the end of this verse says, ‘how are they deluded?’ How could they be diverted from this truth when they admit and bear witness that Allah is their creator and the creator of the heavens and the earth. For this reason, the True Lord Glorified is He expresses wonderment in the chapter of al-Baqara at their disbelief, for which there can be neither justification nor room for consideration. He Glorified is He says, ‘How can you disbelieve in Allah when you were lifeless and He brought you to life; then He will cause you to die, then He will bring you [back) to life, and then to Him you will be returned.’ (al-Baqara: 28)

Next, Allah says:

فَٱصۡفَحۡ عَنۡهُمۡ وَقُلۡ سَلَٰمٞۚ فَسَوۡفَ يَعۡلَمُونَ ٨٩

The Prophet has said, ‘My Lord, truly these are people who do not believe’ [88] but turn away from them and say, ‘Peace’: they will come to know [89] (The Quran, az-Zukhruf: 88 - 89)

Who is speaking? Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him is addressing his Lord, ‘O my Lord, indeed these are,’ that is, the disbelievers of Mecca, ‘are a people who do not believe.’ (az-Zukhruf: 88)

Notice that the Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him was harmed physically by these people and he was also harmed mentally and spiritually in that they accused him of magic and poetry, and of soothsaying and madness as well as harming his family. He was afflicted by them in both these ways, yet he mentioned none of this at all; all he was concerned about was the issue of their faith. He did not say, ‘O Lord, my people have harmed me and done such and such to me’; he only said, ‘O my Lord, indeed these are a people who do not believe.’ This is what burned in his soul and exasperated Him. It has been related in a sound Hadith that he never once sought revenge for Himself and never once was he angered on his own account. Rather, his jealousy and his anger were only for the sake of Allah and the truth that he brought and to which he called the people. Ahmad Shawqi expressed this in his poetry saying :(1)

If he was angered then ‘twas only anger, for the truth, not from malice or rancour.

---

(1) The wording of the verse in Al-Mawsu`a Ash-Shi`riyya is:
If he was angered then ‘twas only anger,
for the truth, not from malice or hatred.
It is from a poem by the prince of poets Ahmad Shawqi called Nahj Al-Burda in the metre known as Al-Kamil. The poem consists of 131 couplets, of which this is the 33rd.

It is as though the True Lord Glorified is He when swearing on the saying of the Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him ‘O my Lord, indeed these are a people who do not believe’ is saying, ‘I swear by the truth of this statement’. The thing to which is being sworn is omitted due to its obvious nature and it is, ‘I will punish them in such a way that your heart will be put at rest regarding them. So, do not be perturbed by their lack of faith, for had I so willed, I would have compelled them to have faith, creating them in the likeness of the angels. All that is upon you, O Muhammad, is to bear with them’. ‘So turn aside from them and say, “Peace.”’ Your bearing with them will attract them towards faith in you, and there will arise from amongst them soldiers from the armies of Allah. This was in fact realised in Khalid ibn Al-Walid, `Ikrima ibn Abu Jahl, `Amr ibn Al-`As Allah be pleased with them and others. These were among the foremost of the disbelievers but were later to become leaders in the ranks of the Muslims.

In another verse, Allah Glorified is He says, ‘so forgive with gracious forgiveness,’ (al-Hijr: 85) because one may forgive someone who has harmed him and yet there remains inside him some remnants of hatred, anger or rage against the offending party. As for gracious forgiveness, it is that which is accompanied by tolerance which uproots any feelings of rage, anger, or hatred.

It is as though the True Lord Glorified is He is saying to His Messenger peace and blessings be upon him: bear with them gently and be not angry, for your anger affects you, and you have at your side a Lord who is angered on your behalf, so do not you become angry yourself. These are some of the refined etiquettes towards which Islam directs us.

It is well known that the Lawgiver is Wise and that He does not call us to account for the thoughts that occur to our hearts nor our sentiments so long as they are not translated into longing or action. After this, Allah raises you up and invites you to free yourself from just these thoughts if they are bad thoughts towards others.

These stages that we have learnt from Allah’s saying, ‘and who restrain anger and who pardon the people - and Allah loves the doers of good’ (Al-‘Imran: 134) are as follows: The first stage is to subdue one’s anger. The second stage is forgiveness, part of which is to rid oneself of all the bad thoughts such that one finds one's heart to be unpolluted, with no traces of rage, anger, or hatred remaining. The last stage is to show benevolence to the one who has wronged you and this is the stage of the elect who know well the pardoning nature of the revelation and look to what Allah has in store for them.

There are many people who find it very strange that a person should show benevolence towards someone who has done him harm; 'How could the revelation expect such of us?' they ask. We reply, 'imagine if one of your own children hit another and this one came crying and complaining, to whom would your heart go out and to whom would you incline? Of course, it would go to the one who was struck. Similarly, the True Lord Glorified is He takes the side of the weak one who pardons those who have done him wrong.

Al-Hasan Al-Basri was once informed that such-and such a man had backbitten him, at which he sent a plate of dates as a gift to the man. When he was asked about this, he said, 'because he donated his good deeds to me.'(1)

Returning to Allah's saying, 'and say, "Peace."' It is understood that the word 'peace' on its own, stripped of 'be upon you' is what is to be said to the one whom you find yourself at enmity with, and from whose company you would rather depart. In real life, when we have our differences with someone and are unable to reach an agreement, we say to him 'peace'. Thus, we see that Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon him when he was debating his uncle, said to him, 'Peace be upon you! I shall ask my Lord to forgive you' (Maryam: 47) meaning 'the peace of farewell, not the peace one wishes another when greeting him.

Finally, regarding Allah's saying, 'But they are going to know,' it means that when you do this they will come to realise the outcome is as you said, and they will come to know how I will punish them on account of their disbelief in you.

(1) Abu Hamid Al-Ghazali in the Ihya' 'Ulum Ad-Din [2/154] relates that a man said to Al-Hasan, 'Of a surety, so and so was backbiting you.' So, he sent him a plate of dates and said, 'It has reached me that you have donated some of your good deeds to me, so I wanted to repay you for them, but forgive me for I am unable to pay you in full.'

ad-Dukhan

In the Name of God, the Most Merciful, the Dispenser of Mercy

The chapter of ad-Dukhan (1) :

حمٓ ﴿١﴾ وَٱلۡكِتَٰبِ ٱلۡمُبِينِ ﴿٢﴾

Ha Mim* [1] By the Scripture that makes things clear[2] (The Quran, ad-Dukhan: 1-2)

The chapter of ad-Dukhan is one of the hawamim chapters, i.e. it begins with the disjointed letters ha mim, and we have discussed these letters before, so there is no need for repetition here. The intellect has nothing to say about these letters beyond articulating them as they are, and as the Messenger of Allah articulated them. We do not ask ourselves about their meanings and there is nothing stopping the intellects from speculating in an attempt to derive some of their meanings. If we convince ourselves that something is correct regarding their meanings, we then say that Allah knows best what He means by them

This is because the religion has matters that are connected to creed and matters that are connected to rulings, as well as matters that are connected to the Quran, which expresses both creed and rulings.

(1) The chapter of ad-Dukhan is a Meccan chapter by consensus except for His statement 'Indeed, We will remove the torment for a little.' (ad-Dukhan: 15) It consists of seventy-five verses. It is the 44th chapter in the order of the Quran. Regarding its virtues, it is mentioned that Abu Rafi` said: 'Whoever reads ad-Dukhan on the night of Friday wakes up forgiven, and he will marry from the pure companions who have the most beautiful eyes.' Related by Ad-Darimi in his Musnad .

In each of these three things, there is an unseen and a witnessed. Knowledge of the unseen is entrusted to Allah Glorified is He such that man remains incapable in front of Allah’s Knowledge and in front of matters that he does not understand. However, he believes in them simply because Allah has informed him of them in His Book or on the tongue of His Prophet peace and blessings be upon him and he does not speak out of his own desire.

Amongst the creedal doctrines, for example, is the issue of faith in one God. This is unseen, but it is possible for the intellect to prove it because had there been in heaven or on earth any deities other than Allah, both those realms would surely have fallen into ruin. If there had been numerous deities and each one was concerned with some aspect of the creation, then each one of them would be in need of the others, and thus it would not be right for them to be deities.

Therefore, with intellect it is possible for us to establish that Allah is one deity. However, amongst the creedal doctrines there are matters that the intellect cannot access, and it stops upon hearing them mentioned such as what happens in the grave, the reckoning and the Hereafter.

Likewise, in rulings there is that which is unseen and that which is witnessed. Prayer, in its outward, witnessed sense, brings about equality in worship in the world. When we hear ‘Allah is the Greatest’ we go to the mosques and we establish ourselves before our Lord, bowing and prostrating, and in this the rulers and the ruled, the rich and the poor the strong and the weak, are all equal. Everyone is submissive to Allah.

This is the aspect that is witnessed in prayer, and it also contains unseen elements that the intellect cannot access. The prayer, in terms of how many units (raka’at/raka`as) are to be performed in it, is something we cannot explain. Why does the dawn prayer consist of two units, the noon prayer four and the sunset prayer three? This is why asking about the number of units is futile.

The same goes for the Quran. It also contains unseen elements for which the intellect has no scope, and it is these disjointed letters the knowledge of which we assign to the One Who Glorified is He said them.

Allah’s statement: ‘By the clear Book’, i.e. manifest, clear and encompassing everything, represents that which is witnessed. In the beginning of this chapter, the True Lord Glorified is He has gathered between the unseen in (ha mim) and the witnessed in ‘By the clear Book.’ They are both from Allah, so there is no oath by this.

Or, the style here is the style of an oath; ‘I swear by ha mim and I swear by the clear, manifest Book that is understood by the intellects’. They are both from Allah and they are sworn by. Allah the Exalted then says:

فِيهَا يُفْرَقُ كُلُّ أَمْرٍ حَكِيمٍ ﴿٤﴾ أَمْرًا مِّنْ عِندِنَآ ۚ إِنَّا كُنَّا مُرْسِلِينَ ﴿٥﴾

Truly We sent it down on a blessed night — We have always sent warnings [3] A night when every matter of wisdom was made distinct [4] At Our command — We have always sent messages to man[5]
(The Quran, ad-Dukhan: 3-5)

The matter of bestowing from on high means that something is sent from above to below and it necessitates that there is someone sending it, something being sent, someone to whom the thing is being sent. As long as the One sending is Allah, then bestowing from on high is always from above regardless of the place because He said regarding iron: ‘And We sent down iron, wherein is great military might and benefits for the people,’ (al-Hadid: 25). Iron is found inside the earth, and bestowing from on high informs of the sublimity of the One sending. Then, the thing being sent is the Noble Quran to the one who is sent to mankind ‘on a blessed night,’ which is the Night of Al-Qadr, meaning the time when the Quran was sent down all at once.

He said ‘night’ because night is the time of stillness and calm such that there is no clamour, noise, or din that can disturb that which is being sent down. Likewise, man is motionless and his limbs are not occupied with anything. Therefore, at night the intellect has everything it needs to be alert and to comprehend and one’s soul is untroubled. This is why you read in the beginning of the chapter of al-Muzzammil: ‘O you who wraps himself [in clothing], Arise [to pray] the night, except for a little - Half of it - or subtract from it a little. Or add to it, and recite the Quran with measured recitation. Indeed, We will cast upon you a heavy word. Indeed, the hours of the night are more effective for concurrence [of heart and tongue] and more suitable for words.' (al-Muzzammil: 1-6)

Therefore, the Quran was sent down at night because it is the most appropriate time for it to be sent down, and it was sent down upon the heart of Allah's Messenger in Mecca. So, it is the night in Mecca and nowhere else, and Mecca is in the middle of the world(1) and its centre. This is why Allah Glorified is He says: 'And thus we have made you a just community that you will be witnesses over the people and the Messenger will be a witness over you.' (al-Baqara: 143)

Some people say that this night is the Night of Al-Qadr because of His statement: 'Verily! We have sent it (this Quran) down in the night of Al-Qadr (Decree).' (al-Qadr: 1) Others say that it is the fifteenth night of Sha`ban, and this issue requires some examination because it was sent down in one of them.

We say that the Quran, before it was sent down and carried out its task in existence, where was it? It was in the Preserved Tablet: 'Indeed, it is a noble Quran. In a Preserved Tablet; None touch it except the purified.' (al-Waqi'a: 77-79) And He said: 'And indeed it is, in the Mother of the Book with Us, exalted and full of wisdom.' (az-Zukhruf: 4)

The first sending down of the Quran was when it came down all at once from the Preserved Tablet to the lowest sky. However, is that which was recorded on the Preserved Tablet sent down or was it a copy? They said: 'It was a copy after it had been transcribed.'

Then, after that, it came down in instalments according to the circumstances and events, and it was sent down with the Angel Jibril (Gabriel) peace be upon him on the heart of the Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him and each instalment has an occasion.

Therefore, we have three phases of the Quran being sent down: the first is when it was transcribed from the Preserved Tablet, and this had a time. Then it came down all at once to the lowest sky, and this also had a time. Then it came down in instalments according to the circumstances. This sending down happened over an extended period of time that included all the events and this took up several years.

(1) Dr. Husayn Kamal Ad-Din, professor of surveying and spherical astronomy at King Sa'ud University, discovered that Ennobled Mecca is established in the heart of a circle that passes through parts of all seven continents which form the land. After the studies, he established that the farthest parts of land in Africa, Europe, and Asia are 8,000 kilometress from Mecca.

From these three phases it is possible to find a way out of this ambiguity; was it the Night of Decree or the fifteenth night of Sha`ban? There is no objection to the two nights sharing in this virtue of any one of these phases.

Then, the fifteenth night of Sha`ban has its own specific honour and nobility, which is the changing of the direction to which all Muslims pray all over the world. Then there is the fact that facing Jerusalem had a time and wisdom. Too, facing the Ka`ba also had a time and wisdom.

Thus, the comparison here is not between truth and falsehood, but rather, the difference between two wise matters. However, this one has a time and that one has a time. This is why the True Lord Glorified is He did not want to make the alteration of the direction to be at the beginning of the obligatory prayer. He wanted it to be during the obligatory prayer, so the command to change was divided into two parts. Thus, he prayed the first half of the prayer towards Jerusalem and the second half of the prayer towards the Ka`ba.(1) If this event proves anything, it proves that Jerusalem is a sanctified place for Muslims, just like the Ka`ba, and the event of the Night Journey to Jerusalem further confirms this.

Therefore, Allah Glorified is He wanted the prayer to be towards Jerusalem for some time and then to be towards the Ka`ba, and there is wisdom in both. The first is that Jerusalem is a sanctified place for Muslims. The second is that Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him had a deep affection for the prayer direction of Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon him.

This is why Allah Glorified is He says: ‘We have certainly seen the turning of your face, [O Muhammad], toward the heaven, and We will surely turn you to a qiblah with which you will be pleased. So turn your face toward Al-Masjid Al-Haram.' (al-Baqara: 144)

(1) From Ibn `Umar Allah be pleased with him who said: ‘While the people were performing the dawn prayer in Quba` when someone came to them and said: ‘Indeed, the Messenger of Allah peace and blessings be upon him has been commanded on this night to face the Ka`ba, so turn towards it.’ Their faces were towards the Levant and then they turned and faced the Ka`ba.’ Related by Muslim in his Sahih (830) and Al-Bayhaqi in As-Sunnan Al-Kubra (2/2)

The prayer was made obligatory for Allah's Messenger after his Ascension into heaven from Jerusalem, and this prayer was towards a direction and this direction must inevitably take both a legislative principle and a principle of continuation. Allah made it a test for the Muslims and the non-Muslims because when the direction of prayer was towards Jerusalem, they said: 'What has made him turn from the direction of Ibrahim (Abraham) to the direction of Dawud (David) and Sulaiman (Solomon)?' We said: It was in order for Jerusalem to be one of the sanctified places in Islam and so that the non-Muslims would not have exclusive possession over it.

The Jews received news of this matter and they used it to spread doubt. They said: 'If Muhammad is rejecting our religion then why does he pray in our direction?' Therefore, it was a test for both sides so that man could adhere to divine instructions without the intellect interfering.

They said regarding the blessed night that it is the night of 'being free', the night of the contract, and the night of mercy. The night of bara`a is taken from the sakk (receipt) that is given by the alms (zakat) worker to the taxpayer when he gives him Allah's right regarding his wealth, which is the zakat. The worker gives him a certificate of being free which proves that he has given his zakat and freed himself of his responsibility therein, and the word sakk carries the same meaning.

The night of mercy is because they said: 'It is mercy towards Allah's Messenger first and foremost because his soul was longing to face the direction of Ibrahim (Abraham).

Regarding Allah's statement: 'Indeed, We sent it down during a blessed night. Indeed, We were to warn [mankind],' after having mentioned sending down He mentions warning; and sending down is in order to warn because the legislative maxim is that averting harm takes precedence over bringing about benefit(1), so He mentioned warning before giving glad tidings.

(1) One of the proofs of jurisprudence and its principles is the statement of the jurists: (Averting harms takes priority over bringing about benefit, and the greater harm must be averted first).=

We previously said: Imagine that someone throws you an apple, and at the same time, someone throws a stone at you. With which one are you going to be preoccupied? There is no doubt that you will be more concerned with protecting yourself from the stone than receiving the apple.

This is also the case with the Quranic style. The phrase ‘We were to warn’ indicates that warning was in the past and it is continuing in the present. This is because the True Lord Glorified is He is not governed by a specific time because He is the creator of time. Something created by Allah cannot hold sway over Allah, and as long as time is created by Allah, then this is the case.

The past, present and future apply to us human beings. As for Allah, all time is the same for Him. When you read, for example: ‘for Allah is indeed Much-Forgiving, a Dispenser of Mercy’ (al-Ahzab: 50), you say that He was, He still is and He will be in the future because as long as He exists since pre-eternity, and change does not happen to Him, then He is Much-Forgiving and a Dispenser of Mercy.

Regarding His statement: ‘On that night is made distinct every precise matter - [Every] matter [proceeding] from Us,’ it means that on this night ‘made distinct every precise matter.’ It is clarified, explained, and presented in detail. The difference here is not between truth and falsehood, but rather between matters that are both true and each has wisdom in its time.

Contemplate on the thing itself being described as (wise) because it is a thing belonging to Allah: ‘[Every] matter [proceeding] from Us,’ which means that there is no wisdom that reaches this thing that has come from The True Lord. ‘Indeed, We were to send [a messenger].’ This means: ‘We did not leave our creation to be neglected. Rather, We created them and we sent to them those who would take them by the hand to the straight path, show them guidance, and make it clear to them.

When the True Lord created the first creation He also sent the first messenger to guide them, and this is why Adam peace be upon him was the first human being sent as a messenger because the Creator created man. Why? He created him to populate the earth: ‘He has produced you from the earth and settled you in it.’ (Hud: 61) This means that He asked you to populate it, and populating requires rightness, while corruption is held in check. The least that can be done, if we do not increase in rightness, is to leave alone that which is right.

= This means that if a matter is caught between averting harm and bringing about benefit, averting harm has priority over bringing about benefit. If the matter is caught between averting two harms then averting the greater harm takes priority over averting any other harm.

We clarified this matter by using the example of a well in the desert. We said: If you are not going to build a wall around it to protect it from earth creeping towards it, or install a device that will help people extract the water, then the least you can do is leave it as it is and not destroy it.

The same goes for man in populating the earth; he must use his intellect with regards to self-evident truths so that with them he can arrive at theories that will improve his life. We have the example of wool, fur, and hair. Each one of them has specific qualities and that to which they are suited. Allah says, ‘and from their wool, fur, and hair is furnishing and enjoyment for a time.’ (an-Nahl: 80)

It is known that fur is taken from camels, wool is taken from sheep and hair is taken from goats, and each one of them has specific qualities that man uses as clothing and in his home. This is part of populating the earth such that if we were to look at the maxims of engineering and the theories we would find that they initially rely on something self-evident that is found in the universe.

Therefore, any advancement in the universe comes from something self-evident that has been granted by Allah, and intellects, being used with regards to self-evident truths, are part of the populating of the earth.

This is why, when you reflect on how the Quran addresses mankind, you find that it begins with simple matters that are far from anything intellectually complicated. It talks to them first about the way and what will make their lives upright and bring harmony to their daily lives. It speaks to intellects according to their intellectual advancement.

Whenever man’s intellect has matured and the methodology has become solid and manifested in people’s attitude and action, it (the Quran) then begins to talk to them about rational theories, and it says to them: indeed the earth is spherical and it revolves around the sun because the intellects have become prepared for research and investigation.

Look at roads, for example, how primitive they were; merely a trail in the desert wide enough for one camel. Look at how they have developed today and they have been supplied with means of rest, security, speed, and safety. Indeed, it is because the intellect has been used to make progress.

Did man not learn from the crow how to bury the dead? Did we not learn from dogs and do we not use them now, despite scientific developments in investigating clues and identifying criminals, by using their sense of smell? We have taken natural matters that Allah has granted us and built on them, and we have developed them in order to populate the earth.

Populating the earth cannot be done unless the way is straight first, as it is the foundation of advancement and the foundation of betterment because when the Creator Glorified is He created the creation, He laid down a way for it that would govern it and regulate its daily activities, by saying 'do such-and-such' and 'do not do such-and-such'.

If the creation is upright upon the way of its Lord and Creator, then its life is upright, and if it deviates and goes astray, the shame and nakedness of the community become clear and the symptoms of corruption emerge and come in between people.

We previously gave an example of this with the instruction manual that the manufacturer provides in order for the product to be protected and maintained. Likewise, if you travel along the way of your Creator, you will never be afflicted with ruin, and this is where the mission of the messengers comes in; they explain and confirm the way of (do such-and-such) and (do not do such-and-such). Even Adam, what happened when he contravened the way? Our Lord said to him: 'Eat whatever you want from Paradise except for this tree'(1), and they ate from it. What happened?

When he contravened he was afflicted with ruin. His nakedness became manifest when he ate from the tree and he was forced to do what Allah had not obliged him to do before such as release wind and excrement and have an upset stomach. He did not experience any of these things before he contravened Allah’s Command.

(1) Allah Glorified is He says, 'And We said, "O Adam, dwell, you and your wife, in Paradise and eat therefrom in [ease and] abundance from wherever you will. But do not approach this tree, lest you be among the wrongdoers."' (al-Baqara: 35)

Allah’s statement: ‘[Every] matter [proceeding] from Us. Indeed, We were to send [a messenger]’ means that we have been sending messengers to those whom we have appointed as vicegerents on earth so that their daily activities can be safe from ruin and so that society can be safe from evil; people supporting one other and not going against one another.

رَحۡمَةٗ مِّن رَّبِّكَۚ إِنَّهُۥ هُوَ ٱلسَّمِيعُ ٱلۡعَلِيمُ ٦

As a mercy [Prophet] from your Lord who sees and knows all [6]
(The Quran, ad-Dukhan: 6)

Sending is a mercy from Allah to His servants because it is a matter for us, you and me, from One Who is above us. We do not find any deficiency therein, as no one from amongst us looks down on anyone else. We receive our commands from Allah. This is why simple people like farmers say: ‘The finger that is hurt by the law does not bleed’ because everyone submits to Allah’s Commands and rulings and is pleased with them.

Therefore, our lives are upright when we travel along the way. This is why He called it ‘the straightway’ and He called it ‘the straight path’, i.e. in the middle; not inclining this way or that way. This is because He wants to save you effort and time, and all of this is from the fruits of the way and travelling along the straight path.

This is a mercy from Allah to us, and what a great mercy it is that He has not left us to experiment and disturb one another until we arrive at correctness, the truth, and the straight path. It is from His Mercy towards us that He has not left us to oppose one another and clash with one another. Rather, He has laid down laws for us and He has laid down a way for us to travel along from the very beginning.

There is a difference between a matter that makes you alter and straighten your course and a matter that is straight from the very beginning. It is from Allah’s Mercy towards us that He has made us travel in one direction, such that all activities are directed towards construction and all efforts are directed towards one objective. All individuals co-operate therein and all individuals support each other.

Otherwise, if activities had been allowed to conflict with one another they would have demolished and destroyed. What is the point of you building something if someone else is going to destroy it? As the poet said:

When will the building reach its completion, one day
If you are building it while someone else is destroying it

Reflect on the Quranic expression: ‘as mercy from your Lord.’ He did not say ‘as a mercy from Allah’, because The Lord is the one who is in charge of nurturing and taking care of you. We said previously that divinity is a responsibility and lordship is a gift. This mercy is a mercy from the Lord, the Merciful Caretaker; like a mother who nurtures her child, showing compassion.

As long as Allah Glorified is He is your Lord, your Nurturer and your Creator then it is obligatory upon you to obey Him and not exit from His way. ‘Indeed, He is the Hearing, the Knowing.’ Allah is the All-Hearing with regards to all of mankind’s pains and grievances, if they proclaim them. He is the All Knowing with regards to their states and what their hearts possess if they conceal it within themselves even though the address here is in the singular form and directed at the Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him.

In the statement, ‘…as a mercy from your Lord’ (ad-Dukhan: 6), Allah is addressing Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him. This is a special care bestowed by Allah upon His Messenger peace and blessings be upon him and a manifestation of his rank with Allah. Allah’s Eye is watching over him, and he is so dear to Him that He will not allow him to be afflicted with any harm or pain on behalf of his people. Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him is the most precious human being to Allah, and that is why He edified him in a way that makes him not only guided, within himself, but also guidance for mankind.

Lord of the heavens and the earth and everything between — if only you people were firm believers [7]
(The Quran, ad-Dukhan: 7)

After Allah says: ‘as a mercy from your Lord...’ (ad-Dukhan: 6), He confirms it with the statement: ‘Lord of the heavens and the earth and everything between...’ (ad-Dukhan: 7), and then He attributes this to their conviction: ‘...if only you people were firm believers!’ (ad-Dukhan: 7) As if Allah is sure that they, when asked, will say nothing but that they are firm believers! So, if they are certain that Allah is the Creator of the heavens and the earth and all that is between them, then why do you deny His Messenger peace and blessings be upon him?

Indeed, the universal signs clearly indicate the Creator, Exalted, and Glorified is He; this sky that shelters you, this earth that carries you and all the secrets and treasures in between. Indeed, all the riches that are in the earth are proof of Allah. If what you see in the earth and in the heavens is the realm of the mulk (the corporeal visible realm), then what do you think of the realm of the malakut (the spiritual invisible realm)?

You can know the realm of the mulk by means of your senses. As for the realm of the malakut, it is unseen. We know nothing of it apart from what Allah has told us, as when He said about prophet Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon him: ‘In this way, We showed Ibrahim (Abraham) Allah’s mighty dominion over the heavens and the earth…’ (al-An‘am: 75).

Hence, back to ‘...if only you people were firm believers!’ (ad-Dukhan: 7) The term ‘firm believers’ means to embrace belief without doubt; not in knowledge, vision, or reality. We explained earlier about the certainty of knowledge, the certainty of vision, and the certainty of truth. Certainty, whether in knowledge, vision, or truth, is that firm belief which carries a judgment that does not swerve.

These three phases are mentioned in His saying: ‘No indeed! If only you knew for certain. You will most definitely see hellfire; you will see it with the eye of certainty. On that Day, you will be asked about your pleasures.’ (at-Takathur: 5-8)

And Allah says in the chapter of al-Waqi`a: ‘but if he is one of those who denied the truth and went astray, he will be welcomed with scalding water. He will burn in hell. This is the certain truth: [Prophet], glorify the name of your Lord the Supreme.’ (al-Waqi‘a: 92-96)

However, were these people really certain that Allah is the Lord of the heavens and the earth and all that is between them? The Quran says to them: ‘...if only you people were firm believers!’ (ad-Dukhan: 7) ‘If’ here indicates doubt in their conviction because if they had been confident they would have believed in Allah’s Messenger peace and blessings be upon him and accepted him as true. They acknowledge that Allah is their Creator and the Creator of the entire universe, but despite that they oppose Allah’s religion. Why? This is because religion restricts their activity and deprives them of their desires and prevents them from benefiting from the corruption that is present in their society! True religion will regulate their leadership and make masters and slaves equal. Therefore, they rejected the true religion because of the method it came with and they inclined toward a false religion because it does not have any method; commands or prohibitions.

لَآ إِلَٰهَ إِلَّا هُوَ يُحْيِۦ وَيُمِيتُ رَبُّكُمْ وَرَبُّ ءَابَآئِكُمُ ٱلْأَوَّلِينَ ٨

There is no god but Him: He gives life and death
— He is your Lord and the Lord of your forefathers[8] (The Quran, ad-Dukhan: 8)

The True Lord the Glorified and Exalted wants our words to be applied to our actions. Regarding the phrase: ‘There is no deity...’ (ad-Dukhan: 8), the deity is the true object of worship because when they worshipped the idols they called them deities. This is according to their claims and to how they imagined them! However, they are false deities and to call them so is also false because the deity is the true object of worship who has a method and this method is based on that proof.

As for their claims, they are without any proof. It is nothing but a form of worship that satisfies the inclination of the soul towards religiosity, even if the object of worship is an idol that has no commandments and no way.

Religiosity, as we have said, is a natural disposition within man, and actual events and experience confirm this. When someone's sustenance becomes constricted, even the disbeliever will say, 'O Lord!' He will seek refuge in the true object of worship and he will not deceive himself. He knows that the adversity that has afflicted him can only be removed by Allah.

That is why no one said, 'O Lat' or 'O `Uzza' (idols worshipped by Quraysh). However, unfortunately, when Allah removes their adversity and relieves them of their distress, they go back to their old ways, and the Quran talks about this a lot. Allah says: 'When trouble befalls man he cries out to Us, whether lying on his side, sitting, or standing, but as soon as We relieve him of his trouble he goes on his way as if he had never cried out to Us to remove his trouble. In this way, the deeds of such heedless people are made attractive to them.' (Yunus: 12)

People keep forgetting that when religion restricts your activity in that which is impermissible, it also restricts the activity of everyone else for your sake. It tells you: 'As an individual in society; do not steal from the others'. It also tells everyone else not to steal from you. Hence, you are the first person to benefit from implementing Allah's method.

After Allah says: 'There is no deity but Him...' (ad-Dukhan: 8), He mentions the proof for it: '...He gives life and death...' (ad-Dukhan: 8) because the matter of giving life and death belongs to Allah alone, and He has no rival therein. Those who are enjoying life are disturbed by nothing other than the fact that they see death all around as it looms above them on the very verge of snatching them away.

Therefore, the True Lord Glorified is He is mentioning here something that He loves because the One Who owns your life and owns your death is Allah, so it is not right for you to be heedless of Him, or to deviate from His way and His path in favour of another path.

So, the attribute: '...He gives life and death...' (ad-Dukhan: 8) surely befalls others, yet His attributes include Him being Ever-Living and Ever-Watchful, as in the verse of the Throne: 'Allah – there is no deity but Him, the Ever Living, the Ever Watchful....' (al-Baqara: 255) Some people say that ‘The Ever-Living’ is the greatest name of Allah because it is the foundation from which all other attributes stem.

They also said that ‘The Ever-Living’ is the greatest name pertaining to giving, while Allah is the greatest name pertaining to worship because the meaning of the word Allah, is the One Who is worshipped and obeyed in everything that He commands.

As long as He is obeyed in everything He commands, so when you call Allah, you say: ‘In the Name of Allah’ meaning: ‘In the name of Allah I embark upon this action’ because any action requires energy and perception to be initialized; it also requires wisdom.

These things are provided by whom? They are provided by Allah because He alone is the One Who encompasses all the attributes of perfection and from His attributes He gives you abundantly. Thus, it is obligatory to seek help from Him and to rely on Him. Whoever says that the greatest name is the (Ever-Living) has his eyes set on ‘giving’, while whoever says that it is (Allah) has his eyes set on ‘legal responsibility’.

As for the statement: ‘...He is your Lord and the Lord of your forefathers.’ (ad-Dukhan: 8), Allah wants to debunk the disbelievers who oppose Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him because they said: ‘...Behold, we found our forefathers agreed on what to believe – and, verily, it is but in their footsteps that we follow!’ (az-Zukhruf: 23) Thus, Allah wants to expose their lie in this statement because if they had been true followers of their forefathers, they would have pursued the path of Adam peace be upon him. However, they deviated from it and went astray from his guidance until the whole concept underlying faith got deformed, so Allah sent numerous messengers to guide them.

Yet in [their state of] doubt they take nothing seriously [9] (The Quran, ad-Dukhan: 9)

Here, the True Lord the Glorified and Exalted is bringing together two attributes of theirs: 1) they are in doubt of Allah’s religion and, 2) they take nothing seriously. Only one of these attributes would suffice to describe their isolation from the realm of faith. As for'...in their state of doubt...' (ad-Dukhan: 9), to explain the meaning of doubt (shakk), we say that the logical variations are six, and they include knowing; which is to believe a thing that is supported by actual fact, ignorance; which is to believe a matter that contradicts actual fact, and imitation; which is to believe something that you are unable to prove, like a child imitating his parent and saying, 'Allah is One', but he can not establish any proof for it. Then there is doubt which is to have two matters of equal weight before you; neither has preference to the other. If you do prefer one of them to the other, then the thing which you preferred is a speculation and that which you dismissed is an illusion.

So, their 'doubt' is that they held disbelief and belief at the same rank. Not just that but they also '...take nothing seriously...' (ad-Dukhan: 9) because if they had only been in doubt and had been serious about researching and contemplating, they would have arrived at the truth. Instead, they were playing around and toying. They had no desire to arrive at the truth.

Then, the True Lord Glorified is He says:

أَلِيمٞ (١١) رَّبَّنَا ٱكۡشِفۡ عَنَّا ٱلۡعَذَابَ إِنَّا مُؤۡمِنُونَ (١٢)

[Prophet], watch out for the Day when the sky brings forth clouds of smoke for all to see [10] It will envelop the people. They will cry, 'This is a terrible torment! [11] Lord relieve us from this torment! We believe! [12] (The Quran, ad-Dukhan: 10 - 12)

The True Lord Glorified is He is making it clear that He will not leave these denying doubters to His messengers, these people who play and toy around, will have a day in which Allah will exact revenge from them. He tells Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him: 'watch out...' (ad-Dukhan: 10), or wait '...for the Day when the sky brings forth clouds of smoke for all to see.' (ad-Dukhan: 10)

Smoke is formed when gases blend together and fill the air, like the mist that we see in the morning, and when it gets so dense it impairs visibility. This is because the blend of tiny particles blocks the passage of sight. Then it causes the air to become constricted and the same thing happens to breathing. If lack of visibility combines with constricted breathing, our agony intensifies and becomes too much to withstand.

They say that the smoke here is an indication of the drought that afflicted the people and the famine that befell them because when they exaggerated in denying Allah's Messenger and they became severe in harming him and his companions, he supplicated against them saying: 'O Allah! Be severe with the tribe of Mudar! Inflict years of drought upon them like the years of drought of Prophet Joseph (Yusuf).'(1)

They were afflicted with famine and drought until they were compelled to eat carrion, dead dogs and `ilhiz, which is wool or fur mixed with dry blood, and until they raised a fuss with Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him and asked him to supplicate to Allah for them and ask Him to lift what had befallen them.

Allah made their lie clear to Prophet Muhammad; if We were to lift their suffering they would go back to their disbelief and denial.

'It will envelop the people.' (ad-Dukhan: 11) means it will encompass and cover them. '...They will cry!' (ad-Dukhan: 11) because it deprives them of visibility and constricts their breathing, so they supplicated fervently: 'Lord relieve us from this torment! We believe!' (ad-Dukhan: 12) and Allah knows that they are lying when they say this.

Allah says afterwards:

(1) Narrated by Al-Bukhari in his Sahih (762, 951, 2715, 3124) and Muslim in his Sahih (1082, 1083) from the Hadith of Abu Hurayra Allah be pleased with him

أَنَّىٰ لَهُمُ ٱلذِّكْرَىٰ وَقَدْ جَآءَهُمْ رَسُولٌ مُّبِينٌ ﴿١٣﴾ ثُمَّ تَوَلَّوْا۟ عَنْهُ وَقَالُوا۟ مُعَلَّمٌ مَّجْنُونٌ ﴿١٤﴾

How will this [sudden] faith benefit them? When a prophet came to warn them plainly [13] they turned their backs on him, saying, ‘He is tutored! He is possessed!’ [14] (The Quran, ad-Dukhan: 13-14)

His statement: ‘How will this [sudden] faith benefit them?’ (ad-Dukhan: 13) means: from where did they take an admonition? From where did they get the faith which they claim? ‘...When a prophet came to warn them plainly’ (ad-Dukhan: 13) with signs that are greater than the smoke, with clear, established miracles such as this wise and inimitable Book, this ability that keeps the universe in motion in a unique way, this path that ensures the individual’s and the society’s wellbeing, the clear elucidation, the abundant goodness and benefits they are accustomed to, and yet they still averted and lied.

‘They turned their backs on him...’ (ad-Dukhan: 14), i.e. they shunned him ‘...saying, “He is tutored! He is possessed!”’ (ad-Dukhan: 14) which mean they did not shun him and leave him to himself. Rather, they transgressed against him in speech, and accused him of being a liar; ‘...tutored...’ (ad-Dukhan: 14) means that he was taught by someone else.

Likewise, Allah says in another place: ‘...It is a man who teaches him’...’ (an-Nahl: 103), and Allah refuted them and invalidated their accusation: ‘…but the language of the person they allude to is foreign, while this revelation is in clear Arabic.’ (an-Nahl: 103)

They said that he was frequenting a Persian man who was teaching him the Quran. Allah debunked their statement that the Prophet peace and blessings be upon him was a ‘...madman...’: ‘For this fellow-man of yours is not a madman’ (at-Takwir: 22), and ‘Nun. By the pen! By all they write! Your Lord’s Grace does not make you [Prophet] a madman: you will have a never-ending reward –truly you have a strong character.’ (al-Qalam: 1-4) Since he has a sublime character, then he does not go beyond the standards of virtue, and no actions come from him except via reflection, comprehension, and tact, so how far removed is this from madness?!

We shall hold the torment back for a while — you are sure to return [to Us] [15]
(The Quran, ad-Dukhan: 15)

This means the suffering that has befallen them in this life, and what Allah calls ‘a nearer torment’: ‘We shall certainly make them taste a nearer torment [in this life] prior to the greater torment so that perhaps they may return [to the right path].’ (as-Sajda: 21) That is to say; We will lift the smoke punishment, as well as the famine and hunger that compelled them to eat carrion. We will lift it for a little while to affirm for them that they are liars even in front of themselves so that they can be convinced of this fact because those who believe in Allah know it and they bear witness to it. As for these people, they reject it.

Or, their lying will be revealed in front of the youth. Amongst them were those whom disbelief could not vanquish, and this disbanded their ranks. The disbelievers were shown for who they really are and their children, who follow these developments, did not imitate them. They could clearly see the lying of their parents and grandparents.

Indeed, we have seen the children of disbelievers who became Muslims and did very well in Islam, the likes of ‘Ikrima ibn Abu Jahl and others; those who realized the lying of their parents and their lack of faith.

Amongst these people was Mus`ab ibn `Umayr, a pampered youth of Quraysh; the wealthiest of the wealthy. He was enjoying all kinds of comforts and luxuries when he saw the contradictions that his people were upon, and he left disbelief for Islam. He left all the lures of luxury and comfort and was pleased with a primitive way of life.

Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings upon him saw him in Medina after he had emigrated and he was wearing a sheepskin on his shoulder. He was astonished and said: ‘Look at your Companion. Look at what faith has done to him.’(1)

(1) From `Umar ibn Al-Khattab who said: ‘The Prophet looked at Mus`ab ibn `Umayr approaching, and he was wearing a ram hide. He was shocked and he said: “Look at=

When Mus`ab died, they did not find anything to shroud him with.(1) These are the youth whom faith snatched from the jaws of disbelief.

His statement: '...while you are sure to return [to Us].' (ad-Dukhan: 15) means going back once again to their disbelief, their stubborn rejection, and their denial of Allah's Messenger.

يَوْمَ نَبْطِشُ ٱلْبَطْشَةَ ٱلْكُبْرَىٰٓ إِنَّا مُنتَقِمُونَ ﴿١٦﴾

And on the Day We seize [them] mightily We shall exact retribution [16] (The Quran, ad-Dukhan: 16)

Remember this day and do not be heedless of it 'And on the Day We seize [them] mightily...' (ad-Dukhan: 16). Al-Batsh ('...seize...') means taking someone by force and hitting him so hard till he cannot recognize which body part is being struck. When we say that someone batasha with someone else, it means he hit him so hard paying no attention to which body part got the blow. Allah describes His seizing as being '...mighty...' (kubra) to emphasise its sternness and severity on the disbelievers.

'...We shall exact retribution.' (ad-Dukhan: 16) Retribution indicates being even, so the act of seizing is not an aggression, but rather, a recompense for their denial and harm to Allah's Messenger peace and blessings be upon him.

Seizing is therefore a retribution of the same nature as the initial action, and if it were not for this seizing it would not have been fair or just for the believers to endure all this harm, adversity and oppression, while the disbelievers are left to act so oppressively and tyrannically.

= this man whose heart Allah has enlightened. Indeed, I saw him with parents who were feeding him the best of food and drink, but the love of Allah and His Messenger called him to what you see before you."' Narrated by Abu Na`im in Hilyat Ul-Awliya` (1/108) and Al-`Iraqi, in his examination of the Hadiths in the Ihya` (4/295) said that its chain of transmission is good.

(1) Mus`ab ibn `Umayr was killed on the day of Uhud and he left nothing behind but a date. 'When we shrouded his head, his legs would show and when we shrouded his legs his head would show, so Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him said: "Cover his head and put some straw over his legs."' Narrated by At-Tirmidhi in his Sunnan (2788), Ahmad in his Musnad (20165,25956), Al-Bayhaqi in his Sunnan (4/7) and Mushkil Al-Athar by At-Tahawi (3419).

The act of seizing had to happen to the disbelievers so that the believers could see the fruits of their faith and how Allah had saved them with it, till they rejoiced. The disbelievers also needed to see the fruits of their disbelief and their stubborn opposition, so they would grieve and feel remorse and pain.

In more than one place the Noble Quran relates to us a dialogue between the people of paradise and the people of the fire, which clearly describes the joy of the believers and the regret and remorse of the disbelievers: ‘The people of the fire will call to the people of paradise, “Give us some water, or any of the sustenance Allah has granted you!” and they will reply, “Allah has forbidden both to the disbelievers.”’ (al-A‘raf: 50)

His statement: ‘...We shall exact retribution!’ (ad-Dukhan: 16) is an indication of the fairness of the heavens, as if Allah is saying to them: ‘Do not blame us for taking you to task like this; you are Our making. We are more compassionate towards you than a mother towards her children, but We must exact revenge in order to balance things and prevent any sedition.

وَلَقَدْ فَتَنَّا قَبْلَهُمْ قَوْمَ فِرْعَوْنَ وَجَآءَهُمْ رَسُولٌ كَرِيمٌ ﴿١٧﴾
أَنْ أَدُّوٓا۟ إِلَىَّ عِبَادَ ٱللَّهِ ۖ إِنِّى لَكُمْ رَسُولٌ أَمِينٌ ﴿١٨﴾

We tested the people of Pharaoh before them: a noble messenger was sent to them [17] saying, ‘Hand the servants of God over to me! I am a faithful messenger who has been sent to you [18]
(The Quran, ad-Dukhan: 17-18)

As if He is saying to them: ‘You are nothing new in this regard. You have been preceded by other nations that denied their messengers, so they were afflicted similar to the way you have been afflicted’. ‘We tested...’ (ad-Dukhan: 17) meaning: We afflicted and We tested, and fitna (trying) is not blameworthy in itself. Rather, it is blameworthy because of its result, in the same way that an exam is not praised or blamed because for itself, but rather for its outcome or result.

You know the story of the people of Pharaoh ‘...a noble messenger was sent to them…’ (ad-Dukhan: 17); he is prophet Musa (Moses) peace be upon him and he is noble in the eyes of Allah, who sent him. It is from his nobility that Allah spoke to him from behind a barrier, and this is because he would not be addressing moral or social corruption, but rather, ideological corruption.

So, Allah the Exalted, was preparing him for his meeting with the head of disbelief, i.e. Pharaoh, who had reached such a degree of misguidance that he had declared divinity. He said to the people: ‘I am your Lord All-Highest!’

It is because of this that Moses’s (Musa’s) mission was difficult and arduous, and that is why his Lord the Glorified and Exalted trained him to use signs and miracles before presenting himself to Pharaoh.

Read: ‘What is that in your right-hand O Musa (Moses)? “It is my staff,” he said, “I lean on it; restrain my sheep with it; I also have other uses for it.” Allah said, “Throw it down, O Musa (Moses).” He threw it down and- behold! It became a fast-moving snake.’ (Ta Ha: 17-20)

The True Lord Glorified is He informed Musa (Moses) of the staff’s mission in the ideological battle that he would have with Pharaoh and trained him on how to handle it, so that when Pharaoh confronts him he can be firm and reassured that Allah will help him and support him. We need to mention here that the orientalists have hunted down this story and accused the Quran of being redundant.

But, this only shows their lack of understanding for the verses within their context. The story of the staff is actually mentioned three times; one time between Musa (Moses) and his Lord the Glorified and Exalted when He was training him and preparing him for this ordeal; a second time when he faced Pharaoh and a third time when he faced Pharaoh’s magicians. Hence, each phase had its wisdom, and there is no redundancy in the matter; they are different situations and each one took place in its appointed time.

As for the verse: ‘Hand the servants of Allah over to me...’ (ad-Dukhan: 18), when you hear ‘Hand…over to me...’ (ad-Dukhan: 18), know that there is a trust that must be handed over, so what is the trust that Musa (Moses) peace be upon him is asking his people to hand over? The ‘trust’ which Musa (Moses) requested from Pharaoh’s people was to let him take the Israelites and end their humiliating suffering at the hands of Pharaoh’s people, and this was Moses’s (Musa’s) first mission. As for him inviting Pharaoh, this was peripheral to the main mission. His discussion with Pharaoh was an accessory to his mission and to the legislation that he brought to the Israelites.

The reason behind Pharaoh's people oppressing the Israelites is that when the Hyksos entered Egypt they caused turmoil, and the Israelites supported the Hyksos and helped them. When the Hyksos left Egypt, the Egyptians had no enemy other than the Israelites, and that is why they oppressed them.

The Quran relates: '…slaughtering your sons and sparing (only) your women....' (al-Baqara: 49) Thus, Musa (Moses) came originally to save the Israelites from their suffering and to take them out of Egypt. The True Lord the Glorified and Exalted was kind to the Israelites because they were the believers at that time, while all other people were idolaters.

Therefore, the meaning of 'Hand the servants of Allah over to me...' (ad-Dukhan: 18) is: 'Give me the Israelites whom you have punished and leave me with their affair'.

It is from the inimitability of the Quran to address the ruler of Egypt as 'Pharaoh', while during the era of Prophet Yusuf (Joseph) peace be upon him he is addressed as the 'King': 'And (one day) the King said: "Behold, I saw (in a dream) seven fat cows being devoured by seven gaunt ones..."' (Yusuf: 43).

It has been confirmed that while the Hyksos were in Egypt they changed the title from 'Pharaoh' to 'King', and they were in Egypt in the days of Prophet Yusuf (Joseph).

His statement: '…I am a faithful messenger who has been sent to you.' (ad-Dukhan: 18) means: I am entrusted with my message from Allah and I am carrying it out as it must be.

وَأَن لَّا تَعْلُوا۟ عَلَى ٱللَّهِ ۖ إِنِّىٓ ءَاتِيكُم بِسُلْطَٰنٍ مُّبِينٍ ﴿١٩﴾
وَإِنِّى عُذْتُ بِرَبِّى وَرَبِّكُمْ أَن تَرْجُمُونِ ﴿٢٠﴾

Do not consider yourselves to be above God! I come to you with clear authority [19] I seek refuge in my Lord and yours against your insults! [20]
(The Quran, ad-Dukhan: 19-20)

His statement: 'Do not consider yourselves to be above Allah!' (ad-Dukhan: 19) takes the matter back to its true point of reference. He did not say 'do not consider yourselves to be above me', but rather, above Allah, i.e. the battle is not between you and me, but rather, between you and Allah, who has sent me. Thus, when you act haughtily and stubbornly you are not doing so against me, but rather, against Allah, who commanded me and sent me to you.

'...I come to you with clear authority' (ad-Dukhan: 19), i.e. with a clear proof and obvious sign, which is the staff. The staff is a sign which is of the same nature as the magic that Pharaoh's people had excelled in. However, it is not of the same kind because magic, in reality, is nothing more than a visual illusion, as Allah says: '...casting a spell on people's eyes, striking fear into them...' (al-A'raf: 116).

That is why, when the magicians saw the staff, they snatched what they had done and fell down in prostration to Musa (Moses), or rather his Lord, without waiting for permission from Pharaoh. Why? Because they saw something that was other than optical visual illusion! It was actual reality, and they knew more than anyone did what magic was.

His statement: 'Do not consider yourselves to be above Allah!' (ad-Dukhan: 19) means: I am not speaking on behalf of myself, but rather, because of a command from the heavens. This statement also contains an indication towards invalidating their claimed divinity, i.e. you know amongst yourselves that you are not gods and that this is a false claim. That is why it made them scared of The True Deity.

'I seek refuge in my Lord and yours against your stoning.' (ad-Dukhan: 20) means: I have sought refuge in Allah and with Him I have protected myself against your harm. When Musa (Moses) peace be upon him said this, contemplate how he sought refuge and protection of the Stronghold who would rescue whoever sought refuge in Him.

What happened after he sought refuge in Allah? Allah sent him a man from Pharaoh's people who believed in Musa (Moses) and this man defended him.

His act of seeking refuge would also benefit him in the future during the incident of parting the sea, when Pharaoh and his army were catching up with them at the seashore, till the companions of Musa (Moses) said: 'Behold, we shall certainly be overtaken (and defeated)!' (*ash-Shu'ara': * 61) They were not hopeful of being saved!

As for Musa (Moses) peace be upon him he was so full of trust in his Lord. He said: 'No! My Lord is with me: He will guide me!' (*ash-Shu'ara': * 62) He said this out of certainty because he had experienced it before and it was decisive.

Therefore, when the matter became serious and the means became constricted he sought refuge in Allah with certainty and reassurance. Then Allah revealed to Him: '…Strike the sea with your staff!'...' (*ash-Shu'ara': * 63), and Musa (Moses) did not deny the command and did not hesitate even though it was something unbelievable and beyond any perception. However, his trust in Allah had been established from the beginning and it encouraged him to obey the command and not hesitate.

'…Strike the sea with your staff!'...' (*ash-Shu'ara': * 63) It was a miracle to part the sea, and each part was like a vast mountain. Allah saved Musa (Moses) and those who were with him and He destroyed Pharaoh and his army. This is from His absolute power to destroy and save at the same time because things are not affected in and of themselves but because of Allah's Will.

The statement: '...against your stoning' (*ad-Dukhan: * 20) is proof that stoning existed amongst the previous nations who denied their messenger.

وَإِن لَّمْ تُؤْمِنُوا۟ لِى فَٱعْتَزِلُونِ ﴿٢١﴾ فَدَعَا رَبَّهُۥٓ أَنَّ هَٰٓؤُلَآءِ قَوْمٌ مُّجْرِمُونَ ﴿٢٢﴾

If you do not believe me, just let me be [21]
[Moses] cried to his Lord, 'These people are evildoers!' [22] (The Quran, ad-Dukhan: 21-22)

It is as if Musa (Moses) peace be upon him is saying, 'If you do not believe me in what I am saying then the least you can do is leave me alone and not harm me'.

His statement: '[Musa (Moses)] cried to his Lord, "These people are evildoers!"' (*ad-Dukhan: * 22) contains an indication of his despair that they would ever become righteous, so he complained to Allah and asked to be freed from them.

فَأَسْرِ بِعِبَادِى لَيْلًا إِنَّكُم مُّتَّبَعُونَ ﴿٢٣﴾ وَٱتْرُكِ ٱلْبَحْرَ رَهْوًا ۖ إِنَّهُمْ جُندٌ مُّغْرَقُونَ ﴿٢٤﴾

[God replied], 'Escape in the night with My servants, for you are sure to be pursued [23] Leave the sea behind you parted and their army will be drowned [24] (The Quran, ad-Dukhan: 23-24)

The True Lord the Glorified and Exalted is looking after His friends and giving them the necessary protection. The command for Musa (Moses) peace be upon him was to leave with the Israelites at night, and Allah informed him of what Pharaoh and his people would do, and that they would follow them. He did not leave him to be surprised but instead gave him a preventive knowledge that would help and support him.

This is what gave him the courage to say: '"...No!" they will not catch up with us and defeat us. We are being helped by Allah, who commanded me to go forth with His slaves. He has told me what my enemy would do and He would never forsake me'.

Therefore, every glimpse in this story indicates Allah's Absolute Power which acts upon all things, and turns things into the opposite. When Allah commanded, 'Leave the sea behind you parted...' (ad-Dukhan: 24), this command came after striking the sea with the staff, which came in another verse.

The glimpses that complement one another are spread over more than one place yet they all serve one idea, and give one structure to the story. In one place Allah says to him: '…Strike the sea with your staff!'...' (ash-Shu'ara': 63) and in another He says: 'Leave the sea behind you parted...' (ad-Dukhan: 24). The word rahwan '...parted...' is a gerund that comes from raha and yarhu, similar to `ada, ya`du and `adwan. `Ada means to run past a place, and it is the opposite is raha which means to stay in a place.

When Musa (Moses) peace be upon him struck the sea the water solidified and stood still in its place in the form of two great cliffs, with dry land in between. Musa (Moses) saw this dry land as a ready path, and so he crossed it to the other side.

It would be natural to think that by striking the sea another time this would restore the sea to its previous state and prevent Pharaoh and his army from catching up with them, but Allah had another plan: ‘Leave the sea behind you parted...’ (ad-Dukhan: 24), i.e. in its solid form

Moses’s (Musa’s) thinking was due to his human nature, but the True Lord commands out of His Wisdom, and there is no shame attached to Musa (Moses) in this because the One Who corrects him is his Lord the Glorified and Exalted and this is an immense honour for Musa (Moses).

Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him is the one who related this correction to us to show that messengers can make mistakes in matters in which there is no text; and Allah corrects them. Likewise, Allah corrects him in a similar occasion and says: ‘Prophet, why do you prohibit what Allah has made lawful to you, in your desire to please your wives? Yet Allah is Forgiving and Merciful.’ (at-Tahrim: 1) His Lord reproached him gently when: ‘May Allah pardon you (O Prophet)! Why did you grant them permission?’ (at-Tawba: 43) Who is the one who informed us of this reproach? Indeed, it is Prophet Muhammad’s truthfulness in conveying from his Lord.

Therefore, the True Lord Glorified is He corrected prophet Musa (Moses) peace be upon him and said to him: ‘Leave the sea behind you parted...’ (ad-Dukhan: 24). This is because Allah wants to destroy Pharaoh and his army with the very same thing that He used to save Musa (Moses). This is from Allah’s Absolute Power because Pharaoh will inevitably be deceived by the dry path that he will see and will try to cross it in pursuit of Musa (Moses).

Indeed, when Musa (Moses) had reached the other side of the sea, Pharaoh was in the middle of it, and that is when Allah commanded the sea to return to its normal, fluid state, and it drowned Pharaoh and his army ‘...and their army will be drowned.’ (ad-Dukhan: 24) Thus, with His Absolute Power, Allah saved and destroyed using the very same thing.

Then, the True Lord Glorified is He explains to us what blessings these people were in, and the punishment and suffering that eventually befell them:

كَمۡ تَرَكُواْ مِن جَنَّٰتٖ وَعُيُونٖ ﴿٢٥﴾ وَزُرُوعٖ وَمَقَامٖ كَرِيمٖ ﴿٢٦﴾
وَنَعۡمَةٖ كَانُواْ فِيهَا فَٰكِهِينَ ﴿٢٧﴾

Many a garden and spring they left behind [25]
many a cornfield and noble building [26]
many a thing in which they had delighted [27]
(The Quran, ad-Dukhan: 25 - 27)

After Allah had drowned them, they left behind this life of ease. Kam (how) indicates an abundance of ‘many a garden...’ (ad-Dukhan: 25) blooming, verdant gardens ‘...and springs...’ (ad-Dukhan: 25), i.e. freshwater springs which flew through these gardens ‘...and noble buildings.’ (ad-Dukhan: 26) The word maqam (‘...buildings...’) with a fatha (a) over the mim, is a noun meaning the spot where we stand. The noun of the gerund iqama is muqam with a damma (u) over the mim, to indicate the place where someone resides. A muqam is not described as noble (karim) unless it provides means of rest and comfort to whoever resides in it. The maqam itself possesses nobility which means that it gathers all meanings of goodness for its owner when he stands and when he sits. As if goodness follows this person and obeys his commands which means he has followers, and these followers carry out his commands when he stands and when he sits.

When a man is sitting, or sleeping or reclining, what can make him stand up? Probably something occurs urging him to stand up. This thing would be one of two; either something good and that would make him happy, like a loved one or a friend returning after a long absence, or it would be something that saddens him or frightens him, and so he stands up because of it.

Likewise, the word muqam, with a damma (u) over the mim is found in the Quran and it means a place of residence in the verse: ‘It is an evil home, a foul resting place!’ (al-Furqan: 66), and the verse: ‘There they will stay, a happy home and resting place!’ (al-Furqan: 76)

As for the statement: ‘…many a thing in which they had delighted!’ (ad-Dukhan: 27), the word na`ma (delighted) is also found with a fatha (a) above the nun two other times, like here, and it is found with a kasra (i) above the nun, as in ‘...Remember those blessings (ni`ma) of Mine with which I graced you...’ (al-Baqara: 40), in 34 places, either on its own or associated with Allah. Most of them are in the form of ni`mati (My blessings), ni`matuka (Your blessings), or ni`matuhu (His blessings).

The difference between the two is that ni`ma, with a kasra, is that which one enjoys, but we notice that whatever is enjoyed is outside oneself. Thus, sometimes there can be a blessing (ni`ma) and there can be the ability to enjoy it. Other times, the blessing can be there, but the ability to enjoy is not. As for the word na`ma, it means that the ni`ma is there as well as the ability to enjoy it.

In the statement: ‘...many a thing in which they had delighted!’ (ad-Dukhan: 27), the word fakih (delighted!’) is from tafakkuh (delight) and taladhdhudh (enjoyment) which is taken from fakiha (fruits) meaning luxury and comfort because food includes things that are basic and necessary for the sustenance of life, and other foods that are for pleasure such as the fruits eaten after a meal.

These things that are eaten for pleasure can be done without because they are not necessities, and the proof is that many people do not eat fruits and they are still alive. Therefore, they had luxuries and comforts in life that were in addition to their necessities

كَذَٰلِكَۖ وَأَوۡرَثۡنَٰهَا قَوۡمًا ءَاخَرِينَ ﴿٢٨﴾

We gave these to another people to inherit [28]
(The Quran, ad-Dukhan: 28)

‘Thus...’ (ad-Dukhan: 28) means ‘like this’; Allah stripped them of these blessings and gave them to other people. Had they only been taken from them it would have been tolerable, but they were taken from them and given to other people, and this is worse.

The reason why envy is abhorred is the fact that the envier wishes for someone else to lose his blessings, even if they will not end up with him. He only cares for the blessings to depart from the person he envies, because he hates the blessings to be with that person, and likewise the blessings hate him and never end up with him.

The opposite of envy is ghibta - felicity, which is loving the blessing that someone else has and wishing something similar for yourself. When you love a blessing, it loves you and it comes to you when you say: ‘O Allah! Bless him with it and bless me with something similar.’

But, who are these other people who inherited the life of ease after Pharaoh’s people? They are the Israelites, the people who were made to suffer, whose children they slaughtered and whose women they spared. Slaughtering on its own is humiliation and disgrace but what was done to the women after the men got slaughtered was even more atrocious. That is why, when the Arabs set out for war, they would bring their women with them so that they would not leave them behind for their enemies if they got defeated.

فَمَا بَكَتۡ عَلَيۡهِمُ ٱلسَّمَآءُ وَٱلۡأَرۡضُ وَمَا كَانُواْ مُنظَرِينَ ﴿٢٩﴾

Neither heavens nor earth shed a tear for them, nor were they given any time [29]
(The Quran, ad-Dukhan: 29)

This verse affirms that inanimate objects have feelings, and that they love and hate, they weep and rejoice. Therefore, feelings are initiated in all created things when needed, but in man they are a constant. You see a man, for example, loving his son, even if his son was foolish or mischievous. His love for him continues, and his feelings towards him may be more than his feelings towards a normal, proper child.

That is why the Bedouin (1), when he was asked which of his children was most beloved to him, he said: ‘The youngest until he grows up, the absent until he returns and the sick until he recovers.’(2)

As for animals, their feelings are according to the need. So, you see animals having feelings for their young ones and defending them, but once they grow up, they leave them as if they never knew them at all. The feelings they were given were just to cover the need for nurturing their young enough so they could lead their own lives.

(1) He is Ghilan ibn Salama (mentioned by Al-Asfahani in Al-Aghani), and he is Hudha ibn `Ali Al-Hanafi. According to Al-Maydani in Majma’ Al-Amthal and Ibn `Abd Rabbuh in Al-`Iqd Al-Farid.

(2) This statement is mentioned by Al-Asfahani in Al-Aghani (2/477), under the transmissions of Ghilan.

The same for inanimate objects! The True Lord the Exalted elevates them and gives them feelings, and it is from here that the sky and the earth do not shed any tears over these destroyed people because they went against Allah's way.

That is why Allah addresses inanimate objects and places them in the rank of those who possess inherent cognition, the enlightened people who understand and have intellect, and the proof is that Allah the Exalted gave the heavens, the earth and the mountains the ability to choose with regards to the matter of bearing the trust: 'We offered the Trust to the heavens, the earth, and the mountains, yet they refused to undertake it and were afraid of it…' (al-Ahzab: 72).

This proves that they have the ability to choose and that they can rationalize. Some said that the heavens and earth are subjugated and forced to worship. I say: No! Everything in existence, with the exception of Allah, has been allowed to choose, and amongst the creation are those that relinquished their ability to choose in favour of their Lord's choice, and relinquished their will in favour of their Creator's will. Then, there are those who chose to keep the ability to choose, and this is man.

We said that there is a difference between the time of assuming a responsibility and the time of actually carrying it out. You are always certain and confident at the time of assuming, but you cannot guarantee carrying out. Therefore, inanimate objects were more objective than man was in this matter because they chose from the beginning to be compelled by their Lord. As for man, he chose to be allowed to choose, and when it came to carrying out the trust some of us believed and some of us disbelieved; some of us obeyed and some of us disobeyed.

If you were to ask: 'In what language do the heavens and earth speak'? My answer would be: 'Their Creator the Exalted addresses them and they understand, since He is the one who knows their language'. That is why the True Lord Glorified is He gives us examples of the speech of created things and their glorification of Allah. He says: '...We made the mountains and the birds celebrate Our praises with Dawud (David). We did all these things.' (al-Anbiya': 79) He also says: '...There is not a single thing that does not celebrate His praise, though you do not understand their praise...' (al-Isra': 44).

In the story of prophet Sulaiman (Solomon) peace be upon him the hoopoe said something that demonstrated his knowledge and impeccably amazing understanding of Allah's Oneness. Also, when the ant spoke, we saw that it had an understanding for the standards of truth and justice.

By Allah, we are astonished when we read this verse: 'Do you not realize [Prophet] that everything in the heavens and earth submits to Allah: the sun, the moon, the stars, the mountains, the trees, and the animals? So do many human beings, though for many others punishment is well deserved. Anyone disgraced by Allah will have no one to honour him: Allah does whatever He will.' (al-Hajj: 18)

All created beings glorify Allah, absolutely and without exception, except for man; the one and only creature that deviates from this order.

That is why we said that the other creatures, apart from man, were much wiser when they refused to be allowed to choose and relinquished their will in favour of their Lord's. Therefore, let man not be deluded! Let him know that the creatures around you have a role and a rank with Allah, and that they were created with understanding and feelings just the same as he was.

This matter is confirmed in an authentic Hadith by Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him who said about Uhud: {Uhud is a mountain that loves us, just as we love it.}(1)

He also said, in another Hadith, that the mountain trembled as he and three of his Companions walked on it, and the Hadith goes as thus: 'Stand firm Uhud, for upon you are a Prophet, a Siddiq and two martyrs.'(2) He also said: ‘By Allah, indeed I know a stone in Mecca that used to give me peace greetings even before the revelation.’(1)

(1) Narrated by Al-Bukhari in his Sahih (1287), the Hadith of Abu Hamid As-Saʿadi, and likewise Muslim in his Sahih (2466) and Al-Bayhaqi in Dalaʿil An-Nabuwwa (2020). Its wording is that Abu Hamid said: 'We set out with Prophet Muhammad from the battle of Tabuk until we were looking at Medina, and he said: {This is Taba and this is Uhud, a mountain that loves us and we love it.}

(2) Narrated by Al-Bukhari in his Sahih (2410,2299), Abu Dawud in his Sunnan (4032) and At-Tirmidhi in his Sunnan (2630), and he said that it is a sound Hadith (one authentic transmission and one good narration), that Prophet Muhammad climbed Uhud with Abu Bakr, `Umar and `Uthman, and it trembled with them. So, he said: 'Stand firm Uhud, for upon you are a prophet, a Siddiq and two martyrs.' The Prophet is the messenger, the Siddiq is Abu Bakr and the two martyrs are `Umar and `Uthman.

It is also affirmed in the Hadith that the earth weeps at the death of a believer and rejoices at the death of a disbeliever. (2) The Arabs also have a saying that goes, ‘The household became sick of him’, i.e. it hated him.

This can only be because these inanimate objects have some form of understanding and rationalization, and they are in complete harmony with Allah’s way, as they are obedient and glorifying. That is why they love those who are like them from amongst the human beings and hate those who deviate from Allah’s way or reject His Oneness.

That is why, when `Ali was asked: ‘Do the sky and the earth weep?’ He said: ‘Yes. When a believer dies two places weep for him; a place on earth and a place in the sky. As for the place on earth, it is the place where he prostrated or prayed. As for the place in the sky, is it the place from where his deeds ascended.’(3) Hence, there is a kind of companionship between the place and the one in it; between the place and the believer.

With this we understand: ‘Neither heavens nor earth shed a tear for them....’ (ad-Dukhan: 29) So, why would the sky weep over the destruction of Allah’s enemy, Pharaoh, after he had challenged the True Lord Glorified is He and claimed that he was a deity besides Allah?

(1) Narrated by Al-Bukhari in his Sahih (4222), Ahmad in his Musnad (19912, 19988) and At-Tabarani in Al-Mu`jam Al-Kabir (2087, 1928, 1874) from the Hadith of Jabir ibn Samra.

(2) From Anas ibn Malik who said that Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him said: ‘There is no believer except that he has two portals in the sky, a portal from which his sustenance comes and a portal through which his speech and actions enter. When he dies, they miss him and they weep over him.’ Then he recited: ‘and neither sky nor earth shed tears over them…’ (ad-Dukhan: 29). Narrated by At-Tirmidhi in his Sunnan (2178) and he said: ‘This Hadith is gharib (a Hadith that is absolutely unique in its narration or unique by having something added to its text or to its chain of narrations).

(3) Mentioned by As-Samarqandi in his Quranic commentary Bahr Al-`Ulum (4/123) from the statement of Ibn `Abbas that he was asked: ‘Do the sky and earth weep over anyone?’ He said: ‘Yes. When a believer dies his place on earth in which he used to remember Allah and pray weeps over him, and his portal in the sky through which his deeds would rise also weeps over him.’ Mentioned by As-Suyuti in Ad-Durr Al-Manthur (ad-Dukhan) from a number of chains coming from a number of Companions

The statement: '...nor were they given any time…' (ad-Dukhan: 29) means they were not delayed beyond the appointed time, which Allah had decreed for their end, because when the term appointed by Allah comes, it can never be put back.

وَلَقَدْ نَجَّيْنَا بَنِىٓ إِسْرَٰٓءِيلَ مِنَ ٱلْعَذَابِ ٱلْمُهِينِ ﴿٣٠﴾
مِن فِرْعَوْنَ ۚ إِنَّهُۥ كَانَ عَالِيًا مِّنَ ٱلْمُسْرِفِينَ ﴿٣١﴾

We saved the Children of Israel from their degrading suffering [30] at the hands of Pharaoh:
he was a tyrant who exceeded all bounds [31]
(The Quran, ad-Dukhan: 30-31)

In the statement: '...from their degrading suffering' (ad-Dukhan: 31), suffering (`adhab) is to cause physical pain, and this could be with fire or something else such as cutting body part or skin, for example. But there is another form of non-physical suffering, like humiliation and disgrace, but it could be added to physical suffering. Some people can tolerate physical suffering, but they cannot bear to be humiliated with a word, and maybe it is even worse for them than physical suffering.

The Israelites were suffering from the slaughtering of their children and keeping their women alive. Women are a weak spot for men, and one's honour must be preserved. That is why transgressing against a man's woman is the greatest humiliation for him.

The True Lord Glorified is He was Incessantly Merciful with the Israelites and He saved them from the shameful suffering '…at the hands of Pharaoh...' (ad-Dukhan: 31). He '...was a tyrant who exceeded all bounds...' (ad-Dukhan: 31), i.e. in his transgression against the people, '...exceeded all bounds…' (ad-Dukhan: 31), meaning that he wasted their lives.

The one who exceeds limits (musrif) is the one who transgresses the bounds that Allah has set and goes beyond them; Pharaoh's arrogance was too extreme that he said to them: 'I am your Lord All-Highest!', and he deceived and deluded his people.

We stated previously that there is a difference between someone being misguided in himself and someone being misguided and misguiding others. Pharaoh was misguided and he misguided an entire nation and enslaved them. The one who said (1): ‘When did you enslave the people although they were born free?’ was indeed truthful.

وَلَقَدِ ٱخۡتَرۡنَٰهُمۡ عَلَىٰ عِلۡمٍ عَلَى ٱلۡعَٰلَمِينَ ﴿٣٢﴾

We chose them knowingly above others [32]
(The Quran, ad-Dukhan: 32)

The speech here is about the Israelites, and they cling to this verse and use it to claim that they are Allah’s chosen people. They say to us: ‘Indeed Allah is the One Who created you and sent you a messenger and it is He Who chose us over all other people’.

This is a false claim because ‘...others’ (ad-Dukhan: 32) in this verse indicates the people contemporary to that time, such as Pharaoh’s people and others. These people were, by and large, idolaters, so Allah chose the Israelites because they believed in Allah and at that time they were the best of Allah’s entire creation.

However, they wanted to apply this verse to all of mankind and to all peoples at all times and places, and this is not possible. The proof is that when they contravened Allah’s way, He dispersed them throughout the earth in different communities and scattered them everywhere as a form of punishment.

This has gone to such an extent that in every city, you find a ghetto named after them, called ‘the Jewish Ghetto’, and you can see them gathering together and sticking to themselves and not mixing or integrating with the society around them.

(1) This statement is attributed to `Umar ibn Al-Khattab, and mentioned by the author of Al-Wilaya `Ala Al-Buldan. A son of `Amr ibn Al-`As beat a Coptic boy and relied on his father’s authority to do so. The Commander of the Believers wrote to him recalling him with his son and the Coptic boy. He then gave a whip to the Egyptian boy and commanded him to take his revenge from Ibn Al-`As’s son. Then he turned to them and said this above statement.

The Quran even expressed this concept in the saying: ‘We dispersed them over the earth in separate communities...’ (al-A‘raf: 168). Thus, each group from amongst them, in its own place, represents an independent community because they do not integrate with other communities.

Their claim is debunked in the verse: ‘And then your Lord declared that, until the Day of Resurrection, He would send people against them to inflict terrible suffering on them. Your Lord is swift in punishment...’ (al-A‘raf: 167). This is what actually happens because from time to time Allah brings people against them who inflict terrible suffering on them.

Then, Allah says:

وَءَاتَيْنَٰهُم مِّنَ ٱلْءَايَٰتِ مَا فِيهِ بَلَٰٓؤٌا۟ مُّبِينٌ ﴿٣٣﴾

We gave them revelations in which there was a clear test [33] (The Quran, ad-Dukhan: 33)

In His statement: ‘We gave them revelations in which there was a clear test.’ (ad-Dukhan: 33), the revelations are the miracles that accompanied prophet Musa (Moses) peace be upon him and with these signs Allah saved them from drowning and He saved them from Pharaoh’s people.

It is amazing that just after Allah had saved them from drowning and from Pharaoh, and just after they had gotten out safely, they saw some people worshipping their idols and they said to Musa (Moses) peace be upon him: ‘...O Musa (Moses), set up for us a deity just as they have deities!...’ (al-A‘raf: 138) They associated partners with Allah, while their feet were still wet from crossing the sea!

While they were in the desert, Allah was generous with them, and He sent down to them manna and quails which are the best of foods and the most delicious to eat. This was given to them without having to toil or expend effort. However, because of their materialistic nature, they objected to the manna and quails.

They said to Musa (Moses): ‘...Musa (Moses), we cannot bear to eat only one kind of food, so pray to your Lord to bring out for us some of the earth’s produce, its herbs and cucumbers, its garlic, lentils, and onions. He said, “Would you exchange better for worse?”...’ (al-Baqara: 61) They wanted something material which they can fetch, using their hands, from a source known to them. Indeed, they had reached such a degree of materialism that they told Musa (Moses): ‘...Make us see Allah face to face...’ (an-Nisa’: 153).

Some have even said that it is Musa (Moses) peace be upon him who encouraged them to this when he said: ‘...O my Sustainer! Show Yourself to me so that I might behold You!...’ (al-A‘raf: 143)

The word: ‘...a test’ (ad-Dukhan: 33) means a trial in order to know how you will react after seeing the signs or after seeing the blessings. We said before that tests are not blameworthy or praiseworthy in and of themselves, but rather according to their results and outcomes.

إِنَّ هَـٰٓؤُلَآءِ لَيَقُولُونَ ﴿٣٤﴾ إِنْ هِىَ إِلَّا مَوْتَتُنَا ٱلْأُولَىٰ وَمَا نَحْنُ بِمُنشَرِينَ ﴿٣٥﴾

These people here assert [34] There is nothing beyond our one death: we will not be resurrected [35]
(The Quran, ad-Dukhan: 34-35)

The indication in ‘These people here assert…’ (ad-Dukhan: 34) could mean the Israelites because if we looked in the Torah or the Talmud we would find no mention of the Last Day, even though it is one of the tenets of faith. Hence, they do not believe in this day.

The issue with them is as the Quran has related of their speech: ‘...The fire will most certainly not touch us for more than a limited number of days...’ (Al-‘Imran: 24) meaning that the fire will be put out for them and this will be the end of the matter. In another verse, they said: ‘...We are Allah’s children and His beloved ones...’ (al-Ma‘ida: 18).

‘These people’ could also mean those who deny the resurrection in a general sense, whether they are the Israelites or others. When saying: ‘There is nothing beyond our first death...’ (ad-Dukhan: 35), they mean by the first death the state of non-existence that they were in before they were created. They consider non-existence to be a state of death. Then Allah created Adam and from him came the rest of creation.

So, when Allah says: ‘...seeing that you were lifeless and He gave you the life...’ (al-Baqara: 28), they argue that this is the only death that will be followed by life, and that there is no other death followed by a resurrection or a reckoning. ‘...we will not be resurrected.’ (ad-Dukhan: 35), i.e. we will not be resurrected after death.

Bring back our forefathers, if what you say is true [36] (The Quran, ad-Dukhan: 36)

We said before, that faith is founded on ‘unseen’ signs. Thus, you believe in Allah’s Existence and in paradise and the fire without seeing them. This is the essence of faith. As for signs that can be seen, there is no faith with regards to them. You do not say: ‘I believe that the sun is up’. However, these people because of the materialism that holds control over them, want an unseen sign that can be seen. Thus, they say: ‘Bring back our forefathers, if what you say is true.’ (ad-Dukhan: 36)

They only believe in concrete things, and that is why they want their ancestors to be brought back from the dead so that they can believe that resurrection is true. We say to them: ‘If you want that, then you have the books of history and the divine messages that have been related to you. You have something similar to what you want in the story of 'Uzair (Ezra) peace be upon him:

Allah Glorified is He says, ‘Or [are you, O man, of the same mind] as he who passed by a town (1) deserted by its people, with its roofs caved in, [and] said, “How could Allah bring all this back to life after its death?” Thereupon Allah caused him to be dead for a hundred years; after which He brought him back to life [and] said: “How long have you tarried?” He answered: “I have tarried a day, or part of a day.” Allah said: “Nay! You have tarried a hundred years; then look at your food and drink – untouched is it by the passing of years – and look at your ass; and [We did all this so] that We might make you a symbol unto men. And look at the bones – how We put them together and then clothe them with flesh!" And when [all this] became clear to him, he said: "I know [now] that Allah has the power over all things!"' (al-Baqara: 259)

(1) Ibn Kathir mentioned in his Tafsir (1/214) that the established opinion is that the town is Jerusalem. However, scholars differed as to he who passed by it. `Ali ibn Abu Taleb Allah be pleased with him said that it was Ezra, which is the generally accepted opinion. He was also said to have been Armiya ibn Halqiya, which is the opinion of Wahb ibn Munnabih. Hazqil ibn Bawar was also thought to be the man intended. Nonetheless, Mujahid ibn Jabr upheld that he was a man from the cildren of Israel (without specification).

The same is found in the story of the People of the Cave. Brought back to life after three hundred and nine years, they said upon awakening from sleep or death, as Allah Glorified is He states: '...We have spent there a day, or part of a day...' (al-Mu'minun: 113). Being the normal sleep duration, they thought it to be the period they remained.

Such incidents as well as others occurred in the eras of the previous Prophets, whom they knew and believed in. Likewise, Allah Glorified is He says, 'Are you not aware of those who left their homelands in their thousands for fear of death – whereupon Allah said unto them, "Die," and later brought them back to life? ...' (al-Baqara: 243)

Those people, whom Allah brought back to life after death, lived only to the extent that proved their miracle and then died. Therefore, the disbelievers have no plea in requesting their ancestors to be brought back to life, for Allah Glorified is He brought the dead back to life, as said by the messengers. All the same, they did not believe and even had Allah brought their ancestors back to life, they would not have believed.

Allah Glorified is He states:

أَهُمۡ خَيۡرٌ أَمۡ قَوۡمُ تُبَّعٖ وَٱلَّذِينَ مِن قَبۡلِهِمۡۚ أَهۡلَكۡنَٰهُمۡۖ إِنَّهُمۡ كَانُواْ مُجۡرِمِينَ ﴿٣٧﴾

Are they better than the people of Tubba′ and those who flourished before them? We destroyed them all – they were guilty[37]
(The Quran, ad-Dukhan: 37)

Allah Glorified is He draws a comparison between these people and the nations before them who denied the truth as they did. Allah tells them that they are not the first people to disbelieve and thereby not evading the punishment that befell those who denied before them.

‘They’ in the verse: ‘Are they better...’ (ad-Dukhan: 37) refers to the children of Israel, whereas ‘...the people of Tubba'...’ (ad-Dukhan: 37) allude to Tubba' Al-Himayri who was one of the kings of Yemen. In the past, Yemen was called ‘The Green Land’ or ‘Joyous Yemen’ because of its abundance of treasures.

Tubba', who was a righteous man, was opposed and denied by his people, so Allah seized them with a Seizure of the All-Mighty, All-Capable, after destroying the dam that was supplying them with water for irrigation. With the destruction of the dam, their entire lives were destroyed.

This story reminds me of the days when I was in Algeria. The people of Algeria built a dam in order to reserve rainwater and they called it Sadd Maarib (Marib Dam). On the inauguration of the dam, when I was in the company of the Algerian President, someone stood up to give a speech. He said, ‘Now, the dam has been built and thus you can irrigate your land and cultivation, whether it rains or not.’

This statement caught my attention as I found it in contradiction, not only to religion but also to logic and reason. I said to the Foreign Minister of the host state, ‘Ask the speaker what the dam will reserve if it does not rain?’

In the Quranic verse: ‘...they were guilty’ (ad-Dukhan: 27), the word mujrim (guilty) is not used unless the person dubbed as such has went too far in disobedience and committing sins. The word mujrim signifies someone who commits an abominable crime. In the verse under discussion, the general meaning is given: ‘...and those who flourished before them? We destroyed them all...’ (ad-Dukhan: 37).

In another verse, the nature of the destruction is explained in detail. Allah Glorified is He says, ‘For every one of them did We punish for his sin: and so, upon some of them(1) We let loose a deadly storm; and some of them were overtaken by a [sudden] blast; and some of them We caused to be swallowed by the earth; and some of them We caused to drown...' (al-'Ankabut: 40).

(1) They were destroyed by four different types of punishment:
The sending of al-hasib which is a severe storm wind that carries the pebbles of the earth throwing them upon the disbelievers and uprooting them… Then, it inverted them upon their heads. Such was the punishment of the people of 'Ad.
The blast, i.e. to be overtaken by a cry, which is a scream that stifles their sounds and movements, and that was the punishment of the people of Thamud, the killers of Prophet Saleh’s (Shelah’s) she-camel. =

Further, in the chapter of al-Fajr, Allah Glorified is He says, 'Are you not aware of how your Lord has dealt with [the tribe of] Ad, [the people of] Iram the many-pillared, the like of whom has never been reared in all the land? And with [the tribe of] Thamud, who hollowed out rocks in the valley? And with Pharaoh of the [many] tent-poles?' (al-Fajr: 6-10)

These nations had civilizations which they could not preserve or defend against coming to an end such that it is as if they never existed. Allah Glorified is He seized the disbelievers of the earlier nations with a seizure of the All-Mighty, All-Capable because previous messengers were not asked to fight, but only to convey Allah's Message.

It was Allah Glorified is He Who took charge of disciplining the deniers and exacting revenge on them. Only Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him was permitted to fight, because he was entrusted with leading humanity under his guidance, as revealed to him from Allah Glorified is He. Therefore, he is not to be succeeded by messengers, which stands as proof of bearing witness to the goodness of his community that remains until the Day of Judgment.

Allah Glorified is He states:

وَمَا خَلَقْنَا ٱلسَّمَٰوَٰتِ وَٱلْأَرْضَ وَمَا بَيْنَهُمَا لَٰعِبِينَ ﴿٣٨﴾
مَا خَلَقْنَٰهُمَآ إِلَّا بِٱلْحَقِّ وَلَٰكِنَّ أَكْثَرَهُمْ لَا يَعْلَمُونَ ﴿٣٩﴾

We were not playing a pointless game when We created the heavens and earth and everything in between [38] We created them for a true purpose, but most people do not comprehend [39]
(The Quran, ad-Dukhan: 38-39)

To turn our attention towards a universal issue, incorporating time, in the past and in the present, Allah Glorified is He mentions the firmness of the creation of = Being swallowed by the earth and this is what happened to Qarun, who transgressed and oppressed, so Allah caused the earth to swallow him.

---

Drowning which befell Pharaoh along with his minister, Haman, and their soldiers. They were all drowned in one morning.

the heavens and the earth. Ever since they were created, they have been following a perfectly firm system that does not fall behind, change, or alter.

Being created with truth and in truth is attested to by this firmness, as truth is firm whereas falsehood changes. For instance, a false witness standing before a judge inevitably gives conflicting statements which can be exposed by the examining magistrate who keeps asking and investigating him to find out his false statements that he is trying to present as truth.

His statements are contradictory, being merely some falsehood based on his own imagination. However, the one who bears witness and speaks the truth does not change his mind as long as he sticks to it. This is because truth is firm and real, thereby leaving no room for contradiction.

Examining magistrates have their ways and methods to expose lies and arrive at the truth. Hence, the saying goes, ‘a liar should have a good memory’. However, it is inevitable that at some point your memory will let you down so that truth prevails over falsehood.

I remember we had in Dakados(1) a braggart farmer. Once, on our way back from Mit Ghamr, the man was telling some of his stories. He said, ‘such and such incident happened on the night of the Eid Al-Fitr (After-Ramadan holiday) when the moon was bright.’ I wondered how the moon could be bright in such night. It is surely true what the common proverb provides, (a lie has no legs, i.e. one lie leads to another).

Allah Glorified is He says, ‘We were not playing a pointless game when We created the heavens and earth and everything in between’ (ad-Dukhan: 38). It is clear, then, that Allah Glorified is He created them decisively for a purpose, not in play, and with truth not falsehood. In the following verse, Allah Glorified is He says, ‘We created them for a true purpose...’ (ad-Dukhan: 39). This firmness is proof of the precision, providence, meticulousness, perfect engineering, and laws of the creation, which have never conflicted with each other since they were created and never will until the Last Day.

(1) The village of Dakados is in Mit Ghamr, Daqahlia Governorate, Egypt. The house and mausoleum of Mohammed Mutawalli Ash-Sha`rawi are established there. (Wikipedia Arabic)

Contemplate, for example, on the rising and setting, movement and speed of the sun in relation to the earth. Reflect on the moon and its eclipse. All these signs occur with the utmost precision and with measures that never fall behind or conflict. A manmade device cannot keep working with such precision constantly.

Allah Glorified is He the One, created the heavens and the earth with an exact harmonious system for a purpose, which is one and the same since the creation of Adam peace be upon him until the end of the world.

The word haqq (truth), referred to in the verse as: '...for a purpose...' (ad-Dukhan: 39) denotes something firm that does not change. Allah Glorified is He says, 'And the skies has He raised high, and has devised [for all things] a measure so that you [too, O people,] might never transgress the measure [of what is right]: weigh, therefore, [your deeds] with equity, and cut not the measure short!' (ar-Rahman: 7-9)

This verse contains a subtle indication, as if Allah Glorified is He were to say: 'Look at the sky, the stars and celestial bodies that it contains. Have you seen any conflict or imbalance therein'? The answer is 'never' because they were created for a purpose and with measure and precision. Similarly, for the affairs of your life to be straight and upright, then the measure of truth should be adopted to the core. Only then will you find no conflict or contradiction in society.

Firm, truth is permanent and sublime. Thus, the saying goes, 'Truth glitters while falsehood stutters'. Truth is never obliterated, even if falsehood has the upper hand temporarily, as Allah Glorified is He allows falsehood to prevail at some point in order that people hold firm to and feel the importance of truth. It is as if falsehood itself is a soldier of truth and disbelief is a soldier of faith. Were it not for the onslaught and severity of falsehood, people would have never known the bliss of truth. Hence, when faith came, no one rushed to embrace it except for those who were suffering the most from disbelief.

The Quranic verse: '...but most people do not comprehend.' (ad-Dukhan: 39) indicates that most people do not understand these realities because they turn away from Allah's signs in the universe, and from contemplation, as Allah says: 'But [then] – how many a sign is there in the heavens and on earth which they pass by [unthinkingly], and on which they turn their backs!’ (Yusuf: 105)

Then, Allah Glorified is He says:

إِنَّ يَوْمَ ٱلْفَصْلِ مِيقَـٰتُهُمْ أَجْمَعِينَ ﴿٤٠﴾ يَوْمَ لَا يُغْنِى مَوْلًى عَن مَّوْلًى شَيْـًٔا
وَلَا هُمْ يُنصَرُونَ ﴿٤١﴾ إِلَّا مَن رَّحِمَ ٱللَّهُ ۚ إِنَّهُۥ هُوَ ٱلْعَزِيزُ ٱلرَّحِيمُ ﴿٤٢﴾

The Day of Decision is the time appointed for all [40] a Day when no friend can take another’s place [41]
No one will receive any help except for those to whom God shows mercy: He is the Mighty, the Merciful Lord [42]
(The Quran, ad-Dukhan: 40 - 42)

As they used to turn away from Allah’s signs in the worldly life, they will be presented before Him on the Day of Judgment: ‘Verily, the Day of Distinction [between the true and the false] is the term appointed for all of them.’ (ad-Dukhan: 40) The Day of Resurrection is their appointed time in which Allah will gather all of them together; the follower and the followed, the believer and the disbeliever, the obedient and the disobedient, the deniers and the believers in the Messengers.

All will be gathered on: ‘the Day when no friend shall be of the least avail...’ (ad-Dukhan: 41). A friend will be of no benefit ‘...to his friend…’ (ad-Dukhan: 41), and no relative will defend his relative.

In another verse, Allah Glorified is He states: ‘On that Day, friends will be foes unto one another – [all] save the righteous.’ (az-Zukhruf: 67) Blood and friendship ties will be preserved among the righteous only. Nonetheless, friends for the sake of vanities and interests of the worldly life will be enemies on the Day of Resurrection. Each one of them will blame the other for not advising or warning him against falling into sins and disobedience.

The Quranic verse: ‘...No one will receive any help’ (ad-Dukhan: 41) suggests that they will find no one to help them besides Allah: ‘except for those to whom Allah shows mercy...’ (ad-Dukhan: 41). The mercy bestowed upon those people encompasses mercy in the worldly life in the first place by saving them from disbelief and leading them to faith and belief in Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him. It is of Allah's Mercy that they follow His Guidance and His straight path until they meet with Him. This mercy paves the way for the greatest mercy on the Day of Resurrection.

The word mawla (friend) extends to include children, relatives and friends, and even slaves and servants. It can also include one's followers and subordinates. The Quranic verse: '...no friend can take another's place...' (ad-Dukhan: 41) indicates that one will not protect another from harm or bear his burdens because each person will be preoccupied with himself and his own burden. This is the case with humanity. The same goes for the idols and anything worshipped besides Allah, which will never defend their worshippers.

Thus, Allah Glorified is He says about Pharaoh: '[And so] he shall go before his people on the Day of Resurrection...' (Hud: 98), i.e. he will precede his people to the fire.

Then, Allah Glorified is He states:

إِنَّ شَجَرَتَ ٱلزَّقُّومِ ﴿٤٣﴾ طَعَامُ ٱلْأَثِيمِ ﴿٤٤﴾
كَٱلْمُهْلِ يَغْلِي فِي ٱلْبُطُونِ ﴿٤٥﴾ كَغَلْيِ ٱلْحَمِيمِ ﴿٤٦﴾

The tree of Zaqqum [43] will be food for the sinners [44] [hot] as molten metal, it boils in their bellies [45] like seething water [46]
(The Quran, ad-Dukhan: 43 - 46)

In these verses, Allah Glorified is He gives us an idea about the food of the inmates of the fire, from which we seek refuge in Allah. In another verse, He depicts their drink in it because food and drink are the essentials of life. Their food is awful fruit from the Zaqqum tree, which is a small tree with a putrid smell and a bitter taste. Regarding its shape, Allah Glorified is He states in another verse: 'It is fruit [as repulsive] as the heads of devils.' (as-Saffat: 65) This is a simile precisely conveying how repulsive and ugly it is to eat or even at which to look.

Objecting to this simile, some orientalists contend that what is unknown cannot be compared to that which is also unknown, given that no one has seen the heads of the devils. The purpose of a simile, they argue, is to compare something unknown to something known for the sake of clarification. Their argument is based on lack of knowledge regarding the inimitability of the Quran and its way of rendering meaning. If we were to hold a competition between all the caricature artists in the world, asking them to draw a picture of the Devil, each one of them would portray him according to how ugly he imagines him to be. In this way, we will be left with numerous images, all of which are ugly despite being different from one another. Granted, ugliness has various types; something may be repulsive for some people but not as such for others. For instance, the standards of beauty are relative among people; some people see beauty in thin lips while others see it in thick lips.

As such, the standards of ugliness differ in the minds of people and the image that scares one person might not scare another. Thus, Allah Glorified is He uses this simile to depict the ugliness and repulsiveness of its fruit in such a way as encompasses all aspects thereof according to every one's mind.

Accordingly, vagueness here is better because it allows for imaging ugliness in every possible way and thus we maintain that vagueness here is the utmost clarification and the essence of explanation. Therefore, it is a loathsome tree in its shape, taste and smell. Then, Allah Glorified is He further describes its taste as being: '[hot] as molten metal, it boils in their bellies.' (ad-Dukhan: 45) The Arabic word al-muhl (molten metal) signifies the melted metal that reaches the maximum temperature, or it may refer to boiling oil.

For example, the chef cooking falafil boils the oil for long periods until it turns into a black, toxic substance. This is what they call al-muhl if it comes from soft sources. It may also come from hard sources such as metals, for example: gold, iron and copper.

The meaning of: '…it boils in their bellies' (ad-Dukhan: 45) is that the temperature of the drink does not decrease after consuming it. For example, upon drinking hot tea one feels a burning sensation in his mouth. However, when it reaches the stomach, the temperature decreases. Food taken from the zaqqum tree, on the other hand, keeps boiling even after being settled in the bellies: 'like seething water.' (ad-Dukhan: 46) Such food is as hot and boiling as water that has reached its maximum temperature.

Then, Allah Glorified is He states:

ٱلۡحَمِيمِ ﴿٤٨﴾ ذُقۡ إِنَّكَ أَنتَ ٱلۡعَزِيزُ ٱلۡكَرِيمُ ﴿٤٩﴾

Take him! Thrust him into the depths of Hell! [47]
Pour scalding water over his head as punishment! [48]
Taste this, you powerful, respected man! [49]
(The Quran, ad-Dukhan: 47-49)

Contemplating the imperative verb: ‘Take him...’ (ad-Dukhan: 47-49) given by Allah Glorified is He one finds it scaring and dreadful. Surely, were it to be said by a police officer to a criminal, he would be terrified. How fearsome should it be, then, when said by Allah Glorified is He: ‘...Thrust him...!’ (ad-Dukhan: 47) That is to say, haul him severely and harshly, without mercy or clemency, but to where? ‘...into the depths of Hell!’ (ad-Dukhan: 47) Allah Glorified is He does not merely say ‘to jahim’ (hell), but He says instead ‘into the depths of Hell’. Were that inhabitant of fire to be at its edges, he could possibly have hope of getting out, or maybe a breeze would come and mitigate his suffering. Rather, he is in the middle, with the fire all around him from every direction, surrounding him.

Further, another punishment is to be inflicted on him: ‘Pour scalding water over his head as a punishment!’ (ad-Dukhan: 48) Thus, he suffers from boiling substances in his abdomen and over his head, after which he is to experience mental suffering, derision, and mockery.

‘Taste this, you powerful, respected man!’ (ad-Dukhan: 49) Tasting, involving all parts of the body, is to be inflicted on him. ‘...you powerful respected man!’ (ad-Dukhan: 49), i.e., you were powerful and respected in the worldly life and thought the same would be the case in the Hereafter. The same goes for the one who said, as Allah Glorified is He states: ‘...But even if [it should come, and] I am brought before my Lord, I will surely find something even better than this as [my last] resort!’ (al-Kahf: 36) His description, as given in the Quran: ‘...powerful, respected man’ (ad-Dukhan: 49) is intended for mocking and deriding him.

Then, Allah Glorified is He states:

إِنَّ هَٰذَا مَا كُنتُم بِهِۦ تَمۡتَرُونَ ﴿٥٠﴾

This is what you doubted [50]
(The Quran, ad-Dukhan*:* 50)

The referent of the Quranic phrase: ‘This is...’ (ad-Dukhan: 50) is the suffering that is befalling them. The phrase: ‘...what you doubted’ (ad-Dukhan: 50) indicates that what the disbelievers used to doubt and reject is now an actual reality.

Afterwards, Allah Glorified is He mentions the opposite category, stating:

وَإِسۡتَبۡرَقٖ مُّتَقَٰبِلِينَ ﴿٥٣﴾ كَذَٰلِكَ وَزَوَّجۡنَٰهُم بِحُورٍ عِينٖ ﴿٥٤﴾

But those mindful of God will be in a safe place [51] amid Gardens and springs [52] clothed in silk and fine brocade, facing one another [53] so it will be. We shall wed them to maidens with large, dark eyes [54]
(The Quran, ad-Dukhan: 51-54)

Using complete opposites for the purpose of clarification is one of the Quranic linguistic styles, by way of which the meaning becomes clearer. Employing this linguistic style, the Arab poet puts it:

The face is like the white dawn
While the hair is like the black night
Two opposites, when brought together properly
One opposite manifests the beauty of the other

Similarly, Allah Glorified is He says, ‘[in the life to come] the truly virtuous will indeed be in bliss, whereas, the wicked will indeed be in a blazing fire.’ (al-Infitar: 13-14) It is for one to make the comparison and choose. For this reason, after telling us about the final outcome of the criminals and the various kinds of punishment prepared for them, Allah mentions the final outcome of the righteous and the life of bliss prepared for them.

In the Quranic verse: ‘But those mindful of Allah will be in a safe place’ (ad-Dukhan: 51), the pious and righteous person is the one who places a protective barrier between himself and Allah’s Attributes of Majesty. His Attributes of Majesty include: Al-Qahhar (The All-Dominant), Al-Jabbar (The All-Compeller), Al-Muntaqim (The Avenger), and Dhul-Batsh Ash-Shadid (The One Who is severe in Punishment). Thus, believers should place a protective barrier between themselves and Allah’s Attributes of Majesty, the consequences of which cannot be faced by them.

Hence, Allah Glorified is He states: ‘O you who believe! Remain conscious of Allah...’ (al-Baqara: 278). In another verse, Allah says, ‘...then be conscious of the fire whose fuel is human beings and stones which awaits all who deny the truth!’ (al-Baqara: 24) Fire is one of the means for implementing the implications of Allah’s Attributes of Dominance and Majesty, and thus both verses convey the same meaning.

Regarding the Quranic verse: ‘...in a safe place’ (ad-Dukhan: 51), the word maqam (place) denotes a place of residence or home in which one lives. Further, it has many parts, in which to stay, sleep, or practise other activities. However, one of the most important essentials of a home is security for oneself and one’s property.

Accordingly, when setting up a residential area, the first thing to think of is providing security to its residents. This entails being located far from the pastures of beasts and predatory animals. In addition, it has to be secure from thieves and treacherous people who watch over one trying to disturb his peace.

A safe place is the one wherein one feels secure from everything. Therefore, specific security is given precedence to general security. This is clear in the Quranic verse depicting Prophet Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon him as supplicating to Allah: ‘...O my Lord! Make this a land secure...’ (al-Baqara: 126), i.e. generally secure, as is a prerequisite for any land.

When given what he asked for, Prophet Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon him supplicated for specific security saying, as stated in the Quran: ‘...O my Lord! Make this land secure...’ (Ibrahim: 35). Moreover, Allah Glorified is He granted him more superior security which is the sanctity of the Sacred House:

‘...and whoever enters it finds security...’ (Al-‘Imran: 97) such that if a man meets his father’s killer therein he does not confront him because of the sanctity of the place.

When the incident of shooting and scaring the secured occurred in the Sacred House, some atheists seized this opportunity to cast doubt on the Quranic verse: ‘...and whoever enters it finds security...’ (Al-‘Imran: 97) deeming what happened as contradictory to the verse.

To better understand this issue, we should distinguish between the various styles of rendering in the Quran. The Quranic verse: ‘...and whoever enters it finds security...’ (Al-‘Imran: 97) does not intend to inform that whoever enters it is secure. Rather, Allah orders the believers, in the verse, to grant security to whoever enters it. Thus, it is a legislative command that can be obeyed by granting security to whoever enters it or disobeyed by frightening those entering it.

The verse contains a directive, not an informative sentence, which can be true or false, unlike a directive sentence, which can be neither true nor false.

For example, Allah Glorified is He states: ‘[In the nature of things,] corrupt women are for corrupt men, and corrupt men, for corrupt women – just as good women are for good men, and good men, for good women...’ (an-Nur: 26). Some people understand this verse to be informing that corrupt women are inevitably married to corrupt men. Looking at the reality of society, they come to have doubts on the veracity of the verse.

However, the meaning is rather legislative; give corrupt women to corrupt men, and give good women to good men. This is a legislative command that may be obeyed by some and disobeyed by others.

To follow Allah’s Commands is wise and sound in that compatibility between the couples and balance of the marital life are established. A good man marrying a corrupt woman would have his life spoiled by conflict and disagreement, or may rebuke and humiliate his wife for her past evil deeds. As for a corrupt man taking a corrupt woman in marriage, there will be agreement. If he blamed her for previous misdeeds, she would do the same.

On that account, Allah Glorified is He imposed certain universal matters that never change and are never contradicted by the reality of life. He also imposed legislative issues and left them for the choice of the legally responsible person. Thus, this verse and similar others do not represent universal but rather legislative matters. Allah Glorified is He orders those who believe in His legislative commands to observe them.

In the Quranic verse: ‘amid Gardens and springs’ (ad-Dukhan: 52), the word jannat (Gardens) signifies gardens and orchards, which are deemed by the Arabs as a beautiful gift and a great blessing. Even though security is a necessity, gardens and springs show luxury and an abundance of blessings.

Such gardens have springs, as stated in the verse: ‘...and springs’ (ad-Dukhan: 52), being indispensable for watering the plants and nourishing the fruits. After granting them security and luxuries of life, Allah Glorified is He then offers them beautiful clothing: ‘wearing [garments] of silk and brocade, facing one another’ (ad-Dukhan: 53).

The Arabic word sundus (silk) denotes fine silk, while the word istabraq (brocade) signifies thick, rough silk. This clothing indicates luxury, comfort, and bliss, because necessary clothes are those which cover one’s body, whereas luxurious clothes are embellished with feathers and particularly ostrich feathers. Hence is the saying, ‘a feathered man’, i.e. one who leads a luxurious life.

Allah Glorified is He states: ‘O Children of Adam! Indeed, We have bestowed upon you from on high [the knowledge of making] garments to cover your nakedness, and as adornment (risha): but the garment of righteousness is the best of all...’ (al-A‘raf: 26).

In this way, there are three kinds of clothes: necessary clothes that screen one’s nakedness, luxurious and embellished clothes, and the clothes of righteousness, the last of which is the best and most excellent. This is because the full benefit driven from clothes is covering one’s body and showing elegance in the worldly life. This is temporal enjoyment, extending only to the span of one’s life. A baby may die immediately after birth and thereby getting no share of such enjoyment nor having naked parts to cover.

On the other hand, the clothes of righteousness represent embellishment in the worldly life and salvation in the Hereafter, the everlasting and eternal abode. Hence, Allah Glorified is He says, '...but the garment of righteousness is the best of all...' (al-A'raf: 26).

After the punishment prepared for the disbelievers is expounded, Allah Glorified is He as can be observed mentions the reward prepared for those who believe in Him and His messengers. Allah Glorified is He appointed the Day of Resurrection to judge between them: 'Verily, the Day of Distinction [between the true and the false] is the term appointed for all of them' (ad-Dukhan: 40).

Distinction is to be made between two things that are united in one matter and different in another. Thus, both the believers and disbelievers are the same in regard to existence, the conferment of Lordship and Allah's blessings in the worldly life, for Allah Glorified is He provides the essentials of life such as water, air, and food, to everyone.

Thus, they are equal in this regard because Allah Glorified is He is the Lord and the Creator of all of them. He is the One Who brought them into existence, so it is inevitable that He guarantees for them the necessities of life. However, these essentials are of varying degrees. For instance, when referring to clothes, Allah Glorified is He says, 'O Children of Adam...' (al-A'raf: 26), instead of mentioning the believers in particular because it is a gift of Lordship.

Then, the verse goes on: '...Indeed, We have bestowed upon you from on high [the knowledge of making] garments to cover your nakedness...' (al-A'raf: 26). This verse indicates that they are both entitled to the necessary clothes that conceal their nakedness and the luxurious clothes of beauty and ornament. Such are of the enjoyments of the life of this world, whereas to the clothes of righteousness preference is given, being the clothes of the people of faith.

Furthermore, even though we are all made equal with regards to Divine conferment, being all His slaves, on the Day of Judgement everyone will get what he deserves. It is all different in the Hereafter. The disbelievers will have their food from the zaqqum tree which boils in their bellies like seething water, while the righteous will be in gardens and springs in a safe place.

The words sundus and istabraq are of Persian origin that were later introduced into Arabic, and thereby used in the Quran as Arabic words, due to common usage by the Arabs. In turn, the orientalists raised objections against these words and other similar ones, such as the word qistas (balance) even though there is nothing wrong with a language using terms from another language.

Granted, these words were introduced into Arabic, used, and understood by Arabic speakers, and then what is wrong with using them as Arabic words? Nowadays, for example, we use the word ‘bank’, which is not Arabic, and may even find it smoother and easier than the Arabic word masraf.

The Quranic verse: ‘...facing one another’ (ad-Dukhan: 53) depicts the people of paradise and their residence therein. The phrase ‘facing one another’ indicates intimacy, as faces look at each other continuously and are close to one another. The opposite is mutadabira (to face in opposite directions) which only exists in case of dispute. The phrase: ‘...facing one another’ (ad-Dukhan: 53) suggests mutual intimacy, love and harmony between the dwellers of paradise.

Then, Allah Glorified is He says, ‘So it will be...’ (ad-Dukhan: 54) which indicates that they will enjoy these blessings and even more: ‘...We shall wed them to maidens with large, dark eyes.’ (ad-Dukhan: 54) The verb zawwaja (wed) is transitive and collocates with the preposition ba (with). Thus, when one says, ‘I married such-and-such woman (to) him (zawwajtuhu)’, it means I gave her to him as a wife. This refers to the legal marriage.

However, when one says, ‘I paired him with so-and-so’, it signifies adding another similar pair, which is not necessary a female. Thus, in the Quranic verse: ‘...We shall wed them to maidens with large, dark eyes’ (ad-Dukhan: 54), the verb zawwaja is collocates with the letter ba.

This linguistic style implies that it is not the issue of marriage which is intended, but affability with the beauty of the maidens, representing the peak of pleasure. Having intimacy is not necessarily involved(1) because we will be resurrected as a new creation in the Hereafter, different from how we used to look in the worldly life, and the proof is that in paradise one eats but never defecates.

(1) This issue refutes the argument of those who challenge Islam contending that paradise of the Muslims is cantered around sexual intercourse while being devoid of sublime or lofty spirituality. Thus, the statement of Sheikh Ash-Sha`rawi Allah rest his soul decisively clarifies the matter to be one of intimacy and companionship. The preposition ba indicates companionship and close union, and not sexual intercourse. [‘Adil Abu Al-Ma’ati]

On this basis, the intended meaning of the verse is pairing between couples, regardless of the gender because the pleasure here is that of looking, conversing and intimacy, but with values that are different from what we know now.

In the Quranic verse: '...to maidens with large, dark eyes' (ad-Dukhan: 54), the word hur (maidens) is the plural of huraa, and it refers to the women of paradise. Al-Hawar is an attribute of the eye when its white part is extremely white and its black part is extremely black. The word in (large eyed), the plural of ainaa' denotes wide beautiful eyes.

Looking at her mouth, one finds it two times smaller than her eye. Being an aspect of beauty, people usually describe a beautiful mouth to be as small as the ring of Solomon. Ah! What a beautiful sight!

Marriage, being one of the greatest pleasures of life pursed by men and women when they have come of age, Allah Glorified is He made it one of the pleasures of the Hereafter, but in a rather purer form, regardless of the act of intercourse itself. It is rather about intimacy in what was considered a blessing in the worldly life. In the Hereafter, the standards are different, as things are purified from the troubles of the worldly life.

For example, wine, honey and milk which are consumed in this life, will be present in the Hereafter, yet after being clarified from impurities. Thus, wine in the Hereafter is made delicious for those who drink, while wine in the worldly life is not delicious. The milk's taste never changes and the water does not alter.

Likewise, marriage is cleared of its problems and troubles such that the couples in this life, when gathered in paradise, the husband will find his wife in a different form because Allah Glorified is He will have purified and rid her of the defects that she used to have in the worldly life.

If she were, for example, not beautiful, he would find her to be the most beautiful of women. If she used to have a sharp tongue, he would find her most civilized because they will be produced in a new creation. Allah Glorified is He says, 'for We shall have brought them into being in a life renewed, having resurrected them as virgins, full of love, well-matched with those who have attained to righteousness.' (al-Waqi'a: 35-38) Further, Allah says, '...and spouses pure...' (Al-'Imran: 15).

Therefore, the letter ba (with) in the Quranic verse: ‘...We shall wed them to maidens with large, dark eyes.’ (ad-Dukhan: 54) implies that it is a kind of marriage completely unlike the relationship between a man and a woman, as known in the worldly life. It is surely far removed from the issue of sexuality because life in the Hereafter has other blessings and other standards.

The words hur in (maidens with large, dark eyes) draws attention towards the pleasure of looking and enjoying them, just as someone looks at his friend whom he loves. If he is satisfied and content with this blessing, then he is welcome, otherwise there is whatever the soul desires and what pleases the eyes. Then, Allah Glorified is He states:

يَدْعُونَ فِيهَا بِكُلِّ فَٰكِهَةٍ ءَامِنِينَ ﴿٥٥﴾ لَا يَذُوقُونَ فِيهَا ٱلْمَوْتَ
إِلَّا ٱلْمَوْتَةَ ٱلْأُولَىٰ ۖ وَوَقَىٰهُمْ عَذَابَ ٱلْجَحِيمِ ﴿٥٦﴾

Secure and contented, they will call for every kind of fruit [55] After the one death they will taste death no more. God will guard them from the torment of Hell [56]
(The Quran, ad-Dukhan: 55 - 56)

The meaning of the phrase: ‘...they will call for...’ (ad-Dukhan: 55) is that they will request in paradise. It may be asked, ‘Why shall they request it when in Paradise things appear before one’s eyes merely by thinking of them’? The scholars maintain that it occurs after consuming the essential food, as Allah Glorified is He states: ‘and with the flesh of any fowl that they may desire.’ (al-Waqi‘a: 21)

Thereupon, one wants fruits, which once he desires appear before him, even if they are: ‘...every kind of fruit...’ (ad-Dukhan: 55), i.e. of all kinds and shapes. However affluent one may be, he would only eat one or two kinds of fruits after his basic meal. Nonetheless, in paradise, they request all kinds of fruit.

One may wonder as to how one’s abdomen could be large enough or as to how one could consume many types of similar things all at once. Surely, if it were to happen in this world, one would have troubles in their stomach, intestines, and others, but in paradise it is all different.

The verse affirms that they will feel: ‘Secure and contented...’ (ad-Dukhan: 55). The word aminin (secured) is used to remove perplexity and astonishment, asserting that in paradise, you can eat anything you want, and everything your soul desires.

Moreover, food is secure from being spoiled by the factors known in the worldly life, and is prepared and clarified by Allah Glorified is He from ruin, decay and other defects. It is pure enough that one may eat as much as he can without defecation. Therefore, the blessings of paradise are clarified and purified of flaws and defects.

Allah Glorified is He states: ‘After the first death, they will taste death no more...’ (ad-Dukhan: 56) which means that in paradise there is no death. Why is it then, that there is the exception of: ‘After the first death...’ (ad-Dukhan: 56)? In fact, the verse means that they will not taste death in paradise because they will have become immortal after the first death in the worldly life. In paradise, nevertheless, there is no death.

The word: ‘taste’ (ad-Dukhan: 56) implies that the sense of taste which is restricted to the tongue and its surrounding sensory area, covers the entire body, encompassing all the other senses.

Likewise, Allah Glorified is He states regarding the suffering of the inmates of the fire: ‘Taste this, you powerful, respected man!’ (ad-Dukhan: 49) They taste the suffering, not only with their tongues but also with all their body organs. Allah Glorified is He says in another verse: ‘...and therefore Allah caused it to taste the all-embracing misery of hunger and fear in result of all [the evil] that its people had so persistently perpetrated.’ (an-Nahl: 112) Allah Glorified is He portrays the sense of taste as a garment that covers the whole body, and thus every part of the body tastes the suffering.

The Quranic verse: ‘...Allah will guard them from the torment of Hell’ (ad-Dukhan: 55-56) suggests that before these blessings are bestowed, Allah Glorified is He will protect them from the suffering of the blazing fire. Protection from chastisement precedes entering paradise since the rule provides, as previously stated, that cleaning the impurities precedes ornamentation. Allah Glorified is He says, ‘...whereupon he that shall be drawn away from the fire and brought into paradise will indeed have gained a triumph...’ (Al-‘Imran: 185).

Then, Allah Glorified is He states:

فَضۡلٗا مِّن رَّبِّكَۚ ذَٰلِكَ هُوَ ٱلۡفَوۡزُ ٱلۡعَظِيمُ ﴿٥٧﴾

A bounty from your Lord. That is the supreme triumph [57] (The Quran, ad-Dukhan: 57)

Surely, paradise, the blessings that it contains, and protection from suffering before all else are deemed as: ‘A bounty from your Lord...’ (ad-Dukhan: 57). It is by Allah’s Grace and Favour that they are delivered from chastisement and admitted to paradise, not by virtue of their deeds.

This is a matter of disagreement between the scholars because Allah Glorified is He states: ‘...Enter paradise by virtue of what you were doing [in life]!’ (an-Nahl: 32), and yet in another verse, Allah says, ‘Say, “In [this] bounty of Allah and in His Grace – in this, then, let them rejoice: it is better than all [the worldly wealth] that they may amass!”’ (Yunus: 58)

Consequently, some verses highlight the issue of Divine Favour whereas other verses mention one’s deeds as the main reason for being admitted to paradise. Undoubtedly, the opponents of Islam pounce on these issues, trying to cast doubt on the Word of Allah, Lord of the worlds, and accusing it of contradiction. Far is it and high above what they say by great sublimity.

In order to clarify this matter, it is enough to consider that when you are concerned with your child, spend money and hire him a private tutor so that he excels, it is for his own benefit not yours. Further, if he does well, you give him a reward and encourage him to go on. Therefore, you burden yourself and spend your money, without gaining a benefit whatsoever, as the only one deriving benefit in this case is your child.

This is how Allah Glorified is He treats His creation; He created and provided for His creation. Then, He sent down guidance, adhering to which entitles one to a reward, and thereby getting upright character in the worldly life and being rewarded in the Hereafter.

Above need of the worlds, Allah Glorified is He confers His blessings and provides Guidance for His servants, even though to Him belong the Perfect Attributes before He created the creation. Therefore, obedience does not benefit Him nor does disobedience harm Him.

Beware of thinking that your obedience and worship to Allah Glorified is He support His Lordship or add to His creation. You are the one who benefits first and last from His Guidance, to which one is honoured to belong and to be among Allah's servants.

This is affirmed in a Qudsi Hadith, (1) 'O My slaves! If the first and last of you, all the jinn and all the men among you possessed the heart of the most pious man among you, that would not increase My Dominion in any way. O My slaves! If the first and last of you, all the jinn and all the men among you possessed the heart of the most evil man among you, that would not decrease My Dominion in any way. O My slaves! If the first and last of you, all the jinn and all the men among you, were to stand in a single place and ask of Me, I could give to every man what he wants without decreasing My dominion any more than a needle when it enters the sea. This is because I am Generous, Glorious, and Existing. I give with a word and punish with a word. If I will something, all I do is say to it "Be!" and it is.'(2)

Therefore, the legal responsibility that Allah imposed upon us does not benefit Him in the slightest; it is rather for our own benefit. If we were to approach the matter rationally, we would find it more proper to pay for it, as the reward for obedience is therefore nothing more than Allah's favour, even His Legislation and Guidance are but one of His favours.

Thus, Allah Glorified is He states: 'A bounty from your Lord. That is the supreme triumph.' (ad-Dukhan: 57) following and adhering to Allah's Guidance is undoubtedly the supreme triumph, in that by virtue of which one gains benefit in this world and gets rewarded in the Hereafter.

As for the Quranic verse: '...Enter paradise by virtue of what you were doing [in life]' (an-Nahl: 32), the scholars argue that it means to enter paradise because of your righteous deeds, which are merely a reason entitling you to it, but not a price to deserve it. Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him clarified this concept when he said, ‘None of you will enter paradise because of his deeds alone.’ They asked, ‘Not even you, O Messenger of Allah.’ He said, ‘Not even I, unless Allah covers me with His Mercy.’(1)

(1) Divine words, other than the Holy Quran, narrated on the authority of the Prophet peace and blessings be upon him.

(2) Narrated by At-Tirmidhi in his Sunnan (2419), Ibn Majah in his Sunnan (4247) and Ahmad in his Musnad (20560, 20405), on the authority of Abu Dharr Al-Ghifari Allah be pleased with him. At-Tirmidhi graded this Hadith as hasan (good).

Considering this Hadith we can understand the Quranic verse: ‘Say: “In [this] bounty of Allah and in His Grace – in this, then, let them rejoice: it is better than all [the worldly wealth] that they may amass!”’ (Yunus: 58).

Afterwards, Allah Glorified is He states:

فَإِنَّمَا يَسَّرْنَٰهُ بِلِسَانِكَ لَعَلَّهُمْ يَتَذَكَّرُونَ ﴿٥٨﴾

We have made this Quran easy to understand – in your own language [Prophet] – so that they may take heed [58] (The Quran, ad-Dukhan: 58)

Addressing Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him Allah Glorified is He elucidates His blessings upon him, of which is making the Quran easy for him that he reads it in a clear, Arabic language. The pronoun ‘it’ in the Quranic phrase: ‘...We have made it [this Quran] easy to understand...’ (ad-Dukhan: 58) refers to the Quran which can be inferred from the subsequent phrase: ‘...in your own language...’ (ad-Dukhan: 58). This is linguistic conformity since it was revealed in the Arabic language which is the language of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him.

Furthermore, the conclusion of the verse: ‘...so that they may take heed’ (ad-Dukhan: 58) indicates that it is in the language of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him and his people. Allah Glorified is He says, ‘and never have We sent forth any Prophet otherwise than [with a message] in his own people’s tongue...’ (Ibrahim: 4). Thus, in your language, it is conveyed and in theirs, it is received, accepted and even subsequently conveyed, for they are the ones entrusted with spreading the word after Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him.

Then, Allah Glorified is He states:

فَٱرۡتَقِبۡ إِنَّهُم مُّرۡتَقِبُونَ ﴿٥٩﴾

So wait; the disbelievers too are waiting [59]
(The Quran, ad-Dukhan: 59)

This verse directs Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him to wait, for the disbelievers too are waiting. However, what is it that Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him should be waiting for? And what are the disbelievers waiting for? Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him came with a call and Guidance, a light with which to guide his people. Even as they oppose his call, declaring themselves as his enemies and seeking to put out Allah's Light, he is concerned over them, wishing for them to be guided despite their harm and ridicule such that he almost destroys himself for the sake of his call.

Hence, in many Quranic verses, Allah Glorified is He addresses him to console and lighten his burden. Allah informs him: '...you are not bound to do more than deliver the message [entrusted to you] ...' (ash-Shura: 48), and 'Will you, perhaps, torment yourself to death [with grief] because they [who live around you] refuse to believe [in it]?' (ash-Shu'ara': 3)

Moreover, Allah Glorified is He addresses him, saying: 'Well do We know that what such people say grieves you indeed: yet, it is not you to whom they give the lie, but Allah's Messages do these evildoers deny.' (al-An'am: 33)

This is to tell Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him not be sad because what they say about him, for they respect, appreciate and know his truthfulness and elevated rank. They deem him high above telling lies, but Allah's Messages and signs are what they deny.

The word fartaqib (So wait) appears twice in this chapter; in the verse under discussion (ad-Dukhan: 59), and in the Quranic verse: '[Prophet], watch out for the Day when the sky brings forth clouds of smoke for all to see.' (ad-Dukhan: 10) The latter is related to the supplication of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him: 'O Allah! Be severe on the tribe of Mudar! Inflict upon them years of famine like the years of Prophet Yusuf (Joseph).'(1)

(1) Narrated by Al-Bukhari in his Sahih (762, 951, 2715, 3124) and by Muslim in his Sahih (1082,1083) on the authority of Abu Hurayra Allah be pleased with him.

In turn, they were afflicted with famine and drought until they were forced to eat corpses and wool or fur mixed with dry blood. Unable to bear it anymore, they hastened to supplicate Allah to remove the punishment from them, but Allah knows that if He were to remove it from them they would return to their usual ways of denying His Messenger.

Thus, Allah Glorified is He addresses Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him saying: '...And whether We show you [in this world] something of what We hold in store for those [deniers of the truth], or whether We cause you to die [before that retribution takes place – know that, in the end], it is unto Us that they will be brought back.' (Ghafir: 77)

The meaning of: 'So wait...' (ad-Dukhan: 59) is to wait for the punishment that will befall them, as they wait for something to relieve and free them from your call. Teaching Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him how to debate with them, Allah Glorified is He says, 'Say, "Are you, perhaps, hopefully waiting for something [bad] to happen to us – [while nothing can happen to us] save one of the two best things? But as far as you are concerned, we are hopefully waiting for Allah to inflict chastisement upon you, [either] from Himself or by our hands! Wait, then, hopefully; we shall hopefully wait with you!"' (at-Tawba: 52)

Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him is ordered to inform the disbelievers that though they are waiting for the believers to be afflicted by an adversity, only one of the two best things can happen to them; either victory or dying as martyrs. If Muslims gain victory over them, Allah's Guidance is made supreme and predominant, and even if they die as martyrs, they will be alive with their Lord Glorified is He.

We, i.e. Muslims, are waiting for Allah to afflict you with a punishment from Him or at our hands. Therefore, we are waiting for evil to come to you, and you are waiting for goodness to come to us.

al-Jathiya

In the Name of God, the Most Merciful, the Dispenser of Mercy

The chapter al-Jathiya (Kneeling) (1) :

Allah Glorified is He states:

حمٓ ﴿١﴾ تَنزِيلُ ٱلْكِتَٰبِ مِنَ ٱللَّهِ ٱلْعَزِيزِ ٱلْحَكِيمِ ﴿٢﴾

Ha Mim* [1] This Scripture is sent down from God, the Mighty, the Wise [2]
(The Quran, al-Jathiya: 1-2)

This is one of the chapters starting with the discrete letters: 'Ha Mim' which appears in the beginning of some Quranic chapters. Although such letters have already been discussed, we are to shed light on them again, given that Allah Glorified is He repeats them in the beginning of this chapter, asking

---

(1) The chapter of al-Jathiya is the 45th chapter according to the order of chapters in the Noble Quran. It is a Meccan chapter, all of which verses were revealed before hegira according to Al-Hasan, Jabir, and 'Ikrima. According to Ibn `Abbas and Qatadah, it is Meccan chapter except for the verse: 'Tell all who have attained to faith that they should forgive those who do not believe in the coming of the Days of Allah…' (al-Jathiya: 14). From their viewpoint, this verse was revealed concerning `Umar ibn Al- Khattab Allah be pleased with him as narrated by Al-Mawardi. However, Al-Mahdawi and An-Nuhas narrated on the authority of Ibn `Abbas Allah be pleased with him that it was revealed in Mecca about a man cursing `Umar Allah be pleased with him before hegira, and thus `Umar decided to strike him, whereupon the verse was revealed. The chapter has 37 verses, as mentioned by Al-Qurtubi in his Tafsir (9/9207). Its order of revelation is the same as its order in the Mushaf: it was revealed after the chapter of ad-Dukhan and before the chapter of al-Ahqaf. It was the 64th chapter according to the order of revelation.

Allah for help in interpreting them. In this way, it is not considered, in reality, a kind of needless repetition.

Contemplating the world before us, one would find in it a dominion that is perceptible and a realm that is invisible. Everything that is not perceived by our senses is thus considered from the unseen realm which no one has knowledge of except Allah. For example, faith and acts of worship come under these two categories of dominion, the invisible, and the perceptible.

Thus, by means of reason, the Oneness and Existence of Allah and Him Being the Creator of the entire cosmos can be proven. Man was brought into this existence to find it as is: the sun, the moon and the stars; the sky and the earth, the water and the air. For this reason, no one claims himself to be the Creator of this vast universe. Allah Glorified is He says, 'and thus it is [with most people]: if you ask them, "Who is it that has created the Heavens and the earth?" – They will surely answer, "Allah"…' (Luqman: 25). Allah further states: 'Now if you ask those [who worship any being other than Allah] as to who it is that has created them, they are sure to answer, "Allah"…' (az-Zukhruf: 87).

This cosmos is perceivable. On the other hand, other issues related to faith are of the unseen realm. We believe in them because of being reported by Allah Glorified is He such as incidents related to the Hereafter, the Resurrection, the Reckoning, paradise, and hell. Prayer, for example, is one of the acts of worship the wisdom behind which can be logically deciphered. As such, we know that Allah made the prayers obligatory upon us five times a day, in order for His servants to be frequently in the Presence of their Creator, to derive strength and aid from Him. In addition, in prayer, one enjoys the company of Allah as he meets with Him, and obtains from the superabundance of both His material gifts and spiritual illuminations that He confers upon those who establish prayer.

In prayer, all people are equal; the rich and the poor, the leader and the subordinates, all prostrate to Allah. This shows that the universe as a whole is in a state if worship. However, we do not know as to why the dawn prayer is made of two units, the noon prayer of four, and the sunset prayer of three. Such are of the unknown issues in which we believe as are, according to what Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him who was entrusted with Allah's religion, informed us.

In the same manner, there are matters that are perceivable and understandable in the Noble Quran as well as in others, that is from the unseen realm, which is beyond the comprehension of our minds such as the separate letters, the meaning of which Allah has kept to Himself alone. The rest of the Quran, however, is evident and perceivable, clear of meaning and manifest of intent, for Allah wants us to devote our worship to Him alone by having us believe in the unseen and in that which is perceptible and understandable.

It is to the unseen realm that true faith pertains. As for the perceptible realm, there is no room for belief or disbelief. For example, it is not acceptable to say, 'I believe that the sun is rising'. However, you do say, 'I believe in The Hereafter'.

Thus, the letters: 'Ha Mim' refer to the separated letters with which some chapters of the Quran begin. Their meanings are unknown to us, although in which we believe and leave their meaning to Allah Glorified is He.

The Quranic verse: 'This Scripture is sent down…' (al-Jathiya: 2), refers to the intelligible realm, whereas in the previous chapter, the verse: 'Ha Mim,' alludes to the Unseen realm, followed by a verse whose meaning is also intelligible to us: 'By the Scripture that makes things clear' (ad-Dukhan: 2).

The chapter proceeds: 'truly We sent it down on a blessed night…' (ad-Dukhan: 3). This verse signifies that both the unseen and the perceptible realms have been sent down from Allah. Subsequently, both are to be believed in equally as a means of truly devoting oneself to Allah Glorified is He. Therefore, in the same way as you worship Him by believing in that which is clearly understood, you are required to believe to the same degree in the unseen realm which cannot be comprehended with one's intellect. We can encompass what we are allowed to know of both realms through our faith and worship, trying our best to glean some of its meanings and secrets.

It is for this reason that we say: The Quran is based on continuity between the verses and the chapters in its entirety such that the last word in the chapter of an-Nas is connected to the first word in the chapter of al-Fatiha. Thus, we recite, without stopping: 'From among the jinn and mankind. In the Name of Allah, the Most Beneficent, the Most Merciful [All] praise is [due] to Allah, Lord of the worlds.' Thus, we proceed in a continuous manner.

Also, for this reason, we call the reciter of the Quran ‘The one who is constantly in a state of moving forward. In other words, the reciter is the one who, on the point of finishing the Quran, continues such that he actually starts it again from the beginning.

As for the separated letters that appear at the beginnings of chapters, their pronunciation is based on the rule of stopping upon each one of them individually. Thus, you say, ‘Ha Mim,’ and you say, ‘Alif Lam Mim,’ whereas you do not utter these last three letters in such a manner in the following verse: ‘Have we not (`A-lam) opened up your heart’ (ash-Sharh: 1).

To conclude, every articulated sound in the Quran has intent behind it and contains secrets, and it resembles the teeth of a key with which you open something. There are keys that serve their functions with just one tooth, others that do so with two, and others only work with three.

In His statement concerning the Book: ‘is from Allah, the Exalted in Might, the Wise’ He chose the name ‘The Exalted’ to indicate to us that the Quran will be revealed from heaven, and that you will find from amongst people those who will deny its message. So, do not be distressed by their reactions, and do not let their denials delude you, for Allah is the Revealer of this Book, The Almighty, and none can defeat Him. Furthermore, this might not by means of compulsion; rather, it is manifested by means of wisdom, as He states: ‘The Wise.’ For the one who is wise is he who puts things in their proper place.

إِنَّ فِي ٱلسَّمَٰوَٰتِ وَٱلْأَرْضِ لَءَايَٰتٍ لِّلْمُؤْمِنِينَ ﴿٣﴾

There are signs in the heavens and the earth for those who believe [3] (The Quran, al-Jathiya: 3)

‘Allah indicates that He has made the Heavens and the Earth as a container and a vessel, and tells us: do not contemplate the Heavens and the earth in and of themselves; rather, contemplate the signs and secrets they contain, for they are replete with signs that Allah brings to light in due course of time.

It is for this reason that `Abdullah ibn Mas`ud Allah be pleased with him said(1): ‘Contemplate the Quran deeply’; in other words, probe its meanings that you may take from its depths, like the earth when we plough it in order that we obtain its benefits. Similarly, everything is related to Allah, and within the Quran are innumerable treasures of bounty.

(1) Related by Al-Qurtubi in his Tafsir (1/453); the Hadith is as follows: ‘Contemplate the Quran deeply, for it contains knowledge of those who came before you and those that=

Now if the Heavens and the earth are receptacles that contain things within them, it behoves us to ask ourselves: which of the two is more valuable, the container, or the thing contained within it? Is the calling of people to faith - or the message - more valuable, or is the receptacle in which it is contained of greater value? Is the coffer of treasures itself more precious or what is put inside of it?

Likewise, the same goes for the Heavens and the earth despite their greatness and force. For the signs and the wonders that are within them are greater and more precious. Thus, you will recall that it is forbidden for us to place anything between the pages of the Quranic text. Why is this case? It is so in order that the Book of Allah Glorified is He is not used to hold or contain anything else, however precious or valuable it may be, for the Quran is more valuable and worth more than anything else, so do not use it to hold or contain anything.

In His statement: ‘are signs for the believers,’ the meaning is: Oh Believers! Be Mindful of Me concerning these signs, that you may use them to convince others from amongst the disbelievers and the atheists. For this reason, we as Muslims are most willing to sit down with them, engage with them constantly, and say to them: Contemplate this or that matter; think and ponder over the power of Allah concerning this or that matter.

This is our Message to which we have to address mankind. And how do we prove Allah’s Existence and Presence? We do so by means of the signs in the cosmos. It is due to this that our Lord Glorified is He teaches us how to prove these points to mankind by means of these signs, and states: ‘And of His signs are the night and day and the sun and moon. Do not prostrate to the sun or to the moon, but prostrate to Allah, who created them, if it should be Him that you worship.’ (Fussilat: 37)

= will come after you.’ In another narration: ‘Whoever wishes to gain knowledge let him contemplate deeply the Quran.’ Something similar to this relation is found in Tafsir `Al-Lubab of Ibn Khazin (1/375) [in the commentary of the 71st verse of al-Baqara]. Ibn Mandhur in Lisan Al-`Arab, mentions the same Hadith ascribing it to Ibn Mas`ud. The author of Taj Al-`Arus Az-Zabidi and Ibn Al-`Athir also mention the Hadith.

In other words, do not let the greatness of these signs beguile you; for their Creator is Greater, and what is more adorned with grace than what is beautiful is the One Who Created beauty and excellence. So, beware of turning away from Him as a result of your being struck with wonder and amazement with the night and the day, and the sun and the moon, for He is most worthy of worship, not that which He Has Created in the cosmos. This also indicates that the Creator Glorified is He is firmly intent on manifesting the wondrousness of His creation, intently concerned with guiding humanity and saving them from what will destroy them.

It is as if the sign were to say to the believers: by Allah, Allah has placed these signs of the cosmos firstly to convince you of His Reality, and then for you to convince others of His Reality.

Thus, if we think about scholars of religion and the scientists of the natural sciences in the domains of the study of human beings, the animal and plant kingdoms, and inanimate creation, we find that the later precedes the former, for the scholars of religion clarify and make clear to people what is licit and what is illicit according to Islamic Law, and take as their starting point belief in Allah. The explanation of the legal rulings of Islam is derivative and thus secondary to Faith in Islam itself. Thus, contemplation of the signs of the cosmos and demonstrative proof of their Creator Glorified is He by means of them are more important and prior.

One of the wonders of creation in these planets is that we know that the day is less in length of time than the year because the day is 1/365th of a year. And We discovered Venus, the second celestial body in distance from the sun after Mercury. What is wondrous is that they discovered that the day of Venus is longer than its year. A day for us is a complete rotation of the earth around its own axis, and a year is one complete rotation of the earth around the sun. So, when they observed the length of the day of Venus, trying to reason analogically from the knowledge of an Earth day, they found that its day is longer than its year; for a day of Venus is equivalent to 244 Earth days, and its year is equivalent to 225 Earth days.

This phenomenon makes sense, for Venus does not follow a regular orbit. Thus, every celestial body has its own orbital path and motion, and a planet's orbit around its own axis can be faster than its rotation around the sun, and vice-versa. Here we can see the differences between the various planetary movements. Furthermore, there is nothing to prevent the possibility of a day of a planet being longer in length of time than a year. The last of these planets is Pluto, whose day is the equivalent of 2.5 Earth days, and its year equivalent to 268 Earth days.

From these natural phenomena, we are able to appreciate the power of the Creator Glorified is He and that the cosmos was created in precise detail and with perfectly orchestrated execution, not by chance, nor by some mode of creation that is not dynamic such as is the case with the shapes of inanimate objects. Rather, it is the facility with which the power of the Creator is manifested and His custodianship over the universe that sets this cosmos in motion and manages it with complete and perfect precision and execution.

After considering the cosmos, if the human being were to contemplate his own being, he would find another world replete with signs of Allah. Consider, for example, human beings in all of their variations of languages, dialects and tongues, their various forms of creation and their various characteristics: 'And of His signs are the creation of the heavens and the earth and the diversity of your languages and your colours. Indeed, in that are signs for those of knowledge.' (ar-Rum: 22)

If He had wished, He could have made us all from a single race, and speaking a single tongue, but through His wisdom in Creating the cosmos Glorified is He He has created like characteristics in creatures other than yourself, and then, at the same time, has distinguished you from the others in another aspect or characteristic completely.

In the past, we used to learn about the individual differences between the fingerprints of people. Now they have found voiceprints, jaw prints, and breath prints, all of which distinguish an individual human being from everyone else. They will never manifest in the same manner in another person, despite the immense numbers of human beings in existence. Is this not inimitable and miraculous about creation, calling us to belief in the Creator Glorified is He?

We note that from amongst the wonders of creation is that in the human body, there never occurs temperature variation within due to temperature variation outside of it, as is the case with other forms of matter. The body temperature of a person is usually 37 degrees, which you will find in a person both at the equator and the North Pole, for the body preserves this temperature inside of itself. Furthermore, you will find that every part of the body of a human being also has an internal temperature that is proper to it, in order that it may carry out its particular function.

You will be amazed to learn that the internal temperature of the eye never surpasses 9 degrees, whereas the internal temperature of the liver never goes below a temperature of 40 degrees, yet they are both parts of the same body. Despite all of this, the internal temperature within these parts of the body never varies with external temperature conditions, and thus never brings about a situation resulting in the internal temperature of the liver going below its normal internal temperature limit and reaching the internal temperature of the eye.

Thus, just as Islam concerns itself with the legislation of what is licit and illicit according to Islamic law and its explication to the people at large, it concerns itself, to an even greater degree, with the signs of Allah in the cosmos in every form of creation, human beings, animals, plants, and inanimate material.

To this end, read, if you would like, the following verses: ‘Do you not see that Allah sends down rain from the sky, and We produce thereby fruits of varying colours? And in the mountains are tracts, white and red of varying shades and [some] extremely black. And among people and moving creatures and grazing livestock are various colours similarly. Only those fear Allah, from among His servants, who have knowledge. Indeed, Allah is Exalted in Might and Forgiving.’ (Fatir: 27-28)

Is there any mention here of a legal ruling of Islamic law concerning the prayers, the Pilgrimage to Mecca, or fasting? All these verses are an appeal to contemplation and reflection over the cosmos. The scientists of this realm are those of the natural sciences, not the scholars of religion, for the former are the most knowledgeable of humanity in terms of the verses of Allah, and thus, the most knowledgeable of Allah, and the most reverent of Allah as well. Why is this case?

This is so because they have arrived at knowledge of the signs of Allah by their own effort. For this reason, the Islamic way of life has never neglected any of the Islamic sciences, for knowledge in general serves the purposes of faith and Divine monotheism, and takes up issues that are related to them.

The True Lord Glorified is He gives us all these examples in the Quran that we may discern proofs of His Existence and Presence, and His attributes of Compulsion, Wisdom, Might, Mercy, and many others as well. Beyond this, through the contemplation of the signs of Allah in the cosmos, we can find what we need to put our lives in order, and correct our notions and concepts of the realities of affairs in the cosmos.

Take, for example, the relationship between the genders. Some are of the opinion that men are opposed to women, and that both genders are diametrically opposed to each other. As a result, we continuously hear about women's advocates and men's advocates opposing each other, as if there were a battle taking place, whereas when we read the Quran, we find His statement Glorified is He: 'By the night when it covers. And [by] the day when it appears. And [by] He who created the male and female. Indeed, your efforts are diverse.' (al-Layl: 1-4)

Thus, the presence of elements of creation that are mutual and complementary does not mean that they are completely opposite to each other. So, beware of thinking that the night opposes or contradicts the day. Yes, it stands in contrast to it in the nature of things, but it does not actively oppose it or contradict it. For the night supports the day and assists it and the day likewise supports and assists the night. The two are complementary, forming a perfect, integrative whole, the night for rest and the day for work; each of the two are important for the other, and each has a special function in our lives and a specific role to play.

The condition of the male and the female is similarly complementary. This verse of the cosmos teaches us a lesson concerning our communal existence. Thus, there is no need for this clamour and fuss over gender relations. So, return to the Quran, for in it we can find a healing and a cure, and solutions to all our problems.

Then, The True Lord Glorified is He states:

وَفِي خَلْقِكُمْ وَمَا يَبُثُّ مِن دَآبَّةٍ ءَايَٰتٌ لِّقَوْمٍ يُوقِنُونَ (٤)

in the creation of you, in the creatures God scattered on earth, there are signs for people of sure faith[4] (The Quran, al-Jathiya: 4)

The Quranic context here moves us from contemplation of the signs of Allah in the Heavens and the earth to contemplation of our own selves, as He has stated: ‘And (also) in yourselves. Can you then not see?’ (adh-Dhariyat: 21)

Thus, the proof of the Existence of the Supreme does not restrict itself to the signs of the Heavens and the Earth, for there are marvellous, wondrous signs in the atom, just as there are such signs in the galaxy. Furthermore, within the human body and its individual parts are signs and wonders as well. Expressing this point, the poet(1) has said:

You consider that you are an entity insignificant,
Yet within you is hidden the greatest universe (2)

The moment you hear the term ‘creation’ in the verse, you should understand from it the bringing about into existence of something from a state of non-existence; any existent entity was initially non-existent, whereupon Allah brought it about into existence. Furthermore, it is not applied to the event of creation, but rather, it is applied to the created beings themselves. It is for this reason that Allah states Glorified is He: ‘(All) this is Allah’s creation; show Me, then, what others than He may have created!’ (Luqman: 11)

Thus, the meaning refers to created beings. Yet, in another context, it refers to the event of creation, as in the same verse: ‘show Me, then, what others than He may have created!’ (Luqman: 11)

(1) 'Ali ibn Abu Taleb Allah be pleased with him the cousin of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him the husband of the Prophet’s daughter Fatima, and the fourth of the Rightly Guided Caliphs of Islam.

(2) The text of the lines of poetry can be found in Al-Mawsu’a Ash-Shi`riyya from the ode of Bahr (meter) Al-Mutaqarib, consisting of four verses:
Do you claim that you are an entity insignificant?
Yet within of you is hidden the greatest universe
And there is also the saying of the Mufti Fathallah from an ode consisting of 6 verses from the meter of Al-Mutaqarib as well. The Mufti Fathallah passed away in the year 1260 of the Hijri calendar.

Thus, in His statement: ‘And in the creation of yourselves’, the meaning is that from amongst the signs of the cosmos is that He created you – humankind. The process by which mankind was created consists of various stages through which Adam peace and blessings be upon him passed. At one time, he was not existent, whereupon Allah brought him about into existence from a state of nothingness. At the beginning, he was formless, unmoulded clay, and then Allah shaped him in due proportion, and breathed into him his spirit, and thus, life started to permeate in him, and he became a human being. Thereafter, Allah made his progeny to spread far and wide through intermarriage between men and women.

Therefore, in the process of our own creation, there are two phases: the first phase of creation, of our father Adam peace and blessings be upon him and the following phase involving the propagation and spread of the human species. For this reason, He states in another verse: ‘O mankind, fear your Lord Who created you from one soul and created from it its mate and dispersed from both of them many men and women.’ (an-Nisa’: 1)

Thus, we human beings have the aspect of creation from nothingness, and the aspect of dissemination, or propagation. The spreading of the human species across the earth comes about through reproduction. As for the kingdom of non-human creatures, He did not mention anything concerning them except for the phase of dissemination: ‘and what He disperses of moving creatures.’

In other words, the verse refers to the spreading of the species; but where is there any mention of the stage of their creation? Allah brings forth a verse indicating creation in the first case, and leaves out mention of dissemination, and He brings forth a verse indicating dissemination in the second case, leaving out the mention of creation. Accordingly, it means that in your creation and what He spread from amongst you, and in the creation of animals and what He spread from amongst them.

Allah continues in the same verse: ‘are signs for people who are certain [in faith].’ Now, the True Lord Glorified is He has appraised us of the manner in which the first of creation came about from nonexistence through the creation of Adam. He then informed us of the various stages of this process of creation until Adam was established in existence as a full, perfect human being that moves on his own and proceeds along the earth. He did not make mention of the details of the rest of the creation of humanity in order that we may draw by analogy our own case based on the process that we have mentioned earlier.

Then, when He spoke of Eve, He stated: ‘who created you from one soul and created from it its mate.’ In other words, He Created her in the same manner in which He Created the first soul, that of Adam. Also, for the same reason, He did not mention anything about the creation of the animals, for their creation may be understood by analogy from the creation of Adam.

There is no doubt that the one who contemplates the creation of mankind and the animals will find many signs and miracles that indicate the facility with which the Power of the Creator is manifested. Thus, in the first of creation, this Power of the Creator is manifested, since He created it from nothing, without any previous model of creation. He brought Adam into existence without the presence of a father or a mother, and then created Eve from Adam, from a father and without a mother. He also created `Isa (Jesus) peace be upon him from a mother and without a father, and He created the rest of creation from a father and a mother.

Therefore, the Power and Ability of Allah in creating humanity and the animal kingdom covers all the logical possibilities that could exist concerning this issue, even if He brings about this potentiality only once, in order that the proof of His Creative Power and His Inimitability be made manifest in creation, and that His Right over creation be confirmed: ‘But His command, when He intends a thing, is only that He says unto it: Be! And it is!’ (Ya Sin: 82)

Now, the One who possesses the power of bestowal and endowment also possesses the power of withholding and prevention although, sometimes, the causal relations that usually bring about creation and the begetting of offspring abound and are fully present, nothing takes place: ‘To Allah belongs the dominion of the heavens and the earth; He creates what he wills. He gives to whom He wills female [children], and He gives to whom He wills males. Or He makes them [both] males and females, and He renders whom He wills barren. Indeed, He is Knowing and Competent.’ (ash-Shura: 49-50)

From the story of Zakaryya (Zechariah) peace be upon him you know how he did not beget any children, until he grew infirm through old age, his wife being barren and how by then he had given up all hope of ever having a child. Yet when Allah wished that Zakaryya (Zechariah) beget a child, He made the ordinary rules of cause and effect subject to His command such that this was made possible, and gave glad tidings of a son, and named him as well.

All these are just some of the countless signs of creation spread out across the cosmos. At every stage of creation, one discovers miracles and the Power of Allah at work, beginning with the coming together of the man and woman, and the union of the animals, by means of the seminal fluid of the male reaching the ovum of the female. Then, if fertilization of the ovum takes place, pregnancy occurs, and the blood of the female transforms to serve as nourishment for the foetus, and serves as its means of provision until it is born. If pregnancy does not take place, the blood exits during the period of menstruation.

This means that when the Creator Glorified is He formed man, He created his means of provision alongside him. Thus, the foetus is not nourished by the nourishment that its mother takes herself, but rather, is nourished by a special type of food that is specific to it, and the proof of this is that the mother does not derive any benefit from the blood that nourishes the foetus if pregnancy does not take place.

Allah Glorified is He says, ‘are signs for people who are certain [in faith].’ Certainty is true faith and firmly grounded belief that becomes embedded in the heart such that no doubt whatsoever is able to penetrate it, and in such a manner that this faith does not drift about in the mind, allowing the intellect to evaluate it and consider it for acceptance or rejection ever again. This is true belief, and this means that the heart is firmly fixed on it.

وَٱخۡتِلَٰفِ ٱلَّيۡلِ وَٱلنَّهَارِ وَمَآ أَنزَلَ ٱللَّهُ مِنَ ٱلسَّمَآءِ مِن رِّزۡقٖ فَأَحۡيَا
بِهِ ٱلۡأَرۡضَ بَعۡدَ مَوۡتِهَا وَتَصۡرِيفِ ٱلرِّيَٰحِ ءَايَٰتٞ لِّقَوۡمٖ يَعۡقِلُونَ ٥

in the alternation of night and day, in the rain God provides, sending it down from the sky and reviving the dead earth with it, and in His shifting of the winds there are signs for those who use their reason [5] (The Quran, al-Jathiya: 5)

This verse indicates that from amongst His signs of the cosmos that are indicative of His Might Glorified is He is the alternation of the night and the day. In other signs, we came to learn that the night by itself is a sign, and that the day by itself is a sign as well. The wording here indicates the alternation of the night and the day. Thus, the mere phenomenon of their alternation in and of itself is a sign of Allah.

Now the night and the day are different in many respects. They are different in terms of the darkness of the night and the light of the day, and their length and shortness of time, their respective functions, though they are both phenomena of time in which events take place. Furthermore, at times the night may become longer, and the day may become shorter, or the day may become longer and the night shorter, after which there may be a period when their lengths of time are equal.

For example, we find the night becoming longer in the winter and shorter in the summer, and this is for a particular divine wisdom. Consequently, we work throughout the day of the winter when the moderateness(1) of the weather permits and assists us in our work. For this reason, we need a longer period for rest, and we find this in the long nights of the winter.

If you were then to consider the night and the day from a wider perspective — in their aspect of making up the whole of the spherical body of the earth — you would find that they overlap each other harmoniously. This is because the day in the place where you reside is the night for someone else, and the night where you reside is the day for someone else. Thus, the two of them are present together, but in separate and distant places on the earth.

In this manner, you will find that at every moment of time, the night begins and the day ends at some point on earth, and that the day begins and the night ends at some other point on earth. Therefore, it is a rotational movement which never ends and which takes place at different points in time throughout the entire process.

If we were to consider the call to prayer, for example, we would find that it revolves around the earth at every single moment of time, with all of its expressions. Thus, at the moment when you are saying ‘Allah is the Greatest!’ someone else is saying ‘I bear witness that there is no deity worthy of Worship except Allah!’ and another person is saying ‘I bear witness that Muhammad is the Messenger of Allah!’ and so forth.

(1) This is the case in the warmer climates of the Arab world in places such as Egypt; the winter season is considered to be moderate, the summer to be more extreme, unlike countries in Europe or North America.

The same is true for the daily prayers. Thus, at the time when you are praying the noon prayer someone else is praying the late afternoon prayer another person is praying the evening prayer, and yet another person is praying the night prayer, all at the same moment in time. Therefore, we can affirm the existence of all the prayer times at every single instant of time, and that the True Lord Glorified is He is worshipped at every moment in time with every form of worship and supplication, and that the words of the call to prayer revolve around the earth and are heard by everyone across the entire planet.

All of this is due to the alternation of the night and day, in terms of the varying degrees of their lengths in time, whether longer or shorter, and arising from the movement of the sun, another matter which requires subtlety and depth of perception and notice. When the sun rises where you are, it vanishes where someone else is, and thus every sunrise for one nation is a sunset for another nation. This explains His statement to us Glorified is He: ‘Lord of the two Easts, and Lord of the two Wests!’ (ar-Rahman: 17) He stated ‘the two Easts’ and ‘the two Wests’ because the sunrise that you experience as the East is the sunset someone else experiences at the same instant of time as the West. Now if you were to consider the entire expanse of time in its divisions of time by the second, you would find many sunrises and sunsets, as He stated Glorified is He: ‘by the Lord of the rising-places and the setting- places.’ (al-Ma’arij: 40)

Thus, if you were to observe the earth at a specific point, you would find the occurrence of both a sunrise and a sunset. Furthermore, He has already stated Glorified is He: ‘Lord of the East and the West.’ (al-Muzzammil: 9) Therefore, He is Truthful in everything of which He has informed us.

Also from amongst the signs of the night and day is the fact that Allah made them succeed one another. In other words, the night follows upon the day and the day follows upon the night. He stated Glorified is He: ‘And it is He who has made the night and the day in succession for whoever desires to remember or desires gratitude.’ (al-Furqan: 62)

We have understood (in our Islamic tradition) from this verse that the earth is spherical. This theory of knowledge that has been presented as something relatively recent is something confirmed by the Quran, and in fact, the Quran preceded it historically. The meaning, therefore, of the night and the day being successive of one another is that the earth is like a sphere, such that at the time of its first creation, it was created with one side facing the sun.

The side facing the sun is the day, and while night is at the opposite. The night and the day were created together, and were born together. Then, when the earth started to rotate, the night succeeded the day, and the day succeeded the night, and if it were not for the fact that the earth is spherical, this would never have happened.

This fact of existence has been confirmed by the True Lord Glorified is He in a clearer manner in His statement: ‘It is not allowable for the sun to reach the moon, nor does the night overtake the day, but each, in an orbit, is swimming.’ (Ya Sin: 40)

This is so because the Arabs used to hold the belief that the night preceded the day. For this reason, they used to date their rites of ceremony by the rotation of the moon around the earth. Thus, we know the day from the movement of the sun, and we know the month from the movement of the moon and from the month comes knowledge of the year.

Similarly, the beginning of the month of Ramadan is confirmed by its first night, not by its day because it depends on the appearance of the new crescent. Again, it is for this reason that the Arabs believed that the night preceded the day, an erroneous view which the Quran put in balance. Allah says, ‘nor does the night overtake the day.’ Therefore, the two were created at the same point in time, something which would never have been possible except if the earth were spherical. There is no precedence of one over the other.

In His statement: ‘and [in] what Allah sends down from the sky of provision and gives life thereby to the earth after its lifelessness.’ (al-Jathiya: 5)

Allah indicates that He sends down many signs from the Heavens, some of which are material, others of which are spiritual. The spiritual sign is the Book that He revealed upon the Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him for the guidance of creation. The material signs are those such as the rain, which Allah has named ‘provision’, for it is the source of provision when it descends to the earth and revives it with vegetation and fruits.

Every form of provision that comes from the direction of the Heavens of the Creator is something Divinely sent down, even if it be in the depths of the earth. For this reason, He said the following statement about iron: ‘and He revealed iron, wherein is mighty power and (many) uses for mankind.’ (al-Hadid: 25)

In this manner, Allah made iron a tool for man’s use, as an example to confirm His Power Glorified is He against those who stubbornly resist the call to faith; and stated at the end of the verse: ‘and so that Allah may make evident those who support Him and His messengers unseen.’ (al-Hadid: 25)

Concerning His statement: ‘from the sky’ it is well known that the sky is not the storehouse of water; rather, water is found in the clouds, which are within some parts and vicinities of the earth and follow it in its motion, as we have stated previously. As for the sky, it is something of an entirely different order of existence, and much more distant than whatever the mind can conceive. The intended meaning of the verse is: from the direction of the sky.

The one who ponders over the water cycles in nature will find that they are upon the earth in such a manner as to cover three fourths of the earth’s land mass, and most of it is salt water. This is so for a divine wisdom, in that the percentage of salt in the water preserves it from adverse change, stagnancy, and foulness. From the vapour that rises, the clouds are formed, and thereafter, rain falls carrying fresh water that is pure and suitable for drink and for the growth of agriculture, and beneficial for many other uses.

From the signs of Allah in the creation of water is that any particular stretch of salt water enlarges to allow for the enlargement of a mass of vapour clouds when the latter are formed. Consequently, the volume of evaporated fresh water that is enough to sustain the life of living organisms on earth thereafter increases. You will then find that the saltiness of the water in the seas and the oceans is of a suitable measure and proportion which preserves the water from stagnancy and foulness, and allows for the life of fish and all other forms of sea life to continue.

If the saltiness of the water were to increase beyond this limit, all forms of its sea life would perish, as we find in the Dead Sea, where the percentage of salt is much higher due to the sea being fully landlocked, without any tributaries of water coming to it to reduce the level of salt in the water.

In order for us to learn of the Power of Allah in His sending down of fresh water from the sky, this water from which there is enough for all of creation to drink, and for all of agricultural produce across the earth to derive benefit, consider how burdensome the production of a bottle of filtrated water is when you prepare it in a factory or filtration facility. Allah sends down this water, made fresh, clear and pure, and cold and refreshing, from the sky without any effort, nor any financial costs or expenses on your part.

This water in and of itself is one of the signs of Allah, for it is by means of it that life exists on earth. For this reason, the Quran calls it provision. Some commentators say: ‘this means that water is a means to bring about provision’; others say: ‘no, this is not so; rather, the water itself is provision’. It is true that it is a means for provision at the point when we use it to irrigate the land for agriculture, but it is a direct form of provision when we drink it or add it to food and the like.

Furthermore, in His statement: ‘and gives life thereby to the earth after its lifelessness’ is another sign. The reference to ‘the earth after its lifelessness’ is to that part of the earth that is arid, bleak, and without vegetation, which Allah easily brings back to life with vegetation thereafter, as He indicates in another verse: ‘And you see the earth barren, but when We send down upon it rain, it quivers and swells.’ (al-Hajj: 5) Then, in the main verse, He shifts our attention to another sign: ‘and [in His] directing of the winds.’

It means the changes of their direction from here to there, or the change of their states and conditions; for at times they come as a gentle, light breeze, and at times they rage violently; at times they are hot, and at other times cold; at times, they are fecundating and life-giving, and at times they are destructive and ruinous. All of these are states of the winds which the Creator changes from one to another in whatever manner He Wishes Glorified is He and none else is able to do likewise.

When you ponder over how the actual change of winds takes place, you find one of the truly wondrous phenomena that is present in existence due to The Creator. Turn your gaze to these towers and skyscrapers, and ask yourself: who brings about the conditions to allow these gigantic buildings to rise above the earth, and who supports them in such a manner that they do not bend, despite the blowing of violent winds against them?

The thing that supports them and props them up is the air that encircles them from every direction. If you were to evacuate the volume of air on any one side of the building, it would collapse on this side, vacated of the air that was once there.

Therefore, air itself is what preserves the equilibrium of the building. For this reason, the moment when you find the Quran using the term ‘wind’ in the plural, know that it is for the sustaining of life, and for what is good and beneficial, and whenever the term is in the singular, it is associated with destruction and ruination.

The single wind annihilates, and the winds as a group support and give life, for the former comes from one direction only, whereas the latter come from all directions and thus bring about the balance that is needed for life to continue and abound.

In the context of the discussion concerning the signs of Allah and the enumeration of His gifts, read here the following verse: ‘Rather, it is that for which you were impatient: a wind, within it a painful punishment, destroying everything by command of its Lord. And they became so that nothing was seen [of them] except their dwellings. Thus, do We recompense the criminal people.’ (al-Ahqaf: 24-25)

He also states: ‘And in `Ad [was a sign], when We sent against them the barren wind. It left nothing of what it came upon but that it made it like disintegrated ruins.’ (adh-Dhariyat: 41-42)

In His statement: ‘are signs for a people who reason.’ He refers to the intellect, which encounters new events and phenomena, considers and examines them, and decides which of these that contends for its acceptance it should accept as truth. It then extracts and chooses the truth from amongst them, which it casts into the heart, becoming firmly grounded belief protected against doubt.

Allah Have Mercy upon Fakhr Ad-Din Ar-Razi[1] who carried out an extensively detailed and informed analysis comparing these verses in the chapter of al-Jathiya with similar verses from the chapter of al-Baqara; the verses in the chapter of al-Jathiya beginning with: 'Indeed, within the heavens and earth are signs for the believers,' until 'are signs for a people who reason.' (al-Jathiya: 3-5)

And the following verse in al-Baqara: 'Indeed, in the creation of the heavens and earth, and the alternation of the night and the day, and the [great] ships which sail through the sea with that which benefits people, and what Allah has sent down from the heavens of rain, giving life thereby to the earth after its lifelessness and dispersing therein every [kind of] moving creature, and [His] directing of the winds and the clouds controlled between the heaven and the earth are signs for a people who use reason.' (al-Baqara: 164)

The first difference that he found between the two groups of verses was the difference in subject matter: in the chapter of al-Jathiya, there is the following: 'within the heavens and earth.' As for al-Baqara, the verse is as follows: 'In the creation of the heavens and earth.' They both have the same meaning, for creation refers to the event of originating something from nothing. Thus, the event itself is termed 'creation'. The term is also applied to the created entities of the universe, and the proof for this is His saying Glorified is He: '(All) this is Allah's creation.' (Luqman: 11) In other words, 'All these are Allah's created entities'. Therefore, the meanings of the two groups of verses are the same.

Secondly, he counted the number of verses that were related concerning the cosmos in al-Jathiya, and found that there were six such verses, and he did the same with al-Baqara and found that there were eight such verses. When he then researched further into the additional two verses in al-Baqara, he found them in His statements Glorified is He: 'and the [great] ships which

(1) Muhammad ibn Abu `Abdullah Fakhr Ad-Din Ar-Razi, the Imam and Quranic commentator, of Qurayshi descent, born in 544 A.H., whose origins are from Tabaristan, and who was born in Ar-Ray (present-day Teheran); he passed away in Harra' in the year 606 A.H. He has written works such as his commentary of the Quran Mafatih Al-Ghayb, Ma`alim Usul Al-Fiqh and Muhsil Afkar Al-Mutaqaddimin.

sail through the sea with that which benefits people', and 'the clouds controlled between the heaven and the earth.' (al-Baqara: 164)

Ar-Razi concluded by saying, 'These two verses concerning the ships and the clouds do not need to be mentioned by Allah in al-Jathiya, as what Allah suffices for them: "and [His] directing of the winds." This is so because both the ships and the clouds are carried forward by the movements of the winds.'

The final difference between the two groups of verses is that the verse in Al-Baqara ends with a single phrase, which is: 'are signs for a people who use reason.' (al-Baqara: 164)

On the other hand, the verses in al-Jathiya end with three different phrases, which are the following: 'are signs for the believers' (al-Jathiya: 3), 'are signs for people who are certain [in faith]' (al-Jathiya: 4), and 'are signs for a people who reason.' (al-Jathiya: 5)

The moment the believer hears anything from Allah, he confirms it and believes in what Allah has informed him. Furthermore, certainty comes about to the one who actively seeks the truth, who searches for it in any given matter that is a point of knowledge, and desires to reach a state of certainty by means of such striving for the truth.

Now if man is not a believer who is certain of his belief, nor a seeker of the truth, does he not at least have enough intelligence to distinguish between things such that he knows what he consumes for food and drink, and of what he takes hold, and of what he places down?

Therefore, these three different phrasal endings represent the stages of attaining sound consciousness and awareness of the true nature of things, and basic intellectual comprehension of simple matters is the lowest level of understanding. For this reason, He ended the verse of the chapter of al-Baqara with the specific phrase indicated above.(1)

(1) After the completion of his analysis, Ar-Razi states; 'Allah mentioned three different ending phrases in al-Jathiya, the first of which is 'those who believe'; the second of which is 'those who are endowed with inner certainty' and the third of which is 'those who have sense'. I believe that the reason for this order is that it is in reference to what is said [to those who disbelieve]. If you are not of the believers, then understand these=

تِلۡكَ ءَايَٰتُ ٱللَّهِ نَتۡلُوهَا عَلَيۡكَ بِٱلۡحَقِّۖ فَبِأَيِّ حَدِيثِۭ بَعۡدَ ٱللَّهِ وَءَايَٰتِهِۦ يُؤۡمِنُونَ ٦

These are God's signs that We recount to you [Prophet, to show] the Truth. If they deny God and His revelations, what message will they believe in? [6] (The Quran, al-Jathiya: 6)

The verse begins with: 'These'. This indicates the other verses of the Quran, or the signs of the cosmos that were referred to previously. 'We recite to you in truth.' The truth, as we have mentioned previously, is something that is firmly established and which does not change, nor does it accept any falsehood. Truth is the judgement of something that corresponds with reality, and falsehood is the judgement of something that diverges from and contradicts what is actually real.

For this reason, we have mentioned previously that the witness to the truth will never change any claims that he makes, no matter how many times he may be asked a question. As for the witness to falsehood, there is no question that he will change his tune from time to time. This is so because the witness to the truth presents reality as it is, and thus comes forward with a single statement which corresponds to that reality, and does not change his statement, whereas the witness to falsehood always presents his erroneous claims and his delusional fancies, and thus, it is inevitable that his claims will change and vary.

It is because of this that The True Lord Glorified is He wishes for us to judge by the truth, and make it the standard by which we comprehend all matters, just as we use the metre alone to measure anything else, for example, and never deviate from it as a standard of measurement.

He wishes for us to judge by the truth and make it foundational in our comprehension of matters and our everyday lives. Analogously, a watch will never tell the time precisely and accurately unless it has been calibrated to the correct time itself.

= proofs that are being laid out to you; and if you are not from amongst the believers, nor from amongst those who have certain faith, then at least you are within the group of those who have sense and possess an intellect; so, strive hard to understand and comprehend these proofs that are offered to you.'

For this reason, Allah Glorified is He states the following concerning the two signs of the sun and the moon: 'The sun and the moon are made punctual.' (ar-Rahman: 5)

In other words, these are two entities created by means of exact and precise reckoning, and both are created with precision and calculation in terms of their heavenly motions such that Allah Glorified is He has made them instruments by means of which time can be kept. Thus, the object which you consider to be a standard must of necessity be calibrated and fine-tuned itself to what is most correct, and must of necessity be evaluated in a manner corresponding to its function as the standard.

It is because of this that Allah Glorified is He informed us that He created the Heavens and the earth in truth, for they move along their paths in perfectly orchestrated motion, and have never, ever deviated from their courses since the time when Allah Created this cosmos and will never, ever deviate from their specified movements until the coming of the Last Hour.

We stated previously that this is so because the truth is something firmly embedded which does not change, and therefore something that remains, and it is that which is victorious, which overcomes falsehood at the end of the struggle. Furthermore, even if falsehood rises and appears, it is only for a temporary period of time such that it is given an opportunity to be manifest until it torments people and the society at large is made miserable by it; then, people return to the realm of the truth. For this reason, we say that falsehood is actually one of the soldiers of truth.

Now if Islam had gained ascendancy in the Arabian Peninsula because of the inimitability of the Arabic of the Quran, how did it gain ascendancy and spread in the lands of the Persians and Romans? Some commentators have said: This is so because in that period of history, the non-Muslim empires were completely tyrannized by falsehood, and so when they saw the justice and tolerance of Islam, they hurried towards it in droves, and thus, Islam took over half of the world in half a century, for people all over the earth were yearning for something like this religion of truth.

The True Lord Glorified is He wishes to provide us with a tangible picture by which truth and falsehood are represented in one snapshot, and so He states: ‘He sends down from the sky, rain, and valleys flow according to their capacity, and the torrent carries a rising foam. And from that [ore] which they heat in the fire, desiring adornments and utensils, is foam like it. Thus, Allah presents [the example of] truth and falsehood. As for the foam, it vanishes, [being] cast off, but as for that which benefits the people, it remains on the earth. Thus does Allah present examples.’ (ar-Ra‘d: 17)

Now in His statement Glorified is He: ‘Then in what statement after Allah and His verses will they believe?’ He means: If all of these signs of the cosmos have not convinced you, nor have all of these miraculous wonders of the cosmos, and if you have not been convinced and moved by the very words of Allah Himself, then what can you possibly be made to believe in after that?

Therefore, the issue, as far as they are concerned, is one of stubborn opposition and violent disputation, for if the very words of Allah Himself have not convinced them, what other words can be used to convince them of anything thereafter? We ask them: is there any discourse that is more truthful than the words of Allah Himself? Is there any relation of news that is more truthful than His news? Allah Glorified is He repeatedly shows love and affection towards you by clearly expressing His signs in the cosmos, that you may believe, and that He may take you by the hand into the realm of true belief even though He has no need of you. He merely desires the best for you because you are His servants and His works of creation, and He wishes you to be in the best of conditions. For this reason, He sent to you messengers, revealed Divine books to you, and made clear to you what is licit and illicit according to the Divine Law, and what is true and what is false; so why all the violent disputation? Why all the stubborn opposition to acceptance of faith?

Now although faith in Allah is a high distinction, and to show humble veneration of Him is to occupy a high rank, the term ‘humble veneration’ in general is a term that is detested, for it indicates lowliness and brokenness of spirit. As for having humble veneration towards Allah, it is a high distinction, a mark of honour, and a high rank with Him.

وَيْلٌ لِّكُلِّ أَفَّاكٍ أَثِيمٍ ﴿٧﴾ يَسْمَعُ ءَايَـٰتِ ٱللَّهِ تُتْلَىٰ عَلَيْهِ ثُمَّ يُصِرُّ
مُسْتَكْبِرًا كَأَن لَّمْ يَسْمَعْهَا ۖ فَبَشِّرْهُ بِعَذَابٍ أَلِيمٍ ﴿٨﴾

Woe to every lying sinful person [7] who hears God's revelations being recited to him, yet persists in his arrogance as if he had never heard them — [Prophet] bring him news of a painful torment! [8] (The Quran, al-Jathiya: 7-8)

Some commentators have said that the word 'Woe' refers to a gorge deep in hell, or to a calamitous destruction from which there is no escape or deliverance. The term 'Woe' in general usage differs according to the one who uses it for warning. When one who is equal to your standing says to you: 'Woe to you!', you anticipate being anguished by him to the extent that is proportionate to his ability to exact that anguish on you, and commensurate with his ability to carry out what he threatens you with by manifesting his tyranny upon you. Now, if the one using such a threatening term is the True Lord Glorified is He we understand that it is a complete annihilation, unalterable which no-one has the power to change; a serious woe that cannot be resisted or repulsed.

So, to whom is this threat directed? It is directed to '…every sinful liar.' Lying is to turn something completely upside down, or the subversion of what is true with purposed intention. From this we note His statement Glorified is He: 'And the overturned towns He hurled down.' (an-Najm: 53) The verse refers to villages that Allah turned completely upside down, head over heels, and thereby made their highest structures lowest.

Related to this, as well, is the story of the slander that was propagated against the rights of 'Aisha, Allah be pleased with her: 'Indeed, those who slander are a group among you.' (an-Nur: 11) Thus, slander, falsely accusing others of misdeeds, is the most abominable, heinous kind of lie for it is an intentional lie designed to make people turn away from the truth and accept falsehood. What is worse is that slander does not affect just one person; rather, it affects a large group of people, and thus, its evil transgresses beyond its mere effects on a single person. Correspondingly, a suitable punishment is required for such a gross transgression upon creation, according to Islamic law. Therefore, the moment you hear the word ‘Woe,’ you should know that it is reference to a truly grave sin.

Also, the word ‘liar’ signifies a habitual practice. ‘Sinful’ is the one who committed a grave sin repeatedly and was so much engaged in it until he became an inveterate practitioner of the evil deed.

Then, the True Lord Glorified is He says of this inveterate slanderer and sinner as one: ‘Who hears the verses of Allah recited to him, then persists arrogantly as if he had not heard them.’ It is as if the True Lord Glorified is He wishes to make us familiar with what slander really and truly is in its essence, for the inveterate liar lies against one that is like him, or lies against a whole family or group, but this person in particular lies against the entire world when he falsifies everything that is true, and does so intentionally and purposefully. For this reason, they say in juridical matters in court that someone has committed a crime ‘with premeditation and opportunity (to commit the crime)’.Thus, in the verse: ‘arrogantly,’ the description refers to someone who exalts himself above the truth and disdains it out of arrogance.

In a Noble Hadith, Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him states, ‘Arrogance is disdaining the truth out of self-conceit and having contempt for people.’(1) Thus, he becomes arrogant over others, for the various signs come to him by means of someone whom he believes to be beneath him; and by doing this, he acts outrageously against the truth, and outrageously against the one who tells the truth, as The Quran relates about those like him: ‘And they said, ‘Why was this Quran not sent down upon a great man from [one of] the two cities?’ (az-Zukhruf: 31)

Thus, the problem with them is not something in the Quran, for they themselves are people of eloquence and gifted orators, and know of the inimitability of the Quran and its truth; rather, the problem is that they are envious of the man to whom the Quran was revealed, and consider and appraise him by the standards of position and wealth that they have attained. Thus, the Divine message, according to them, must be sent down to a man who is rich, from the prestigious men of the nation and from amongst its leading figures. Yet, this is quite strange for them, to hold such a belief, for the Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him had a very high station amongst them before he was mandated with deliverance of the Divine message, and they used to speak readily of his truthfulness and his trustworthiness. In fact, they had so much trust in his judgment that they appointed(1) him to judge between them in making the final decision concerning their dispute over the Black Stone, when the various tribes disagreed with each other over who should have the right to place it in its proper position in the Ka`ba. So, the contradiction between their consideration of him as someone trustworthy and their disbelief in him thereafter is clear. They used to call him a magician, a soothsayer, an inveterate liar, and a masterfully articulate poet that could beguile people with his words. Thus, when there was an extended period of time in which there was no revelation given to him, by which he might respond to certain specific claims of theirs, they alleged: 'Truly, The Lord of Muhammad scorns him.'(2)

(1) This is related by Muslim in his collection Sahih Muslim (Number 131) in ‘The chapter on the forbiddance of harbouring pride’ from a Hadith related by `Abdullah ibn Mas`ud Allah be pleased with him.

As for His statement Glorified is He: 'So give him tidings of a painful punishment'; it is well known that 'glad tidings' refer to the relation of good news of something before it actually takes place. Furthermore, it is called 'glad tidings' because it brings joy and happiness, manifest upon the faces of those who receive them, so the moment that you hear such news, it pleases you. Thus, the usage of the term 'glad tidings' here in connection with punishment is a means of conveying mockery and scorn, and it is a type of punishment and insult, like the case of the man who urges his son to review his lessons and demonstrate seriousness and diligence in his studies, but the son disobeys his father's commandments so that when the final results appear, he finds that his son has failed in his studies, and thus says to him: 'Take delight in the good news! You have failed'! In saying this, the father wishes to mock and punish his son for his negligence.

(1) This is related by Ibn Kathir in his As-Sira An-Nabawiyya (1/272). In the Hadith, the people of Mecca stated: 'We shall judge between ourselves by means the first man that comes out from this road.' The Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him was the first to come out of the road towards them, so he judged upon their case, deciding that members of every single tribe would all bear the Black Stone together on a cloth, and then raise it together to put it in its proper place.

(2) This is mentioned by At-Tabari in his Quranic commentary, from the statement of Qatada concerning the statement of Allah: 'Your Lord has not forsaken you, nor does He scorn you.' (ad-Duha: 3) He stated: 'Jibril (Gabriel) delayed in conveying revelation to the Prophet peace and blessings be upon him and so the idolaters said: "Truly, his Lord scorns him and has forsaken him."' This is similarly related by Ad-Dahhak.

وَإِذَا عَلِمَ مِنْ ءَايَٰتِنَا شَيْـًٔا ٱتَّخَذَهَا هُزُوًا ۚ أُو۟لَٰٓئِكَ لَهُمْ عَذَابٌ مُّهِينٌ ٩ who, if he knows anything about Our revelations, ridicules it! Such people will have a humiliating torment [9] (The Quran, al-Jathiya: 9)

This is so because after having persisted in evading the signs of Allah, and having shown arrogance towards them, he necessarily must return at some moment or another to his true self and allow for his intellect to process what he has heard; thus, some of the truth of those pieces of knowledge that he has learned of from the signs of Allah finally reach him.

'And when he knows anything of Our verses, he takes them in ridicule.' Yet even though part of the truth of what he has heard reaches him, he makes them an object of derision and ridicule. 'Those will have a humiliating punishment.'

This is on top of the punishment mentioned in the previous verse, where the Lord of Might and Nobility grants him glad tidings of the fact that he will have a grievous, painful punishment.

These are different kinds of punishment; may Allah save us from them! For a painful chastisement is one that causes you deep pain by means of your physical senses and causes you agony, and your physical body and your various limbs experience pain and suffering. This is not even including the humiliating pain referred to in the Quran, for the person has been deflected off his true course, as they say. The humiliating punishment is the punishment of the ego, which humiliates it, debases, and destroys its sense of nobility and dignity. This is so because some people are sometimes unaffected by any of the physical pain caused to them by a palpable beating, but it hurts them deeply to have their sense of dignity and pride wounded even if it be by a mere word.

There is also the term ‘grave punishment’; in other verses, punishment to its furthest extent. It is in this manner that the True Lord Glorified is He combined every type of punishment as recompense for their arrogance, their violent disputation, and their stubborn opposition to the signs of Allah which are patently clear and beyond the possibility of denial on the part of anyone who considers them seriously.

Furthermore, there is an indication in the verse that when a human being devotes himself exclusively to the pursuance of the truth, and clears himself of any preconceived notions, and thereafter, ponders the matter over again with his intellect with objectivity, he will necessarily arrive at the strand of truth that leads him to the reality of the affair in question. Thus, the sincere renewal of commitment that the seeker makes to himself leads to the truth. It is for this reason that the True Lord Glorified is He teaches man the sound manner of contemplating affairs, and instructs him in the manner in which he may search for the truth, and so He states: ‘Say, “I only advise you of one [thing] - that you stand for Allah, [seeking truth] in pairs and individually, and then give thought.” There is not in your companion any madness.’ (Saba’: 46) In other words, He means: ‘Leave aside the speculation of the masses, for they are not coherent; they will lead to chaos, and the truth will get lost within’.

Now contemplation is the operation of the intellect, and the intellect is the faculty and power that protects you from erroneous views, and guides you and takes you by the hand towards the truth. The intellect, even by its very name in Arabic is the cord that is used to hobble the feet of a riding beast so that it does not stray and wander off from its owner. In the same manner, the intellect constrains its owner from false ideas and notions.

Therefore, when these people retreated unto themselves and allowed their intellects to consider what they had heard. They arrived at something of the truth, but their haughtiness and their stubborn opposition prevented them from following it. The most illustrative example of this is the statement that some of them say to the others: ‘And those who disbelieve say, “Do not listen to this Quran and speak noisily during [the recitation of] it that perhaps you will overcome.”’ (Fussilat: 26)

Now if they were not sure of the truth of the Quran and its impact upon the soul, they would never have said such a thing; but the literary style and force of the Quran captivated them and penetrated the innermost depths of their souls. Had they left themselves to their natural, primordial states, they would have believed; but instead, they confronted the Quran with souls filled with evil inclinations and the desire to be free from any restrictions that the way of truth brought by the Quran might place upon them and their base desires.

مِّن وَرَآئِهِمۡ جَهَنَّمُۖ وَلَا يُغۡنِي عَنۡهُم مَّا كَسَبُواْ شَيۡـٔٗا وَلَا مَا
ٱتَّخَذُواْ مِن دُونِ ٱللَّهِ أَوۡلِيَآءَۖ وَلَهُمۡ عَذَابٌ عَظِيمٌ ١٠

Hell lurks behind them and their gains will not benefit them, nor will those beings they took as protectors beside God — a tremendous torment awaits them [10]
(The Quran, al-Jathiya: 10)

‘Before them’, has the meaning of something that will come to you in the future, as in this verse: ‘Before them is Hell.’ Thus, Hell will await them in the future. ‘Before them’ is thus something which is found before another thing which hides or conceals it. What conceals knowledge is a veil of time or a veil of place. For instance, we are sitting here, right now (in this lesson) in one place, and each one of us can see the other. However, none of us can see who is outside of this place, for what conceals that from us is a physical barrier of place.

Now when I speak to you of the future, you will find that the future is also veiled from you, by the barrier of time, as it relates to the future. Similarly, the veil of the past makes the past itself imperceptible to you.

Now the Knowledge of Allah Glorified is He pierces all these barriers. Time, for Him is equally the past, present or future. For this reason, He brings forward something that happened in the past, and speaks about it as if it were present. Allah Glorified is He also states, addressing Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him: ‘And you were not with them when they cast their pens as to which of them should be responsible for Maryam (Mary). Nor were you with them when they disputed.’ (Al-‘Imran: 44)

For this reason, Allah pierces the veil of the future, as He indicates in His statement concerning the ongoing struggle between Persia and Rome: ‘Alif. Lam.

Mim. The Byzantines have been defeated. In the nearest land. But they, after their defeat, will overcome. Within three to nine years. To Allah belongs the command before and after. And that day the believers will rejoice.' (ar-Rum: 1-4)

This is because the Muslims were worried about the Persians gaining victory over the Romans. The Persians were Magi, adherents of Mazdeism, and had no revelation or Heavenly inspiration sent to them. As for the Romans, they were from the people of the Book by being Christians; they believed in messengers sent from Allah. Thus, it would be the good fortune of Islam if Rome were to be victorious. So, Allah granted the Muslims the glad tidings of this victory before it took place by several years. Therefore, the True Lord informs Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him of events of the future in the Quran, which is recited to worship Allah in every prayer. So how is it that Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him could announce these glad tidings - seeing as how highly unbelievable they were at the time - and do so in a manner such that the people in Persia and Rome would eventually hear of them? The answer is that he could announce such news because he was absolutely certain that it was true and veracious, and that it must come to pass.

This is an instance of the piercing of the veil of the future, and this is what really happened. In a matter of years, Rome gained victory over Persia, and the Muslims gained their prophesized victory against the disbelievers at the Battle of Badr. Allah Glorified is He states: 'And that day the believers will rejoice in the victory of Allah.' (ar-Rum: 4-5)

In His statement: 'Before them is Hell', He means that it will await them in the future, and thus, is ahead of them. This is an example of the piercing of the veil of the future. 'And what they had earned will not avail them at all.' He means they will not be protected from the evil of what they were upon because of what they acquired of evil acts in the past, of worshipping false idols and deifying the creation of Allah. Furthermore, is the idol free of need from its worshipper when the worshipper himself is the one who created it? The worshipper is the one who sets it upright if the wind turns it over or carries it off. Similarly, whoever from amongst mankind worshipped them will soon precede them into hell; no helper shall they have, nor anyone to defend them from what awaits them.

Now the verb ‘earn’ is never used for evil except if what is evil has become something habitual to the person in whom it exists, and has become something that is practically inherent and natural. Such a person will hardly desist from evil action, and it will be a very light matter for him to commit such evil again, until it becomes something habitual to him. The verb ‘earn’ refers to what they have done of evil deeds.’

‘Nor what they had taken besides Allah as allies.’ In other words, ‘the idols they worship besides Allah’. Likewise, they will not prevent them from the punishment. ‘And they will have a great punishment.’ Thus, the matter does not end merely with their being forsaken and their inability to defend themselves, but it goes much further: for them there awaits an immense chastisement, or in other words, severe to the utmost degree of pain.

هَٰذَا هُدًى ۖ وَالَّذِينَ كَفَرُوا بِآيَاتِ رَبِّهِمْ لَهُمْ عَذَابٌ مِّن رِّجْزٍ أَلِيمٌ ﴿١١﴾

This is true guidance; those who reject their Lord’s revelations will have a woeful torment [11]
(The Quran, al-Jathiya: 11)

There is an indication here of guidance, which is the way that the Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him came with through this Quran. True guidance is what directs you forward, or in other words, indicates to you the road that takes you to your destination by means of the shortest and easiest road, and the one that is safest, without difficulty or hardship upon the soul.

In the beginning of the chapter of al-Baqara, there is the statement: ‘Those are upon guidance from their Lord’ (al-Baqara: 5). Thus, guidance is, as it were, the vessel which carries to you to your goal, and the vehicle which moves forward with you until it delivers you safely to your destination. ‘And those who have disbelieved in the signs of their Lord’ in this verse, Allah states ‘their Lord,’ even though they are disbelievers in Him. This is because Allah is a Lord that shows love and affection towards them, even with their disbelief in Him and their denial of Him. This is, as we stated previously, a Divine gift which does not distinguish between the believer and the disbeliever; thus, He grants it to all, and feels compassion for every one of humanity, for they are all His servants and His works of creation 'Will have a painful punishment of foul nature'.

In one place, He states, 'a painful chastisement' and in another place, He states: 'painful punishment of foul nature.' The word 'punishment' has caused many problems in terms of how it is to be understood amongst the scholars of religion concerning some of the legal punishments legislated by Islamic law. Some of them say, 'It is apparent that there is no mention of stoning to death in the Quran, but there is only the mention of punishment by lashes to be found', and they use, as proof, His statement Glorified is He concerning female slaves: 'then for them is half the punishment for free [unmarried] women.' (an-Nisa': 25)

The text above refers to the legal punishment that is to be meted out to the free woman and the female slave. Thus, these scholars state, 'The punishment of stoning (an adulteress) to death is not halved, but rather, what is halved is the punishment of lashing; the free woman is given 100 lashes, and the female slave is given 50 lashes, whereas the punishment of stoning to death is not halved'. In other words, there are different opinions concerning the exact meaning of the verse. Concerning this matter, we say: 'It may be that their opinion is correct if Allah had stated: 'then for them is half the punishment,' and had not mentioned anything else. However, He stated right afterwards: 'the punishment'. As we have stated previously, punishment is the causing of pain to a living entity, but the punishment of stoning someone causes their death. Therefore, the causing of pain to a living entity applies to the punishment meted out by lashes, whereas stoning leads to the taking of life, and does not merely punish in a manner causing pain.

This is further proved by the fact that the True Lord Glorified is He when speaking about Sulaiman's (Solomon's) hoopoe, related: 'I will surely punish him with a severe punishment or slaughter him.' (an-Naml: 21) Therefore, it means the punishment that does not lead to slaughter or killing.

In His statement: 'and those who have disbelieved in the signs of their Lord', Allah means: 'They covered them up and repudiated and disavowed them'. Therefore, the signs are present, but they concealed them deliberately. In a similar manner, they disbelieved in Allah, or in other words, they concealed the truth of His Existence. For covering or concealing something does not take place unless it exists in the first place; only then is it covered up.

وَلِتَبْتَغُوا۟ مِن فَضْلِهِۦ وَلَعَلَّكُمْ تَشْكُرُونَ ﴿١٢﴾

It is God who subjected the sea for you — ships sail on it by His command so that you can seek His bounty and give Him thanks [12]
(The Quran, al-Jathiya: 12)

Subjection is for the purpose of service, and that the thing made subservient is at the disposal and service of the one for whom it is made subject. A few decades ago in Egypt, there used to be a system of law that was built upon slavery and subjugation, which is a system built upon workers who carry out their appointed tasks without any wages. The True Lord Glorified is He subjected the sea for us, and abased it so that it may serve us; if it were not for that, we would never have been able to embark upon it, nor traverse across it, nor gain any benefit from it whatsoever.

In relation to the subjection of the sea is what we know of the story of Musa (Moses) peace be upon him when his mother cast him in the sea, carrying out the command of Allah: ‘when you fear for him, cast him into the river and do not fear and do not grieve. Indeed, We will return him to you and will make him [one] of the messengers.’ (al-Qasas: 7)

Thus, the orders were issued to the sea to cast him upon the shore, and not to drown him within, as Allah Glorified is He stated: ‘and cast it into the river and the river will throw it onto the bank.’ (Ta Ha: 39)

Just as the True Lord Glorified is He commands rational human beings, He commands inanimate objects, which thereupon carry out His orders pliantly and obey Him. For this reason, He states about the Heavens: ‘And has responded to its Lord and was obligated [to do so].’ (al-Inshiqaq: 2)

To make something subject to another means to forcibly burdening it with something that is compulsory. Thus, all the cosmos is made subject to Him. In other words, it obeys Him and carries out His commandments. It is from this state of being subjected to His will that He has thereby subjugated the very limbs of a human being to him such that they follow his will and are respond to it in a manner that is spontaneous and smooth without any burden or trouble in the process.

The tongue articulates with the statement ‘There is no god (worthy of worship) except Allah’ merely by means of your having willed it and it states expressions of disbelief as well - May Allah save us from that - merely by our will. The case with the hand, the eye, and the leg is likewise, as is the case with every one of our limbs: none of them disobey your orders, being under your influence in a manner in which we do not truly know, for their Creator has made them subject to you, and has abased them so that they may serve you.

He stated to them: ‘Obey my servant, for I wish to call him to account after having given to him the choice of doing or not doing good or evil actions. Furthermore, if faith were something that were to be forcibly imposed upon the human being, I would have forced it upon him as I have done with the angels; however, I do not wish that these forms of creation submit and defer to me without any choice in the matter; rather, I want hearts that are reverently full of humility towards me; I want you, O mankind, to come to me in willing obedience, while having the capacity to turn away from me and escaping from me’.

It is for this reason that we say: ‘The sword is not used in Islam to force or coerce its doctrine upon a people, but rather, it is only used to protect their choice of belief and the doctrines that they have chosen for themselves’. Thereafter, though, the opponents of Islam announce pompously and loudly that Islam was forced upon people by the edge of the sword. This is not true, and the proof of this is the remaining of great numbers of non-Muslims in the lands of Islam upon their original beliefs, after having their lands taken over and ruled by the Muslims.

When the True Lord Glorified is He made everything in existence subject to the use and service of humankind, He said in a Qudsi Hadith, ‘O son of Adam, I created things in existence for your use, and I created you for the purpose of serving Me, so do not be occupied with what is made for you in place of what you are made for.’(1) In other words, do not look to what are effectively your slaves; rather, look towards Whom you yourself are a slave of, and towards Whom your master is.

(1) This is related by Ahmad in his Musnad (2/358) from Abu Hurayra Allah be pleased with him: Allah stated: ‘O son of Adam, devote yourself exclusively to my worship and I will =

This subjection of the limbs of man for his service is limited to the life of this world. As for the Hereafter, they will be set free from these fetters and will be unfastened from this forcible confinement and subjugation, for they used to be bound to the will of the servant of Allah, whereas in the Hereafter, the servant of Allah has no volition over them.

At that point, volition over everything will return to the Highest One Who Wills over and above everything else Glorified is He. There will be no obedience of the limbs to the human being, and no submission to his commands. All commands on that day will be for Allah alone: 'To whom belongs [all] sovereignty this Day? To Allah , the One, the Prevailing.' (Ghafir: 16)

For this reason, the various limbs and parts of the body will change in their function and become bearers of witness. They will bear witness to the truth in front of The One, The Alone. Thus, the tongue will say: 'I said such-and-such a thing'; the hand will say, 'I struck such-and-such a thing'; the leg will say, 'I went to such-and-such a place'; the eye will say, 'I saw such-and-such a thing' and so forth.

We have already likened this phenomenon with the leader of squadron who orders the soldiers, who obey him even if the order he gives is a mistaken or wrong one. Then, when they return to the chief leader, they will say, 'Our immediate leader told us to do such-and-such a thing, and we did not disobey his orders, for we were commanded to follow them even if they were wrong and based on poor judgment'.

So, when the True Lord Glorified is He made our various limbs and parts of the body subject to us, He did so only to give us an analogy and example of His complete, independent command over everything, and to show us that if

He Wills for something to take pace, He merely states: ‘Be!’ and it is. He states to those who are presumptuously arrogant: ‘Tell me, by Allah, what are the muscles that you employ that you may speak or stand up or sit down? What is the motion, the action that takes place inside such that you may act in any which manner that you wish? What nerves are the ones you use that participate in these motions’? Indeed, you know nothing of them, nor do you consciously have any command over them; rather, merely on the basis of what you will, they follow your volition and obey you. Thus, if this is a gift of Allah to you, and a blessing from amongst His blessings upon you, how can you possibly deem the truth of what Allah relates to be farfetched and remote?

The first of the many phenomena that indicate the subjugation of the sea is that Allah made it suitable for the traversal of ships upon its surface, as He states: ‘And on that (very sea) one sees ships ploughing through the waves.’ (an-Nahl: 14)

The first ship that ever existed in the cosmos was the ark of Nuh (Noah) peace be upon him which he constructed by the order of Allah, through His revelation of it to him, whereby He taught him how to construct it from planks and nails: ‘And We carried him on a [construction of] planks and nails.’ (al-Qamar: 13)

A ship does not travel upon the surface of the earth unless there is an abundance of causal laws to support such motion, which is exactly what its subjugation to mankind is. Firstly, the water must be liquid such that it flows easily in order to allow for the ship to sail smoothly when the wind blows upon it and sets it in motion. If the water were frozen or solid, no such motion would be possible.

Secondly, the water must be free of any kind of stickiness or glueyness. Thirdly, the density of the water must be more than the density of the ship, for if you were to take a lump of metal and throw it into the water, it would sink. However, if you were to forge the metal so as to make it broader and flatter, and expand its surface area, it would float.

Thus, from amongst the phenomena that indicate subjugation of the sea to Allah is that He has made it suitable for the coursing of ships upon it: ‘subjected to you the sea so that ships may sail upon it by His command.’

This is just as Allah states in another place in the Quran: ‘In the name of Allah, be its run and its riding at anchor!’ (Hud: 41)

Also, from amongst the indications of the subjugation of the sea to Allah is that He has made it a source of many different foods and wealth: ‘and that you may seek of His bounty.’ Thus, the bounty of Allah in the sea is immense. It has enough nourishment necessary for the preservation of life, and in it is luxury and adornment, such as pearls and corals and other precious objects, so much so that many have said: ‘Indeed, the treasures in the depths of the seas are more than the treasures above the surface of the earth’.

After all this, the ships traverse over the surface of the water carrying you to various countries for the purpose of gaining wealth from all over the world.

In other verses, the True Lord Glorified is He has explained His statement: ‘And it is He who subjected the sea for you to eat from it tender meat…’ (an-Nahl: 14). These are various types of fish and seafood that are eaten: ‘and to extract from it ornaments which you wear.’ (an-Nahl: 14) What is meant here is pearls, corals and precious gems that are extracted from the depths of the sea. For this reason, the scholars have stated, ‘Verily, the ornaments, and gems of the earth are not forbidden to use for wear. Even though they are more precious than gold, there is no text that indicates their prohibition for men, as there has been in the case of the wearing of gold.(1) Why is this? This is because gold is used as coinage, by which human beings interact with each other in financial transactions in the form of coinage of various currencies, pounds and so forth. Thus, at its origin, it is to be used for financial transactions between people, and is a means by which production and consumption are linked together and take place, whereas the precious ornaments of the sea are not used for this purpose.

In His statement: ‘and perhaps you will be grateful’, He has ordered His servants to give thanks for His blessings. So, whenever you see one of the manifestations of the blessings of Allah, say, ‘All Praise is to Allah’, and acknowledge the bounty of Allah to Him. It is due to this that the Prophet

(1) This is related by Abu Dawud in his Sunnan (2535) and by An-Nasa`i in his Sunnan (5053), and by Ibn Majah in his Sunnan (3585) and Ahmad in his Musnad (711, 891) from `Ali ibn Abu Taleb Allah be pleased with him.

Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him taught us the special prayer to be used for boarding ships and other vehicles, as follows: ‘Limitless in His Glory is He who has made all this subservient to our use – since but for Him, we would not have been able to attain to it. Hence, verily, it is unto our Lord that we must always turn.’(1)

وَسَخَّرَ لَكُم مَّا فِي ٱلسَّمَٰوَٰتِ وَمَا فِي ٱلْأَرْضِ جَمِيعًا مِّنْهُۚ إِنَّ
فِي ذَٰلِكَ لَأٓيَٰتٍ لِّقَوْمٍ يَتَفَكَّرُونَ ﴿١٣﴾

He has subjected all that is in the heavens and the earth for your benefit, as a gift from Him. There truly are signs in this for those who reflect [13]
(The Quran, al-Jathiya: 13)

The True Lord Glorified is He now shifts our attention from the subjugation of the sea to the subjugation of the Heavens and the earth, for they have also been made subject to mankind since the time that Allah created them. However, human beings did not know the various manners in which they were made subject to them all at once, but rather, they came to know about them through the passage of time and the advancement and development of the various sciences.

This is similar to when Allah Glorified is He states: ‘We will show them Our signs in the horizons and within themselves until it becomes clear to them that it is the truth. But is it not sufficient concerning your Lord that He is, over all things, a Witness?’ (Fussilat: 53)

Thus, for example, when you read His statement Glorified is He concerning the ships of the sea: ‘And to Him belong the ships [with sails] elevated in the sea like mountains’ (ar-Rahman: 24), you are bound to use your intellect and ask yourself, as we have asked: when did humankind know about multi-decked ships that are raised up above the sea?

(1) This is related by Muslim in his Sahih (1343), in the Book of Pilgrimage, from the Hadith of Ibn `Umar Allah be pleased with him who related: ‘Whenever the Prophet peace and blessings be upon him would mount his camel in leaving for a voyage, he would say, “Allah Akbar” three times, and then say, “Limitless in His Glory is He who has made all this subservient to our use – since but for Him, we would not have been able to attain it. Hence, verily, it is unto our Lord that we must always turn.”’ Ahmad similarly relates this Hadith in his Musnad (2/144).

Humankind learned of multi-decked ships in the last decades of the eighteenth century, for before that, the deck of a ship was like a plain surface upon which nothing else rested. So, who informed Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him that some of the ships would be very high and lofty like mountains? Similar to this is His statement Glorified is He: ‘And if it were not that the people would become one community [of disbelievers], We would have made for those who disbelieve in the Most Merciful - for their houses - ceilings and elevators of silver upon which to mount.’ (az-Zukhruf: 33)

Modern civilization had no knowledge of elevators except in the latter part of the twentieth century. Therefore, this is one of the manifestations of the wondrous inimitability of the Quran and its truthfulness, and the truthfulness of the one who conveyed the Quran to us. Thus, Allah and His Messenger have spoken the truth.

All of this indicates that these new inventions were present in the Knowledge of Allah Glorified is He and had a specific form, just like a model of something before its actual construction, before they ever occurred to the intellects of human beings. Allah manifests them to His servants according to their needs and with the passage of time and the advancement and development of the various sciences, and this is the meaning of the verse:

Concerning His statement Glorified is He: ‘And He has subjected to you whatever is in the heavens and whatever is on the earth’, we have said: ‘Everything that is in the Heavens and the earth is a vessel and container of many other things, some of which we know, and others of which we have not attained any knowledge of until now’. Thus, we observe the Heavens as something of great elevation and altitude for us, and we do not see any of the creation of Allah in it except for the sun and the moon, the stars and the clouds. And this is only the Heavens of this earthly realm. For this reason, Allah Glorified is He states: ‘And We adorned the skies nearest to the earth with lights.’ (Fussilat: 12)

As for the Seven Heavens, that is something of an entirely different order of reality, something we have no knowledge about whatsoever.

It is enough for you to know that between you and the sun are 8 light-minutes of distance, and that there are things that have been created that are at a distance of 100 light years distance from you: calculate that distance by multiplying it by 365 days, then by 24 hours, then by 60 seconds, and then by the speed of light, and you will understand how little we know.

Therefore, there is an entire order of universe beyond what you can possibly imagine or conceive. For this reason, Allah states Glorified is He: ‘And the heaven We constructed with strength, and indeed, We are [its] expander.’ (adh-Dhariyat: 47)

It is enough for you, in terms of how the cosmos has been subjected for your use, to consider the sun, and how its creator has made it subject to you such that it gives you light, warmth, energy, and different types of rays, without you having to expend any effort for it whatsoever, and without any maintenance, any fuel, and without you even having to reach it in the first place.

Thus, it operates in service for you and has done so since the time that Allah created it, and it will continue to do so until the coming of the Last Hour; it does not require anything from you at all. You only need to benefit from it, and contemplate its nature and the manner in which it can be exploited for your own use and benefit. So is the moon, it gives you light that is gentle and tranquil, and by it we are guided in the darkness and depths of the night: ‘And landmarks. And by the stars they are [also] guided.’ (an-Nahl: 16)

So, Allah created the moon and sun, with the specific quality of movement. Both are in motion and have been in motion since the time Allah created them, and will continue to do so until the coming of the Last Hour. They move without any fuel and without any energy, operating by the law of inertia, as we have said. As we have said previously, this motion takes place by means of precise and finely attuned calculation: ‘The sun and the moon are made punctual.’ (ar-Rahman: 5)

The earth, as well, is a container and a vessel for many different kinds of things and species of all varieties. In it are inanimate objects, which constitute the lowest level of species; if you add the quality or character of development and growth, we have plant life; and if you add the quality of sensation and feeling, you have animate life; and if you add the capacity and faculty of intelligence, we have human life, and this is the highest of all these species, and the most noble to Allah.

For this reason, Allah has made subject to man all the other species and made them at his disposal and for his use. He has made man their overlord, and thereby, His representative in His earth.

So, when the True Lord Glorified is He speaks of inanimate objects, He states: ‘Do you not see that Allah sends down rain from the sky, and We produce thereby fruits of varying colours? And in the mountains are tracts, white and red of varying shades and [some] extremely black.’ (Fatir: 27)

Thus, He presented the fruits first which are from plant life, before mentioning inanimate life because we do not consume inanimate life, but rather, we eat plant life, and fruits are the outcome and produce of such life. They are the most important to us, and they constitute the fundamental elements of life.

Thereafter, He speaks of the mountains which are the source of many benefits, treasures, metals, and precious gems. For this reason, He states in another verse: ‘And He placed on the earth firmly set mountains over its surface, and He blessed it and determined therein its [creatures'] sustenance.’ (Fussilat: 10) In other words, these blessings are to be found within the mountains. Now we have already made clear that the mountains are sources of nourishment, and serve as its storehouses in the earth. This is so because it is a source of rich, fertilizing soil that flows with the rainwater and spreads across the ends of the earth. By such mean, the fertility of the earth increases: ‘And there is not a thing but that with Us are its depositories, and We do not send it down except according to a known measure.’ (al-Hijr: 21)

Thus, in every species of creation, there are signs. Consider inanimate material, for example, such as the mountains and what they possess of benefit and various colours and hues of all kinds: within, one finds marble, granite, alabaster, and other useful material. Furthermore, plant life represents the essential source of nourishment. Think, for example, of the Arab date palms, and compare them with the European palm trees. For us, the date palm is a source of nourishment and we make use of every part of it, and we never throw away anything from it whatsoever.

Thus, you find that they have bark that serve as steps which you can use to ascend the trees and prune their branches or gather their fruits. As for the European palm trees, they are only for adornment. For this reason, you find them sleek, smooth, and thus hard to climb. This is for a special wisdom of the Creator, and a manifestation of His precision in creation. All praise be to Allah, the Best of Creators!

Contemplate the stalks of the palm trees: you will find them broad at their origins, and slender and delicate at their ends, and the leaves that are upon them are the opposite, for they are even and flat, spreading out at their tips. Then, they start to curl into themselves until they become spines at the base of the palm-stalks, close to where the fruit is, and this is so because these spines protect the fruits from rats and mice. Then contemplate the fact that these spines end at the base of the palm-stalks, and do not extend to the fruit-clustering stalks that bear the actual fruit.

Now contemplate the trunk of the date palm; it is tall and upright, as opposed to other trees, which you will find to be short and branching out. This is so because the fruits upon them are small in size, and it is easy for the branches to bear them. As for other plants like the watermelon, for example, they are found on finely coiled stalks that extend along the earth, and this is because it is such a heavy fruit.

Therefore, the phenomenon of the power of Allah being manifested in the cosmos is not something mechanical. If you consider the food you eat, you will notice that you eat the skin of the apricot, and leave aside the pit, unlike the almond, where you eat the nut and leave aside the shell. This is from the Power, the Great Wisdom, and the facility with which the Creator Glorified is He manifests Himself. You eat everything of the fig, for example, which does not have an outer skin. As for the orange or the tangerine, it has an outer peel. Contemplate, then, the different colours and flavours of the various edible plants and fruits, all of which are watered by the same source of water, and say: Glory be to the Creator!

Contemplate the trees: we find some from amongst them that are green which have no fruit, and you deem them to be of no benefit. However, there must necessarily be some benefit in them, either for you yourself or for something else in creation. It is enough that they serve as adornment and beautify their surroundings, and serve as a source of oxygen, and perhaps they have many other benefits of which you are not aware. You find, for example, trees that have flowers of various shapes, beautiful colours, and smell.

This is a whole other world of aesthetically wondrous creation of the natural world. For all the various colours and fragrances, there is a Divine wisdom in their presence, for they attract butterflies and insects that carry out the process of pollination for plant life. For every kind of butterfly and insect has its own blend of colours and smell. For this reason, when the insecticides started to become widespread, this phenomenon started to decrease, and we no longer saw any flowers in the fields. Why is this so? This is because the insecticides killed off the butterflies that carry out the process of pollination.

When you see all this beauty in creation, you should invocate the Creator and say: ‘All Praise be to Allah, the Best of Creators’! Furthermore, what is more beautiful than the beauty in creation is the One Who created this beauty.

Now in the verse, He states: ‘all from Him’; the word ‘all’ is used to indicate everything that is in the Heavens and the earth of the creation of Allah, without exception. Therefore, everything that is small or large in creation, from the atom to the galaxy, is from the bounty of Allah, those that we know of, and those that our limited knowledge cannot possibly encompass.

Then Allah Glorified is He states: ‘Indeed in that are signs for a people who give thought.’ In other words, these created things that have been subject to you are wonders and indications people who give thought.

Thus, this is a call to faith, for the True Lord Glorified is He presents His creation and his marvellous works in the cosmos to us, and calls us to contemplate them and employ our intellects in considering their nature. Furthermore, The Fashioner and Creator would not do this with his created works unless He were certain and absolutely sure of their excellence.

We have stated previously that if you were to go to a seller of fabric and buy a suit of wool from him, for example, you would see him present you various garments of fabric and make clear to their high level of quality. Then he would take a twist of the fabric and light it on fire in order to demonstrate to you the reality of its high quality. He does this only to demonstrate his trustworthiness to you, concerning the goods that he is selling. As for the seller of corrupted goods that have been debased or adulterated, he will chatter and prattle to you, and try to make you believe him with false words, deceit, and lies. He will never dare to make the defects of his goods clear to you.

Therefore, when your Lord addresses you, try to comprehend, reflect, and bear in mind thoughtfully what He is saying. What this means is that if you were to use your faculty of intelligence and consider this verse carefully and think about it deeply, it would lead you to the truth and to what He wishes from you. For this reason, the True Lord warns His servants against turning away from His signs: ‘And how many a sign within the heavens and earth do they pass over while they, therefrom, are turning away.’ (Yusuf: 105)

Then, The True Lord Glorified is He states: (1)

قُل لِّلَّذِينَ ءَامَنُوا۟ يَغْفِرُوا۟ لِلَّذِينَ لَا يَرْجُونَ أَيَّامَ
ٱللَّهِ لِيَجْزِىَ قَوْمًۢا بِمَا كَانُوا۟ يَكْسِبُونَ ﴿١٤﴾

Tell the believers to forgive those who do not fear God’s days [of punishment] — He will requite people for what they have done [14] (The Quran, al-Jathiya: 14)

The word ‘Tell’ indicates the precision which the Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him employed in his delivery of what he received from Allah, and that He does not come with anything from himself and nor relate the Words of Allah by their general import, but rather, he conveys the revelation literally, word for word. If this were not the case, it would be possible for him to relate to people that 'Allah is One' when Allah Glorified is He revealed the following verse to him: 'Say, "He is The One Allah"' (al-Ikhlas: 1).

(1) Reasons behind the revelation of the verse: Ibn `Abbas stated, in a relation from `Ata`: He intended the verse particularly for `Umar ibn Al-Khattab Allah be pleased with him and He intended `Abdullah ibn `Ubay in mentioning ‘those who do not believe in the coming of the Days of Allah.’ This is because they stopped in the Battle of Banu Mustaliq at the well-called Al-Muraysi. `Abdullah sent his servant to bring water, but then was late in returning, and so when he finally came back to him; he asked him, ‘What kept you?’ The servant replied, ‘The servant of `Umar waylaid everyone else at the rim of the well, and did not let anyone draw any water until he filled the water skins of the Prophet, the waterskins of the Abu Bakr and then he filled up water for his master. `Abdullah replied, ‘There is nothing that is similar between us and them except what has been said by someone: “Fatten your dog, and it will devour you.”’ The news of this statement reached `Umar Allah be pleased with him who took up his sword, wanting to head towards him, when Allah revealed this verse. `Asbab An-Nuzul, Al-Waqidi (p. 215)

Now when you send your son to his uncle, for example, and tell him: 'Tell your uncle: 'My father wishes to see you', and your son goes to him and tells his uncle: 'My father wishes to see you', the general meaning of what you intended is conveyed, and the expression is complete without resorting to repeating the word 'Tell'.

As for the Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him he relates exactly what Allah relates to him. He does not interfere in relating the text of what has been revealed to him and cast in to his heart, as if he were to say to us: 'This is the Word of Allah; it is not from myself at all, but rather, is the very Speech of Allah'. Thus, he relates what is revealed to him exactly as he hears it.

It is eccentric that there are some people who call for removing this word from the Quranic manuscripts and allege that it does not add anything to the meaning at all. Refuting their claim, it is enough to know that Allah the Most High and then Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings of Allah be upon him mentioned it. Moreover, it has a specific role to play, as previously elucidated.

Allah's saying: 'Tell the believers to forgive…' (al-Jathiya: 14) means that the believers should pardon and pass over the trivial speech of disbelievers as long as their words do not exceed the bounds of speech to the realm of action.

The verse: '…Those who do not fear Allah's days [of punishment]…' (al-Jathiya: 14) refers to those people who do not take account of Allah's days. Being eager for the best is a kind of request and bears the idea of wishful and wistful desire for achieving it; thus, it refers to attainability and reasonable expectations of realising hope. Though, the meaning of impossible request is quite different; it refers to the unattainable wish, such as that mentioned by the poet laureate :(1)

(1) The poet is Abu Al-`Atahiyya, (Ismail ibn Al-Qasim), born near Kufa in the year 130 A.H. and lived in Baghdad. He used to excel in poems on abstinence and eulogies. He used to sell jars of earthenware, and then reached the courts of the caliphs where he reached an elevated position. He died in Baghdad in 211 A.H., from Al-Mawsu`a Ash-Shi'riyya.

I wish the flush of youth could return for a single day
I would inform it of what old age brought along its way (1)

As for hopefulness, it refers to reasonably expected attainable action, as it is said, ‘I hope to succeed’ or ‘I hope to travel’.

The reference of the verse: ‘…Allah’s days [of punishment]…’ (al-Jathiya: 14) is similar to that in the saying ‘the days of the Arabs’ which refers to the historic significant days of the Arabs, when their great events and occurrences took place. Thus, ‘the Days of Allah’ refers to the historic days of the Muslims in which they won victory over their enemies. As for the Muslims, they are days of victory; whereas, they are days of defeat for the disbelievers. As a consequence, the disbelievers who do not take admonition from these great events, but rather, who pass over them as if nothing happened or as if they were completely ignorant, are the hypocrites. This verse has a related story; in the Battle of Banu-Mustaliq, (2) there was a water well called Al-Muraysi, where both the servant of 'Umar ibn Al-Khattab Allah be pleased with him and the servant of `Abdullah ibn Ubay, the chief of the hypocrites gathered to get water. The servant of 'Umar prevented the other from getting water from the well and said, ‘You would not get water until I would have gotten water for Prophet Muhammad first.’ Eventually, the other asked, ‘Have you finished?’ The servant of 'Umar replied, ‘Not yet, there is still a bucket of water for Abu Bakr, and then one for 'Umar.’ The narrator of the story relates that the servant of 'Umar did this due to his knowledge that ‘Abdullah ibn Ubay is a hypocrite. As a result, the servant of Abdullah ibn Ubay was late in getting water, so ‘Abdullah asked him, ‘Why are you late?’ Thereupon, the servant replied, ‘The servant of 'Umar ibn Al-Khattab did such-and-such.’ In response, ‘Abdullah nodded his head hypocritically and said: ‘Indeed, we are a typical example of the saying: “Fatten your dog and it will devour you.”’ He said this to satisfy his ego, yet his saying reached 'Umar Allah be pleased with him who took up his sword to kill him, but Allah revealed this verse: ‘Tell the believers to forgive those who do not fear Allah’s days [of punishment]…’ (al-Jathiya: 14).

(1) It is a 4-verse Wafir-metre ode.

(2) This story has been related by Wahidi An-Naysaburi in Asbab An-Nuzul [al-Jathiya chapter, verse No. 14]. He has also referred to in Nawasikh Al-Quran (1/225) and said, ‘It is related by `Ata` on the authority of Ibn `Abbas.

Allah commands the believers to forgive and pass over any slipup uttered which is still merely within the framework of speech, and does not reach the level of deeds. However, in case it does, this would be a different matter altogether, as in the case of the Muslim woman with the tribe of Banu Qaynuqa`, when a Jew from Banu Qaynuqa` raised up her garment and her nakedness was exposed. In this case, there should necessarily be a punitive measure against their bad deed. (1)

As for mere words, there is no problem with showing forbearance for these hypocrites. It is sufficient to know that the hypocrite debases himself through hypocrisy because he does in public what he does not hold to be true or does not believe in. Furthermore, hypocrisy, in itself, refers to the strong faith faced by hypocrisy. This shows the strength and nobility of faith and the debasement of hypocrisy.

Thus, the Quran relates their saying: ‘they say, “Once we return to Medina the powerful will drive out the weak…”’ (al-Munafiqun: 8). Allah confirms their saying that the powerful will drive out the weak; however, who is the powerful and who is the weak? In this context, Allah Glorified is He says, ‘…But power belongs to Allah, to His Messenger, and to the believers…’ (al-Munafiqun: 8).

It is sufficiently humiliating that these hypocrites actually attended the prayers in the very first row in order to hide their hypocrisy. Accordingly, there is a deep contradiction and wavering within their hearts which refers to the consciousness of their own debasement. It is related that when Allah revealed His saying: 'Who will give Allah a good loan...' (al-Baqara: 245), Fanhas,(1) the Jew, laughed and said, 'The Lord of Muhammad is in need and asks us to lend Him.' He uttered this in order to satisfy his ego; yet, he was still fighting in every battle to the side of Muslims and performed the prayers in the first row.

(1) This is related by Al-Waqidi in Al-Maghazi (1/65), the chapter of ‘The Battle of Qaynuqa`’ where he said, ‘A woman who had fled from the Arabs came to the market of Banu Qaynuqa` with a man from the Ansar, and sat down near a jeweller who had some jewellery for her. There came a man from the Jews of Banu Qaynuqa`, who sat down secretly behind her, and raised the hem of her garment up to her back, attaching it with a thorn. When the woman stood up, some of her nakedness appeared, and everyone laughed and jeered at her. In response, a man from the Muslims rose, followed the Jew and killed him, upon which the tribe of Banu Qaynuqa` gathered in around him and then killed him in retaliation. Thereby, they breached the covenant they had made with Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him.’

Thus, Allah the Almighty commands the believers to forgive the hypocrites so that the hypocrites are involuntary conscious of their own debasement. Hence, orientalists stirred up a big commotion concerning Allah's saying: 'When the hypocrites come to you [Prophet], they say, "We bear witness that you are the Messenger of Allah." Allah knows that you truly are His Messenger…' (al-Munafiqun: 1). They exclaimed how Allah declares just afterwards: '…And He bears witness that the hypocrites are liars' (al-Munafiqun: 1). There is a difference between the saying and the content of the saying itself. Thus, they are speaking the truth vis-à-vis the content of their saying: '…"We bear witness that you are the Messenger of Allah…"' (al-Munafiqun: 1). However, they are lying in their saying because they are hypocrites.

Allah Glorified is He does not say they are lying in their saying that you are Allah's Messenger; but rather, He denies their saying: '…We bear witness that you are the Messenger of Allah…' (al-Munafiqun: 1). Bearing witness means that the heart agrees with the utterances of the tongue; whereas, the utterances and the actions of the hypocrite are worlds apart.

Thus, Allah's saying: '…Allah's days [of punishment…' (al-Jathiya: 14) refers to the days of famous events of victory, bringing gladness and causing the Muslims to rejoice in Islamic history; such as the Battle of Badr, the Battle of Uhud and the Day of Hudaybiya. Meanwhile, they refer to the days of defeat for the disbelievers, grieving their hearts and troubling their lives. Likewise, these days resemble the great retributive events that took place to those nations who denied previous messengers.

(1) Fanhas was one of the scholars and rabbis of the Jews. Abu Bakr Allah be pleased with him had already met with him, saying to him, "Woe to you, O Fanhas! Fear Allah and accept Islam! For by Allah, indeed you know well that Muhammad is the Messenger of Allah, and that he has come with the truth from Allah, and that you have found mention of him written in your scriptures of the Torah and the Evangel.' Fanhas replied, 'By Allah, O Abu Bakr, we have nothing of poverty from Allah with us, but verily, He is the one who is poor in our eyes. And we do not abase ourselves before Him the way He Abases Himself before us, and verily we are those of wealth when compared with Him, and if He were truly richer and wealthier than us, He would not have asked us for a loan, as your companion claims (referring to the following Quranic verse): "Who will give Allah a good loan...' (al-Baqara: 245). See Tafsir At-Tabari for reference.

Those hypocrites do not fear or take warning from such retributive events. Hence, they did not turn away from violent disputation, argumentation, and stubborn opposition. This is fully elucidated in Allah's saying: 'And We punished each one of them for their sins: some We struck with a violent storm; some were overcome by a sudden blast; some We made the earth swallow; and some We drowned....' (al-'Ankabut: 40) Then Allah says to Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him: '…He will requite people for what they have done' (al-Jathiya: 14). Allah the Almighty tells His Messenger to leave their requital to Him! Allah's Command to forgive those hypocrites is not to honour or respect them, nor to show mercy to them; but rather, it is to bring down a severer punishment upon them by means of His Might. So, leave them to Allah to take His vengeance, for they are not actually challenging you, but rather, they are opposing Allah Glorified is He.

Furthermore, it should be noted that forgiveness has basic principles and certain limits. The man may recurrently forgive someone who does persistent evil, yet he may only find in return violent disputation and rejection. In the face of such evil, one must necessarily turn from showing clemency and mildness to outrage, for it is more beneficial and appropriate in this situation. The famous Arab poet laureate (1) has discerned this and said:

It is intelligent to demonstrate outrage to the delinquent (2)

If shown leniency, the roads of evil are long-drawn-out

(1) Ahmad ibn Al-Hassan Abu At-Tayyib Al-Mutanabbi, born in 202 A.H. He is a sage poet and one of the most distinguished Arab poets and literature laureate to whom many proverbs are attributed. He was born in a small locale called Kinda, to which he is related. He grew up in the Levant, and thereafter, wandered the country in search of knowledge of Arabic, poetry, and literature in general. At one time, he pretended to be a prophet in the countryside of Samara. He passed away in 354 A.H.

(2) It is the ninth line of a 36-verse Tawil-Meter ode of Mutanabbi

Another poet (1) has said:

We pardoned the tribe of Banu Dhuhl
And exclaimed, 'These people are brethren:
Mayhap those days will return
When they were as once they had been.'
But when evil announced itself openly,
Naked, brash, unmistakably,
We marched like lions striding boldly,
Newly become most wrathful
At them we struck hard, enfeebling,
Weakening, retaliating equally (2)
And stabbing, like the piercing of openings
Of wineskins (3) distended with plenty Showing clemency, submissively, when confronted
With outrage is grovelling compliance
Showing outrage brings succour and safety
When good conduct cannot grant deliverance (4).

Regarding Allah's saying: '…He will requite people for what they have done (yaksibun)' (al-Jathiya: 14), as previously mentioned, it is clear that

(1) He is the towering figure of his age, Shahl ibn Shayban, one of the poets of pre-Islamic Arabic Peninsula, from the people of Yamama. He was called 'the towering mountain' for the greatness of his works, which were likened to the mountain. He died approximately 70 years before Hijra, cited in Al-A`lam for Az-Zirikli.

(2) 'Equally or in equal measure': a man's match in strength. This verse is related in some sources:
At them we struck hard, enfeebling,
Slaughtering, Retaliating equally

(3) 'Wineskin (az-ziqq): any vessel that is used for drink. To 'slough off (tazqiq – from the same root word) a wineskin' is to strip it open from its top. Lisan Al-`Arab yaksibun (have done or have gained) is used to refer to good deeds, whereas yaktasibun 'have earned' is used to refer to evil deeds because it involves falsification and fabrication of lies. So, good deeds proceed from the doer who commits them naturally, and do not contain any affectation in them. Moreover, the term yaksibun 'have gained' originally means the increase in the sale price of something from the price of its procurement, a praiseworthy action, as it stimulates lawful and healthy business enterprise.

However, the human being may become accustomed and habituated to committing sins and does not distance himself from perpetrating them. They may become so natural, and thus, for him, it is an instance of being proud of 'gaining' evil deeds. In other words, he does not repent of his actions, nor does he upbraid himself for them, but rather he is pleased by bad deeds and considers them as good ones being 'gained'. For this reason, Allah does not say yaktasibun 'what they earned', but rather, He the Almighty says, '…He will requite people for what they have done (yaksibun)' (al-Jathiya: 14). Thus, Allah the Almighty commands the believers to forgive minor faults, for the perpetrator may refrain from his wrong action. Allah the Exalted says, '…[Prophet], repel evil with what is better and your enemy will become as close as an old and valued friend' (Fussilat: 34).

Consequently, Allah, the Wise Legislator has taken every measure to ensure that the bonds between people would remain well preserved. Even in the most violent campaigns against the enemies, which involves taking life, He allows for retaliatory penalties to be exacted as follows: 'Fair retribution saves life for you, people of understanding…' (al-Baqara: 179). Meanwhile, He calls for forgiveness: '…But if the culprit is pardoned by his aggrieved brother, this shall be adhered to fairly, and the culprit shall pay what is due in a good way…' (al-Baqara: 178). The word 'brother', despite being enemies, refers to their dealing in brotherly way.

There are many people who alleged that they have repelled evil with what was better, yet they did not find the desired result of which Allah has informed them. Their claim is refuted that they did not respond with what was better. If they had, they would have found their desired outcome, just as Allah has informed them; however, they fancied that they did, and they treated the situation as something experimental whose results would be judged thereafter, instead of having certainty in Allah's promise.

Afterwards, Allah the Almighty elevates this humane act higher than mere forgiveness; for someone may forgive the other who does evil towards him, but there remains some despise in his heart. Thus, Allah the Exalted calls the believer to release himself from the effects of such offences, and then moves onwards to a higher level, which is to do good to the one who has done evil towards him: '…Those who restrain their anger and pardon people — Allah loves those who do good' (Al-'Imran: 134).

Al-Hassan Al-Basri(1) was once asked about this matter, to which he responded, 'The evildoer deserves to be requited because Allah is by the side of the aggrieved; thereafter, the good deeds of the former get transferred to the latter.'

For this reason, when a man knew that a man had insulted him in a gathering, he sent him a plate of fresh dates as a gift and told his servant, 'Go with this to so-and-so, and tell him, "My master presents this gift to you, for you granted him your good deeds yesterday."'

Likewise, in our everyday life, when a child hits his brother; the father sympathises with the aggrieved one, whereas he angrily reproaches the sinner who hit the other, and upbraids him for his behaviour. Thus, the strike against the aggrieved child became in his favour and to his advantage.

Therefore, Allah Glorified is He desires that all His creation would display compassion towards each other; this signifies that life is not built upon hatred, rancour, or stubborn resistance against others, but rather, upon love, affection, and mutual support.

As the scholars of Islam tackled this matter, they classified the tribulations that afflicted man into two categories; the first is that which afflicts man, where he has an adversary or an offending party. This type is harder on the self, for it summons man to vengeance. The second is the tribulation that afflicts man, where there is no adversary involved. This type is driven by Allah, in which man has no part. This tribulation is easier for man, as there is no offending human party involved. In case there is, by very nature, it stirs in man his perpetual desire for revenge.

(1) Al-Hassan ibn Yasar Al-Basri Abu Said is one of the Tabi`in, those pious followers who came after the generation of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him. He was the Imam of the people of Basra and a great religious scholar and authority of Muslims of his time. He was one of the great scholars and legal authorities and one of the most widely known for his great piety. He was born in Medina in 21 A.H. and grew up in his early years under the wing of `Ali ibn Abu Taleb Allah be pleased with him. He passed away in 110 A.H. at the age of 90.

For this reason, Luqman peace be upon him advises his son: '…Bear anything that happens to you steadfastly: these are things to be aspired to' (Luqman: 17). The verse refers here to the tribulation driven by Allah, therefore, there is no mention of forgiveness or overlooking faults in it whereas, when Allah refers to the tribulation caused due to others, He says, '…This is one of the greatest things' (ash-Shura: 43). The above verse is strengthened in its confirmation that forgiveness and forbearance for the offender in this situation is much more difficult and requires greater effort and struggle than in the first case.

In the conclusion of the concerned verse, Allah says, '…He will requite people for what they have done' (al-Jathiya: 14), where He the Almighty indicates the justice of the requital that will be in accordance with the kind of action performed in this life. Allah Glorified is He clarifies further this point in the subsequent verse:

مَنْ عَمِلَ صَٰلِحًا فَلِنَفْسِهِۦ ۖ وَمَنْ أَسَآءَ فَعَلَيْهَا ۖ ثُمَّ إِلَىٰ رَبِّكُمْ تُرْجَعُونَ ﴿١٥﴾

Whoever does good benefits himself, and whoever does evil harms himself: you will all be returned to your Lord [15]
(The Quran, al-Jathiya: 15)

Thus, the man benefits himself with regards to righteous action; whereas, any evil that he perpetrates is against his own self. Afterwards, as Allah says: '…You will all be returned to your Lord' (al-Jathiya: 15). This indicates that both the recompense for right action as well as the punishment for wrong action begins in this life before the person returns to Allah in the Hereafter. This is done to balance the equilibrium of the activity of life upon earth, for if all recompenses were delayed until the Hereafter, people would deem it easy to commit sin and would not care for falling into it. Accordingly, the situation would deteriorate and evil deeds would increase.

Therefore, there must be some earthly punishment that takes place in the world in order to set affairs right within it, so Allah Glorified is He says, ‘Another punishment awaits the evildoers…’ (at-Tur: 47). Furthermore, Allah says about the evildoers: ‘We shall certainly make them taste a nearer torment [in this life]…’ (as-Sajda: 21) which is followed by the punishment that takes place in the Hereafter: ‘…Prior to the greater torment so that perhaps they may return [to the right path]’ (as-Sajda: 21).

This principle is clear in the chapter of al-Kahf, as Allah the Almighty mentions the saying of Dhu Al-Qarnayn: ‘…We shall punish those who have done evil, and when they are returned to their Lord He will punish them [even more] severely’(1) (al-Kahf: 87).

مِّنَ ٱلطَّيِّبَٰتِ وَفَضَّلْنَٰهُمْ عَلَى ٱلْعَٰلَمِينَ ﴿١٦﴾

We gave scripture, wisdom, and prophet hood to the Children of Israel; We provided them with good things and favoured them above others [16] (The Quran, al-Jathiya: 16)

This is meant as a consolation for Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him at a time when he endured the most painful sufferings and tribulations from the contemporary leaders of disbelief. They opposed him with stubbornness, denial, arrogance and much harm, in word and deed as well as by means of plots and conspiracies. They spared no effort to harm the Messenger peace and blessings be upon him.

Thus, Allah the Exalted consoles and tells him that he is not the first messenger who experienced this; many of past prophetic brethren faced similar hardships and denial. So, Allah gives him consolation from the history of previous prophets who called people to faith and truth; whereas, the people, in return, desire falsehood; thus, they will necessarily clash against the prophets.

(1) Qatada related that the punishment of Dhu Al-Qarnayn for anyone who associated others with Allah in worship was execution. It was related on the authority of As-Suddi: ‘His punishment was to put them in brass cauldrons and set them on fire until they boiled to death.’ This was certainly a gruesome and terrible punishment. See Ad-Durr Al-Manthur of As-Suyuti and the commentary of al-Kahf, verse 87.

Allah the Exalted says, ‘We gave scripture, wisdom, and prophet hood to the children of Israel…’ (al-Jathiya: 16). In other words, Allah gave the Torah to the people of Israel, just as He revealed unto Muslims the Quran. Additionally, Allah provides the people of Israel with the standards of justice, by which their affairs were settled so that they may run smoothly. These standards of justice for the people of Israel are like the Prophetic Sunnah for Muslims. For this reason, Allah Glorified is He commands the wives of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him as follows: ‘Remember what is recited in your houses of Allah’s revelations and wisdom...’ (al-Ahzab: 34). In other words, Allah addresses the wives of the Prophet to remember what is recited in their houses from the Quran and Hadith.

Allah’s saying: ‘…And prophet hood…’ (al-Jathiya: 16) refers to Allah’s sending many prophets to the people of Israel more than to any other nation, to the extent that they pride themselves over other nations in this concern. However, the reality is that this is not something to be proud of; but rather, this indicates their disgraced state for which they deserve to be reproached, for the great numbers of prophets indicates their corrupted state. Thus, the people have no need of a new messenger unless they have entered a deteriorated and corrupted state.

Therefore, the great number of prophets is not a point in their favour, but rather, it is a proof against them. They frequently carried out the killing of prophets, the matter which did not take place in any nation before them. Likewise, the disbelievers of Quraysh similarly plotted to kill Muhammad as well, yet how far their plans were from being realised! Allah the Almighty clarifies that the possibility of killing the prophets is confined to them only, so He attributes this specific transgression to them alone, as He says, ‘…Why did you kill Allah’s prophets in the past…?’ (al-Baqara: 91) These deeds were used to be of the previous people; as for present, no people are currently able to do any similar transgression against Prophet Muhammad.

Afterwards, Allah the Exalted says, ‘…We provided them with good things…’ (al-Jathiya: 16). Among these good things are manna and quail that Allah sent down to them during the period of being wandered in the earth, when they had no rest, nor any cultivation from the earth. Manna is a kind of fluid that resembles honey that runs along the leaves of trees, that turns into translucent grains and that fall down early in the morning. It has a sweet taste, as if it is a blend of honey and cream. As for quail, it is a migratory bird abounding in protein. Thus, with manna and quail, Allah Glorified is He granted them a complete, wholesome meal, yet their materialist inclinations overwhelmed them. They wished to eat from their cultivation from the land they were in possession of, saying: ‘Maybe this fully prepared meal will not come one day; thus, manna and quail may not descend from the Heavens’.

Accordingly, they asked Musa (Moses) peace be upon him: ‘…We cannot bear to eat only one kind of food, so pray to your Lord to bring out for us some of the earth’s produce, its herbs and cucumbers, its garlic, lentils, and onions…’ (al-Baqara: 61). However, their materialism reached its maximum limit so that they requested Musa (Moses) peace be upon him to have a sensory vision of Allah the Almighty: ‘…we will not believe you until we see Allah face to face…’ (al-Baqara: 55).

Then Allah says, ‘…and favoured them above others’ (al-Jathiya: 16). The scholars have stated: ‘They were merely favoured above other nations that were contemporaneous with them, not above all absolute nations. The People of Israel lived in a time when disbelief and idol-worship had taken reign, whereas they themselves were people of the Book, believing in Allah. Hence, they were better than all the other nations of their time.

وَءَاتَيْنَٰهُم بَيِّنَٰتٍ مِّنَ ٱلْأَمْرِ ۖ فَمَا ٱخْتَلَفُوٓا۟ إِلَّا مِنۢ بَعْدِ مَا جَآءَهُمُ ٱلْعِلْمُ بَغْيًۢا
بَيْنَهُمْ ۚ إِنَّ رَبَّكَ يَقْضِى بَيْنَهُمْ يَوْمَ ٱلْقِيَٰمَةِ فِيمَا كَانُوا۟ فِيهِ يَخْتَلِفُونَ ﴿١٧﴾

We gave them clear proof in matters [of religion]. They differed among themselves out of mutual rivalry, only after knowledge came to them: on the Day of Resurrection your Lord will judge between them regarding their differences [17]
(The Quran, al-Jathiya: 17)

Someone may ask about the occasion for mentioning the Jews here. The Quranic commentators said that Allah the Almighty tells Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him that the Quraysh and other people, have some demerits of the Jews. They have done many analogous deeds, so Allah sent down upon them similar tribulations, to what was sent down beforehand upon those previous nations.

Allah the Exalted says, ‘Can they not see that We have made [them] a secure sanctuary though all around them people are snatched away’ (al-’Ankabut: 67). In those days, anyone who merely left the environs of Mecca, would be accosted, abducted, taken unawares and his wealth and possessions would be seized by bandits. However, the people of Mecca themselves could not dare do such acts, due to their high status related to their possession of Ka`ba, the House of Allah, and their fervent desire to maintain the safety of trade caravans travelling between Yemen and the Levant and passing by the territories of other Arab tribes.

Moreover, the service of the Quraysh to the visitors of the Ka`ba as being the guests of Allah, the All-Merciful, also ensured their trade and protected their caravans. Thus, this matter serves as the connection between the chapters of al-Fil and Quraysh. Allah the Almighty says in al-Fil: ‘Do you [Prophet] not see how your Lord dealt with the army of the elephant? Did He not utterly confound their plans? He sent ranks of birds against them, pelting them with pellets of hard-baked clay: He made them [like] cropped stubble.’ (al-Fil: 1-5)

If it is asked, ‘Why did Allah repulse the Army of the Elephant and make them like a field of grain that had been eaten down to stubble’? The answer is found at the beginning of the chapter of Quraysh: ‘[He did this] to make the Quraysh feel secure, secure in their winter and summer journeys.’ (Quraysh: 1-2)

If the House of Allah were to be destroyed, the dignity and high regard of Quraysh in the Arabian Peninsula would have been lost; thus, they would not have been able to maintain their trade expeditions in the winter and summer. It is as if Allah, Glorious is He, says to Prophet Muhammad: ‘I treated these people in such manner, defended them, and made them gain status and rank in the eyes of others; yet, they treat your call to Islam with enmity because you will strip them of their haughty and tyrannical leadership that they have become used to assuming’.

Thus, Allah’s saying: ‘We gave them clear proof in matters [of religion]…’ (al-Jathiya: 17) refers to the evidences and distinguishing characteristics of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him. The Jews only went to Medina because they had knowledge of his advent and knew of his attributes and the time of his coming. They used to show pride at his coming against the disbelievers and idol-worshippers. They were saying: 'Indeed, the time for the coming of a Prophet to the Arabs has been due. We will follow him and kill you all in the same manner as `Ad and Iram were killed.(1) But as the Messenger was sent on his mission, they opposed and disbelieved him, just as Allah says in this verse: '…And when they had been praying for victory against the disbelievers, even when there came to them something they knew [to be true], they disbelieved in it…' (al-Baqara: 89). Concerning their knowledge of the Messenger, Allah the Exalted says: '…(They) know this as they know their own children…' (al-An'am: 20).

Therefore, `Abdullah ibn Salam(2), a Jewish rabbi, stated: 'By Allah, I knew him the moment I saw him, just as I know my son, yet my certainty and knowledge of Muhammad is firmer.'(3) Despite this, they denied his message, disbelieved him and disregarded all signs and proofs of his prophet hood found in their sacred Books. Allah Glorified is He says, 'They denied them, in their wickedness and their pride, even though their souls acknowledged them as true…' (an-Naml: 14).

(1) This is mentioned by Ibn Kathir in his Tafsir (1/124), narrated from ibn Ishaq from the elders of the Ansar, who said: 'We had forcibly overwhelmed and subjugated them for a long time in the pre-Islamic era, when we were idolatrous people, whereas they were the people of the Book, and they used to say, "Verily a prophet will be send with his mission anytime now, and we will follow him; his time has arrived, and with him, we will kill you all in the same manner of the massacre of the People of `Ad and Iram." But when Allah sent His Messenger Muhammad from Quraysh, we followed him, while they disbelieved in him.' This is narrated by Al-Bayhaqi in Dala`il An-Nubuwwa (1/459) & (2/302)

(2) `Abdullah ibn Salam ibn Al-Harith Al-Isra`ili Abu Yusuf Allah be pleased with him was a Companion of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him. It is said that he is from the descendants of Yusuf (Joseph), son of Ya'qub (Jacob) peace be upon them. He accepted Islam upon the arrival of the Prophet to Medina. His name was Al-Husayn, but later, the Messenger named him `Abdullah. When the tribulations and disorder took place between `Ali and Mu`awiya Allah be pleased with them he lay down his arms and isolated himself from the discord. He remained living in Medina until he passed away in 43 A.H. cited in Al-A`lam of Az-Zirikli (4/90).

(3) This is mentioned by Ibn Kathir in his Tafsir (1/194), and it is ascribed by As-Suyuti in his book Ad-Durr Al-Manthur (1/357) to Ath-Tha`labi on the authority of As-Suddi As-Saghir, from Al-Kalbi, from Ibn `Abbas Allah be pleased with him.

When Allah guided `Abdullah ibn Salam to Islam, he went to Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him and said, 'O Messenger of Allah! Truly, Allah has guided my heart to Islam, but I fear if I accept Islam, that the Jews will censure and blame me once they find out, so please ask them about me before they know about my conversion to Islam!' The Prophet asked the Jews, 'What do you know about Ibn Salam?' They responded, 'He is our master, the son of our master, our rabbi, and the son of our rabbi.' As `Abdullah ibn Salam uttered the 'Testimony of Faith' (I bear witness that there is no deity worthy of worship save Allah and that you are The Messenger of Allah) they said, 'Nay, he is such-and-such' and went on insulting, abusing and reviling him. Thereupon `Abdullah said, 'O Messenger of Allah, did I not tell you that they are a people of slander and falsehood?'(1)

It is strange that when the disbelievers of Mecca asked the Jews, 'Are we more rightly guided or Muhammad?' They responded, 'Nay! You are more rightly guided than him.'(2) This refers to their worldly temporal power that they wished to preserve. Before the Messenger's entry to Medina, they were preparing Ibn Ubay to be their king and they had prepared the royal crown for him.(3)

(1) This is related by Al-Bukhari in his Sahih (Hadith 3082, 3645, and 4120), and likewise by Ahmad in his Musnad (Hadith 11615 and 13265) from the Hadith of Anas ibn Malik Allah be pleased with him.

(2) This is narrated by At-Tabari in his Tafsir (p. 9791) from Mujahid, who stated: 'This was related concerning Ka'ab ibn Al-Ashraf and the disbelievers of Quraysh, where he said, "The disbelievers of Quraysh are more rightly guided than Muhammad."' Ibn Jurayj stated: 'Ka'ab ibn Ashraf came forward, and Quraysh came to him and asked him about Muhammad, so he belittled his work and made it look insignificant, and informed them that he was astray. Then they said to him, 'We implore you by Allah! Tell us, are we more rightly guided, or is he? For indeed you have known that we slaughter meat out of hospitality for our visitors, we give the pilgrims drink, we make the lesser pilgrimage of the House of Allah and we feed whoever it is that the winds bring to us.' He replied, 'You are more rightly guided.' A similar Hadith is given in the Tafsir of Ibn Abu Hatim (p. 5497).

(3) This is mentioned by Ibn Hisham in his As-Sira An-Nabawiyya (2/584): 'His people had made ready the pearls in order to crown him and appoint him to be their king. Then Allah the Exalted brought them His Messenger peace and blessings be upon him as they were in the middle of what they were doing. When `Abdullah ibn `Ubay's people turned away from him to accept Islam, he resented it strongly; he felt that the Messenger has wrested away his kingship. When he saw that his people had refused him as king and=

However, Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him preceded him and as soon as he had reached Quba` and the people of Medina had received him, Ibn Ubay was no longer able to claim this title. He remained secretly angry at what had taken place until he died.

As Allah says, '... They differed among themselves out of mutual rivalry, only after knowledge came to them…' (al-Jathiya: 17), this means that they differed concerning the Prophet after their full knowledge of his identity because some of them believed in him and professed Islam, while others denied and disavowed him.

There are some good people amongst the Jews whom Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him praised. In this regard, the Messenger said: 'The best of the Jews is Mukhayriq.'(1) This man, as he converted to Islam, set out with the Messenger for one of the military campaigns and waive all his possessions to him, without declaring this openly. In the battle, he was killed, without even having performed a single prayer.(2)

In Allah's saying: '…on the Day of Resurrection your Lord will judge between them regarding their differences' (al-Jathiya: 17), He refers to the matter of belief in the Message of Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him.

ثُمَّ جَعَلْنَٰكَ عَلَىٰ شَرِيعَةٍ مِّنَ ٱلْأَمْرِ فَٱتَّبِعْهَا وَلَا تَتَّبِعْ أَهْوَآءَ ٱلَّذِينَ لَا يَعْلَمُونَ ﴿١٨﴾

Now We have set you [Muhammad] on a clear religious path, so follow it. Do not follow the desires of those who lack [true] knowledge [18] (The Quran, al-Jathiya: 18)

Allah has made Prophet Muhammad upon the Shari'a (Straight Path) which would endow man with water as being the origin of life, as Allah says:

= professed Islam, he entered Islam in a state of hypocrisy and resentment and his hatred persisted all the time.'

(1) Mukhayriq An-Nadiri Al-Isra`ili, from the tribe of Banu An-Nadir. He turned to Islam and died a martyr in the Battle of Uhud. He was a scholar and he had bequeathed his wealth to the Prophet, who, in turn, gave it out in charity, cited in Al-Isaba Fi Tamyiz As-Sahaba (6/73) and in Siret An-Nabi (2/88). The text of the Hadith: 'Mukhayriq is on the top of the Jews.' In another narration 'Mukhayriq is the best of the Jews.' See Dala'il An-Nubuwwa of Abu Na`im (Hadith 39) and Kanz Al-`Umal of Al-Muttaqi Al-Hindi (Hadith 46154).

(2) This is related by Ibn Kathir in As-Sira An-Nabawiyya (3/72).

'…That We made every living thing from water...' (al-Anbiya': 30). Thus, the religion of Islam is termed sharia. As water endows life to the human body, religion gives life to the spirits and the hearts. It will give man the eternal and everlasting true life in the Hereafter, about which Allah says, 'Believers, respond to Allah and His Messenger when he calls you to that which gives you the life…' (al-Anfal: 24). There is no doubt that Allah the Almighty addresses believers here in their living state in this world. Thus, 'life' refers to the eternal one of the Hereafter.

Allah Glorified is He advises his Messenger to abstain from concerning himself with the denial and stubborn resistance of those people, for their actions are well known, and have precedents in the procession of previous prophets; so he should bear up any harm and grievance. In the very early period of the Prophet's mission, Khadija Allah be pleased with her accompanied the Prophet peace and blessings be upon him to her cousin Waraqa ibn Nawfal(1) and related everything that had happened to him. Waraqa said, 'There has come the greatest prophecy just as that had come to Musa (Moses) peace be upon him.' He also told the Messenger, 'Verily, you are the last prophet. If I live to witness the day you call to Allah's path, I will support you with all my strength. I wish I would live until the day they cast you out!'

The Prophet astonished asked, 'Will they cast me out?' Waraqa replied, 'Yes, no previous prophet has ever called to the Right Path without being cast out.'(2) Therefore, the Prophet's immigration for the sake of propagating religion was a known matter from the very beginning of his mission, for it constitutes the perfection of the illumination of Islam emerged from Mecca.

(1) Waraqa ibn Nawfal ibn Assad `Abd Al-`Uzza was a sage from the Quraysh in the pre-Islamic period... He distanced himself from idol-worship before Islam, and forbade himself any meat that was slaughtered for the idols and turned to Christianity. He was present in the very early phase of the Prophetic era, but he died before the call to Islam was propagated. He was the paternal cousin of Khadija Allah be pleased with her and he passed away around 12 years before Hijra. By that time, he had reached a very old age and had gone blind. See Al-A`lam of Az-Zirikli (8/114-115).

(2) This is related by Muslim in his Sahih (Hadith 221) and by Ahmad in his Musnad (Hadith 24671) from the Hadith of `Aisha Allah be pleased with her. It is also related by Abu `Awana in his Mustakhraj (Hadith 245). The text in Muslim is as follows: 'No man has ever come with what you have come with but that he was treated as an enemy, and should I live to see your day come to pass, I will help you with all my support.'

Allah says, '…so follow it. Do not follow the desires of those who lack [true] knowledge' (al-Jathiya: 18). Allah ordains the Prophet to follow the shari'a (the Straight Path), rather than the vain desires of the disbelievers, who later on proposed to the Messenger to worship their gods for a year and they will reciprocally worship Allah for a year.' Allah forbids him from following them, as Allah directs him regarding this matter in the chapter of al-Kafirun.(1)

إِنَّهُمْ لَن يُغْنُوا۟ عَنكَ مِنَ ٱللَّهِ شَيْـًٔا ۚ وَإِنَّ ٱلظَّـٰلِمِينَ
بَعْضُهُمْ أَوْلِيَآءُ بَعْضٍ ۖ وَٱللَّهُ وَلِىُّ ٱلْمُتَّقِينَ ١٩

They cannot help you against God in any way.
Wrongdoers only have each other to protect them; the righteous have God Himself as their protector [19]
(The Quran, al-Jathiya: 19)

The reference here is to the disbelievers of Mecca, when they went to the Prophet's paternal uncle Abu Taleb and said, 'If the son of your brother seeks wealth, we will put together a fortune for him from our various properties that he would be the richest man amongst us. If he wishes to have sovereignty, we would make him our king.' The Prophet peace and blessings be upon him replied with his famous statement: 'O my uncle, by Allah, if they were to put the sun in my right hand and the moon in my left to abandon this matter, I would not do so, until Allah makes it manifest, or I perish for its sake.'(2)

Allah says, '…Wrongdoers only have each other to protect them…(al-Jathiya: 19); that means that the oppressors help and support each other, for the forces of oppression have gathered and unified their targets. Whereas, as Allah says,

(1) This is related by As-Suyuti in Ad-Durr Al-Manthur Fi Tafsir bil-Ma`thur) of al-Kafirun. He ascribed it to Ibn Jarir At-Tabari and Ibn Abu Hatim and At-Tabarani from Ibn `Abbas that they said to the Messenger: 'We offer you a proposal which will be to your advantage.' He asked, 'What is it?' They said, 'Worship our gods for a year, and we will worship your God for a year'.

(2) This is related in many books of Prophetic biography: it is related by Sayid An-Nas in his `Uyun Al-Athar (1/122), also by Ibn Kathir in his As-Sira An-Nabawiyya (1/474) and by As-Suhayli in Rawd Al-Unuf (2/6); all of them on the authority of Muhammad ibn Ishaq.

'…The righteous have Allah Himself as their Protector' (al-Jathiya: 19), He is the Protector Who will support Allah-fearing people with His victory. These are some of the contrary oppositions that make the meaning in the context clearer.

هَٰذَا بَصَٰٓئِرُ لِلنَّاسِ وَهُدًى وَرَحْمَةٌ لِّقَوْمٍ يُوقِنُونَ ﴿٢٠﴾

This [revelation] is a means of insight for people, a source of guidance and mercy for those of sure faith [20] (The Quran, al-Jathiya: 20)

Allah's saying: '…A means of insight…' (al-Jathiya: 20) refers to the light of truth within the human soul. Thus, the faculty of sight sees material things, whereas the faculty of insight perceives and distinguishes values and ideals.

Therefore, the seat of insight is the heart, where Allah casts His light into it. If it is said that someone has insight, this means that he has a piercing insight and perception of the reality of matters. It may be possible for such person to predict that something will happen and it comes to pass exactly as predicted.

Being guided or following the right path is to reach the truth by the shortest and easiest possible way. Guidance is not difficult to be followed, as Allah has described this with the believers in His saying: 'Such people are following their Lord's guidance…' (al-Baqara: 5). Thus, they easily follow guidance, as if they were carried to their desired destination.

Moreover, Allah refers to the Quran as 'Mercy' (al-Jathiya: 20), in addition to being guidance and source for mankind's insight, in another verse, Allah refers to the Quran as healing and mercy: 'We send down the Quran as healing and mercy to those who believe…' (al-Isra': 82).

As previously mentioned, there is a difference between 'healing' and 'mercy'. Healing refers to the treatment of the Quran to a current disease, or its correctness to a crookedness of the path taken. Thus, the Quran cures whatever shortcomings or failings human may have, uprights whatever deviation away from the straight path towards constructive actions.

This resembles the student who abandons his studies; consequently he fails and becomes unsuccessful; yet, if he returns to studies, he then succeeds.

Thus, if human overlooks the Quran as a methodology, he will be stricken with spiritual diseases and problems, but if he returns to it, he will be cured. As for mercy, this means the preventive action to wipe out the disease from the very beginning.

In this verse, Allah Glorified is He depicts that the Quran is only a healing and a mercy for the devotees believing in its truthfulness and in being the path for guidance.

أَمْ حَسِبَ ٱلَّذِينَ ٱجْتَرَحُوا۟ ٱلسَّيِّـَٔاتِ أَن نَّجْعَلَهُمْ كَٱلَّذِينَ ءَامَنُوا۟ وَعَمِلُوا۟
ٱلصَّٰلِحَٰتِ سَوَآءً مَّحْيَاهُمْ وَمَمَاتُهُمْ ۚ سَآءَ مَا يَحْكُمُونَ ﴿٢١﴾

Do those who commit evil deeds really think that We will deal with them in the same way as those who believe and do righteous deeds, that they will be alike in their living and their dying? How badly they judge! [21]
(The Quran, al-Jathiya: 21)

The verb ‘to think’ may mean to assume or, in other instances, ‘to count’, from the idea of calculation and enumeration, as in Allah’s saying: ‘…Commit evil deeds…’ (al-Jathiya: 21). Allah the Exalted means that the wrongdoers committed and earned evil actions. It is for this reason that the parts of the human body are termed, in Arabic, the same as those predatory birds, for they acquire their prey. As for ‘sin’, it is everything that is offensive and that leads to the punishment or censure of the doer.

In the verse, there is a rhetorical question, which implies obvious denial and wonderment in the assumption made. How are disbelievers and believers put on equal footing? Those who turned away from the call of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him and thought that they could be considered on equal footing to the believers, are mistaken in their assumption. What a vast difference between these two groups, as they could not be for sure dealt the same! Rather, the disbelievers are defeated in this life and then tortured in the Hereafter; whereas, the disbelievers are granted victory and empowerment in this life and then will be rewarded in the Hereafter.

As Allah says, ‘…They will be alike in their living and their dying…’ (al-Jathiya: 21), He the Exalted negates that the two teams will be dealt the same whether in this worldly life or in the Hereafter. '…How badly they judge!' (al-Jathiya: 21) means that whoever judges that the two groups should be judged on an equal footing, has erred because this is unjust.

Thus, it is their surmise that has actually brought about their fall and impelled them towards being faithless. Otherwise, if they had known for certain that the resulting recompense would be different; they would have believed and done righteous deeds.

وَخَلَقَ ٱللَّهُ ٱلسَّمَٰوَٰتِ وَٱلْأَرْضَ بِٱلْحَقِّ وَلِتُجْزَىٰ كُلُّ
نَفْسٍۭ بِمَا كَسَبَتْ وَهُمْ لَا يُظْلَمُونَ ٢٢

God created the heavens and earth for a true purpose:
to reward each soul according to its deeds. They will not be wronged [22] (The Quran, al-Jathiya: 22)

Allah previously referred to the unfair judgement of the disbelievers and the impossibility of being treated equally to the believers. In this verse, He the Almighty then speaks about His Justice and about the balance of truth by which the Heavens and the earth have been established from the beginning, before creating mankind or bringing about the believer and disbeliever into existence.

Thus, Allah has truthfully created the Heavens and the Earth with finely attuned calculation and completely equitable composition. Thus, Allah's Justice is not confined to the rewards and requital of deeds in the Hereafter; but rather, it is an Eternal Justice, by which creation has been managed and attended.

The truth is the firmly established unchanged fact, such as Allah's signs in the Heavens and the earth, which are firmly and precisely established, with perfectly unchanged orchestrated course, from the very beginning of creation. Allah the Exalted gives an indication that the human's lives cannot be rectified and will not proceed in peace and security unless they are similarly guided and established by the truth, by which the Heavens and the Earth are managed.

For example, Allah's saying: 'The sun and the moon follow their calculated courses. The plants and the trees submit to His designs. He has raised up the sky. He has set the balance' (ar-Rahman: 5-7) means that they have been perfectly established.

The conclusion of this verse: ‘…To reward each soul according to its deeds, they will not be wronged’ (al-Jathiya: 22) shows that as creation is established upon truth as justice and requital should necessarily take place, as well as oppression should inevitably come to an end.

Thereafter, Allah Glorified is He states :(1)

أَفَرَءَيْتَ مَنِ ٱتَّخَذَ إِلَٰهَهُۥ هَوَىٰهُ وَأَضَلَّهُ ٱللَّهُ عَلَىٰ عِلْمٍ وَخَتَمَ عَلَىٰ سَمْعِهِۦ وَقَلْبِهِۦ
وَجَعَلَ عَلَىٰ بَصَرِهِۦ غِشَٰوَةً فَمَن يَهْدِيهِ مِنۢ بَعْدِ ٱللَّهِ ۚ أَفَلَا تَذَكَّرُونَ ﴿٢٣﴾

[Prophet], consider the one who has taken his own desire as a god, whom God allows to stray in the face of knowledge, sealing his ears and heart and covering his eyes – who can guide such a person after God [has done this]? Will you [people] not take heed? [23] (The Quran, al-Jathiya: 23)

The deity is the worshipped entity, towards which the entire life is devoted in order to serve and carry out what it requires. ‘The worshipped deity’ is a general term that may refer to Allah, the Truthful Deity, the Creator, and the Originator of this universe, or it may also refer to the false objects of worship such as the idols, the sun or the moon.

These are false objects of worship that do not harm nor benefit anyone; only the ignorant who worship them to satisfy his ardent desire for worship and devotion. Thus, they seek a religion free from hardships or burdens and a god issuing no decrees or prohibitions.

(1) The cause of revelation of this verse: Ibn Jurayj has related that it was revealed concerning Al-Harith ibn Qays, and An-Naqash has related that it was revealed concerning Al-Harith ibn Nawfal Ibn `Abd Munaf. Muqatil stated: It was revealed concerning Abu Jahl, and that is because he circumambulated the House of Allah one night, and with him was Walid ibn Al-Mughira. They spoke about the matter of the Prophet, and so Abu Jahl said, ‘By Allah, I know for certain that he is being truthful.’ To this Al Walid ibn Al-Mughira retorted: ‘What indicates this to you?’ So, Abu Jahl replied, ‘O Abu `Abd Shams! We used to call him “the truthful and the trustworthy” when he was young, and when he matured, we called him “the inveterate and treacherous liar”. By Allah, I know for certain that he is telling the truth.’ Walid ibn Al-Mughira said, ‘So what prevents you from accepting his message as the truth and believing in him?’ Abu Jahl replied, ‘The little girls of Quraysh will say of me that I followed the orphan of Abu Taleb just for his sake, in a state of defeat. By Lat and `Uzza, I will never follow him!’ Thereupon, the verse was revealed: ‘… Sealing his ears and heart...’ (al-Jathiya: 23).

The human’s caprice is one of these false gods, for there are some people who take their whims as their god. Caprice in itself is blameworthy; thus, it is wisely said: ‘The ruination of sound judgement is caprice’. Furthermore, Allah Glorious is He lauded Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him because: ‘He does not speak from his own desire (caprice)’ (an-Najm: 3).

Even if Allah the Exalted altered some rulings promulgated by the Prophet during the earliest period of Islam; yet they were not issued out of the Prophet’s personal caprice whatsoever. Therefore, the Prophet said about himself: ‘My Lord has excellently taught me good manners.’(1)

Thereafter, Allah Glorious is He makes clear that the person who takes his own caprice as his god has gone astray: ‘…Whom Allah allows to stray in the face of knowledge…’ (al-Jathiya: 23). Thus, Allah judged that this person is astray from the Right Path because he had his own caprice. If Allah had made the human forcibly compelled, such as the Heavens and the earth, to obey Him, he would never have been able to oppose Him or go astray. However, as it is previously mentioned, Allah decrees to have willingly compliant hearts of worshippers, rather than imitating replicas of creatures obeying Him without having any choice.

Allah Glorified is He states: 'And the soul and Him Who made it perfect, Then He inspired it to understand what is right and wrong for it' (ash-Shams: 7-8). Thus, when a man chooses wrong and Allah finds him to be like that, He passes a judgment that he shall be astray forever. Thus events in this worldly life transpired just as Allah Glorified is He willed. Thus, as we stated previously, the angels feel surprised whenever they see actual events in real life transpiring according to what has been written on the Preserved Tablet and say, ‘Glorified is our Lord.’

(1) `Abd Ar-Rahman ibn `Ali Ash-Shafei Ash-Shaybani stated in his book Tamyiz At-Tayyib Min Al-Khabith Fima Yaduru `Ala Alsinat An-Nas Min Al-Hadith (p. 17) concerning this Hadith: ‘This has been narrated by Al-`Askari in his proverbs about `Ali Allah be pleased with him excerpted from a longer Hadith. Our sheikh has said: “Its chain of narration is weak, but its meaning is sound.”’

In the verse we are discussing, Allah Glorified is He tells Prophet Muhammad peace and the blessings be upon him to consider the situation of someone who has taken his own desire as a god. He the Almighty here, asks Prophet Muhammad Allah's peace and blessings be upon him 'Have you come to know, whether you saw it with your own eyes or not?' It is just like the statement where Allah Glorified is He says: 'Have you not considered how your Lord dealt with the possessors of the elephant?' (al-Fil: 1). It is as if He the Almighty is saying, 'Did you not know?' We know that Prophet Muhammad Allah's peace and blessings be upon him was born in the same year in which the Episode of the Elephant took place, so he did not actually see it happen himself.

In addition, Allah Glorified is He says that He has sealed all the different means of perception in the human soul: the ear by which he hears the verses of Allah Glorified is He the eloquence of the Divine Speech, His Promises and Threats; the eyes by which he sees and ponders over the signs of the cosmos, thus uses them as evidence proving the presence of their Creator and Originator; and the heart, which is the seat of convictions and belief.

Allah Glorified is He would not have sealed these means if it were not for the fact that the one who possessed them wanted disbelief. Thereby, He the Almighty aided him in his disbelief by sealing the entryways so as to keep on his disbelief and prevent faith from penetrating his heart. How can someone who does not hear the Divine Speech or see the signs of the cosmos and whose heart does not incline towards the happiness of faith in Allah Glorified is He possibly believe?

Allah Glorified is He concludes the verse asking about he who can guide such a person after He the Almighty [has done this]. No one possesses the power to guide himself, as Allah Glorified is He states in another place: 'And whomsoever Allah causes to err, there is no guide for him' (Ghafir: 33).

Then Allah Glorified is He says:

وَقَالُواْ مَا هِيَ إِلَّا حَيَاتُنَا ٱلدُّنۡيَا نَمُوتُ وَنَحۡيَا وَمَا يُهۡلِكُنَآ إِلَّا
ٱلدَّهۡرُۚ وَمَا لَهُم بِذَٰلِكَ مِنۡ عِلۡمٍۖ إِنۡ هُمۡ إِلَّا يَظُنُّونَ ﴿٢٤﴾

They say, 'There is only our life in this world: we die, we live, nothing but time destroys us.' They have no knowledge of this; they only follow guesswork. Their only argument [24]
(The Quran, al-Jathiya: 24)

This clearly shows their denial of the Last Day despite the truth which inevitably appears upon their tongues through the unintentional slips they make. Their description of the life in which they live in such terms is a proof and an unwitting acknowledgement from them that there exists another life that is more noble and higher than this one. Similarly, they said in another verse: 'Do not spend upon those who are with the Messenger of Allah' (al-Munafiqun: 7). Thus, they acknowledge that he is Allah's Messenger peace and blessings be upon him even though they are hostile to him and disbelievers in his call to faith.

They state that they die and live. However, they mean to say that they themselves die and their progeny live on after their passing away. This is because they do not believe in any life after death. Thus, when they speak of life here, they mean the extension of their progeny through the ages after their own death.

Moreover, they state that nothing but time destroys them. In other words, time alone is what causes them to die. However, it is known that time is a mere frame of events that come to pass and it is created by Allah Glorified is He and does not cause death. Rather, the only one who causes death is Allah Glorified is He Who says in a Qudsi Hadith 'Do not curse time, for I myself am (the Creator) of time.'(1)

Allah Glorified is He then says that they have no knowledge of this; they only follow guesswork. Now someone might ask, 'why would Allah punish them as long as they have no knowledge of this?' The answer is that He would punish them because they refused to accept the knowledge that came from their Lord on the tongues of the Messengers. They only follow their guesswork regarding their statement about their death and life.

(1) Narrated by Al-Bayhaqi and Muslim

Then Allah Glorified is He states:

وَإِذَا تُتْلَىٰ عَلَيْهِمْ ءَايَٰتُنَا بَيِّنَٰتٍ مَّا كَانَ حُجَّتَهُمْ إِلَّآ أَن
قَالُوا۟ ٱئْتُوا۟ بِـَٔابَآئِنَآ إِن كُنتُمْ صَٰدِقِينَ ٢٥

When Our clear revelations are recited to them, is to say,
'Bring back our forefathers if what you say is true [25]
(The Quran, al-Jathiya: 25)

It was not merely one claim; rather, they have many such arguments which they have cited in order to evade belief in Allah and His Prophet and the Quran. Thus, when the verses of the Quran are recited to them, we see that they have many different arguments against them.

Allah Glorified is He states, 'And when Our communications are recited to them, they say: We have heard indeed; if we pleased we could say the like of it.' (al-Anfal: 31) He also states: 'And when Our clear communications are recited to them, those who hope not for Our meeting say: Bring a Quran other than this or change it,' (Yunus: 15). They are making two requests; the first is that they want to have a Quran other than that which Allah Glorified is He has sent down. They also wish to change the original positions of the verses. They have already requested the omission of verses that deride and mock their idols and statues as well as the verses that threaten them with an evil end.

Furthermore, just as they attempted to discredit and defame the Quran and wished for it to be changed, they attempted to discredit and defame Prophet Muhammad Allah's peace and blessings be upon him to whom this Quran was revealed. So they said: 'And when Our clear communications are recited to them, they say: This is naught but a man who desires to turn you away from that which your fathers worshipped. And they say: This is naught but a lie that is forged. And those who disbelieve say of the truth when it comes to them: This is only clear enchantment' (Saba': 43).

Even though they provoked so many arguments, their intention is not to believe, though they know that their arguments are flawed with no basis whatsoever. Now someone may ask, 'If Allah mentions their arguments in many verses of the Quran, why does He state in the verse of the chapter of al-Jathiya that their only argument is to say so and so? Why is there restriction of the compass of their arguments?’

If we contemplated all of the previous arguments made by them, we would see that they were merely an act of sophistry, with the aim of attaining no belief. But their main proof that was so deep-rooted in their minds was their denial of resurrection after death. Thus, Allah Glorified is He used the word only. In addition, He Glorified is He states, 'most surely these do say: There is naught but our first death and we shall not be raised again. So bring our fathers [back], if you are truthful' (ad-Dukhan: 34-36).

There were even some amongst them who take the ashes of those who had died and rub them until they became dust that would scatter in all directions. Allah Glorified is He says, 'and they say: What! When we shall have become bones and decayed particles, shall we then certainly be raised up, being a new creation?' (al-Isra’: 49)

They used to reject the idea of resurrection for they neglected to consider the beginning of existence and the beginning of the process of the creation of man. If we were to survey the number of people on this earth at any one time, we would find that it steadily increases as we go further into the future and it steadily decreases as we go back into the past. The further we go back, the less people there will be, until we reach the very first origin of mankind, namely Adam peace be upon him and Hawwa’ (Eve). How else did we come into existence? This is an unseen matter about which they must think deeply.

Indeed, the Quran has refuted their denial of resurrection and their statement concerning the matter saying: 'Say: Is there any one among your associates who can bring into existence the creation in the first instance, then reproduce it? Say: Allah brings the creation into existence, then He reproduces it; how are you then turned away?' (Yunus: 34) It is Allah Alone Who is capable of this. How is it that you invert all the truths and deny the reality of the affair wilfully?

Thus, those people found no argument to base their stubborn resistance and denial when the clear verses that are patently indicative of the truth of the Quran are recited to them. Instead they said, ‘bring forth our forefathers who have passed away, if you are telling the truth.’ Now this request indicates their moral bankruptcy and pig-headedness, for they have no logic behind what they say, nor any proof to use for their position and stubbornness.

Therefore, Allah Glorified is He responded by saying:

قُلِ ٱللَّهُ يُحۡيِيكُمۡ ثُمَّ يُمِيتُكُمۡ ثُمَّ يَجۡمَعُكُمۡ إِلَىٰ يَوۡمِ ٱلۡقِيَٰمَةِ
لَا رَيۡبَ فِيهِ وَلَٰكِنَّ أَكۡثَرَ ٱلنَّاسِ لَا يَعۡلَمُونَ ﴿٢٦﴾

[Prophet], say, ‘It is God who gives you life, then causes you to die, and then He gathers you all to the Day of Resurrection of which there is no doubt, though most people do not comprehend’ [26] (The Quran, al-Jathiya: 26)

Allah Glorified is He orders Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him to say that it is He the Almighty Who gives life then causes death, i.e. in this world, and then gathers you all to the Day of Resurrection of which there is no doubt. However, most people do not comprehend. Thus, Allah Glorified is He denied their possessing any knowledge of the matter.

Their limited knowledge is incapable of grasping the realities of these matters. Just as all of creation is a sign from Allah Glorified is He. Similarly, death is also one of the signs of Allah that we see and perceive every day. Since you believe in creation and death and you experience them and do not doubt their realities, you must believe that there shall be a life after this worldly life, for the possessor of these signs is One and the beliefs which you prove to be true must necessarily lead you to the truth as well.

Allah Glorified is He gives life and provides man with power and strength to fulfil the purpose for which he was created. The first instance of granting life was in the case of Adam peace be upon him when Allah Glorified is He created and fashioned him and breathed into him of His Spirit. By so doing, He the Almighty brought us into existence through this progeny of Adam peace be upon him. In another verse, He Glorified is He states: 'How do you deny Allah and you were dead and He gave you the life?' (al-Baqara: 28)

Thus, their disbelief has no basis or logic, for the matter of granting life and creating people from nothing does not withstand any argument. Where was Adam peace be upon him before Allah Glorified is He created him? And where were you? Allah Glorified is He says, 'There surely came over man a period of time when he was a thing not worth mentioning.' (al-Insan: 1) Thus, no one can dispute the matter of life and death, for Allah created us from nothing. No one at all has ever alleged that he created humankind, or that he created himself.

Speaking of death, no one doubts that he will die, for death is decreed upon all of mankind. Thus, death and the creation of man from nothing are a demonstrably proved reality that is perceived by our senses and by observation. For this reason, Allah, out of His Mercy, compares events that are of the unseen realm for us by means of something we observe. How is that? Here, He Glorified is He informs us of a stage of creation that we have not witnessed, but death, on the other hand, is something that all of has witnessed. As long as death is something observable, Allah Glorified is He brings it forth as a proof of other stages of creation that we have not witnessed, as death is the opposite of life.

Thereafter, Allah Glorified is He speaks of the act of gathering, which refers to the gathering of mankind after resurrection and their return to life after having been dead. It is the Day of Gathering as He the Almighty states: 'And thus have We revealed to you an Arabic Quran, that you may warn the mother city and those around it, and that you may give warning of the day of gathering together wherein is no doubt,' (ash-Shura: 7). That is to strike fear in them. Furthermore, the gathering will take place on this day in many ways. There will be the resurrection where the body and the spirit will be brought together; the heavenly host of angels will gather together with mankind; the oppressor will be joined with the one he has oppressed; and the leader will be joined with his followers. Allah Glorified is He says: 'Allah, there is no god but He, He will most certainly gather you together on the resurrection day, there is no doubt in it; and who is more true in word than Allah?' (an-Nisa': 87)

Then Allah Glorified is He states:

وَلِلَّهِ مُلْكُ ٱلسَّمَٰوَٰتِ وَٱلْأَرْضِ ۚ وَيَوْمَ تَقُومُ ٱلسَّاعَةُ يَوْمَئِذٍ يَخْسَرُ ٱلْمُبْطِلُونَ ﴿٢٧﴾

Control of everything in the heavens and the earth belongs to God. When the Hour comes, those who follow falsehood will be the losers on that Day [27] (The Quran, al-Jathiya: 27)

Here, the Arabic expression, by means of being preceded by a prepositional phrase, indicates restriction. Thus, the control and dominion of the Heavens and the Earth has been restricted in its attribution to Allah Alone, without any partner. The Day of Judgement will undoubtedly arise, as if it had been sleeping and then woken up. Furthermore, the Last Hour has been made obscure to us so that we may anticipate its coming at any moment.

Thus, the use of obscurity, as we have stated previously, is the very essence of clarification, for it keeps us in a state of constant preparation for the Last Day at any time. This is just as Allah Glorified is He has made obscure for man the time of his appointed end on earth, in order that he always call it to mind at every point in time and never be heedless or careless of it. He who does not have the ability to live for the duration of a blink of an eye must be mindful of the Hereafter and wary of the coming of his time of death, while he is in a state of disobedience to Allah Glorified is He.

For whoever dies while doing a thing shall be raised up doing it, since death does not necessarily abide by natural causes. Death comes about with no causes in advance. Someone dies because he was supposed to die at that time and his time has come. Indeed, someone might enter the operation room yet does not exit from it; that is to say, the treatment that was meant to save him becomes the reason that kills him. Thus, Allah Glorified is He obscures the time of our death with wisdom and a particular aim.

However, it is from His Mercy upon His creation that when Allah Glorified is He made the coming of the Last Hour obscure to us, He provided us with signs of its coming. This is so that those who are forgetful and heedless shall take notice and that mankind would not be taken by surprise suddenly. Out of His Mercy, He has provided us with both the minor signs and the greater signs of the Last Hour. Allah the Almighty says: 'None but He shall manifest it at its time; it will be momentous in the heavens and the earth; it will not come on you but of a sudden' (al-A'raf: 187).

Allah Glorified is He made it clear that when the Hour arises, those who stubbornly follow falsehood will be the losers. 'To lose' is the opposite of 'to gain' or 'to profit'. This is a matter that is known by businessmen, for every businessman wants profits and to increase his capital.

Therefore, every single action must be considered in terms of profit or loss. The disbeliever surmises that his work in this life will pay off profitably. However, he will be surprised on the Day of Judgement, when the time for doing actions will have ended. On that Day he will discover that his actions resulted ultimately in loss. In this regard, Allah the Almighty says: 'On the day that every soul shall find present what it has done of good and what it has done of evil, it shall wish that between it and that [evil] there were a long duration of time' (Al-'Imran: 30).

The meaning of loss here is to find out that all his actions have become like fine dust scattered about in the winds, completely useless and without any benefit; a fact which is recorded in the Quran. Allah Glorified is He says: 'And [as for] those who disbelieve, their deeds are like the mirage in a desert which the thirsty man deems to be water; until when he comes to it he finds it to be naught, and there he finds Allah, so He pays back to him his reckoning in full; and Allah is quick in reckoning,' (an-Nur: 39).

It is for this reason that when we were asked how it was possible that all those people who have come up with new inventions and innovations that serve humankind, make daily life easier for people and reduce their pain and discomfort could possibly enter hell, we answered, 'Indeed, this is so; for they carried out these actions for the service of mankind, yet there was nothing in their minds about service to Allah. For this reason, they received accolades and wages from mankind in honour of what they had accomplished and as a way of perpetuating their memories and exalting them. Thus, busts and statues were created of them and books were written about them and so forth.

Therefore, they shall have no portion of the reward of the Hereafter. Had they worked for the sake of Allah, they would have found their wages and reward with Allah Glorified is He for the employee does not ask for his wages except from the one for whom he is working. Therefore, the disbeliever will be taken by surprise by this reality as we understand from the statement of Allah Glorified is He: 'He finds Allah, so He pays back to him his reckoning in full,' (an-Nur: 39).

Allah states:

وَتَرَىٰ كُلَّ أُمَّةٖ جَاثِيَةٗۚ كُلُّ أُمَّةٖ تُدۡعَىٰٓ إِلَىٰ كِتَٰبِهَا ٱلۡيَوۡمَ تُجۡزَوۡنَ مَا كُنتُمۡ تَعۡمَلُونَ ﴿٢٨﴾

You will see every community kneeling. Every community will be summoned to its record: 'Today you will be repaid for what you did [28] (The Quran, al-Jathiya: 28)

Allah Glorified is He says that on the Day of Judgement, you will see every nation kneeling and crouching or perching on the tips of their toes. This is a frightening, submissive, and degrading position to assume. Related to this is Allah's statement: 'Then shall We certainly cause them to be present round hell on their knees' (Maryam: 68). Similar to this is the verb 'to fall' or 'lie prone.' In other words, to sit or perch in one's place, as Allah Glorified is He states: 'So they became motionless bodies in their abodes' (Hud: 94).

Therefore, it is a critical situation and a position indicating terror, fright and great fear and uneasiness, whereby people will not be able to sit and so they will be kneeling. When their fright increases, they will perch on the tips of their toes which is a position assumed by someone who is awaiting and expecting something grave and terrifying to take place. As for the natural way of sitting on the ground, one sits firmly seated upon the earth, a position that grants calm or tranquillity.

Now there is a difference between sitting down and sitting up, even if the final outcome is the same. The difference is that sitting down takes place after having been in a standing position, for we say, 'He was standing and then he sat down.' As for sitting up, this takes place after initially reclining or lying down on one's side, for we say, 'he was lying down and then he sat up.'

There is a fine philosophical point to be noted here, which is that sitting down takes place from a position that is initially higher such as standing. Sitting up takes place from a position that is lower such as lying down. Both sitting up and sitting down ensure that the human being enters a state of rest, whereby most of his body is on the ground. In this way he relaxes, as opposed to one standing, when his body is supported merely by his two feet.

As a result, if you were to stand for a long time, you would tire and you would start shifting from one foot to the other... If you were to begin walking on top of this, you would increase the load and discomfort on your feet. If you were to carry something while walking, you would again increase the load and discomfort you carry, and so forth.

So if a man in this situation begins to tire, the first thing he does to lighten the load and discomfort on his two feet is to put down whatever he was carrying. Then, if he becomes even more tired, he stops walking, in order to lessen the physical exertion he must endure. After that he sits down, and if he tires more, he reclines or lies down and sprawls on the ground with his entire body. This position ensures that he will get the maximum amount of rest his body requires.

However, this Quranic image of crouching or lying facedown on the ground does not indicate a state of rest. Rather, it indicates subjugation, debasement, brokenness and a severe amount of fear that will make the disbeliever in the Hereafter, may Allah save us, lie facedown on the ground, or kneel down on his two knees out of great fear. Thus, Allah Glorified is He portrays for us a situation that is graphic to make you feel the great horror of the situation and the severity of the distress and agony it will bring. You are free to imagine the situation. Imagine that you are really undergoing this terrifying experience, one in which everyone is anxiously occupied with the state of his own soul.

Thus, when it is said that the Judgement Day will take place, it means that it will not be something passive. Mankind will be crouching; everyone, be he a believer or disbeliever, all will be kneeling in fear and awaiting what will happen. No one will escape the law. All will be overwhelmed with fright and anxiety and everyone will be awaiting the Judgement of Allah.

Allah Glorified is He says that every community will be summoned to its record. Thus, He attributed the record to the nation. For this reason, the disbelievers raised an objection about this verse, for Allah Glorified is He states in another verse: 'This is Our record that speaks against you with justice; surely We wrote what you did' (al-Jathiya: 29). Thus, they allege, ‘One time, Allah attributes 'the record' to the nation, while the other time He attributes it to Himself.’ Had they truly understood what Allah Glorified is He had meant by that, they would not have found any reason to raise such an objection.

The meaning of 'Our Record' here is 'the one We asked the angels to write down that it may serve as a witness and a proof against its owner on the Day of Judgement. Thus, Allah Glorified is He shall say to him: 'Read your book; your own self is sufficient as a reckoner against you this day,' (al-Isra’: 14). It is also their record in the sense that it is the one which records all the actions of the person. Thus, for every word there is its proper meaning and indication. Here, we should consider that one word in the Quran may give various meanings when used in different positions.

For it to be understood properly, the Quran requires contemplation, reflection, and knowledge of the causes of and general circumstances surrounding the revelation of the various verses. Read, for instance, the statement of Allah: 'And do not give away your property which Allah has made for you a [means of] support to the weak of understanding,' (an-Nisa’: 5). The weakness of understanding refers to the one who is incapable of managing his finances with any responsibility and is foolhardy in his expenditure. For this reason, the Lawgiver does not grant him the right to assume control over his wealth, but rather, it is given over to the responsibility and possession of his guardian. Thus, Allah Glorified is He attributed their property to their guardian although it is theirs. This is because the matter must be considered in its entirety, as indicated by the fact that the Muslims are equal in respect of blood and the granting of immunity or protection of the least of them to a non-Muslim.

Therefore, we take the money of foolhardy person and preserve it for him until we discern some indications of good sense and maturity in him, in which case we give him back his wealth so that he may manage it himself. It is for this reason that Allah Glorified is He states: ' Then if you find in them maturity of intellect, make over to them their property' (an-Nisa’: 6). Note that He attributed the property to them because it has now become their own property and they now have the freedom to manage it by themselves.

Allah Glorified is He says: 'Today you will be repaid for what you did' (al-Jathiya: 28). The word ‘today’ refers to the Day of Judgement. The recompense accorded on this day will be fulfilled according to the kind of actions performed in this worldly life.

Then Allah Glorified is He states:

هَٰذَا كِتَٰبُنَا يَنطِقُ عَلَيۡكُم بِٱلۡحَقِّۚ إِنَّا كُنَّا نَسۡتَنسِخُ مَا كُنتُمۡ تَعۡمَلُونَ ﴿٢٩﴾

Here is Our record that tells the truth about you:
We have been recording everything you do [29]
(The Quran, al-Jathiya: 29)

The word ‘record’ here refers to the book of deeds. It is well known that the sense of speech is utilised, and gives expression by use of the tongue, for it is the primary means of expression. The record will be read and will not articulate or utter anything on its own. However, this record will be like someone who articulates and bears witness against its owner. This is because of the severity of the reality of one's worldly actions that is contained within it.

Allah Glorified is He says: 'We have been recording everything you do,’ (al-Jathiya: 29) meaning that He has been establishing and confirming or taking from the original record a separate copy to give to the owner. This copy of the original book is made so that the owner may read it and peruse the actions which preceded him in his worldly life. This is just as we say, 'an original record and its copy. Allah Glorified is He shall give him a copy of his original book containing all his deeds so that it may serve as a witness against him.

In addition, amongst the various meanings of the term ‘recording’ is the notion of the confirmation of something such that nothing whatsoever is overlooked and for which no large or small deed is left unaccounted. This meaning is crystal clear in the saying of Allah the Almighty: 'On the day that every soul shall find present what it has done of good and what it has done of evil, it shall wish that between it and that [evil] there were a long duration of time' (Al-‘Imran: 30). He the Almighty also says: 'He utters not a word, but there is by him a watcher at hand,' (Qaf: 18).

Allah Glorified is He subsequently states:

فَأَمَّا ٱلَّذِينَ ءَامَنُوا۟ وَعَمِلُوا۟ ٱلصَّٰلِحَٰتِ فَيُدْخِلُهُمْ رَبُّهُمْ
فِى رَحْمَتِهِۦ ۚ ذَٰلِكَ هُوَ ٱلْفَوْزُ ٱلْمُبِينُ ﴿٣٠﴾

Those who believed and did good deeds will be admitted by their Lord into His mercy – that is the clearest triumph [30]
(The Quran, al-Jathiya: 30)

We are still talking about the record of deeds that mankind will read in the Hereafter. This verse speaks of the first category of people which are the believers who did righteous deeds. Such people will take hold of their records with their right hand and will find their contents to be in the best of conditions and so they will rejoice and become proud.

These verses have been clarified by Allah Glorified is He elsewhere: 'Then as for him who is given his book in his right hand, he will say: Lo! Read my book: Surely I knew that I shall meet my account. So he shall be in a life of pleasure, In a lofty garden, The fruits of which are near at hand: Eat and drink pleasantly for what you did beforehand in the days gone by' (al-Haqqa: 19-24).

If we contemplate the verse in question, we will find that Allah says that He admitted them into His Mercy. Thus, it is as if His Grace and Mercy were a huge vessel in which they are admitted and by which they are encompassed. His Mercy will encompass them and surround them from every direction as if they have nothing except His Mercy. That is because they were unhappy and bore so much trouble in this worldly life. They carried the burdens of worship and righteous actions and were constantly tossed between bliss and suffering, profit and loss, and good health and sickness. However, as for the Hereafter, they will find nothing, but the Mercy of Allah which will encompass and surround them.

Allah Glorified is He combines belief and good deeds together so as to refer to the fact that faith in the heart alone is not enough. There must be its fruit, which is crystal clear in acting upon the Divine Way of Guidance. For this reason, the Quran always makes a link between faith and righteous deeds. Allah Glorified is He says: 'I swear by the time, Most surely man is in loss, Except those who believe and do good,' (al-'Asr: 1-3). This is because faith in Allah Glorified is He and the Resurrection, the Final Accounting and Fate and Destiny places man in a state of certainty that he will be taken to account for all the deeds he does in the worldly life.

So if you are going to be questioned and taken to account, you must naturally be alert not to commit any sin, however small it may be, nor forsake any good, however easy or light it may be. For whoever faces accounting as his final end would be best not to let these matters slip by him except out of oversight or forgetfulness.

We have stated previously that because of the Mercy of Allah Glorified is He towards His creation, He prescribed repentance for them. The mere fact that repentance is something legitimate and possible and that its doors are open for all people is itself a great mercy, for both the negligent sinner and the society which is made to suffer misery by the deeds of such sinners.

The pronoun ‘that’ at the end of the verse is an indication of the entrance of the people of faith and those of righteous action into Allah’s Mercy that is the triumph that is patently clear, encompassing the righteous through consummate good and benefit, such that nothing that is inconsistent with the Truth will seep into this Infinite Divine Mercy. Conversely, there is then the opposite case to consider.

Allah Glorified is He then says:

But those who disbelieved [will be asked]: ‘When My revelations were recited to you, were you not arrogant and persistent in wicked deeds? [31] (The Quran, al-Jathiya: 31)

These people of disbelief are in opposition to those who believed, thus they will take their record of deeds with their left hands. Allah Glorified is He says: 'And as for him who is given his book in his left hand he shall say: O would that my book had never been given me: And I had not known what my account was: O would that it had made an end [of me]' (al-Haqqa: 25-27).

Therefore, their recompense will be hell, but before they enter it, they must be admonished, blamed, and chastised. It must be clarified to them that they have no excuse for their lack of faith. Clear verses and Messengers came down to them, Thus, Allah Glorified is He did not take anything away from what was due to them and did not leave them to their own devices, nor did He take them unawares with this punishment. How many times did He the Almighty call them to faith and show compassion towards them?

We may note that these people have compounded their arrogance against the Truth with committing crimes. As for arrogance, it is to reject the Truth and refuse to accept it from the ones who bear it. Would that they had stopped at this level of wrong action and left people to themselves! But they transgressed to the point of being culpable of committing criminal sins by deriding and jeering at those who believed and had faith.

This issue has been explained in the verse wherein Allah Glorified is He says: 'Surely they who are guilty used to laugh at those who believe. And when they passed by them, they winked at one another' (al-Mutaffifin: 29-30). The reference here is to their mockery and derision at the believers. Further, Allah says: 'And when they returned to their own followers they returned exulting' (al-Mutaffifin: 31). This demonstrates that such people and their cadre are equally guilty of committing criminal sins, and that they were all equally immersed in corruption.

People like these are found at every time and place. We see them make fun of the one who prays or who emulates Prophet Muhammad Allah's peace and blessings be upon him. We hear many scornful, mocking words from them, even though they read this very same verse with us. However, Allah Glorified is He reassures the people of faith and says to them: 'Do not bother yourself with these people who cause so much harm to you in this world and wait for what happens in the Hereafter.' Allah Glorified is He says: 'So today those who believe shall laugh at the unbelievers; On thrones, they will look. Surely the disbelievers are rewarded as they did' (al-Mutaffifin: 34-36).

Next, Allah Glorified is He says:

وَإِذَا قِيلَ إِنَّ وَعْدَ ٱللَّهِ حَقٌّ وَٱلسَّاعَةُ لَا رَيْبَ فِيهَا قُلْتُم مَّا نَدْرِى مَا
ٱلسَّاعَةُ إِن نَّظُنُّ إِلَّا ظَنًّا وَمَا نَحْنُ بِمُسْتَيْقِنِينَ ﴿٣٢﴾

When it was said to you, "God's promise is true: there is no doubt about the Hour," did you not reply, "We know nothing of the Hour. This is only conjecture in our opinion. We are not convinced"?' [32] (The Quran, al-Jathiya: 32)

Here, Allah Glorified is He speaks of another type of people who deny the Resurrection, for the first group are certain and have solid belief in their conviction that there will be no Resurrection, nor any accounting of their actions. The second type, however, have not reached a state of certainty concerning the matter; rather, they merely surmise that the Resurrection may be true. 'To surmise' is 'to guess' something and give preponderance to a belief over another.

We have already clarified previously that there are five states of varying degrees of certainty concerning a matter: true knowledge, ignorance, doubt, surmise, and whim. To surmise is to give preponderance to something you think to be true. Whim is to give preponderance to something other than what is true.

Further, there is something that you believe in and which you are certain; yet there might be something about which you are not entirely sure. Now what you are sure of and use as a basis for other beliefs is 'sure knowledge.' As for what you cannot use as a basis for proof, it is not 'sure knowledge'; rather, it is blind following or imitation, just as when the child says: 'He, Allah, is one.' What the child says is true, but he cannot prove anything, nor can anything else be claimed based on such a statement. Conversely, anyone who says something that he is certain of, but which he does not accord with what is truly real is clearly demonstrating ignorance.

As for the matter of knowledge, it is something that you are certain about and is in accordance with reality. That is, it is proved and it opposes ignorance, which occurs when one believes something with certainty but has no proof of it.

Doubt, on the other hand, is when affirmation and negation of a belief are equally possible in the mind, such that you are unable to be absolutely sure of either one. Thus, to surmise is to give precedence to an option, whereas doubt is when both the affirmation of a belief and its negation are equally possible.

Next, Allah Glorified is He states:

وَبَدَا لَهُمْ سَيِّـَٔاتُ مَا عَمِلُوا۟ وَحَاقَ بِهِم مَّا كَانُوا۟ بِهِۦ يَسْتَهْزِءُونَ ﴿٣٣﴾

The evil of their actions will [then] become clear to them.
The punishment they mocked will engulf them [33]
(The Quran, al-Jathiya: 33)

Allah Glorified is He tells them that the evil deeds that they have committed in this world will became apparent to them. In addition, they have been encompassed by these deeds and thereby will not find any escape, nor any place of refuge.

Next, Allah Glorified is He states:

وَقِيلَ ٱلْيَوْمَ نَنسَىٰكُمْ كَمَا نَسِيتُمْ لِقَآءَ يَوْمِكُمْ هَـٰذَا وَمَأْوَىٰكُمُ ٱلنَّارُ وَمَا لَكُم مِّن نَّـٰصِرِينَ ﴿٣٤﴾

It will be said, ‘Today We shall ignore you just as you ignored your appointment with this Day. The Fire will be your home and no one will help you [34]
(The Quran, al-Jathiya: 34)

The gentle kindness and Mercy of Allah Glorified is He even towards His enemies is crystal clear in this verse in question. Allah Glorified is He puts the verb ‘say’ in the passive voice and did not say that He will announce it to them, for it is out of His Mercy not to confront them with this reality directly. The word ‘today’ refers to the Day of Judgement when Allah Glorified is He shall ignore them.

Allah Glorified is He never forgets anything and is never oblivious of anything. Thus, the meaning here is that He the Almighty will abandon and neglect them to their punishment. Allah Glorified is He will not look at them with any mercy, just as they neglected and left consideration of this great affair during their worldly life. It never crossed their minds to think about it seriously, for had they done so, perhaps they would have been taken by the Mercy of Allah for their consideration of the matter.

Then Allah Glorified is He makes clear the cause of this abandonment, saying, 'As you ignored your appointment with this Day,' (al-Jathiya: 34) meaning that He will abandon them just as they abandoned taking any serious consideration of this day and abandoned working and preparing for it. Thus, Hell shall be their abode. The term ‘abode’ refers to a place that a person retires to rest and relieve himself of his tiredness, or a place in which he feels safe from fear. So, what will the situation be, if these people have hell as their abode, final resting place and their end? What will their condition be like?

Moreover, they shall have none to aid them. This is a complete cutting off hope for any deliverance and making them deprived of any support. For in this abode, they will not find anyone to liberate them or feel any compassion for them, or anyone to lighten their punishment; rather, the opposite will take place. Everyone else will wash their hands of them and abandon them to their punishment and some will even precede them into it, as Allah Glorified is He states about Pharaoh: 'He shall lead his people on the resurrection day, and bring them down to the fire' (Hud: 98).

Next, Allah Glorified is He states:

ذَٰلِكُم بِأَنَّكُمُ ٱتَّخَذْتُمْ ءَايَٰتِ ٱللَّهِ هُزُوًا وَغَرَّتْكُمُ ٱلْحَيَوٰةُ ٱلدُّنْيَا ۚ
فَٱلْيَوْمَ لَا يُخْرَجُونَ مِنْهَا وَلَا هُمْ يُسْتَعْتَبُونَ ٣٥

Because you received God’s revelations with ridicule and were deceived by worldly life.’ They will not be brought out of the Fire on that Day, nor will they be given the chance to make amends [35] (The Quran, al-Jathiya: 35)

Allah Glorified is He is referring to the fact that the punishment which descended upon them and enclosed them is due to the evil deeds which were done in the worldly life and so this is just and equitable recompense. They will be treated justly and Allah Glorified is He will not oppress them, not even an atom's weight. Further, they treated the revelations of Allah Glorified is He mockingly and derisively. They denied and rejected them and scoffed at them as well.

Now in the verse, there is the expression of mockery used in a hyperbolic form. This means that they went to furthest extents of mockery and derision, just as we say that ‘So-and-so is just and so-and-so is justice,’ meaning he is justice itself.

Moreover, they were deceived by worldly life. It deceived them with its vanities, apparent splendour, and beauty and with its cheap finery. Thereby they worked in order to obtain what it had to offer and forgot to work for the Hereafter. Therefore, they will not escape from hell, nor will they be allowed to make amends.

The Arabic verb for make amends derives from the verb 'to blame' and this action is something that does not take place except between those who have love for each other. For this reason, some people have stated, 'Love remains as long as people blame each other for their faults.' When you wrong your friend, he comes to you and blames you for what you did and he does this because he wishes to hear an apology or excuse from you so that his love for you may continue. He does this because he does not wish to break off relations with you.

Thus, it is said, ‘So-and-so a person sought to be allowed to make amends, so the other freed him of blame or reproach.’ In other words, he forgave him. A famous poet has said:

As for reproach, it is convenient between those who bear love
For love rectifies by reproach and is so confirmed

For this reason, when Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him returned from At-Ta'if after its people made him suffer grievous harm, he sat down and beseeched his Lord saying, 'So long as You are not angry with me, I care not.' However, he then remembered to say, Your Favour is all that counts for me. I seek refuge in the light of Your countenance, by which all darkness is illuminated. And the things of this world and the next are rightly ordered that your anger does not fall on me, nor your displeasure descends on me. To you are all supplications until You are pleased.' In other words, O Lord, I have for you what would rid me of reproach. Thus, it is to receive an acknowledgement of being wrong from someone and you appease him.

Thus, Allah Glorified is He says those people will not be asked or allowed to appease. No compromise will be accepted and no excuses that they furnish will avail them, nor will any intercession be granted to them. If they wished to seek Allah's contentment by any means at all, their requests will be refused and will not be accepted. Their repentance will not be accepted, for it will be of no benefit on this Day.

Next, Allah Glorified is He states:

فَلِلَّهِ ٱلْحَمْدُ رَبِّ ٱلسَّمَٰوَٰتِ وَرَبِّ ٱلْأَرْضِ رَبِّ ٱلْعَٰلَمِينَ ﴿٣٦﴾

So praise be to God, Lord of the heavens and earth,
Lord of the worlds [36] (The Quran, al-Jathiya: 36)

First, the term ‘Praise be to Allah’ is a clause consisting of a nominal subject and a fronted predicate to indicate the confinement of praise to Allah alone. For praising Allah Glorified is He is obligatory before everything else because He Created and provided from nothing as well as guided mankind through clear signs and verse to the path of truth.

Praising Allah Glorified is He is obligatory upon everyone for His attribute of being All Sustaining and for the way to which He has guided us and for the abode of recompense with which He rewards the believer and punishes the disbeliever. Praise is obligatory to Allah for having brought us to life with a spirit from Him which has given life to our material bodies in this life and by which will give life to our values and ideals in the Hereafter. It is for this reason that Allah Glorified is He addresses us while we are alive in this world and says: 'O you who believe! Answer [the call of] Allah and His Messenger when he calls you to that which gives you the life' (al-Anfal: 24). Thus, the meaning of life here is the life lived according to values and ideals that grant you Everlasting life in the Hereafter. Further, Allah says: 'And as for the next abode, that most surely is the life-- did they but know?' (al-’Ankabut: 64) This means that it is the true life that merits striving for on our part.

Among His blessings that merit praise is that He taught us how to praise Him by this expression that is so light on the tongue and which both the scholar and the illiterate are equally capable of articulating. Everyone says, 'All Praise be to Allah.' Everyone praises and glorifies Allah with one expression and if it were not for this equivalence in the ability to utter this expression, the educated, the eloquent and those who have mastered pure Arabic expression would have become successful and the illiterate who are not fluent and the person who stammers and cannot express himself clearly would have lost out. Thus, Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him has called our attention to this matter, when he stated concerning the praise of Allah, 'Glory be to You, We cannot enumerate your blessings and praises. You are as You praise Yourself.'

Thus, the meaning of the clause is that Allah Glorified is He is always and forever worthy of all praise. This praise is never interrupted or cut off, nor does it ever reach an end, neither from the one who praises, nor on the part of The One praised. Thereafter, Allah Glorified is He concludes the verse with the reasons behind thanking Allah as saying: 'Lord of the heavens and earth, Lord of the worlds,' (al-Jathiya: 36). The Lord is The One Who raises and brings up and The Master and The Giver of all that we have, thus how is it conceivable that He not be worshipped?

Next, Allah Glorified is He states:

وَلَهُ ٱلْكِبْرِيَآءُ فِى ٱلسَّمَٰوَٰتِ وَٱلْأَرْضِ ۖ وَهُوَ ٱلْعَزِيزُ ٱلْحَكِيمُ ﴿٣٧﴾

True greatness in the heavens and the earth is rightfully His: He is the Mighty, the Wise [37]
(The Quran, al-Jathiya: 37)

This is another factor that necessitates praising alone and that is that He is described by the attribute of greatness which is grandeur, majesty, and force. Once again, the manner in which this is expressed is by means an expression indicating restriction or confinement.

In other words, this is for Him alone and this is from amongst the greatest favours that Allah Glorified is He has bestowed upon us that we not be slaves to anything other than Him. For Allah did not make you his servant and slave but to spare you from worshipping other than Him. If haughtiness and pride were not for Allah Glorified is He, we would have been slaves of anyone who had any kind of power. Anyone of whom we had any need, be it even the ironworker and carpenter that relieves you of a need that you have could thus exploit and enslave you to some extent.

Therefore, it is as if Allah Glorified is He were saying to you, 'Set yourself at rest, O My slave, for you will not be a slave of other than Me, for grandeur, majesty, pride and haughtiness are for Me alone and I am the Lord of all of you and all of creation are My dependents and the most beloved of them to Me are those that are the most gracious to My dependents.

Do we not say in the popular saying, 'If you do not have a big boss to help you, you better get hold of one.' This is similar to the relationship that Allah Glorified is He has with those who believe in Him. He will be on the side of those who worship Him Alone and will facilitate their affairs and take care of their needs: those who ask Him for assistance so that He gives it to them and those who seek refuge in Him so that He defends them and supports them. Therefore, this attribute of Allah Glorified is He should be counted as one of His greatest blessings upon His servants.

Allah Glorified is He confirms this restriction of this attribute through a Qudsi Hadith when He states: 'Pride is My Cloak and Grandeur is My lower garment. Whoever contends with Me in either of them I will hurl into Hell.'(1)

Why is this so? Because such a contender did not create this creation, nor can he be entrusted with its maintenance and management. Thus, man does not show arrogance to any of creation unless his ego has been veiled from minding the pride and haughtiness of Allah. For only the one is always conscious of Allah's pride and haughtiness in his heart will be ashamed to show any arrogance or contend with His lord in anything relating to this attribute.

The Arabic word Kibriya' (glory) is derived from the root kabar, with a fatha over the letter 'ba' to indicate magnification, and an increase of the root meaning. It also gives the meaning of the word 'azhama (greatness) when written with a damma vowel over the letter 'ba' (kabur). Concerning the meaning of the word kabur, Allah the Almighty says: 'It is a monstrous assertion (kaburat) that comes out of their mouths: what they say is nothing but lies' (al-Kahf: 5). This is concerning the matter of the slander against 'Aisha Allah be pleased with her. He the Almighty has informed us that the All-Great is one of His Most Beautiful Names. He did not say 'The Greater,' even though the latter term confers a special distinction that does not appear in the former. Nevertheless, He has made it an attribute of His in prayer, and so we say: 'Allah is the Greatest.' We say this because it means that prayer takes you out of something that is great to something that is greater. It is as if He the Almighty wishes to say to us, 'The actions and activities of this worldly life are important and great, but Allah is Greater than any other thing.' We can see the importance of worldly activity and engaging in it in the chapter of al-Jumu'a which states that He takes you out of your work to perform the prayer; yet after the prayer has ended, He commanded you to return to your regular activities and work. Allah the Almighty says: 'O you who believe! When the call is made for prayer on Friday, then hasten to the Remembrance of Allah and leave off trading,' (al-Jumu'a: 9).

(1) Narrated by Abu Dawud, Ibn Majah and Ahmad

So Allah the Almighty took us from the very pinnacle of work which is engagement in trade in order to give us a dose of faith that will assist us in continuing along our life paths. With prayers having been completed, Allah the Almighty then says: 'Then disperse abroad in the land and seek of Allah's Grace, and remember Allah much, that you may be successful' (al-Jumu'a: 10). Therefore, we do not look down on worldly activities, for it is something great according to Allah the Almighty and by it life is sustained and continued. However, if the worldly activity is to be compared with the establishment of prayers, then prayers are greater and more important. Now if we return to the matter of the terms used here, we find that Allah the Almighty has chosen for Himself the Most Beautiful Name 'The Great,' and not 'The Greater,' for whatever is greater has something below it that is great as well. As for 'The Great', whatever is below it is small or insignificant, and everything other than Allah the Almighty is small or insignificant, this point is crystal clear in Allah's saying: 'He is the Almighty, the Wise,' (al-Jathiya: 37) meaning that He is the Vanquisher that is never defeated; as for the word 'Wise', it means that He is the One Who puts everything in its proper place. Thus, the attribute of pride or haughtiness, for Allah the Almighty does not simply mean forcible compulsion, might and the subjecting of others to trials without any control or restraint. Rather, He is also All-Wise, and disposes of affairs in accordance with His Absolute Wisdom. The one who contemplates the chapter of al-Jathiya will find that it begins with the statement of Allah the Almighty: 'Ha Mim [1] This Scripture is sent down from Allah the Almighty the Wise [2]' (al-Jathiya: 1-2). It ends also with His saying: 'He is the Almighty, the Wise' (al-Jathiya: 37). It is as if the chapter were parenthesised by the nobility that belongs to Allah the Almighty and the Absolute Wisdom that belongs to Allah the Exalted Alone. What is amazing in this context is that the chapter of al-Ahqaf comes directly afterwards, and it, too, begins with the saying of Allah: 'Ha Mim [1] This Scripture is sent down from Allah the Almighty the Wise, [2]' (al-Ahqaf: 1-2). It is as if Allah the Almighty was confirming these Attributes and establishing the awareness of them firmly in the hearts of the believers to make them feel greater at peace with Him and greater at peace with His Way of Guidance. It is also as if He the Almighty were saying to them: 'Set yourself at rest, for I am the One Who graced you with favours from pre-eternity, by bringing you into existence from nothing, by giving life to your material bodies with a spirit from Me, and then supplying you with the necessities and maintenance of life, by guiding you to Me through ayat (verses) that revive your hearts and give you everlasting life on the Day of Judgement.' Thus, just as He the Almighty has guaranteed your past, He will guarantee your future. For His Blessings will not be wrested away, and His Granting of gifts will never be exhausted. This is because Pride is for Him Glorified is He Alone in the Heavens and the Earth; thus no might or power can destroy these blessings or hold them back from you when they are granted to you by Him Glorified is He. When Allah the Almighty mentions both His Attributes of Might and Wisdom, it is only so that He may say to us: 'Be careful if you are stricken with incidents that oppose this manifestation of might and nobility in the task of calling people to faith, and know that they did not take place except for some special wisdom.' Someone, for example, may say: 'If Allah is Mighty and is not vanquished, why did He leave Prophet Muhammad Allah's peace and blessings be upon him to the people of Ta'if such that they caused him much pain, insulted him and pelted him with stones until his noble feet were stained with blood?' I reply: 'Search deeply for the wisdom of this event; for part of the wisdom intended by Allah the Almighty when evil gains the upper hand is that the people of good are tested, and the leadership of Islam is purified in a manner that no one else can uphold and bear witness to except those who are powerfully and firmly established in sound belief and the Truth; those who do not abandon it or even give it up. It is upon their shoulders that the religion will be borne and the call to faith will be spread. There must be some process of testing, purification and distinguishing of the Muslims from the hypocrites. Remember the story of Al-Hudaybiya when the disbelievers repulsed Prophet Muhammad Allah's peace and blessings be upon him and the believers who had come to visit the Scared House. The disbelievers prevented them from entering Mecca, even though the believers were so close. Prophet Muhammad Allah's peace and blessings be upon him agreed to return without entering Mecca and without performing the Lesser Pilgrimage ('Umra), and contracted the Treaty of Al-Hudaybiya with the disbelievers. For this reason, the Muslims got angry and almost contradicted his command to return to Medina. At this point 'Umar ibn Al-Khattab may Allah be pleased with him began arguing with him Allah's peace and blessings be upon him saying to him, 'O Messenger of Allah! Are we not upon the Truth?' 'Yes,' replied Prophet Muhammad Allah's peace and blessings be upon him. 'Umar then said to him, 'Are they not upon falsehood?' 'Yes,' Prophet Muhammad Allah's peace and blessings be upon him replied. 'Then why are we yielding in such a lowly manner against the honour of our religion?' Thereupon Abu Bakr As-Siddiq may Allah be pleased with him replied, 'Hold on to your stirrup, O 'Umar, for verily, he is the Messenger of Allah.'(1) In other words, he meant to say 'Keep to the proper bounds, and know your station with respect to the Messenger of Allah' This happened because the Muslims were craving to visit the Sacred House of Allah the Almighty and underwent the great trouble of travelling to it. They were only 20 kilometres from Mecca, had taken their sacrificial offerings along with them and had made preparations for performing the Lesser Pilgrimage ('Umra). Therefore, it was disheartening for them to be prevented from completing it, and for that reason, they were disgruntled and upset at the decision to return.

The matter got to the point that our Prophet Muhammad Allah's peace and blessings be upon him said to his wife, Umm Salama may Allah be pleased with her(2), 'The people are ruined Umm Salama.' She asked, 'And why so?' whereupon he Allah's peace and blessings be upon him said, 'I commanded them, and they did not obey me.' She said, 'O Messenger of Allah, forgive them, for they came with a strong desire to visit the House of Allah. But go forth, O Messenger of Allah, and do what Allah has commanded you to carry out, for if they see you, they will know that the matter is serious, and they will do the same.' Prophet Muhammad Allah's peace and blessings be upon him felt uplifted upon hearing this, and so he went out and did as she had suggested.(1) When his people saw him, they calmed down and accepted his decision and followed him. Thereafter, they returned to Medina without performing the Lesser Pilgrimage ('Umra). Before they reached Medina, Prophet Muhammad Allah's peace and blessings be upon him had received a revelation clarifying to them the wisdom of that which had been hidden from them. This revelation was also meant to teach them a lesson about might and nobility, and its connection with wisdom. Allah the Almighty says: 'They were the ones who disbelieved, who barred you from the Sacred Mosque, and who prevented the offering from reaching its place of sacrifice. If there had not been among them, unknown to you, believing men and women whom you would have trampled underfoot, inadvertently incurring guilt on their account– Allah brings whoever He will into His mercy– if the [believers] had been clearly separated, We would have inflicted a painful punishment on the disbelievers,' (al-Fath: 25). Therefore, there was wisdom in their being prevented from entering Mecca that year, for there were some of their brethren in faith in the city who had kept their belief secret and had not let the other disbelievers know about their faith. Had they entered into battle with the disbelievers, they would have been forced to encounter the Muslims face-to-face, and would have killed their own brothers in faith, and they would have been stricken with shame and ignominy for their actions, either through sin or through rough abuse.

She was born in the year 28 before Hijra. In other words, she was 32 years old when she married Prophet Muhammad. She passed away in the year 62 A.H. at the age of 90, and was from among the most perfect women in intelligence and character. See Az-Zirikli, Al-'Alam, 8/97.*

She replied, "O Messenger of Allah, their hearts have been shaken with what you can see, so say no word to any man and go to wherever your offer of sacrifice may be, and perform the sacrifice and shave your head, and if you do that, the people will follow you." So he Allah's peace and blessings be upon him went out without speaking to anyone until he carried out the sacrifice and slaughtered his offering, and then sat down and shaved his head, at which point the people started sacrificing their offerings and shaving their heads.'*

al-Ahqaf

In the Name of God, the Most Merciful, the Dispenser of Mercy

The chapter al-Ahqaf(1):

حمٓ ﴿١﴾ تَنزِيلُ ٱلۡكِتَٰبِ مِنَ ٱللَّهِ ٱلۡعَزِيزِ ٱلۡحَكِيمِ ﴿٢﴾

Ha Mim* [1] This Scripture is sent down from God, the Almighty,* the Wise [2] (The Quran, al-Ahqaf: 1-2)

This is one of the seven hawamim chapters which begin with Allah's saying: 'Ha Mim'. They are seven consecutive chapters in the Noble Quran; the first of them is Ghafir which starts with the saying of Allah the Almighty: 'Ha Mim [1] The revelation of the Book is from Allah, the Mighty, the Knowing, [2]' (Ghafir: 1-2), that is, He Who is All Knowing of that which benefits you and nothing from you is hidden from Him. The second is the chapter of Fussilat; Allah the Almighty starts it with His saying: 'Ha Mim [1] A revelation from the Beneficent, the Merciful Allah, [2]' (Fussilat: 1-2), then comes the chapter of ash-Shura which begins with the saying of Allah the Almighty: 'Ha Mim [1] Ain Sin Qaf [2] Thus does Allah, the Mighty, the Wise, reveal to you, and (thus He revealed) to those before you, [3]' (ash-Shura: 1-3);

---

(1) The chapter of al-Ahqaf is a Meccan one, that is, it was revealed before Hijra of Prophet Muhammad; it consists of 35 verses. It is related by Al-ʿAwfi and Ibn Abu Talha from Ibn ʿAbbas that it is Meccan, and this is also the opinion of Al-Hasan, Mujahid, ʿ Jahid, Qatada and the majority of scholars. It is related from Ibn ʿAbbas and Qatada that they said: 'It contains one Medinan verse, that is, it was revealed after Hijra of Prophet Muhammad, which is Allah's saying: 'Say, 'Have you thought: what if this Quran really is from Allah…' (al-Ahqaf: 10). See Ibn Al-Jawzi, Zad Al-Masir.

then comes the chapter az-Zukhruf; Allah the Almighty opens it with His saying: 'Ha Mim [1] I swear by the Book that makes things clear, [2]' (az-Zukhruf: 1-2); then comes the chapter of ad-Dukhan which begins with the saying of Allah the Almighty: 'Ha Mim [1] I swear by the Book that makes manifest (the truth), [2]' (ad-Dukhan: 1-2); then follows al-Jathiya which starts with the saying of Allah the Almighty: 'Ha Mim [1] This Scripture is sent down from Allah the Almighty the Wise, [2]' (al-Jathiya: 1-2), and finally comes the chapter of al-Ahqaf, which starts with the saying of Allah the Almighty: 'Ha Mim [1] This Scripture is sent down from Allah the Almighty the Wise, [2]' (al-Ahqaf: 1-2). We notice that these chapters all begin in the same way, affirming that 'ha mim' and the other discrete letters are sent down by Allah the Almighty and they are a revelation that only He the Almighty knows. They are also part of the Bestowal from on high like the rest of the Noble Quran and the rest of the clear verses. Therefore, Allah the Almighty once says: 'Ha Mim [1] A revelation from the Beneficent, the Merciful Allah, [2]' (Fussilat: 1-2) meaning that they themselves are bestowed from on high. In another verse, Allah the Almighty says: 'Ha Mim [1] I swear by the Book that makes things clear [2]' (az-Zukhruf: 1-2) meaning that these discrete letters, i.e. Ha Mim and this Noble Quran are clear and obvious in meaning. Both of them are revealed from Allah the Almighty Who says: 'Surely We revealed it on a blessed night…' (ad-Dukhan: 3). We believe that these verses come from Allah the Almighty; those whose meanings we know and those whose meanings we do not know. This is because Allah the Almighty wants to guard every point of faith with something that is seen. This is because faith is only with regards to unseen matters, and not that which is witnessed by us. For example, it is not right to say: 'we believe that right now we are sitting with brothers in Masjid Al-Firdaws having a lesson.' However, we say that we believe that Allah the Almighty exists and that paradise is true. It is from Allah's Mercy and Kindness towards us that He protects faith in unseen matters with matters that are seen so that we can take a proof from that which is seen by us for the truthfulness of that which is unseen. Therefore, these letters whose meanings we do not know were sent down for with wisdom for a profound reason. Take the example of the Night Journey and Ascension and you will find an unseen matter being protected by that which is seen. How? You know that Prophet

Muhammad Allah's peace and blessings be upon him was exposed to much harm and he and his believing followers, were oppressed; the last of this was in Taʾif where the people abused him so much that what he suffered really troubled him. He sat and had an intimate conversation with his Lord and he complained to Him Glorified is He about the harshness of these people and he asked Him for victory. After this came the event of the Night Journey and Ascension, and it is as if it was a journey to relieve Prophet Muhammad Allah's peace and blessings be upon him and a message to him saying: 'O Muhammad, if the people of the earth are harsh with you then I will honour you among the creatures of the heavens, and I will take you to a place that no one before you was ever taken to and I will show you some of My signs that no one before you ever saw.' The one who reflects on the progress of this journey will find that Allah the Almighty used the Night Journey to pave the way for the Ascension, as He made the Night Journey an earthly sign; a sign that is witnessed and whose details and dimensions are known. Many of the people of Mecca make this journey from Mecca to Jerusalem, so a rational proof can be established for whoever does not believe in it. Therefore when his people denied him, they said: 'Do you claim that you went to Jerusalem in one night when we go there riding our camels for a month?'(1) Then they asked him Allah's peace and blessings be upon him to describe Jerusalem for them and to give them some of the landmarks along the way. If they had been certain of this journey, they would not have asked Prophet Muhammad Allah's peace and blessings be upon him this. They therefore wanted to undermine him Allah's peace and blessings be upon him, but Allah the Almighty helped His Messenger and placed in front of him a detailed picture of Jerusalem. Then Prophet Muhammad Allah's peace and blessings be upon him started describing it for them. He told them about their caravan(2) which was on the way from trading, and that it was in such-and-such place carrying such-and-such. When their trade caravans arrived, they found them as Prophet Muhammad Allah's peace and blessings be upon him had described. Therefore, it is possible to establish a proof for the truthfulness of Prophet Muhammad Allah's peace and blessings be upon him in the Night Journey to be a precursor for the Ascension which is a heavenly journey that was not shown to anyone and for which it is not possible to establish a rational proof. However, the One Who altered universal laws for Prophet Muhammad Allah's peace and blessings be upon him with regards to the Night Journey is fully able to alter those same laws with regards to the Ascension. Therefore, He made the unseen event that has a proof to be a precursor for the unseen event that does not have a proof. Furthermore, what they said when they objected to Prophet Muhammad Allah's peace and blessings be upon him was: 'How, when we go there on our camels in a month?' This statement of theirs benefits us with regards to refuting the claims of so-called intellectuals and philosophers who say that the Night Journey was in spirit and not body. I say to them: if the Night Journey had been in spirit, the disbelievers of Mecca would have said this. They only said it because they knew that it was a fact that took place by both the spirit and the body and that Prophet Muhammad Allah's peace and blessings be upon him went there and traversed those distances. Thus, Allah the Almighty makes their tongues articulate that which supports the truth without them noticing, a point which affirms their stubborn opposition and stultification just as the Jews did when the direction for prayer was changed. Allah the Almighty knew what they were going to say and He informed Prophet Muhammad Allah's peace and blessings be upon him of it. He the Almighty says: 'The fools among the people will say: What has turned them from their qibla which they had?' (al-Baqara: 142) Prophet Muhammad Allah's peace and blessings be upon him declared this verse

(1) See Al-Baqaʿi, Nazhm Ad-Durar; see also As-Suyuti, Ad-Durr Al-Manthur, 6/204; he attributed it to Abu Yaʿla and Ibn ʿAsakir from Umm Haniʾ.

(2) In his Dalaʾil An-Nubuwwa, Al-Bayhaqi (2/356) mentioned that Prophet Muhammad Allah's peace and blessings be upon him said: 'Then I was taken and I passed by a camel belonging to Quraysh in such-and-such place. They had lost one of their camels and then so-and-so gathered it so I gave them the greetings of peace and some of them said: 'This is the voice of Muhammad.' Then I met my Companions before dawn in Mecca. Indeed it is a sign that I am telling you that I passed by a camel belonging to=

= you in such-and-such place. They had lost one of their camels and then so-and-so gathered it, and in their journey they are dismounting in such-and-such place and they will reach you on such-and-such day. They will be led by a camel which will be carrying a black haircloth and two black sacks.' When the day came, the people watched and looked, even though the caravan was still half a day away until it arrived being led by the camel that Prophet Muhammad Allah's peace and blessings be upon him has described. Al-Bayhaqi said: 'This is an authentic chain of narrations.'

and recited it publicly, but despite that, they still said it. If they had had just a little bit of religious, not worldly, discernment they would have refrained from saying it.

Another example of this is Allah's saying: '…Do not spend upon those who are with the Messenger of Allah…' (al-Munafiqun: 7). The True Lord made their tongues articulate it without them noticing. The same goes for the verses of the Noble Quran that contain something seen and something unseen, as we take the seen as proof for the truthfulness of the unseen. We take the verses that are clear in meaning as proof for the verses that have discrete letters and the meaning of which we do not know and into which we cannot delve any further. We say: 'Allah knows best as to their significance.' However, they are true and they are from Allah the Almighty that is, they were sent down as all the other verses were sent down, but their meaning is unclear. This is why the True Lord the Almighty gives an indication of this matter that distinguishes between Ha Mim and Allah's saying: 'I swear by the Book that makes things clear,' (az-Zukhruf: 2). The meaning of Ha Mim is obscure, while Allah's saying: 'I swear by the Book that makes things clear,' (az-Zukhruf: 2) is clear and obvious in meaning. Thus, He made all verses that are clear in meaning to be connected (read as words) from the first 'In the Name of Allah, The All-Merciful, The Dispenser of Mercy' in the chapter of al-Fatiha to Allah's saying: 'From among the jinn and the men,' (an-Nas: 6). The Quran in general is based on connection except for these fourteen discrete letters which are based on stopping (to be read as individual letters). Thus, you read: (alif, lam, mim) and (ha mim), and it is as if this stopping is an indication from The True Lord the Almighty that you must not pronounce these letters in the same way you pronounce the Noble Quran because they are something which is distinct. It is true that they all come from the same source and they all come from Allah the Almighty, but stop at these letters and consign their meaning to the One Who sent them down. He the Almighty has taken exclusive possession over them in order to make our faith in the unseen continue and to have us constantly connected to it, in faith and in submission. Prophet Muhammad Allah's peace and blessings be upon him explains this matter by saying: 'I am not saying that alif lam mim is a letter, but rather alif is a letter, lam is a letter and mim is a letter.'(1) Thus it is as if this letter, in and of itself, has a reference, and that it has a meaning that we should remain silent about, and if not, then these letters would not have been based on stopping. As long as they are pronounced differently from the remaining verses of the Quran, then they must be distinct because they must contain secrets, and it is for us to wonder about what that is not in our hands. We also notice that the letters in the Arabic language are divided into those that are fixed and those that have a particular meaning. Kaf, for example, is a letter that is fixed, meaning that it forms part of a word. It does not have an independent meaning in kataba (to write), but when it is joined to the other letters, it conveys the meaning of kataba. As for the kaf in Allah's saying: '…Nothing like a likeness of Him…' (ash-Shura: 11), it indicates resemblance. Likewise, ba' is a fixed letter in kataba, but it indicates a vow in our saying bi Allah. Likewise, the discrete letters that appear at the beginning of some chapters are fixed in the way they are pronounced, but they carry meanings when they are said by the One Who knows their meanings, Allah the Almighty. He Glorified is He may show these meanings to some of His slaves, and thus they understand meanings from them. This is why we say when commenting on them: 'Allah knows best as to their significance,' because our discussion of them is merely independent reasoning and an attempt to understand. I said that these letters are fourteen from the twenty-eight letters of the alphabet which means that they comprise half of all the Arabic letters. However, they have been chosen in an ordered, precise manner, not randomly. From the first nine letters we have alif and ha'; and from the last nine letters we have seven, which are the opposite of the first nine, leaving only waw and fa'. Therefore, they do not have a specific system, but a rather, a deliberate design for a deliberate purpose. Then, from the ten letters remaining in the middle, the ones that have no diacritical marks are chosen, while the ones that do are left. So, we have ra' but not zay; sin but not shin; Ta' but not dad; ta' but not za' and ʿain but not ghain. If someone were to say: 'How can the letters have diacritical points when they did not appear until the age of the Umayyad Caliphate?' I say: 'Their Lord and their Speaker, the One Who articulates them, knows what will become of them, as they are all within His Sublime Knowledge. This is why we stop at them and accept them with the perfection that their Speaker placed them in, for they, as I have said, are like the teeth of a key which opens for you. If you change the key, it will not open. Therefore, everything in the Noble Quran has been placed for a reason even in recitation. Whether it is the learned person who knows the meaning or the illiterate person who does not, you find that recitation is of two types: recitation of reflection and worship and recitation of extraction for which you should use your intellect. If you are reciting for worship, then beware of using your intellect. Take the word or the letters according to the significance of the One Who says it. When you come with a meaning based on your own capacity, you will limit Allah's Perfection and His Unlimited Perfections. Therefore, we find that those who memorise the Noble Quran quickest are those who read it without stopping and pondering over its meaning. Rather, they read it as it is, with or without understanding. Allah says: '…is sent down…' (al-Ahqaf: 2) meaning that the One Who sent down 'Ha Mim' also sent down: '…this Scripture…' (al-Ahqaf: 2), i.e. the Noble Quran: '…from Allah the Almighty the Wise' (al-Ahqaf: 2). Reflect here on the description of wisdom, as everything has been sent down with wisdom, even the letters of which we do not know any meaning.

Allah the Almighty then says:

مَا خَلَقْنَا ٱلسَّمَٰوَٰتِ وَٱلْأَرْضَ وَمَا بَيْنَهُمَآ إِلَّا بِٱلْحَقِّ وَأَجَلٍ مُّسَمًّىۚ
وَٱلَّذِينَ كَفَرُوا۟ عَمَّآ أُنذِرُوا۟ مُعْرِضُونَ ﴿٣﴾

It was for a true purpose and a specific term that We created heaven and earth and everything in between, yet those who deny the truth ignore the warning they have been given [3] (The Quran, al-Ahqaf: 3)

Allah's saying: 'It was for a true purpose…' (al-Ahqaf: 3) means that He the Almighty did not create everything in vain. Rather, He has created according to an exact, precise system that does not change. I have said that the truth is something fixed, meaning that it does not change. It is thus crystal clear that He the Almighty has created everything for a purpose. For this reason, look at the sky, for example; Allah the Almighty created it without pillars. It has been like that since Allah the Almighty created it and it will remain stable until the Hour is established, upon this firmness and in accordance with the truth with which it was created. The same goes for the sun. It has never needed maintenance or spare parts and it has never been broken or damaged. Why? It is because it has been created in accordance with truth and justice, which never change. Since its inception, the universe has been created in accordance with wisdom, and had it not been created from the very beginning in accordance with wisdom, it would have been subject to damage and defectiveness. Therefore, the heavens and the earth, from the very beginning, were created in accordance with truth, an absolute truth that was not preceded by falsehood or by another creation that was then modified. Rather, they have been like this from the very beginning. This is like what I said previously regarding Allah's saying when He was debating the enemies of Islam: '…And made lowest the word of those who disbelieved; and the word of Allah, that is the highest…' (at-Tawba: 40).

In the first instance, Allah the Almighty makes it utterly low, while Allah's Cause, of course, has always remained supreme. Therefore He did not say that He made Allah's Cause supreme because it has never been anything less than supreme such that Allah the Almighty would then make it supreme. Therefore, falsehood is brought about while truth remains truth in essence, firmly established ever since Allah the Almighty created it. Allah's saying: '…And a specific term…' (al-Ahqaf: 3) refers to a known time, which is the Day of Resurrection, as He the Almighty did not create the creation and then leave it to its own devices. Rather, there is a defined term, which is the Resurrection, the Day on which this established universe will change and everything in it will be destroyed and demolished. Allah the Almighty says: 'On the day when the earth shall be changed into a different earth and the heavens (as well)…' (Ibrahim: 48). That is the Day when the sun will be overthrown and the moon will disappear, and all means of living on earth will be destroyed. As for in the Hereafter, Allah the Almighty says: 'And the earth shall beam with the light of its Lord…' (az-Zumar: 69). This is because there will not be any sun or moon. In the life of this world, you live according to means and causes. As for the Hereafter, you live according to the Establisher of Causes, Allah the Almighty. Allah the Almighty says: '…Yet those who deny the truth ignore the warning they have been given,' (al-Ahqaf: 3) meaning the deniers of the Truth will turn away on that Day. I said before that the word 'warning' means to instil fear of something before it happens, and it is one manifestation of Allah's Mercy and Kindness towards His slaves and which clearly indicates His Glorified is He Eagerness for their salvation. The one who warns you about evil before it happens is doing you a favour. Therefore, it is from Allah's Mercy towards mankind that He has sent Messengers to them to bring glad tiding and to warn them. In the same way, He has sent down the Books and explained the consequences. However, what do you do about those who turn away from this warning and do not pay attention to it? This is why in the chapter of ar-Rahman, the True Lord the Almighty made a warning, saying: 'The flames of fire and smoke will be sent on you two, then you will not be able to defend yourselves. [35] Which then of the bounties of your Lord will you deny? [36]' (ar-Rahman: 35-36) Instilling fear regarding these kinds of punishment is a blessing because when you fear the consequence you will not commit the action that leads to it. As they say in medicine: 'prevention is better than cure.' Likewise, distancing oneself from disobedience is better than suffering the consequences of it.

Allah the Almighty then says:

قُلْ أَرَءَيْتُم مَّا تَدْعُونَ مِن دُونِ ٱللَّهِ أَرُونِى مَاذَا خَلَقُوا۟ مِنَ ٱلْأَرْضِ أَمْ لَهُمْ شِرْكٌ فِى ٱلسَّمَٰوَٰتِ ۖ
ٱئْتُونِى بِكِتَٰبٍ مِّن قَبْلِ هَٰذَآ أَوْ أَثَٰرَةٍ مِّنْ عِلْمٍ إِن كُنتُمْ صَٰدِقِينَ ﴿٤﴾

Say [Prophet], 'Consider those you pray to other than God: show me which part of the earth they created or which share of the heavens they own; bring me a previous scripture or some vestige of divine knowledge if what you say is true' [4] (The Quran, al-Ahqaf: 4)

The True Lord the Almighty wants to affirm that those who have taken other than Allah the Almighty as protectors have taken them without any preceding perfection or preceding benefit. They have taken idols as gods and worshipped them besides Allah, even though they made them with their own hands. This is why Prophet Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon him said to his people, as Allah the Almighty says: '…Do you worship what you hew out?' (as-Saffat: 95) and '…Consider those you pray to other than Allah…' (al-Ahqaf: 4) meaning inform me, if you have really given thought, inform me of: '…What they created…' (al-Ahqaf: 4) referring to these claimed deities '…Which part of the earth…' (al-Ahqaf: 4). Earth is mentioned first because it is where they reside and where they engage in their activity. Allah's saying: '…Or which share of the heavens they own…' (al-Ahqaf: 4) means that they did not participate with Allah the Almighty in the process of creation. The True Lord the Almighty is the One Who has declared: 'I am the Creator of the heavens and the earth.' This declaration has been heard by these stubborn resisters, but has anyone objected to it? Has anyone come forward and claimed that he created the universe?

Therefore, if Allah the Almighty had any partner in creation, then let him declare himself. As a matter of fact, intellect states that claims are established for the one who makes them as long as no one objects. The True Lord the Almighty says: 'There is no god but Me, and no creator besides Me', and we have not heard anyone objecting to this statement. Therefore, it belongs to Allah Alone and He has no partner and no contender. If you were to reflect on the creation and the wisdom behind it, you would know that He the Almighty Alone, and no one else is fully capable of this marvellous, unique achievement. The True Lord the Almighty has created the small and the large, the fat and the thin; and despite this, you find that the small have all the characteristics of the large. The elephant eats and moves and so does the mosquito. Indeed, maybe you are able to gain control over an elephant, but you are not able to gain control over a mosquito. This is why Allah the Almighty says: '…Surely those whom you call upon besides Allah cannot create fly, though they should all gather for it, and should the fly snatch away anything from them, they could not take it back from…' (al-Hajj: 73). Indeed, have you ever been able to retrieve what a fly has taken from your food? Allah the Almighty says: '…Weak are the invoker and the invoked.' (al-Hajj: 73) One of the manifestations of greatness in the creation is that Allah has subjugated the entire universe to our service. If He Glorified is He had not subjugated them for us, we would have no power over them. You are amazed when you see a small child leading a camel and carrying things on it, and the camel obeys him. At the same time, you have no power over the flea and you cannot control it, and it may harm you and keep you up all night. Why? It is because the Creator has subjugated this but He has not subjugated that. Therefore, the greatness of the creation is found in subjugation. This is why Allah the Almighty says: ‘Do they not see that We have created cattle for them, out of what Our hands have wrought, so they are their masters? [71] And We have subjected them to them, so some of them they have to ride upon, and some of them they eat [72]’ (Ya Sin: 71-72).

When you reflect on Allah’s creation, you find greatness in everything, large and small, and this is why opponents would criticise the True Lord the Almighty for talking about the mosquito, the fly, and the spider. Then Allah the Almighty responded to them: ‘Surely Allah is not ashamed to set forth any parable—(that of) a gnat or anything above that…’ (al-Baqara: 26). Scholars said: ‘Anything above it’ means, ‘less than that,’ which means microbes and viruses and tiny creations that cannot be seen by the naked eye. This is why we find the True Lord the Almighty challenging them: ‘…Surely those whom you call upon besides Allah cannot create fly, though they should all gather for it…’ (al-Hajj: 73).

As for the saying of Allah: ‘…Bring me a previous scripture…’ (al-Ahqaf: 4), it means something before the Noble Quran that you were informed of. Allah’s saying: ‘…Or some vestige of divine knowledge…’ (al-Ahqaf: 4) means a remnant of knowledge that has been transmitted from those before you. As for the saying of Allah, ‘If what you say is true,’ (al-Ahqaf: 4), it means ‘offer evidence of the truthfulness of your claims that they are gods and that they partook, with the True Lord the Almighty in the matter of creation.’

Allah the Almighty then says:

وَمَنۡ أَضَلُّ مِمَّن يَدۡعُواْ مِن دُونِ ٱللَّهِ مَن لَّا يَسۡتَجِيبُ
لَهُۥٓ إِلَىٰ يَوۡمِ ٱلۡقِيَٰمَةِ وَهُمۡ عَن دُعَآئِهِمۡ غَٰفِلُونَ ﴿٥﴾

Who could be more wrong than a person who calls on those other than God, those who will not answer him till the Day of Resurrection, those who are unaware of his prayers [5] (The Quran, al-Ahqaf: 5)

The saying of Allah, ‘…Who could be more wrong than…’ (al-Ahqaf: 5) is a question that states that there is no one more astray than the person who calls on, besides Allah, those who do not respond to him. Not now, not in the future and especially not on the Day of Resurrection, and he knows that the god he calls on does not respond to him. Allah the Almighty is the One Who is worshipped in truth, and He is the Great, the Exalted. This is why when the disbeliever is afflicted with adversity; he does not seek refuge in his false gods. He never calls out and says: ‘O Hubal!’ He does not say it in times of adversity because he knows that Hubal cannot hear him and will never answer him, and he will not deceive himself and lie to himself in this situation. Thus you see him seeking refuge in Allah and calling on Him even though he does not believe in Him. Allah the Almighty says: ‘And when distress afflicts you in the sea, away go those whom you call on except He…’ (al-Isra’: 67). Indeed, in the moment of distress the disbeliever looks for the True Lord Who is fully capable of bringing him benefit and causing him harm, so he says: ‘O Lord!’ but once Allah has relieved him of his distress, he returns to his disbelief and his stubborn resistance. Allah the Almighty says: ‘And when affliction touches a man, he calls on Us, whether lying on his side or sitting or standing; but when We remove his affliction from him, he passes on as though he had never called on Us on account of an affliction that touched him…’ (Yunus: 12). Why? It is because religion, for these people, has become ‘fantasy’. They believe in a god but not in a way of Guidance or in any commandments. It does not tell them what to do or not to do. This is why they were false gods, even in being called ‘gods’ because a god is worshipped and obeyed with regards to its commands and prohibitions. Therefore, this is all a lie and misguidance.

When the True Lord the Almighty clarifies this matter for us, He presents it in the form of this question so that we can answer. Allah the Almighty says: ‘Who could be more wrong than…’ (al-Ahqaf: 5) and we respond: ‘No one could be more wrong than this.’ Thus, the affirmation is from us and we bear witness to it.

Allah’s saying: ‘…Those who are…’ (al-Ahqaf: 5) means that the so-called gods are ‘…Unaware of his prayers.’ (al-Ahqaf: 5) They are not aware of those who are invoking them.

Then the True Lord the Almighty says:

وَإِذَا حُشِرَ ٱلنَّاسُ كَانُوا۟ لَهُمْ أَعْدَآءً وَكَانُوا۟ بِعِبَادَتِهِمْ كَٰفِرِينَ ﴿٦﴾

Those who, when all mankind is gathered, will become his enemies and disown his worship? [6]
(The Quran, al-Ahqaf: 6)

Concerning Allah's saying: '…When all mankind is gathered…' (al-Ahqaf: 6), it refers to the Day of Resurrection. Allah's saying: '…Will become…' (al-Ahqaf: 6) means that these so-called gods are '…Their enemies…' (al-Ahqaf: 6). Indeed, in this situation the enmity between these people will manifest itself. Everyone will absolve themselves of everyone else, and they will all curse each other. Allah the Almighty says: 'The friends shall on that day be enemies one to another, except those who guard (against evil)' (az-Zukhruf: 67). He the Almighty also says: 'Gather together those who were unjust and their associates, and what they used to worship [22] Besides Allah, then lead them to the way to hell[23] And stop them, for they shall be questioned [24] What is the matter with you that you do not help each other?[25] Nay! On that day they shall be submissive [26] And some of them shall advance towards others, questioning each other [27] They shall say: Surely you used to come to us from the right side [28] They shall say: Nay, you (yourselves) were not believers; [29] And we had no authority over you, but you were an in ordinate people;[30] So the sentence of our Lord has come to pass against us: (now) we shall surely taste; [31] So we led you astray, for we ourselves were erring [32] So they shall on that day be sharers in the chastisement one with another [33] Surely thus do We deal with the guilty, [34]' (as-Saffat: 22-34).

This is a portrayal of the dialogue that takes place between these oppressors and the blame and condemnation that takes place between them such that each one of them accuses the other of being responsible for his crime. We also have Allah's saying: 'And those who disbelieve will say: Our Lord! Show us those who led us astray from among the jinn and the men that we may trample them under our feet so that they may be of the lowest' (Fussilat: 29). This is the argument of Satan on the Day of Resurrection. He will say as Allah the Almighty clearly states in the Quran: '…And I had no authority over you, except that I called you and you obeyed me, therefore do not blame me but blame yourselves…' (Ibrahim: 22). I said that the meaning of '…Authority…'

(Ibrahim: 22) is argument, and it is of two types; either an argument to convince you to do something, or power to force you to do something. We do not have both. Allah's saying: '…I cannot be your aider (now) nor can you be my aiders…' (Ibrahim: 22) means that these so-called gods cannot respond to the cries of those deniers of the Truth for help. Therefore, on the Day of Resurrection, the enmity between the oppressors, the disbelievers, the worshipper, and the worshipped is clear, and the final abode of all of them is the fire. Allah the Almighty says: 'Surely you and what you worship besides Allah are the firewood of hell; to it you shall come' (al-Anbiya': 98). Some people comment on this verse and say: 'How can this be when there are those who worshipped Jesus? How can Jesus be the fuel of hell?' These people have not noticed that Allah the Almighty says that verses to indicate non-humans. He did not say 'who.'

Then the True Lord the Almighty says:

وَإِذَا تُتْلَىٰ عَلَيْهِمْ ءَايَٰتُنَا بَيِّنَٰتٍ قَالَ ٱلَّذِينَ كَفَرُوا۟
لِلْحَقِّ لَمَّا جَآءَهُمْ هَٰذَا سِحْرٌ مُّبِينٌ ﴿٧﴾

When Our revelations are recited to them in all their clarity, the disbelievers say of the Truth that has reached them, 'This is clearly sorcery' [7]
(The Quran, al-Ahqaf: 7)

The meaning of '…In all their clarity…' (al-Ahqaf: 7) is that they are obvious and manifest, and despite that, '…The disbelievers say of the Truth that has reached them…' (al-Ahqaf: 7) that it is sorcery. They say that about the truth because the lam carries the meaning of 'about', or they went to greater lengths, so instead of confronting those who believe in the truth, they confronted the truth itself: '…This is clearly sorcery' (al-Ahqaf: 7). Nullifying these claims is simple and easy which is that we say to them: 'If we were to believe that this is magic, and that Prophet Muhammad Allah's peace and blessings be upon him is bewitched by it, then how come it has not bewitched you as it has bewitched us; thus we put an end to the matter.'

Allah the Almighty then says:

أَمْ يَقُولُونَ ٱفْتَرَىٰهُ ۖ قُلْ إِنِ ٱفْتَرَيْتُهُۥ فَلَا تَمْلِكُونَ لِى مِنَ ٱللَّهِ شَيْـًٔا ۖ هُوَ أَعْلَمُ بِمَا
تُفِيضُونَ فِيهِ ۖ كَفَىٰ بِهِۦ شَهِيدًۢا بَيْنِى وَبَيْنَكُمْ ۖ وَهُوَ ٱلْغَفُورُ ٱلرَّحِيمُ ﴿٨﴾

Or they say, 'He has invented it himself.' Say [Prophet], 'If I have really invented it, there is nothing you can do to save me from God. He knows best what you say amongst yourselves about it; He is sufficient as a witness between me and you; He is the Most Forgiving, the Most Merciful' [8] (The Quran, al-Ahqaf: 8)

After saying that the Noble Quran is magic and that Prophet Muhammad Allah's peace and blessings be upon him used it to bewitch his Companions into believing in him, they said: 'It is an invention made by him Allah's peace and blessings be upon him'. Thus Allah responds to them: '…Say [O Muhammad]…' (al-Ahqaf: 8). Tell them, O Muhammad: '…If I have really invented it, there is nothing you can do to save me from Allah…' (al-Ahqaf: 8). It means, you would not be able to prevent Allah's punishment if I had invented something about Him or lied in conveying from Him. This is why Allah the Almighty says in another verse that clarifies the matter: 'And if he had fabricated against Us some of the sayings, [44] We would certainly have seized him by the right hand, [45] Then We would certainly have cut off his aorta[46] And not one of you could have withheld Us from him, [47]' (al-Haqqa: 44-47). So how can Prophet Muhammad Allah's peace and blessings be upon him lie about Allah the Almighty after these words, especially considering that he Allah's peace and blessings be upon him was known as the Truthful One (As-Sadiq) among his people before he was sent with the Message. The people of Quryash (The Quraysh Tribe) never experienced any lie from him. You know the story (1) of the revered Companion Khuzayma ibn Thabit(2) may Allah be pleased with him and Prophet Muhammad Allah's peace and blessings be upon him. Prophet Muhammad Allah's peace and blessings be upon him bought a horse from a Jew and the payment was to be delayed. On the scheduled day to make the payment, Prophet Muhammad Allah's peace and blessings be upon him met him and gave him the payment yet there was no witness, so the Jew took advantage of the opportunity and claimed that he Allah's peace and blessings be upon him had not paid him for the horse. When Prophet Muhammad Allah's peace and blessings be upon him spoke to him, the Jew said: 'Bring a witness,' so Khuzayma may Allah be pleased with him stood up and said: 'I bear witness, O Messenger of Allah, that you gave the payment for the horse.' The Jew was stunned and he thought that Khuzayma may Allah be pleased with him had been there, but he had not seen him. Afterwards, Prophet Muhammad Allah's peace and blessings be upon him summoned Khuzayma and said to him: 'O Khuzayma, what made you say what you said when you were not there, and you did not witness the matter?' Khuzayma may Allah be pleased with him laughed and said: 'O Messenger of Allah, I believe in you when you bring news from the heavens, so would I not believe you regarding a few dirhams?' Prophet Muhammad Allah's peace and blessings be upon him then smiled and gave him a valued rank, and said: 'If Khuzayma bears witness to something, then that is sufficient.'(1) From that day onwards, the testimony of Khuzayma may Allah be pleased with him was equivalent to the testimony of two men. This rank was of benefit to the Muslims when it was time to gather the Noble Quran. When they were compiling the Noble Quran in one volume, they would not write down the verse unless they had found it recorded on pieces of cloth, leather, wood, or bones. In addition, two upright witnesses had to testify to its authenticity. They did this until they came to the end of the chapter of at-Tawba and they found a verse written,(2)

(1) The testimony of Khuzayma in favour of Prophet Muhammad Allah's peace and blessings be upon him

(2) He is Khuzayma ibn Thabit ibn Al-Fakih ibn Thaʿlaba Al-Ansari Abu ʿImmara, a Companion, and one of the most honourable of Al-Aws in the Age of Ignorance and Islam; he was one of their most courageous. He was a Medinan and he carried the banner of Banu Khattama on the day of the Conquest of Mecca. He lived until the caliphate of ʿAli ibn Abu Taleb and he was martyred while fighting in the army of 'Ali=

= at the Battle of Siffin. Al-Bukhari, Muslim and others related 38 Hadiths from him. He died in the year 37 A.H. See Az-Zirikli, Al-'Alam, 2/305.

(1) See Al-Bayhaqi, As-Sunnan Al-Kubra, v.1, with the wording: 'If Khuzayma bears witness to something or bears witness against something, then that is sufficient.' See also Ibn Abu ʿAsim, Al-Ahaad wa Al-Mathani, Hadith no. 1838; see also Al-Hakim, Mustadrak, Hadith no. 2149; At-Tabarani, Al-Muʿjam Al-Kabir, Hadith no. 2642; according to them the name of the man was Sawaʾ ibn Al-Harith Al-Muharabi.

(2) It is the verse of: 'Of the believers are men who are true to the covenant which they made with Allah...' (al-Ahzab: 23). Aban ibn Saʿid said: 'I examined the Emigrants= but it only had one witness; Khuzayma may Allah be pleased with him, so they accepted it with only his testimony because his testimony was equivalent to the testimony of two men.

Reflect on the etiquette of conversation; even with those who contravene Prophet Muhammad Allah's peace and blessings be upon him and with those who openly accuse him of lying. He says to them: '…If I have really invented it…' (al-Ahqaf: 8) and if it represents doubt, '…There is nothing you can do to save me from Allah…' (al-Ahqaf: 8) meaning that you cannot prevent Allah's Punishment. As for the saying of Allah, '…He knows best what you say amongst yourselves about it…' (al-Ahqaf: 8), it refers to their statement that the Noble Quran is fabricated. Allah's saying: '…He is sufficient as a witness between me and you; He is the Most Forgiving, the Most Merciful' (al-Ahqaf: 8). He returns the matter to Allah the Almighty and consigns it to him, and He is pleased with His witnessing between himself and his enemies, as Allah's witnessing is the testimony of truth and veracity.

This is why Allah the Almighty offered His Own Testimony, that is, He the Most High bears witness to Himself, 'Allah bears witness that there is no god but He…' (Al-'Imran: 18). The angels also bear witness which is the testimony of actual witnessing, as do those who are endowed with knowledge, which is the testimony of deduction; Allah the Almighty says: '…And (so do) the angels and those possessed of knowledge, maintaining His creation with justice…' (Al-'Imran: 18). Therefore, in this matter, Prophet Muhammad Allah's peace and blessings be upon him is unable to bring a witness to his truthfulness in conveying the Quran from Allah, so it suffices to make Allah the Almighty a witness between himself and them. This is from the etiquette of conversation that he Allah's peace and blessings be upon him was refined with, as they accused him of deliberately lying yet he showed them affection. In another place, he responded to them when the True Lord the Almighty said on the tongue of His Prophet: '…Say: If I have forged it, on me is my guilt, and I am clear of that of which you are guilty,' (Hud: 35). Allah the Almighty then concludes the verse with His saying, '…He is the Most Forgiving, the Most Merciful,' (al-Ahqaf: 8) meaning that it is as if he is showing them compassion and causing their hearts to incline towards him, Thus, despite these false claims the door of forgiveness and mercy is still open in front of them.

= and asked them about it and I couldn not find it with any of them. Then I examined the Helpers and asked them about it and I didn not find it with any of them until I found it with Khuzayma ibn Thabit, so I wrote it down.' See At- Tabari, Tafsir, 1/60; see also Ibn Kathir in the introduction to his Tafsir 1/28.

Then the True Lord the Almighty says (1):

أَتَّبِعُ إِلَّا مَا يُوحَىٰٓ إِلَىَّ وَمَآ أَنَا۠ إِلَّا نَذِيرٌ مُّبِينٌ ﴿٩﴾

Say, 'I am nothing new among God's messengers. I do not know what will be done with me or you; I only follow what is revealed to me; I only warn plainly' [9]
(The Quran, al-Ahqaf: 9)

The saying of Allah the Almighty 'Say…' (al-Ahqaf: 9) means 'tell them, O Prophet Muhammad: '…I am nothing new among Allah's Messengers…' (al-Ahqaf: 9). Bidʿ (first) is something that is newly invented and for which there is no precedent. An example of this is Allah's saying: 'Wonderful Originator of the heavens and the earth! How could He have a son when He has no consort, and He (Himself) created everything, and He is the Knower of all things?' (al-Anʿam: 101) meaning that He the Almighty created them without there being any precedent. We also say that a person is a mubdiʿ meaning that he brought something that no one else before him did. The meaning here is: I have not come outside of the standard practice that all the previous Messengers before me came in accordance with, or I am not calling you to anything new. I am not the first Messenger to be met with denial and to be confronted with disbelief, stubborn opposition, and persecution. Rather, all the previous Messengers before me experienced the same thing. They were harmed and they were denied and they were patient until Allah gave them victory, as He the Almighty has said: ‘So each We punished for his sin…’ (al-’Ankabut: 40). Allah’s standard practice regarding the previous Messengers was that He granted victory to His Messengers and Prophets over those who denied the Messengers and opposed the call to the Truth. As for the Message of Prophet Muhammad Allah’s peace and blessings be upon him Allah entrusted Muhammad and He entrusted His community to take care of disciplining those who deny the call and oppose it, and to give victory to the truth. This is why He said: ‘Goodness is in me and in my community until the Day of Resurrection.’(1) The significance of this statement is that goodness is in me in an exclusive sense and in my community in a dispersed sense. This means that each generation takes a portion of this goodness. Allah’s saying: ‘…Do not know what will be done with me or you…’ (al-Ahqaf: 9) means, right now I do not know, but perhaps in the future he will know because of what Allah reveals to him, as was the case with going to war against the disbelievers and calling to Islam openly. When some of those who had become Muslim with the Prophet Muhammad Allah’s peace and blessings be upon him asked to go to war with the disbelievers, he would say to them: ‘I have not been commanded, I have not been commanded.’ When he had emigrated to Medina, he gave them permission to fight. Therefore, he proclaimed Allah’s religion outwardly in Mecca and did not engage in martial combat until he was in Medina, and this was for a specific reason, as Mecca was the hometown of Quraysh and the headquarters of their leadership. The Quraysh held a position of importance and respect among all the Arab tribes because of their position with regards to

(1) In his Asbab An-Nuzul, Al-Wahidi An-Nisaburi mentioned in (p. 215) the reason for the revelation of this verse and he said: 'Ath-Thaʿlabi narrated from Abu Saleh that Ibn ʿAbbas said: 'When tribulations faced by the Companions of the Prophet intensified, the Prophet saw in his dream that he migrated to a land that had palms, trees and plenty of water. He related this dream to his Companions and the latter took it for a good omen and a harbinger of relief from the harm of the idolaters which they faced. After a while, when they saw that nothing had happened, they said: 'O Messenger of Allah! When are you going to migrate to the land which you saw in your dream?' Prophet Muhammad Allah's peace and blessings be upon him did not answer them, but Allah the Almighty sent down: '...and I do not know what will be done with me or with you...' (al-Ahqaf: 9), meaning that I do not know whether or not I am going to move to the place which I saw in my dream. I follow only that which is revealed to me.'

(1) In his Al-Maqasid Al-Hasana, As-Sakhawi said: ‘Our Sheikh Ibn Hajar Al-ʿAsqalani said: ‘I do not know it, but its meaning is sound.’ See As-Suyuti, Ad-Durr Al-Manthur, 1/10; see also Al-ʿAjluni, Kashf Al-Khafaʾ, Hadith no. 1267; in his Al-Fatawa Al-Hadithiyyah, Ibn Hajar Al-Mekki said: ‘It is not found with this wording.’ I say that it is merely a popular saying among people.’

Allah's Sacred House and their service to those who made pilgrimage to it. Also because Mecca was in the middle of a trade route between Yemen and the Levant in the journeys of winter and summer, it was necessary to take the rank of the Quraysh into consideration and not declare war against them at that time. When we read, for example, the chapter of al-Fil: 'And send down (to prey) upon them birds in flocks, [3] Casting against them stones of baked clay, [4] So He rendered them like straw eaten up? [5]' (al-Fil: 3-5). If you were to ask why, the chapter of Quraysh answers you: 'For the protection of the Quraysh—[1] Their protection during their trading caravans in the winter and the summer, [2]' (Quraysh: 1-2) meaning that Allah the Almighty did this for the benefit of the Quraysh so that they would continue to have rank and reverence among the Arab tribes, and so that they would remain safe and secure in their trade journeys between Yemen and the Levant. This is why He the Almighty says afterwards: 'So let them serve the Lord of this House [3] who feeds them against hunger and gives them security against fear, [4]' (Quraysh: 3-4). The meaning of Allah's saying: '…I do not know what will be done with me or you…' (al-Ahqaf: 9) is that I do not know whether Allah the Almighty will command us to fight these people or whether He will command us to leave Mecca for another place in which we will seek His victory. This is why Prophet Muhammad Allah's peace and blessings be upon him commanded them afterwards to immigrate to Abyssinia. He said: 'Indeed there is king there under whom no one is oppressed.'(1) It is as if Prophet Muhammad Allah's peace and blessings be upon him had a map of the world that was around him, and indeed when they went to Abyssinia they were honoured by the Negus, and he protected them when the Quraysh sent ʿAmr may Allah be pleased with him to request their return. He sent ʿAmr may Allah be pleased with him back and he sent back the gifts of the Quraysh and he gave security to Prophet Muhammad Allah's peace and blessings be upon him and his call. Because of this, and everything else, Prophet Muhammad Allah's peace and blessings be upon him had officiated him to conduct his marriage to Umm Habiba(1) and when the Negus died, Prophet Muhammad Allah's peace and blessings be upon him prayed the funeral prayer over him.(2)

(1) In his As-Sira An-Nabawiyyah, Ibn Kathir mentioned in (2/4), As-Suhayli in Ar-Rawd Al-Unuf (2/89) and Ibn Hisham in As-Sira (1/221) via Mohamed ibn Ishaq that the Messenger of Allah said: 'If you were to leave and go to the land of Abyssinia, then indeed you will find a king there under whom no one is oppressed, and it will be a land of sincerity for you until Allah gives you an opening.'

The emigration to Abyssinia was a transitory phase in which the Muslims who were persecuted found protection with this king under whom no one was oppressed, and this was until Allah the Almighty gave permission to Prophet Muhammad Allah's peace and blessings be upon him to immigrate to Medina, where the victory of Islam came and His word was made uppermost. There is wisdom behind the first call being in Mecca and the support and victory of the religion being in Medina because the Quraysh were the chiefs of the Arabs and they had power in the Arabian Peninsula. If victory had come in Mecca then they would have said that it was due to the leadership and power of the Quraysh, which made Islam spread throughout the peninsula and then the world around it. The wisdom behind the first call to Islam being in the ears of these chiefs was to agitate them and to make their actions repugnant, and to invalidate their belief idol-worship. However, the victory was postponed until Medina in order to give victory to the religion through the Emigrants and the Helpers so that no one would think that the tribal solidarity of Prophet Muhammad Allah's peace and blessings be upon him is what made people believe in Islam. Rather, it is faith in Allah the Almighty that created tribal solidarity for Prophet Muhammad Allah's peace and blessings be upon him. Allah's saying: '…I only follow what is revealed to me; I only warn plainly' (al-Ahqaf: 9). Look here at the greatness in the personality of Prophet Muhammad Allah's peace and blessings be upon him as he is speaking according to what he has. It is as if he is saying: 'If I am referred to I say: I am not like one of you, and I am taken from and I say that I am only a human being like you.' Therefore, Prophet Muhammad Allah's peace and blessings be upon him did not bring anything from himself unless it was with regards to a matter for which there was no ruling. If he exercised his independent reasoning in a matter for which there was no ruling and made a mistake before Allah the Almighty amended it, he is the one who informs us of this amendment, as in His statement: 'O Prophet! Why do you forbid (yourself) that which Allah has made lawful for you; you seek to please your wives; and Allah is Forgiving, Merciful,' (at-Tahrim: 1).

(1) Umm Habiba is Ramla bint Abu Sufyan ibn Ummaya, a female Companion and one of the wives of the Prophet Muhammad. She was the sister of Muʿawiya and one of the most eloquent women of Quraysh. She was known for her opinion and discernment. She was born 25 years before the Emigration. Her marriage to Prophet Muhammad was officiated in Abyssinia by the Negus and he gave her four hundred dinars as a bridal gift in the year 7 A.H. (she was 32 years old). She died in the year 44 A.H. at the age of 69. See Az-Zirikli, Al-'Alam, 2/23.

(2) ʿImran ibn Husayn narrated that the Messenger of Allah said: 'Indeed your brother the Negus has died. Then stand up and pray over him.' He said: 'So we stood up and made rows as is done in a funeral prayer and we prayed over him as the deceased are prayed over.' Narrated by Ahmad in his Musnad (4/439,446), At-Tirmidhi in his Sunnan (1029), and he declared it authentic, and An-Nasaʾi in his Sunnan (4/70).

Then the True Lord the Almighty says:

قُلۡ أَرَءَيۡتُمۡ إِن كَانَ مِنۡ عِندِ ٱللَّهِ وَكَفَرۡتُم بِهِۦ وَشَهِدَ شَاهِدٞ مِّنۢ بَنِيٓ إِسۡرَٰٓءِيلَ
عَلَىٰ مِثۡلِهِۦ فَـَٔامَنَ وَٱسۡتَكۡبَرۡتُمۡۖ إِنَّ ٱللَّهَ لَا يَهۡدِي ٱلۡقَوۡمَ ٱلظَّٰلِمِينَ ⑩

Say, 'Have you thought: what if this Quran really is from God and you reject it? What if one of the Children of Israel testifies to its similarity [to earlier scripture] and believes in it, and yet you are too proud to [do the same]? God certainly does not guide evildoers' [10] (The Quran, al-Ahqaf: 10)

The meaning of: '…Have you thought…' (al-Ahqaf: 10) is: inform me if you yourselves have witnessed: '…What if this Quran really is from Allah and you reject it?' (al-Ahqaf: 10) The implied answer is: what will happen to you? The known answer is: if this Noble Quran is from Allah the Almighty and despite that you disbelieve in it then you will acquire nothing but Allah's wrath in the life of this world and His punishment in the Hereafter. Allah the Almighty says: '…What if one of the children of Israel testifies to its similarity [to earlier scripture]…' (al-Ahqaf: 10)? The witness who testified to the truthfulness of the Noble Quran and that it is from Allah the Almighty was ʿAbdullah ibn Salam may Allah be pleased with him. He was one of the Jewish rabbis who became Muslim and testified to the truthfulness of Prophet Muhammad Allah's peace and blessings be upon him and the Noble Quran. Allah's saying: '…to its similarity…' (al-Ahqaf: 10) means the resemblance of the Noble Quran to the previous books such as the Torah and the Gospel, as it is like them because it is from Allah the Almighty and it calls to what they called to such as worshipping Allah and affirming His oneness. Just as the Torah was sent down to Musa (Moses) peace be upon him and the Gospel was sent down to ‘Isa (Jesus) peace be upon him, the Noble Quran was sent down to Prophet Muhammad Allah’s peace and blessings be upon him and his description is established with them in the Torah.

That is why he used to say concerning Prophet Muhammad Allah’s peace and blessings be upon him: ‘By Allah, I recognised him when I saw him, just as I recognise my children and yet my recognition of Muhammad is greater.’ Surely, he knew him Allah’s peace and blessings be upon him from the signs that were mentioned in their Books.

Allah Glorified is He says: ‘And when there came to them a Book from Allah verifying that which they have and aforetime they used to pray for victory against those who disbelieve, but when there came to them (Prophet) that which they did not recognize, they disbelieved in him’ (al-Baqara: 89). They used to pray for victory against the disbelievers before the revelation of the Noble Quran. Why did they disbelieve in the Prophet then? They thought that Prophet Muhammad Allah’s peace and blessings be upon him would pull leadership and authority right from their hands.

Further, Allah Glorified is He also says about them: ‘And they forgot a portion of what they were reminded’ (al-Ma‘ida: 13). If they were to be excused because of their forgetfulness, they certainly had no excuse to conceal the Book or to alter it. Indeed, there were some who: ‘Write the book with their hands and then say: This is from Allah so that they may take for it a small price; therefore woe to them for what their hands have written and woe to them for what they earn’ (al-Baqara: 79). Therefore, the Jews forgot, concealed, altered, and changed their Book. Allah Glorified is He would inevitably make them slip into things that show their deeds and let the truth come to light.

For example, with regards to the issue of whom Ibraham (Abraham) peace be upon him sacrificed, they claim it was Ishaq (‘Isaac) and not Ismael (Ishmael) peace be upon them. In response, we say, ‘If ‘Isaac was the one sacrificed, then why were the rites of sacrifice and the stoning of devils legislated in Arabia and not where 'Isaac lived?' Let them refer to their Books. Allah Glorified is He said to Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon him in the Torah, in the twenty-fourth chapter: 'O Abraham, take your only son and climb mount Moriah and offer him as a sacrifice to Allah.' Was 'Isaac the only child? In the very next chapter, He says: 'Isaac was born when Ishmael was fourteen years old.' Therefore, what they say is in complete contradiction to what is in their Books. This allows the truth to come to light and establish the proof against them.

Allah Glorified is He asks, 'Will they not be wrong if such a witness believed in it, and yet they were too proud to accept the truth?' We have mentioned the story of how 'Abdullah ibn Salam may Allah be pleased with him embraced Islam. He came to Prophet Muhammad Allah's peace and blessings be upon him and said: 'O Prophet of Allah, love of Islam has been inculcated in my heart, but the Jews are a people of slander. If they knew this, they would say things about me that are not true, so ask them about me before I openly declare my Islam. When they had gathered around Prophet Muhammad Allah's peace and blessings be upon him he asked them, 'What do you say about 'Abdullah ibn Salam?' They said, 'He is superior among us and the son of the most superior among us.' They praised him but at that point 'Abdullah ibn Salam may Allah be pleased with him said, 'I bear witness that there is no god but Allah and that Muhammad is the Prophet of Allah,' they said that he is a liar and the most-wicked person. Ibn Salam may Allah be pleased with him laughed and said, 'Did I not tell you, O Prophet of Allah, that they were a people of slander.'

Thus, Allah Glorified is He concludes the verse saying that certainly He the Almighty does not guide evildoers. These words have solved problems for us and clarified the meaning of guidance. Some people wonder why Allah Glorified is He punishes those for whom he has decreed disbelief and misguidance. This is a common fallacy and if the question were logical, they would wonder why He rewards the obedient when He has written obedience for them.'

We clarified this matter before and said that Allah Glorified is He guides both the believer and the disbeliever and the obedient and the disobedient in the sense of showing the true and right path. He Glorified is He has shown everyone the straight path and whoever takes this guidance and goes according to its light deserves more from Allah. He the Almighty says: 'Just as for those who are (willing to be) guided, He increases their (ability to follow His) guidance and causes them to grow in Allah-consciousness' (Muhammad: 17). This type of guidance, the guidance of assistance and enabling success, is viewed as the second type of guidance.

Thus, when Allah Glorified is He says: 'Allah certainly does not guide evildoers,' (al-Ahqaf: 10), He means that He does not grant them the guidance of support. This is why He says about the people of Thamud: 'And as to Thamud, We showed them the right way, but they chose error above guidance.' (Fussilat: 17) Allah Glorified is He showed them the right path, but they preferred error and misguidance over guidance, so He assisted them, just as He assisted the people of guidance with their guidance. We gave an example before to clarify this matter. We said that if you were to ask a traffic officer for directions, he would show you the way and when you take his advice and thank him, he would then give you more advice and maybe even go with you until you reach your destination.

Therefore, the reason why Allah Glorified is He does not guide evildoing people is because of their evildoing. He does not guide the iniquitous because of their iniquity and He does not guide the disbelievers because of their disbelief.

Before moving on from this verse, we should mention here that 'Abdullah ibn Salam may Allah be pleased with him before declaring his Islam, asked Prophet Muhammad Allah's peace and blessings be upon him about three things to increase his certainty in the truthfulness of his Allah's peace and blessings be upon him Message. He asked, 'What is the sign of the Last Hour?' Prophet Muhammad Allah's peace and blessings be upon him said, 'A fire coming out of the east gathering people in the west.' Then 'Abdullah asked, 'What is the first thing that the people of paradise eat?' 'The caudate (extra lobe of the fish-liver),' Prophet Muhammad Allah's peace and blessings be upon him answered. He said: 'When will a child be like his father or his mother?' whereupon he Allah's peace and blessings be upon him said: 'If the man's discharge proceeds, the child is to be a man and if the woman's discharge proceeds, the child is to be a woman.'(1)

(1) Narrated by Ahmad and Ibn Hibban

Later, this has been confirmed by modern science and research which proved the inimitability of the noble Prophetic Hadith and the veracity of the Message of Prophet Muhammad Allah's peace and blessings be upon him. Men and women share in the process of reproduction. Some people imagine that the process of intercourse is what produces a child, but it is only a means of stimulation that enables the man to discharge the semen. As for the fluid of the woman, the ovum that embraces the sperm has set and defined times in which it descends, regardless of the process of intercourse. It is already there and if the process of intercourse coincides with the ovum descending, then the fluid of the man competes to get to it while it is in its place. Therefore, the ovum has no role in determining the gender, as modern science has confirmed.

When we understand the linguistic meaning of the verb proceed, we will find that it confirms that the Prophetic Hadith agree with science. 'To proceed' means that the two competitors set off from the same place. Therefore, the point of emission is the same, i.e. the man's penis. Thus, we understand that the competition is between the sperm that represents the male and the sperm that represents the female and whichever one is first, the gender of the foetus is determined. Therefore, the role of the woman is to nurse what she receives from the man.

It is true that the Noble Quran is a Book of Creed and a way and legislation. It is also a miraculous Book that touches upon universal matters to the extent that people with varying levels of intellect can understand, as it was sent down to an unlettered community. Would it have been possible to tell this community that the earth is spherical? If we had said that at that time, they would have declared it a lie. That is why the Noble Quran envelops these universal realties and postpones their understanding until intellects have matured and are capable of grasping these realities. It is left to time and events to explain these universal signs and find what supports them in Allah's speech.

Have the Arabs who received the Noble Quran understood the meaning of the statement of Allah Glorified is He: 'And you see the mountains, you think them to be solid, and they shall pass away as the passing away of the cloud' (an-Naml: 88)? We actually see the mountains as firmly established. Thus, the meaning of them passing away is that they rotate due to the rotation of the earth. We read the verse, ‘He makes the night cover the day and makes the day overtake the night’ (az-Zumar: 5). Therefore, the earth is a spheroid object that rotates. Allah Glorified is He has given us these meanings in an enveloped manner so as not to shock people and make them run away from the Noble Quran.

This entire universe, with its universal signs explain the meaning of the verse: ‘We will soon show them Our signs in the Universe and in their own souls until it will become quite clear to them that it is the truth’ (Fussilat: 53). This means that the meaning of this verse will remain established, and that signs will prove it until the Last Hour. These signs will manifest themselves in accordance with what suits the intellects of mankind and the development of their sciences and possibilities.

The Noble Quran explained the matter of man’s creation, clarifying the meaning of Prophet Muhammad’s words: ‘If the man’s discharge proceeds, the child is too be a man.’ Allah Glorified is He says ‘Was he not a small seed in the seminal elements?’ (al-Qiyama: 37) The sperm drop contains the organism that carries the male or the female; and the semen is the liquid containing sperm. Semen comes from the man, not the woman as confirmed by science and this is why the scientists have called it XY and XX, i.e. both are from the man.

Then Allah Glorified is He states:

وَقَالَ ٱلَّذِينَ كَفَرُوا۟ لِلَّذِينَ ءَامَنُوا۟ لَوْ كَانَ خَيْرًا مَّا سَبَقُونَآ إِلَيْهِ ۚ وَإِذْ
لَمْ يَهْتَدُوا۟ بِهِۦ فَسَيَقُولُونَ هَٰذَآ إِفْكٌ قَدِيمٌ ﴿١١﴾

Those who disbelieve say of the believers, ‘If there were any good in this Quran, they would not have believed in it before we did,’ and, since they refuse to be guided by it, they say, ‘This is an ancient fabrication’ [11]
(The Quran, al-Ahqaf: 11)

The speakers here are those who disbelieve, and who address those who believe saying, ‘if there were any good in Islam and the Quran, they would not have believed in it before they did.’ The scholars have an observation on this statement. They say that this statement could be a confrontation between the disbelievers and the believers and it was said to them while they were present: ‘If there were any good, you would not have believed in it before us.’ Further, it could mean the other way around that they were absent from the gathering in which this statement was made: ‘If there were any good, they would not have believed in it before we did.’ Thus, the context is balanced to indicate both prepositions of the verb ‘say’, i.e. to and about and thereby give us the meaning of harming in confrontation and harming, whilst one is absent. It gathers them both in one passage.

Therefore, Allah Glorified is He concludes the verse saying what those who disbelieve say since they refuse to be guided by it. They say, ‘This is an ancient fabrication.’ They claimed that the Quran was the most repulsive and well-known lie and fabrication.

Then Allah Glorified is He states:

وَمِن قَبْلِهِۦ كِتَٰبُ مُوسَىٰٓ إِمَامًا وَرَحْمَةً ۚ وَهَٰذَا كِتَٰبٌ مُّصَدِّقٌ
لِّسَانًا عَرَبِيًّا لِّيُنذِرَ ٱلَّذِينَ ظَلَمُوا۟ وَبُشْرَىٰ لِلْمُحْسِنِينَ ﴿١٢﴾

Yet the scripture of Moses was revealed before it as a guide and a mercy, and this is a scripture confirming it in the Arabic language to warn those who do evil and bring good news for those who do good [12] (The Quran, al-Ahqaf: 12)

Allah Glorified is He declares that the Torah of Musa (Moses) peace be upon him was revealed before the Noble Quran as a guide and a mercy for its adherents in its time. Next, He the Almighty refers to the Noble Quran as it confirms the previous Books that were revealed from on high before the revelation of the Quran. Allah Glorified is He makes it clear elsewhere in the Quran that the Quran came to confirm the truth of all these Books and determine what is true therein. He Glorified is He sent the Noble Quran in Arabic language to warn and make evildoers fear the consequences of their evildoing and to bring glad tiding and inform those, who do the good, of good news before its time.

Then Allah Glorified is He states:

إِنَّ ٱلَّذِينَ قَالُواْ رَبُّنَا ٱللَّهُ ثُمَّ ٱسۡتَقَٰمُواْ فَلَا خَوۡفٌ عَلَيۡهِمۡ وَلَا هُمۡ يَحۡزَنُونَ ١٣

For those who say, ‘Our lord is God,’ and then follow the straight path there is no fear, nor shall they grieve [13]
(The Quran, al-Ahqaf: 13)

This verse has an equivalent in the chapter of Fussilat where Allah Glorified is He says: ‘(But) behold, as for those who say, “Our Lord is Allah,” and then steadfastly pursue the right way – upon them do angels often descend, (saying, “Fear not and grieve not, but receive the glad tiding of that paradise which has been promised to you!’ (Fussilat: 30)

Indeed, no fear or grieve shall they, i.e. the believers have. What fear would afflict them, what grief would befall them while they have said that Allah Glorified is He is their Lord, which is the core of the creed? Further, they have not said it as a hollow statement. Rather, they have backed it up with actions that are in accordance with this faith.

They then follow the straight path of the commands and prohibitions of the creed. Thus, to follow the path is to go along the straight path that has been drawn by the One you believe in. This act of following the path helps you with your daily activity as well as the activity of others with you. Straightness represents the shortest path that takes you to your destination. That is why we said that guidance carries you and takes you to your destination. Guidance is not a burden; rather, it is a carrier which takes you to Allah the Almighty; He Glorified is He says: ‘These are on guidance from their Lord’ (Luqman: 5). The Divine Guidance carries them, not the other way around.

Therefore, whoever says that Allah Glorified is He is their Lord and then stands firm upon it in their daily activity, Allah assures that they have no fear or grief. In addition, Allah Glorified is He does not postpone this assurance until the Hereafter. Rather, He gives glad tidings through the angels as He the Almighty says in the chapter of Fussilat: ‘The angels descend upon them, saying: Fear not, nor be grieved, and receive good news of the garden which you were promised’ (Fussilat: 30).

The angels descend upon them at the time of death to give them glad tidings and to reassure them that they have no fear and no grief. Fear is to expect that something will harm and hurt you, while grief is the mourning and pain of losing something beloved. They are safe from both of these. As long as that is the case, then do not fear your enemies as they will never gain anything from you. The believers have something to say with courage to their enemies, ‘Say: Do you await for us but one of two most excellent things? And we await for you that Allah will afflict you with punishment from Himself or by our hands. So wait; we too will wait with you’ (at-Tawba: 52).

This means if we, believers, confront them, i.e. disbelievers, on the battlefield, we wait either victory or martyrdom after being killed and we welcome either of the two outcomes. As for them, they are waiting for Allah Glorified is He to afflict them with punishment, either directly from Him or by our hands. Confidence and certainty without the slightest doubt fill the hearts of Muslims regarding this issue.

Then Allah Glorified is He states:

أُوْلَٰٓئِكَ أَصۡحَٰبُ ٱلۡجَنَّةِ خَٰلِدِينَ فِيهَا جَزَآءَۢ بِمَا كَانُواْ يَعۡمَلُونَ ١٤

They are the people of Paradise, there to remain as a reward for what they were doing [14]
(The Quran, al-Ahqaf: 14)

Allah Glorified is He indicates that those who said that Allah is their Lord and followed the right path are the people of paradise. He informs us of their reward and the consequence of their faith and uprightness. They are the people of paradise, which means that they are the owners or that they are the companions, i.e. there is a relationship of love, mutual understanding and inclination between them. They are inclined towards the other and they yearn for each other.

A companion is the one whom you choose and whose morals, character, and manners agree with yours. These people who have said that Allah is their Lord and then followed the right path have chosen paradise and it has chosen and taken them as companions and sincere friends.

It has been mentioned that paradise yearns for its people, waits for them and asks about them, just as the fire yearns for its people and waits for them.

There is nothing strange about this, as every creation has its language of expression even inanimate objects. Allah says: ‘He knows the prayer of each one and its glorification’ (an-Nur: 41). Each of them glorifies in its own language that you do not understand because it is not your language. However, the One Who created them gave them a specific language that they communicate with.

The Noble Quran informs us that the ant communicated with its species and that they understood one another. Sulaiman (Solomon) peace be upon him heard them speaking and he thanked Allah for giving him the blessing of being able to understand these creatures. That is why we have rectified the statement that the pebbles praised Allah Glorified is He in the hands of Prophet Muhammad Allah’s peace and blessings be upon him because the pebbles naturally glorify Allah even if they were in the hands of Abu Lahab. Thus, we should say that he Allah’s peace and blessings be upon him heard the pebbles praising Allah while in his hands.

Allah Glorified is He says that they are the people of paradise who will abide eternally therein. That is because the blessings of paradise are everlasting, eternal and never come to an end. They are not disrupted like the blessings of the life of this world which are disrupted because those blessings of the Hereafter will not miss you, nor will you miss them.

Allah Glorified is He says that paradise is their reward for what they were doing. Is it something that the slave deserves or is it a favour from Allah Glorified is He? Scholars said that paradise is a favour from Allah Glorified is He and action is nothing but a cause and a price for entering it. This is because Allah Glorified is He legislated obligations for our own good and well-being and to set our daily affairs right, both at the individual level and the group level. Thus, we reap the fruits of righteous action and we enjoy it during our lives in this world. However, Allah rewards us again in the Hereafter with no profit or benefit going back to Him Glorified is He. Therefore, entering paradise is something extra and it is a favour from Allah.

Moreover, there is a remark here: what is action? Action is a task which is carried out by a part of the body. The hand moves; the tongue articulates; the eyes see and so forth. If you were to reflect on actions, you would find that there are two types: sayings and doings. Thus the tongue alone takes half of all actions and the remaining limbs take the other half. Therefore, it is through the tongue that Prophet Muhammad Allah's peace and blessings be upon him could convey his Message and people will consequently accept it or reject it.

Then Allah Glorified is He states:

وَوَصَّيۡنَا ٱلۡإِنسَٰنَ بِوَٰلِدَيۡهِ إِحۡسَٰنًاۖ حَمَلَتۡهُ أُمُّهُۥ كُرۡهٗا وَوَضَعَتۡهُ كُرۡهٗاۖ وَحَمۡلُهُۥ وَفِصَٰلُهُۥ
ثَلَٰثُونَ شَهۡرًاۚ حَتَّىٰٓ إِذَا بَلَغَ أَشُدَّهُۥ وَبَلَغَ أَرۡبَعِينَ سَنَةٗ قَالَ رَبِّ أَوۡزِعۡنِيٓ أَنۡ أَشۡكُرَ نِعۡمَتَكَ
ٱلَّتِيٓ أَنۡعَمۡتَ عَلَيَّ وَعَلَىٰ وَٰلِدَيَّ وَأَنۡ أَعۡمَلَ صَٰلِحٗا تَرۡضَىٰهُ وَأَصۡلِحۡ لِي فِي ذُرِّيَّتِيٓۖ إِنِّي
تُبۡتُ إِلَيۡكَ وَإِنِّي مِنَ ٱلۡمُسۡلِمِينَ ﴿١٥﴾

We have commanded man to be good to his parents: his mother struggled to carry him and struggled to give birth to him – his bearing and weaning took a full thirty months. When he has grown to manhood and reached the age of forty he [may] say, 'Lord, help me to be truly grateful for Your favours to me and to my parents; help me to do good work that pleases You; make my offspring good. I turn to You; I am one of those who devote themselves to You' [15]
(The Quran, al-Ahqaf: 15)

Allah Glorified is He says that He has commanded and obligated man to do so. 'To command and enjoin someone' means that you ask him to do a good action that will benefit him in this life and in the Hereafter, and that will help him carry out his task. This is why you find that most of the commandments regarding important matters are made by senior people who are approaching the end of their lives as if they are advising their family and those they are enjoining to follow.

The Arabic root letters of the verb Wassa (command) occur in the Noble Quran in two forms. One of them indicates that act of commanding is repeated as in the verse we are discussing, as well as the saying of Allah: 'And the same did Ibrahim enjoin on his sons and [so did] Yaqoub' (al-Baqara: 132). As for the second form, it is a transitive verb as in the verse where Allah Glorified is He tells us about what the 'Isa (Jesus) peace be upon him says: 'And He has enjoined on me prayer and poor-rate so long as I live' (Maryam: 31). Thus, the Arabic verb for command is like the verbs anzala and nazzala. The former indicates that something came down all at once, while the latter means that it came down one after another.

The word man, who is being commanded, is absolute and general. It refers to all men, from Adam peace be upon him until the Last Hour is established. It is the name of the species which, amongst the chosen of the creation, is the counterpart to the jinn. We say, 'Men and jinn.' The Arabic Ins (man) means that we like to keep the company of one another. Unlike the jinn, we do not see them and we are not the same as them in terms of our nature, therefore there is no sociability between us and them. Allah says about Satan: 'He surely sees you; He as well as his host from whence you cannot see them' (al-A'raf: 27).

Therefore, this commandment is directed from Allah Glorified is He to all of mankind in general including the believer and the disbeliever, the legally responsible adult and the child who will be rewarded if he acts according to the commandment and who will not be punished if not.

It is possible to compare this issue to prayer as Prophet Muhammad Allah's peace and blessings be upon him said in the Noble Hadith: 'Command your children to perform prayer when they are seven years old and beat them (for not offering it) when they are ten.'(1) The command comes from you and the punishment also comes from you because they are still not at the age of legal responsibility. Further, prayer at this age is a matter of training and getting them used to and accustomed to it at a young age so that they continue to do it throughout their lives. Therefore, when they reach the age of legal responsibility, it will be easy for them and they will be doing it habitually.

Parents are the father and the mother who are the direct cause of one's existence. This is because there is an indirect cause which is the Sublime Creator Who brought Adam peace be upon him and Hawwa' (Eve) into existence. The first existence was out of nothing, while our existence is from procreation and from a cause, namely the parents.

For the preservation of the species and the population of the earth, Allah Glorified is He connected reproduction to the strongest natural inclinations and the greatest pleasure in man. How? Scholars said that when man looks at a beautiful sight, his eyes enjoy it and when he smells a nice scent, his nose enjoys it. The same goes for when you eat something that you love. Therefore, each limb has its own specific enjoyment. However, sexual intercourse produces a pleasure and an enjoyment that comprises all the limbs that share in it. Therefore Allah Glorified is He has legislated that a bath be taken afterwards because all the limbs took part in the process and because one is not thinking about Allah Glorified is He at that moment.

(1) Narrated by Abu Dawud

Allah Glorified is He has also connected the two because He knows that children represent a burden for the family and it is difficult to raise and provide for them. That is why He the Almighty swore by this matter when He said: ‘And by the begetter and whom he begot’ (al-Balad: 3).

If Allah Glorified is He had not connected reproduction to this pleasure, many people would do without it. You see how much a woman suffers from the pain of pregnancy and childbirth. She even says out of regret that she will never do it again. Then she forgets her pain and her suffering and yearns to get pregnant once again. Therefore, Allah Glorified is He connected reproduction to this pleasure for a reason. Unfortunately, it is astonishing that people exaggerate it, overdo it and take it outside of its proper bounds, making sexual pleasure the foundation.

We see animals, for example, practising it merely for the sake of preserving their species. This is why when the male approaches the female, it smells it first, and if it is pregnant, it leaves it alone and it does not give it a chance. It is also amazing that we find fault in animals and say ‘beastly desire’ and so forth. Glory be to Allah!

Moreover, we notice that the childhood of man is approximately the longest childhood comparing to all other creatures. Animals, for example, give birth. The mother breastfeeds her child and after the period of breast-feeding, she does not recognise the child and is not concerned with it.

As for man, he is a child until he reaches adolescence. Allah Glorified is He says: ‘And when the children among you have attained to puberty, let them seek permission’ (an-Nur: 59). That is because man is bound and commanded to fulfil Allah’s Commands and avoid His Prohibitions. Therefore, the nature of man and his honour of being connected to Allah has made his period of nurturing longer in order to suit his task in life. Look, for example, at the cow and how its child comes out, moves and shakes the moisture off itself. Then it stops for a few minutes after which it gets up, stands, and runs around; all of this takes place within an hour of birth.

As for our children, they are able to sit, for example, after a number of months. Then they crawl, stand, and then walk after a year or more. Indeed, we have some people who extend the childhood of their children until they are twenty-five years old and consider them children in the sense that they are dependent and their parents spend on them and do not give them any responsibility.

We find commandments with regards to the parents being connected to the worship of Allah Glorified is He in four places in the Noble Quran. First, Allah says: 'And serve Allah and do not associate anything with Him and be good to the parents' (an-Nisa': 36). Second, He says: 'And when We made a covenant with the children of Israel: You shall not serve any but Allah and [you shall do] good to [your] parents' (al-Baqara: 83). The third place is in the chapter of al-An'am where Allah Glorified is He says: 'Say: Come I will recite what your Lord has forbidden to you–[remember] that you do not associate anything with Him and show kindness to your parents,' (al-An'am: 151) and the forth is in the chapter of al-Isra': 'And your Lord has commanded that you shall not serve [any] but Him, and goodness to your parents' (al-Isra': 23).

These are the four places in which Allah Glorified is He commands children to be good to their parents. He connects this, due to its importance, to the His Worship, as if they are of equal weight on the scale. This is because parents, as we have mentioned, are the direct cause of one's existence, thus showing them filial gratitude and goodness paves the way and trains you to be reminded of the Sublime Cause of your existence, that is, Allah, the Creator.

Allah Glorified is He obligates us with this commandment even if the parents are disbelievers, which, as we have said, is a general enjoinment. He Glorified is He says: 'And We have enjoined on man goodness to his parents, and if they contend with you that you should associate [others] with Me, of which you have no knowledge, do not obey them, to Me is your return, so I will inform you of what you did' (al-'Ankabut: 8). He the Almighty also says:

'…Do not obey them, and keep company with them in this world kindly' (Luqman: 15). If Allah Glorified is He is enjoining us with regards to our parents because they are the direct cause of one's existence even if they are not believers, then what do you think of the Sublime Cause of your existence?

Some of the orientalists have objected to this point and said: 'The Quran says: '…Do not obey them, and keep company with them in this world kindly,' (Luqman: 15) and in another verse He says: 'You shall not find a people who believe in Allah and the latter day befriending those who act in opposition to Allah and His Messenger, even though they were their [own] fathers, or their sons, or their brothers, or their kinsfolk' (al-Mujadala: 22). They thereby consider it a contradiction between the two verses. This is because they do not understand the Arabic language and are not familiar with its styles and secrets, as there is a difference between love and kindness. Love comes from an emotion in the heart, while kindness is a favour that you do for someone you love and also someone you despise. When Allah Glorified is He commands us to show filial piety, He is only training us and preparing us to show piety towards the One Who created them and us. He is the Sublime Establisher of everything into existence.

Speaking legally, 'to be good to someone' means to do goodness and kindness beyond what you have been obligated to and within the same category as the obligation. Allah Glorified is He explained this meaning in the chapter of adh-Dhariyyat. He says: 'Surely those who guard [against evil] shall be in gardens and fountains. Taking what their Lord gives them; surely they were before that, the doers of good' (adh-Dhariyat: 15-16). Then He the Almighty describes them and gives aspects of their goodness, saying: 'They used to sleep but little in the night. And in the morning they asked forgiveness. And in their property was a portion due to him who begs and to him who is denied [good]' (adh-Dhariyat: 17-19).

These three issues are not mandatory upon a Muslim. Rather, they are beyond what Allah Glorified is He has commanded. Have you not seen what He the Almighty says regarding wealth: 'In their property was a portion due to him who begs and to him who is denied [good]' (al-Ma'ida: 19). However, when talking about the obligatory alms, He says: 'And those in whose wealth there is a fixed portion' (al-Ma'arij: 24).

Here, we should distinguish between the fixed portion, which is the obligatory zakat and the recommended one, which is the recommended charity. As for the zakat, a fixed portion of the money should be given out; as for the recommended charity, one is recommended to give out what he wants. Here, we should stress that whoever gives out the recommended charity, he reaches the level of Ihsan, which is the highest rank of worship.

Likewise, Allah Glorified is He commands us to show filial piety and do good to our parents as they have a favour over us in the sense that they brought us into existence, raised us and provided for us. Thus, we must give them more than what they deserve and when you give more then what you are obligated to give, you are doing good unto them.

Therefore, the command of filial piety does not stop at the necessary obligation, but rather, it transcends to the rank of Ihsan. That is why when Allah Glorified is He talks about the right of parents, He says: ‘Say not to them [so much as] “Ugh” nor chide them’ (al-Isra’: 23). ‘Ugh’ is a sound that expresses displeasure and indicates constriction. So, beware of saying this word to them, or complaining about them, especially when they are old and in an abject state and in the greatest need of compassion and care.

This is because, at this age, man returns to his childhood once again and he needs someone who carries him, helps him sit and feeds him and thereby he might do things that will cause offense, so beware of being offended by them in this state. Maybe his feet trembles and fall on the ground or breaks a vase, for example. Thus, beware of showing him what offends you and know that you are being rewarded for this. It is being stored away for you and it is a debt that will be discharged. Whoever shows piety to his parents will be shown piety by his own children. Anachronistically, you are showing him piety and bearing his burden while wishing death for him. However, he has done more than that for you and wished you a long life.

In light of this relationship between parents and children, we can understand the Hadith of Prophet Muhammad Allah’s peace and blessings be upon him: ‘O young men, whoever amongst you can afford marriage costs, let him get married, for indeed it lowers the gaze and preserves one from immorality.’(1)

(1) Narrated by Al-Bukhari and Muslim

Getting married at an early age is better because it protects the person who does it and also, as the Bedouin said, is the best way to have a parent who will take care of you in the childhood of your old age such that the child, in this situation, assumes the position of the parent who takes care of his child.

In another place, Allah Glorified is He uses a different word for goodness. He says: ‘And We have enjoined on man goodness to his parents’ (al-’Ankabut: 8). The difference between husn and Ihsan is that the latter is the action of doing something good to them. As for the former, it is the gerund of this verb and the noun of this process that you are involved in, like saying that ‘so-and-so a person is just’ yet ‘so-and-so a person is the justice itself’ meaning that he has reached the furthest extent in implementing justice such that he and justice are the same thing. Therefore, husn is more informative than Ihsan. Responding to a greeting with what is better is an Islamic principle. Therefore Allah says: ‘And when you are greeted with a greeting, greet with a better [greeting] than it or return it’ (an-Nisa’: 86).

We notice that Allah Glorified is He did not mention any reason for doing goodness to the parents in the verse: ‘Now (among the best of righteous deeds which) We have enjoined upon man (is) goodness (husn) towards his parents’ (al-’Ankabut: 8). Rather, He says afterwards: ‘And if they contend with you that you should associate [others] with Me, of which you have no knowledge’ (al-’Ankabut: 8). Allah Glorified is He maintains this right of theirs even in a situation of their disbelief and He affirmed and enjoined that they must be shown the best of filial piety

Allah, then, follows with the words: ‘It is unto Me that you all must return, whereupon I shall make you (truly) understand (the right and wrong of) all that you were doing (in life)’ (al-’Ankabut: 8). While in another verse He says: ‘…Do not obey them, and keep company with them in this world kindly’ (Luqman: 15). Scholars explained it saying that this is because parents are of two categories. One needs his child in order to live and a parent who does not need his child and is self-sufficient. If the parent is in need, then you keep company with him in kindness, i.e. assist him and make him live an honourable life. If he is self-sufficient, then that is his affair and everyone will be returned to Allah Glorified is He.

Here, in the verse that we are discussing, Allah Glorified is He did not say husn or Ihsan, but rather, He mentioned the reason behind the commandment saying: 'His mother struggled to carry him and struggled to give birth to him and the bearing of him and the weaning of him was thirty months' (al-Ahqaf: 15).

In the verse we are discussing, He Glorified is He determines the period of pregnancy along with the period of breastfeeding as one length of time. Yet in another verse He says about breastfeeding itself: 'And his weaning takes two years' (Luqman: 14). Therefore, each verse has taken a gleaning and by bringing the two verses together, we can solve some of the problems regarding the issue of the period of pregnancy and the period of breastfeeding.

It is related that 'Ali may Allah be pleased with him came to see 'Umar may Allah be pleased with him. 'Umar may Allah be pleased with him wanted to carry out the prescribed legal penalty for adultery on a woman because she had given birth after six months, whilst in her husband's house; it was well-known that the normal period for pregnancy is nine months. 'Ali may Allah be pleased with him told him to wait and he read the verses to him: '... And her bearing him and his utter dependence on her took thirty months' (al-Ahqaf: 15). He then read the other verse: '…And his utter dependence on her lasted two years' (Luqman: 14). 'Ali may Allah be pleased with him observed that by subtracting two years from thirty months, it is possible for the period of pregnancy to be six months which is the shortest term possible for a pregnancy.

That is why 'Umar may Allah be pleased with him said, 'Wretched is the place on earth where Abu Al-Hasan is not there.'(1) Indeed, 'Ali may Allah be pleased with him was renowned for his knowledge and legal verdicts because he had become Muslim since childhood, that is, he drank from the spring of Prophecy from a very early age. His education was an Islamic one from the very beginning. However, other people had some education that was given in the Age of Ignorance.

An example for the correct understanding and legal knowledge of 'Ali may Allah be pleased with him is that when Prophet Muhammad Allah's peace and blessings be upon him passed away, the Emigrants and Helpers met in As-Saqifa to discuss the matter of the Caliphate. Each side wanted one of their own to have the Caliphate and the Helpers were pushing for this. Then they said: ‘A leader from us and a leader from you.’ When this reached ‘Ali may Allah be pleased with him, he said: ‘Your arguments are not strong. Ask them, i.e. the Helpers whether they have heard the statement of Prophet Muhammad: “When you are in control, bequeath goodness to the Helpers.”’ Therefore, if leadership was to be with them, then bequests would not take its place.

(1) Narrated by Al-Hakim and Al-Bayhaqi

One of the curious stories that occurred between ‘Ali and ‘Umar may Allah be pleased with them is that ‘Ali came to see ‘Umar and found him angry. Whereupon he Allah be pleased with him said, ‘What has angered you, O Commander of the Believers?’ ‘Umar said, ‘I asked Hudhayfa*,* ‘How he is?’ and he said, “I woke up loving trial and temptation, hate the truth, pray without ablution and I have on earth what Allah does not have in the heavens.”’

‘Ali may Allah be pleased with him then laughed and said that Hudhayfa has spoken the truth. ‘Umar may Allah be pleased with him replied, ‘Do you say the same thing, O Abu Al-Hasan?’ ‘Yes,’ ‘Ali said and explained what Hudhayfa meant. He said that he woke up loving his properties and his child. ‘Ali may Allah be pleased with him then read the verse: ‘Your possessions and your children are only a trial’ (at-Taghabun: 15). He went on saying that he hates the truth, which is death and who from amongst us loves it?! Further, he prays without ablution meaning that he sends prayers upon Prophet Muhammad Allah’s peace and blessings be upon him. In addition, he has on earth what Allah does not have in the heavens meaning that he has a wife and a child. It is astonishing that we hear in our time those who diminish the rank of those people and want to abolish the personages of Abu Bakr, ‘Umar and ‘Ali may Allah be pleased with them from our history.

We also notice in the verse we are discussing that Allah Glorified is He says that a mother bears her son with trouble and she brings him forth with trouble. With trouble in this instance means reluctantly or with difficulty. Further, Allah Glorified is He says in another verse: ‘His mother bears him with fainting upon fainting,’ (Luqman: 14).

Fainting is the weakness that results from pregnancy and childbirth. As for the troubles of this matter, they are due to the fact that women have different natures. Amongst them are those who love this process and amongst them are those who hate it, but they reluctantly obey their husbands and bear the burdens of pregnancy, craving certain foods and the pain of childbirth afterwards. After the birth, they are fully preoccupied with the newborn child and they feel compassion for it. At the same time, the father is preoccupied with work and obtaining provision. This is why the man is more rational and the woman is more emotional, as each is according to their task in life.

Therefore some people make a mistake in understanding the Hadith of Prophet Muhammad Allah's peace and blessings be upon him about women wherein he says: 'I advise you to take care of the woman for they are created from a rib and the most crooked portion of the rib is its upper part. If you try to straighten it, it will break and if you leave it, it will remain crooked.'(1)

When we reflect on this Hadith, we find that the crookedness of the rib is for a reason because the ribs were created to protect the most precious and most important two organs in the body, i.e. the heart and the lungs. If the ribs were straight, then they would not be able to perform this task. Do we say, for example, that a hook is crooked, or that its crookedness is a defect? No, we never say that because the nature of its function and task necessitates that it be in this shape. Therefore, Prophet Muhammad Allah's peace and blessings be upon him compared the woman to the rib because their task is affection and compassion.

It is worth noting that when Allah Glorified is He commanded us with regards to our parents, He mentioned the considerations that concern the mother and did not mention any of the considerations that concern the father. Scholars said that it is because the role of the mother comes at a time when the child does not comprehend her role and her precedence in the phases of pregnancy, childbirth, and breastfeeding. As for the role of the father in providing and caring, it comes at a time when the child can comprehend the favours of his father. That is why we need to remind the child of the role of his mother and her precedence because he is not aware of it. As for the role of the father, he knows it well.

If we are concerned with the role of parents in terms of raising and educating, we must remember the verse wherein Allah Glorified is He says: 'And say: O my Lord! Have compassion on them, as they brought me up [when I was] little' (al-Isra': 24). This verse gives us the general method of raising all children.

(1) Narrated by Al-Bukhari and Muslim

The parents deserve such a commandment for two reasons. They are the direct cause of one's existence and thereby remind you of the Sublime Cause of your existence; and secondly, they raise you and thereby remind you of the Sublime Nurturer. Thus, Allah is a Lord and a Nurturer. He has created us from nothing and He provides for us from nothing. He is the One Who has nurtured and provided us with the means of nurturing. Therefore, the enjoinment to do good to parents trains us to improve our relationship with Allah, our Creator, and our Nurturer.

In addition, we understand from this verse that nurturing alone is a reason and consideration behind doing good. A child could be raised up and nurtured by other than his parents, and thus those who raised him would have precedence over him and would deserve to be shown gratitude because they have carried out half of the process. The father and mother thus have the virtue of bringing them into existence and the nurturer has the virtue of raising and thereby deserves half the reward.

This matter, therefore, encourages us to take care of orphans and nurture them for the sake of Allah's Countenance. If someone's father dies, then the entire community is his father. That is why Prophet Muhammad Allah's peace and blessings be upon him said: 'I will be like this in paradise with the person who takes care of an orphan.' He then raised his forefinger and middle finger by way of illustration.(1)

This is because if the father were to die and leave children who do not find anyone in the community to take care of them and be a father for them, they would grow up having resentment towards other children and towards the entire community. Maybe it will even lead to them rebelling against Allah Glorified is He Who decreed that they would be orphans.

Allah Glorified is He indicates the proper time of bringing up a child when He says: '…As they brought me up [when I was] little' (al-Isra': 24). That raising and nurturing have a time which is the time of childhood. I remember when I was invited to give a lecture entitled ‘Raising the Youth’ in one of our universities. However, before beginning the lecture, I sought the permission of the director of the university to change the title of the lecture because the youth are not to be raised. Youth is an energy that is utilised in your daily life. The youth have already been raised. If we were to say ‘Raising the Youth,’ the title would not be correct. It is raising or upbringing children because childhood is like dough that could be formed without objecting. As for the youth, they are fully formed. This is why they object and they react unhappily when you give them criticism or an instruction.

(1) Narrated by Al-Bukhari

However, the youth who were in attendance at the university said that they were not raised in the correct way, so they wanted to recommence their raising. I said to them: ‘Therefore, recommence your childhood with us and accept instruction and criticism without objecting to it. Be like the patient before the doctor accepting whatever he says without discussion.’

One of our mistakes in raising children is that we prolong their childhood and thus the family continues to bring up the child and provide for him until he is twenty or twenty-five years old. This is why the west has surpassed us in this matter because when one of their children reaches puberty, he becomes independent from his family and provides for himself, even if his father were a millionaire. This increases the numbers of workers, decreases idleness, and increases production. These are all means of advancement that we do not have and up till now we have not been able to utilise the capabilities of the youth.

Indeed, if you were to go to one of the capital cities of the west, you would not see the youth there filling the streets and corners. You would not find the cafes filled with people without jobs. You will only see them at their break time going out like locusts to have their lunch. Nevertheless, the mistake that they have made is that they have made this apply to both boys and girls.

The words of Allah Glorified is He ‘…As they brought me up [when I was] little,’ (al-Isra’: 24) show that both parents were involved, the father and the mother; and that each of them has a role in raising and nurturing. The father earns, while the woman runs and takes cares of the home. Thus, they are partners in this matter and the presence of the woman in the house, generally speaking, means that she has greater influence than the man in the process of raising and nurturing. This is why we give boys what suits them and we give girls what suits them as we are concerned with raising and nurturing according to gender.

For this reason, it befits us now to mention the advice that the Arab mother gave her daughter as she was preparing her to move in with her husband. She said to her: ‘My dear daughter, if advice is left due to etiquettes of people, I would leave it to your perfect etiquettes, but it is a wake-up call for the heedless and a help for the intelligent. My dear daughter, indeed tomorrow you will leave the house in which you grew up and the nest in which you crawled and learned to walk for a house that you are not familiar with and a companion whom you do not know, to be a slave girl to your husband and he will be a slave to you. My dear daughter, if the woman could dispense of the man due to the wealth of her parents and her lack of need of anyone besides them, then you would be the most independent of people with regards to him, but women were created for men and men were created for them. My dear daughter, take and maintain from me ten qualities that will be stored up for you. The first and the second are that you keep company with him in contentment and that you listen to him properly and obey. The third and fourth is that you check the places that are subject to his eye and nose so that his eye never sees anything ugly from you and he never smells anything from you except the most beautiful fragrance.

‘The fifth and sixth are that you check the time for sleeping and eating, for indeed frequent hunger is inflammatory and disturbing sleep is annoying. The seventh and eighth are that you guard his wealth and take care of his decency and his dependents.

‘The foundation of the matter with regards to wealth is good assessment and with dependents it is good planning. As for the ninth and tenth, do not disobey him in anything and do not divulge his secrets, for indeed if you undermine his command you arouse his anger and if you divulge his secrets you will not be safe from his treachery. Beware of being happy in front of him if he is worried or being depressed in front of him, while he is happy.’

This is the advice of Umama bint Al-Harith may Allah be pleased with her to her daughter Umm Unas bint ‘Awf ibn Muhallim Ash-Shaybani. This enjoinment was before Islam, but despite that it contains etiquettes and pieces of advices that would solve most of the family problems that are filling our courtrooms today if they were heeded by the wives in our current age. If every mother were to raise her daughter according to these etiquettes, our affairs would be put right. Unfortunately the fact is that we have abandoned these pieces of advice and become heedless of implementing them in our homes. Rather, we have left the homes to the maids and we have left raising and nurturing to those who are not qualified such that we find ourselves in the situation in which we are.

Moreover, Allah, Glorfied is He, says: ‘Until when he attains his maturity and reaches forty years, he says: My Lord! Grant me that I may give thanks for Thy favor which Thou hast bestowed on me and on my parents’ (al-Ahqaf: 15). This is another phase of life that is the phase of puberty. That is when one has reached the utmost in terms of the completion of his body, strength and intellect.

An example of this is the saying of Allah regarding Yusuf (Joseph) peace be upon him: ‘And when he had attained his maturity, We gave him wisdom and knowledge: and thus do We reward those who do good’ (Yusuf: 22). Allah Glorified is He also says about Musa (Moses): ‘And when he attained his maturity and became full grown, We granted him wisdom and knowledge; and thus do We reward those who do good [to others]’ (al-Qasas: 14).

Therefore, reaching full manhood and maturity and the completion of one’s body, strength and intellect is the beginning of receiving wisdom and it is the beginning of being legally responsible. If one was made legally responsible before puberty and then puberty and adolescence took place along with the changes that happen in the body as result, the slave would might say, ‘Changes have happened to me that I was not thinking about when I came to believe in You.’ This is why the entire process has been delayed until the age of puberty which is the peak of maturity.

The peak of maturity in man is when he is able to reproduce someone like him. The same goes for fruits, for example. We said before that the melon is not nice to eat until its core has become even and black such that if we were to cultivate it, it would give us a new plant. When you eat this you are guaranteed that there will be others. But if you break it open and its core is not even, eat it and then cultivate the core and it will not grow. Thus, this is wisdom for maintaining the species. This is why Allah Glorified is He says: ‘Behold, the fruit of it when it yields the fruit and the ripening of it’ (al-An‘am: 99). The existence of the word ripening means that you make sure that there will be another tree just as you notice in fruit-bearing trees that if you do not pick the fruits they fall on their own.

It is from the wisdom of The Creator and the wonders of the creation that you, in the phase of growth and before the age of puberty, find the process of growth is completed with an accurate estimation and inimitability. For example, there are things in the body that grow but also things in the body that resemble them that do not grow. Take the example of hair. It grows and we cut it from time to time. As for the hair of the eyebrows, for example, or the eyelashes, it does not grow. The same goes for the bones. They grow as the child grows until it reaches full maturity. At the same time, the teeth are also bones and they stop once they are in a particular shape and then no longer grow. If they continued to grow like all the other bones they would become like the tusks of an elephant.

Therefore, the matter is not mechanical, as we have said, but rather it is engineered by the One Who originated this universe.

Allah Glorified is He says afterwards: ‘And reaches forty years, he (that is righteous) prays: ‘O my Lord! Inspire me so that I may forever be grateful for those blessings of You with which you have graced me and my parents,’ (al-Ahqaf: 15). Allah Glorified is He specifies the age of forty because it is the age at which man should stop, take himself to account and correct his path.

The age of forty is the peak of the intellectual maturity, and it is also the beginning of the descent towards the death. This is why the True Lord the Almighty turns our attention towards the age of forty so that we can stop and put in order whatever we need to. Allah’s saying: ‘…help me…’ (al-Ahqaf: 15) means: make me concerned and give me the strength. Allah the Almighty the says: ‘…to be truly grateful for Your favours to me…’ (al-Ahqaf: 15). These favours and blessings include being brought into existence, our health, and well-being, Islam, enabling success and obedience and making the parents nurture and raise us. Then the gratitude is extended to the parents, Allah the Almighty says: '…and to my parents…' (al-Ahqaf: 15) because the blessing for the parent is a blessing for its child. Then He the Almighty says: '…help me to do good work that pleases you…' (al-Ahqaf: 15) which means 'enable me success and inspire me to do righteous action.'

Righteous action is to stand firm in implementing the commands and avoiding the prohibitions that have been related to us via the text. Regarding that for which there is no text, you are free to do it or not to do it. Allah's saying: '…that pleases you…' (al-Ahqaf: 15) means that this action is in accordance with Allah's Way of Guidance, or it means that you accept it and you reward me for it. Then Allah's saying: '…make my offspring good…' (al-Ahqaf: 15) is a supplication to have righteousness extended to one's offspring, or it could mean that I, O Lord, squandered myself and fell short, and I do not want that for my offspring. I want them to have the righteousness that I did not attain to. This is a known principle; that the father loves to amend what he missed out on in his life and make sure that it is realised in the lives of his children and his progeny after them. He wants them to realise the perfection that he never attained. This is why he is happy even if his child surpasses him. Reflect on the verb in Allah's saying: '…make good (aslih)…' (al-Ahqaf: 15), and you will find that it is transitive in and of itself, so why is fi (in) mentioned when Allah the Almighty says: '…and make good in (fi) my offspring…' (al-Ahqaf: 15)? Why did He not say: 'Grant me righteous offspring'? What is the necessity behind this? The style here is as if He is making the offspring a container for receiving righteousness and man's container is his heart. This is why it is mentioned in the Hadith: 'Indeed in the body there is a lump of flesh; if it is sound then the whole body is sound and if it is corrupt then the whole body is corrupt. Indeed it is the heart.'(1) Therefore, fi was used to make the offspring a container and an envelope.

(1) See Al-Bukhari, Sahih, Hadith no (50) and Muslim, Sahih, Hadith no (2996) from the Hadith of Nuʿman ibn Bashir that he heard Prophet Muhammad Allah's peace and blessings be upon him saying: 'Indeed the permissible is clear and the impermissible is clear, but in between them there are doubtful matters and most people have no knowledge of them. Thus, whoever saves himself from doubtful matters saves his religion and his honor. And whoever indulges in doubtful matters is like a shepherd who grazes his animals near the private pasture of someone else and at any moment he is liable to slip into it…'

Allah the Almighty then says: '…I turn to You; I am one of those who devote themselves to You,' (al-Ahqaf: 15). The door of repentance is open until the end of one's life, but we should not delay it and be heedless of it. However, some of us are taken over by the life of this world and it makes them forget themselves, so they delay repenting and reconciling themselves with their Lord until this age. This is why a tradition has been mentioned: 'If a slave has not repented after forty years, Allah runs His hand over his face and says: 'Is it not time for this face to be ashamed?' There is another Hadith: 'If someone reaches the age of forty and his goodness does not outweigh his evil, then let him prepare himself – and we seek refuge in Allah – for Hell.'(1) Why? It is because you had fun in your youth and you satiated your desires with whatever you wanted. However, when you're forty and above, you should be ashamed of disobeying Allah the Almighty and be ashamed of delaying your repentance when you cannot guarantee how long you'll live. Allah's saying: '…I am one of those who devote themselves to You,' (al-Ahqaf: 15), means that defectiveness and inadequacy are not in the creed. Rather, they are in implementing the rulings that are required by the creed.

Allah the Almighty then says:

فِيٓ أَصۡحَٰبِ ٱلۡجَنَّةِۖ وَعۡدَ ٱلصِّدۡقِ ٱلَّذِى كَانُواْ يُوعَدُونَ ١٦

We accept from such people the best of what they do and We overlook their bad deeds. They will be among the people of Paradise – the true promise that has been given to them [16] (The Quran, al-Ahqaf: 16)

Allah's saying: '…these are…' (al-Ahqaf: 16), refers to those who have just been mentioned along with their attributes. Allah the Almighty then says:

(1) Narrated by Abu Al-Fath Al-Azdi from Jubayr from Ad-Dahhak and then from Ibn ʿAbbas who attributed it to Prophet Muhammad Allah's peace and blessings be upon him: 'If someone reaches the age of forty and their goodness does not outweigh their evil, then let them prepare for the Fire.' See Al-Alusi in his commentary of (al-Ahqaf: 15); see also As-Suyuti, Ad-Durr Al-Manthur. Imam Ibn Al-Jawzi said in [Al-Mawduʿat]: 'This is not an authentic Hadith from Allah's Messenger', and Al-ʿAjluni mentioned it in Kashf Al-Khafaʾ (2344).

'…they from whom We accept the best of what they have done…' (al-Ahqaf: 16). It is well-known that the verb taqabbala (accept) is transitive along with the particle min (from), as in the statement of Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon him: 'And when Ibrahim and Ismail raised the foundations of the House: Our Lord! Accept from us…' (al-Baqara: 127). In another verse, Allah the Almighty says: 'And He it is Who accepts repentance of His servants…' (ash-Shura: 25). Therefore, it is sometimes transitive with the word min (from) and sometimes transitive with the word ʿan (of), and each of them has a distinctive meaning. Thus, Allah's saying: 'These are they from whom We accept the best of what they have done…' (al-Ahqaf: 16) means that repentance relieves you of the burden and weight of disobedience because it removes it from you. Therefore He the Almighty says: '…of (ʿan) what they have done…' (al-Ahqaf: 16) because using one word in the place of another word should be done for reason and it adds a meaning that is not given by the other word. We clarified this issue before regarding the True Lord's saying: 'Praise be to Allah, Who has given me in old age Ismail…' (Ibrahim: 39). All scholars believe that ʿala here means: with his old age. By reflecting on the verse, we find that maʿ is comprised of two letters while ʿala is comprised of three. Why did the Noble Quran use ʿala here instead of maʿ? Why did it leave off the ease of two letters in favour of three? When we reflect on the matter of Ibrahim's (Abraham's) old age peace be upon him we find that the company that is indicated by maʿ is insufficient, as the meaning is a word that should indicate company that is overcome. This is because old age was present with Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon him and accompanying him, but his old age was overcome by Allah's Power. It is as if His Absolute Power overcame the law of old age and violated the rule. Thus Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon him came in spite of this old age, and this meaning cannot be conveyed with maʿ but rather with ʿala. Likewise, in Allah's saying: '…and most surely your Lord is the Lord of forgiveness to people, notwithstanding their injustice; and most surely your Lord is severe in requiting (evil)' (ar-Ra'd: 6). Thus, it is as if the sin necessitates punishment but Allah's Forgiveness overcomes and takes predominance over this punishment. Therefore, when He uses one word in the place of another, it must add a meaning that is given by the first word. Therefore, Allah's saying: '…We accept the best of what they have done…'

(al-Ahqaf: 16) means that We relieved them of the burden that was there before repentance. In another verse the True Lord the Almighty explains this meaning: '…so these are they of whom Allah changes the evil deeds to good ones…' (al-Furqan: 70). Someone even said: 'By Allah, I have no regrets that I have committed any major sins because Allah will transform them into good deeds.' This is wrong, because who can tell you how long you will live so that you can repent. Allah's saying: '…and pass over their evil deeds…' (al-Ahqaf: 16) means that We will pardon them and be forbearing. Allah the Almighty then says: '…among the dwellers of the garden…' (al-Ahqaf: 16). I stated before that being 'the ashab of paradise' means that there will be companionship or friendship between them, or that it means that they will be the owners of it. However, here He Glorified is He says: '…among (fi) the dwellers of the garden…' (al-Ahqaf: 16). It is as if these people that we are talking about are in the middle of paradise, or the people of paradise are surrounding them. They are in the centre. This understanding comes from the meaning of fi here. However, why is it that these people deserve to be in the middle and in the centre and the people of paradise are around them? Scholars said: 'It is because those who had been accustomed to disobedience and then moved over to obedience went through great difficulty after they had been delighted and pleased with disobedience. Thus, they struggle with themselves to stay upon obedience, as opposed to those who have not experienced disobedience. Obedience for these people is natural and they do not need to struggle like the former. This is why Allah the Almighty treats them with this lenience and this favour such that He transforms their evil deeds into good ones and this is the utmost of generosity. Then the True Lord the Almighty reassures them: '…the promise of truth which they were promised,' (al-Ahqaf: 16). It is as if they do not believe that Allah the Almighty will treat them with this favour, so He reminds them that this is Allah's Promise which is a True Promise that is never broken. There is no one who can revoke or nullify this Promise.

The True Lord the Almighty gives His slaves all of these facilitations and incentives, as He accepts the repentance of those who repent and He forgives those who commit bad deeds and He transforms their bad deeds into good ones. This is not for the salvation of only the repentant, but rather, the salvation of the entire society. If repentance had not been legislated, society would have become miserable with every disobedient person having a door slammed in his face and evil and corruption would have become widespread.

Allah the Almighty then says:

وَٱلَّذِى قَالَ لِوَٰلِدَيْهِ أُفٍّ لَّكُمَآ أَتَعِدَانِنِىٓ أَنْ أُخْرَجَ وَقَدْ خَلَتِ ٱلْقُرُونُ مِن قَبْلِى وَهُمَا يَسْتَغِيثَانِ ٱللَّهَ وَيْلَكَ ءَامِنْ إِنَّ وَعْدَ ٱللَّهِ حَقٌّ فَيَقُولُ مَا هَٰذَآ إِلَّآ أَسَٰطِيرُ ٱلْأَوَّلِينَ ﴿١٧﴾

But some say to their parents, ‘What? Are you really warning me that I shall be raised alive from my grave, when so many generations have already passed and gone before me?’ His parents implore God for help; they say, ‘Alas for you! Believe! God’s promise is true,’ but still he replies, ‘These are nothing but ancient fables’ [17]

The Noble Quran gives us a number of gleanings of parents with children, yet they differ according to the circumstances. Because of the importance of this relationship between the parent and the child, Allah the Almighty connected the enjoinment concerning parents to His worship, to the extent that He gave it the same importance and sanctity. He the Almighty says: ‘And your Lord has commanded that you shall not serve (any) but Him, and goodness to your parents…’ (al-Isra’: 23). This is because the parent and the child are the essential nucleus for building a community. So if it is sound, the community is sound, and if it is corrupt then the community is corrupt. The soundness of this cell requires that we should know the rank of the parents and that they are the direct cause of one’s existence, and thus they have the right of causality in bringing one into existence, meaning if it was not for them then the child would not exist.

When we show them filial piety and respect them, this trains us to exalt and respect the First Creator and the Original Founder of everything. This is why this enjoinment is general. There is no difference between a believer and a disbeliever, as the True Lord enjoins us to respect our parents, even if they are disbelievers because He is the Lord of everyone and He takes it upon Himself to give life, sustenance and subsistence to everyone because they are His slaves and His making. I said that we must notice the difference between Divinity and Lordship. Lordship has to do with giving and nurturing while Divinity has to do with commandments and worship by obeying commands and avoiding prohibitions. It is also a gift, but a gift of legal responsibility with regards to doing and not doing. It is a gift because the benefit goes back to the slave and Allah does not benefit from it in the slightest. The obedience of the obedient does not give Him the Almighty an attribute that He did not have, nor does the disobedience of the disobedient strip Him of an attribute that is firmly established for Him. This is because Allah has the Attributes of Absolute Perfection and this was the case before He even created this creation. This is why when man is in a serious problem that he is unable to do anything about, we see him saying: ‘O Lord!’ He calls for the Attribute of Lordship. The meaning of ‘O Lord’ is ‘O You Who has taken care of me and raised me. Take me by the hand and help me.’ However, when he wants to seek help in a matter of legal responsibility, he says: ‘O Allah!’ meaning ‘My God, O You Who has commanded me and helped me to obey You in what you have commanded me.’ Therefore, Allah the Almighty gets nothing from man’s acts of worship. Rather, the reward is acquired by the one who is legally responsible. The True Lord the Almighty wants a believing, righteous community firmly built and established and in the best of states, just as you encourage your little child to revise by saying to him: ‘If you pass, I will buy you a bicycle or a suit.’ This is because you want goodness for him. You will not benefit from what you buy for him. This is why it is mentioned in the Qudsi Hadith ‘O My slaves! Indeed, you will never bring any benefit that would benefit Me and you will never bring any harm that would harm Me. O My slaves! If the first of you and the last of you, those of you who are alive and those of you who are dead, those of you who are human and those of you who are jinn, and those of you who are present and those of you who are absent were all like the most Allah-conscious man among you, that would not increase Me in My Dominion in the slightest. And, if the first of you and the last of you were like the most sinful man among you, that would not decrease my Dominion in the slightest.

O My slave, if the first of you and the last of you…were to gather altogether on an open plain and each one of you were to ask what he wanted, I would grant it to each one of you and that would not decrease what I have except as much as what a needle extracts when it is dipped in the ocean. This is because I am magnanimous, glorious; My giving is speech and My punishment is speech. When I want something My only command is to say: ‘Be!’ and it is.’(1) Therefore, legal responsibility is entirely for the benefit of the legally responsible people. I clarified this matter when we explained the meaning of Allah’s saying: ‘These are on a right course from their Lord…’ (al-Baqara: 5). It is as if guidance is a beast and a mount that carries the guided people and takes them to the destination that they are heading for. It is thus clear that guidance is not a burden and a weight upon the one who has it, but rather, it helps him. The verse that we are discussing: ‘…But some say to their parents, ‘What?’ (al-Ahqaf: 17) gives us a gleaning of when the parents are believers and the child is a disbeliever. It also illustrates the eagerness of the parents for the child’s salvation, as we have seen in the story of Prophet Nuh (Noah) peace be upon him and his son. This verse was revealed regarding ʿAbd Ar-Rahman ibn Abu Bakr(2) may Allah be pleased with him. His parents had accepted Islam, but he himself had refused. They would call on him to have faith in Allah and faith in the Resurrection, but he would say to them: ‘Where is so-and-so? Where is so-and-so?’ and he used to refer to people who had lived and died in the past.(3) Then ʿAbd Ar-Rahman may Allah be pleased with him became a good Muslim. It is yet said that ʿAʾisha may Allah be pleased with her disagreed with this and said that it was sent down in reference to someone whom she mentioned by name. Allah's saying: 'But some say to their parents…' (al-Ahqaf: 17) means 'remember the one who said to his parents: '…Fie upon both of you…' (al-Ahqaf: 17). The word uff (Ugh) is a noun verb in the imperfect tense and is used to express displeasure. When someone says yataʾffafu, it means that he said 'uff' and he is showing irritation or displeasure with regards to something dirty or filthy or an action that he is not happy with. Allah's saying: '…upon both of you…' (al-Ahqaf: 17) indicates his anger towards both because they are urging him. He Glorified is He then says: '…Fie upon both of you…' (al-Ahqaf: 17). This is not being far from them. But why did he, i.e. the son say 'uff'? Some scholars said: 'It is because the parents were urging him to believe, yet he did not want faith. After they had urged him a great deal, he said uff and then said what Allah the Almighty recorded in the Noble Quran: '…Are you really warning me that I shall be raised alive from my grave…' (al-Ahqaf: 17)?' This question means, 'Will I be resurrected after death?' The hamza is used to ask a question here and it indicates astonishment or denial, as he is denying the resurrection. Then he brings the proof that supports his point of view: '…when so many generations have already passed and gone before me' (al-Ahqaf: 17) meaning that generations have passed and many have died yet I have not seen any of them come out of their graves. However, he who thinks that Resurrection will be in the worldly life is wrong because Resurrection will take place in the time fixed by Allah the Almighty. However, after the parents had heard this speech and noticed this determination to remain upon disbelief, they found nothing other than Allah, so they turned to Him Glorified is He. Allah the Almighty says: '…His parents implore Allah for help; they say, 'Alas for you! Believe!' (al-Ahqaf: 17) This illustrates the nature of the parents and their strong desire for their son to be saved, as they implore and urge their son to believe and taste the sweetness of faith that they have tasted. Allah's saying, '…Alas for you! Believe!' (al-Ahqaf: 17) is, again, compelling him to believe, or alas for you if you do not believe. We notice here that the verb yastaghith (implore Allah for help) is made transitive with the word baʾ, and thus one says: 'so-and-so yastaghith (seeks help) in (bi) Allah', so why is the baʾ removed here and the verb is transitive on its own. Allah the Almighty says: '…they implore Allah for help

(1) See At-Tirmidhi, Sunnan, no. (2419); see also Ibn Majah, Sunnan, no. (4247) and Ahmad, Musnad, no. (20405, 20560) from the Hadith of Abu Dharr. At-Tirmidhi said: ‘This Hadith is good (hasan).’

(2) His nickname was Abu ‘Abdullah or Abu Mohamed. He is the full brother of ʿAisha, the wife of Prophet Muhammad, and his mother is Umm Ruman bint Al-Harith. He witnessed Badr and Uhud with his people, while he was still a disbeliever. He accompanied Prophet Muhammad in the treaty of Al-Hudaybiya. The scholars of the Prophetic Biography say: ‘His name was ‘Abd Al-Kaʿba, so the Messenger of Allah changed it and called him ʿAbd Ar-Rahman.’ [Al-Istiʾab fi Maʿrifat Al-Ashab 1/248].

(3) Regarding the opinion that states that this verse was revealed down concerning ʿAbd Ar-Rahman ibn Abu Bakr As-Siddiq, this is the opinion of Ibn ʿAbbas, As-Suddi, Abu Al-ʿAliya and Mujahid. It is also said that it was ʿAbdallah ibn Abu Bakr instead. In his Tafsir (9/6246), Al-Qurtubi mentioned this in his Tafsir. Ibn Kathir said: ‘If someone claims that it was sent down with regard to ʿAbd Ar-Rahman ibn Abu Bakr then their opinion is weak because ʿAbd Ar-Rahman ibn Abu Bakr became a good Muslim and he was from the best of people in his time.’

(yasthaghithani Allah)…' (al-Ahqaf: 17). Some scholars said: 'This shows that they are facing a difficult matter, a hard heart that is blockaded and stubborn. It does not accept any invitation and it does not respond to the call of the parents, nor does it appreciate their feelings.' This is why they turned to Allah the Almighty directly to guide their son; to open his heart and soften this hard character so that he can listen, obey and be saved. It is for this reason that I previously said that you will not find anyone who loves goodness for you the way your parents love it for you, to the extent that they love for you to be in a better state than them. This is only found with parents and children. Therefore, in the face of this stubbornness the parents have no choice but to turn to Allah, the One Who turns over hearts and is the Original Founder of all causes. When the means of the creation are restricted, leave it to the Creator, as the hearts are between two of His Fingers and He turns them over as He wills. I previously said this with regards to the story of the mother of Musa (Moses) peace be upon him when Allah the Almighty said to her: '…then when you fear for him, cast him into the river and do not fear nor grieve…' (al-Qasas: 7). By Allah, would you accept or would you fear for your child if you cast him into the sea? Would you accept to save him from a probable death in favour of certain death? However, she believed, affirmed, and carried out what she had to do because Allah the Almighty had turned her heart. What the All-Merciful decreed cannot be opposed or nullified by what Satan has decreed. This is why Allah the Almighty says: '…and know that Allah intervenes between man and his heart…' (al-Anfal: 24). This matter happened with the Pharaoh, but Allah the Almighty intervened between him and his heart and what he wanted; he was looking for children to kill. Then a child came to him in a box that had been cast into the sea and in a way that was doubtful and questionable. Despite that, he accepted him, raised him and nurtured him to the extent that he affirmed his wife when she said about the boy, as Allah the Almighty says: '…A refreshment of the eye to me and to you…' (al-Qasas: 9). Therefore, this is foolishness, but on behalf of whom? It is on behalf of the Pharaoh, who claimed divinity when he said to the people: 'I am your Lord All-Highest!' Then, when we reflect on the story, we find other proofs of the foolishness of this man. The magicians said to him: 'Indeed your kingdom will come to an end at the hand of child who will be born from the Children of Israel, so as long as you believe in this prophecy, why are you killing children?'

Therefore, Allah's Decrees must inevitably be realised, and He prepares their means for them. This is the meaning of Allah's saying: '…His parents implore Allah for help…' (al-Ahqaf: 17). They say: 'O Lord! You have power over everything and You are beyond means. There is nothing we can do with this son and it pains us to leave him in his disbelief and be ruined.' Prophet Muhammad Allah's peace and blessings be upon him taught him to seek refuge in Allah, whenever he Allah's peace and blessings be upon him is in distress, he would get up and pray(1) in order to stand in front of his Lord Who would relieve every hardship and Who would ease every difficulty. The word: '…Believe…' (al-Ahqaf: 17) means: 'articulate the testimony of faith and acknowledge that Allah is the one God.' There are different variations of the word aaman (believe) in the Noble Quran with different meanings. You say: 'Amantu bi (I believe in) Allah', and this verb is transitive with the word *ba*ʾ, meaning: I bear witness and I affirm. 'Amantu lahu': It means I believe in what he is saying, as in Allah's saying: '…and you will not believe us…' (Yusuf: 17) meaning: you will not affirm and trust him, that is, I have placed my trust in him. In their statement: '…Allah's Promise is true…' (al-Ahqaf: 17), they are stressing this fact to him. As long as it is true, then it will happen and there is no escape from it because Allah is one God and He has no partner. No one can nullify this promise or oppose it. He is the fully Capable, the All-Powerful and He can carry out whatever He has promised. This is why Allah the Almighty says regarding the Last Hour: 'Allah's Commandment has come, therefore do not desire to hasten it; glory be to Him, and highly exalted be He above what they associate (with Him)' (an-Nahl: 1). This is in the past tense because Allah's Promise is the same, be it in the past, present or future, as He is the Creator of time and He is its Owner. He does what He wants with it. Thus He uses the past tense to indicate the future because He knows that there is no force that can oppose it.

(1) In his Musnad (5/388), Imam Ahmad; Abu Dawud Sunnan, Hadith no (1319); Abu Dawud narrated that Hudhayfa said: 'When the Prophet's situation became difficult, he would pray.'

Therefore, the Resurrection that will come in the future has actually already come and it is an event regarding which there is no doubt. This is why He freely administers the universe with His Testimony for Himself, as the first one to believe is Allah, Who believes with His Essence. Allah the Almighty says: ‘Allah bears witness that there is no god but He…’ (Al-ʿImran: 18). Thus, Allah testified on behalf of His Essence before anyone from His creation testified to this. It is as if He, with this testimony, is fully engaged with everything that He wants and He knows that none of it will be impossible and that it is nothing other than ‘Be!’ and it is. Likewise, Prophet Muhammad Allah’s peace be upon him testifies to the Message on behalf of himself before anyone else testifies to it. It is narrated that Jabir ibn ʿAbdullah may Allah be pleased with him once owed a debt to a Jewish man and he promised him that once his date palm bore fruit, he would pay off his debt. When the time for bearing fruit had come, his date palm did not produce what he had hoped for and Jabir may Allah be pleased with him was unable to discharge the debt. So, some of Jabir’s brothers went to Prophet Muhammad Allah’s peace and blessings be upon him and related the story to him, so he sent for the Jewish man and said to him: ‘Give Jabir more time so that he can pay his due.’ The man responded: ‘No, O Abu Qasim’, so Prophet Muhammad Allah’s peace and blessings be upon him repeated himself: ‘Give Jabir more time.’ Again he responded: ‘No, O Abu Al-Qasim’. So, Prophet Muhammad Allah’s peace and blessings be upon him left him and went to Jabir’s orchard and walked through it. Then he said: ‘Where is your bower, O Jabir?’ Jabir may Allah be pleased with him then took Prophet Muhammad Allah’s peace and blessings be upon him and sat him in his bower wherein he Allah’s peace and blessings be upon him said: ‘Leave me here, O Jabir. Go and cut off and pay back what you owe.’ So, Jabir may Allah be pleased with him went to his date palms and cut of what he needed to pay back his debt and there was enough left to suffice him. Then he came back to Prophet Muhammad Allah’s peace and blessings be upon him with a plate of fresh, ripe dates and said to him: ‘O Messenger of Allah, I have paid off what I owed and I have left over an amount greater than any previous year.’ At that point, Prophet Muhammad Allah’s peace and blessings be upon him laughed and said: ‘I bear witness that I am the Messenger of Allah.’(1) Allah’s saying: ‘…Allah’s promise is true…’ (al-Ahqaf: 17) means that His Promise is True and it will not be broken. The truth is firm and established and it does not change because He the Almighty is the One Who decides it and decrees it. No one can change it. This is why Allah the Almighty says: ‘Such has been the course of Allah that has indeed run before, and you shall not find a change in Allah’s Course’ (al-Fath: 23). Allah’s saying: ‘…but still he replies, ‘These are nothing but ancient fables,’ (al-Ahqaf: 17) means that this stubborn son says to his parents while they are calling on him to have faith in the Resurrection: ‘Indeed what you are saying is nothing but fables of the ancients, and they are their lies and stories that have come in their books.’ He means ‘what you are calling me to is a lie which is similar to fables and fairy tales.’

(1) In his Sahih, Hadith no. (5023), Al-Bukhari narrated from the Hadith of Jabir ibn ʿAbdullah, which states that Prophet Muhammad Allah’s peace and blessings be upon him said: ‘I bear witness that I am the Messenger of Allah.’

Allah the Almighty then says:

أُو۟لَٰٓئِكَ ٱلَّذِينَ حَقَّ عَلَيْهِمُ ٱلْقَوْلُ فِىٓ أُمَمٍ قَدْ خَلَتْ مِن
قَبْلِهِم مِّنَ ٱلْجِنِّ وَٱلْإِنسِ ۖ إِنَّهُمْ كَانُوا۟ خَٰسِرِينَ ﴿١٨﴾

The verdict has been passed on such people, along with all the communities that went before them, jinn and human: they are lost [18] (The Quran, al-Ahqaf: 18)

We notice that the speech in the previous verse was being made by a singular speaker, that is, the one who said to his parents: ‘…Fie upon you…’ (al-Ahqaf: 17), but here the True Lord the Almighty refers to him in the plural: ‘…such people…’ (al-Ahqaf: 18). Thus, He brings the decision and He informs of it: ‘The verdict has been passed on such people…’ (al-Ahqaf: 18). It is as if this should not be understood as singular but rather as plural, as in Allah’s saying: ‘I swear by the time, [1] Most surely man is in loss [2] Except those who believe [3]…’ (al-’Asr: 1-3). Thus, the plural is made as an exception to the singular. They said regarding this verse what they said about the previous verse which is that it was revealed down with regards to ʿAbd Ar-Rahman ibn Abu Bakr may Allah be pleased with him. Yet this opinion does not fit with the meaning of the verse because ʿAbd Ar-Rahman may Allah be pleased with him became a good Muslim. This verse is talking about those who are due for punishment, so it must have been sent down with regards to someone else, not ʿAbd Ar-Rahman may Allah be pleased with him. With regards to this issue, a story (1) is mentioned in the books of history. This is due to the fact that Marwan ibn Al-Hakam may Allah be pleased with him who was the ruler of Medina, is the one who said that this verse was sent down concerning ʿAbd Ar-Rahman. When Muʿawiya may Allah be pleased with him pledged the Caliphate to his son Yazid may Allah be pleased with him he asked Marwan to pledge allegiance to him, and ʿAbd Ar-Rahman ibn Abu Bakr may Allah be pleased with him objected to this. He said: 'Have you made it hereditary?' meaning a monarchy in which the son succeeds his father. He said: 'Be quiet, you!' Then he said: 'Do you know who this is? This is the one of whom Allah says: '…But some say to their parents 'Fie upon both of you'…' (al-Ahqaf: 17). This statement reached ʿAisha may Allah be pleased with her whereupon she said: 'By Allah, it is not him and if I wanted to say the name of whom it referred to, I would, but say to Marwan: 'Indeed Allah has cursed you because of your father.' This is because, one day, Al-Hakam ibn Al-ʿAs(2) was imitating the walk of Prophet Muhammad Allah's peace and blessings be upon him in a mocking way. Prophet Muhammad Allah's peace and blessings be upon him turned and saw him (3) and pointed at him with his hand, and thus he was exiled to Ta'if. After the high rank that he had enjoyed in Medina, he became a shepherd until ʿUthman may Allah be pleased with him interceded on his behalf to him Allah's peace and blessings be upon him and he was allowed to return. However, the Companions said: 'we did not hear this from Messenger Muhammad', so 'Uthman said: 'I heard it.' Allah's saying: '…The verdict has been passed on…' (al-Ahqaf: 18) means that it is necessary and established that they will have the punishment that We have warned them about. As for Allah's saying: '…along with all the communities that went before them…' (al-Ahqaf: 18), it means that many nations before them had elapsed and gone. Allah the Almighty then concludes the verse with His saying, '…jinn and human: they are lost' (al-Ahqaf: 18). This is because He the Almighty said about the believers: 'Successful indeed are the believers' (al-Mu'minun: 1). Thus the opposite is that the disbelievers and deniers shall be lost. This verse proves that the jinn are also legally responsible; among them are the obedient and the disobedient, the believer and the disbeliever, and this is why He the Almighty says in the chapter of al-Jinn: ‘And as to the deviators, they are fuel of hell’ (al-Jinn: 15). Therefore, they will be punished with what suits their nature.

Allah the Almighty then says:

وَلِكُلٍّ دَرَجَٰتٌ مِّمَّا عَمِلُواْۖ وَلِيُوَفِّيَهُمْ أَعْمَٰلَهُمْ وَهُمْ لَا يُظْلَمُونَ ⑲

Everyone will be ranked according to their deeds and God will repay them in full for what they have done:
they will not be wronged [19] (The Quran, al-Ahqaf: 19)

Allah’s saying, ‘Everyone will be…’ (al-Ahqaf: 19) refers to both the two categories: the believers who have been mentioned in Allah’s saying: ‘(As for) those who say: Our Lord is Allah, then continue in the right way…’ (Fussilat: 30), and the disbelievers of whom Allah the Almighty says: ‘The verdict has been passed on such people…’ (al-Ahqaf: 18). The believers and the disbelievers, the obedient and the disobedient, each of them will have their reward according to their degree and rank: ‘…Everyone will be ranked according to their deeds…’ (al-Ahqaf: 19). It is known that paradise has degrees, whilst the fire –we seek refuge in Allah – has descending steps. This is why Allah the Almighty says: ‘Surely the hypocrites are in the lowest stage of the fire…’ (an-Nisa’: 145). However, here He has made degrees for both the believers and the disbelievers. How?

Some scholars are of the opinion that this is a means of mocking and ridiculing them and also of rebuking them, exactly as in Allah’s saying: ‘Hence, give them the tiding of a painful punishment’ (al-Inshiqaq: 24). It is known that punishment is not something of which you give tidings. Tidings are only for things that bring joy and happiness. This is mocking, as in Allah’s saying: ‘Taste; you forsooth are the mighty, the honourable’ (ad-Dukhan: 49). He the Almighty says this even though in this situation he, the disbeliever is humiliated, chastised, and scorned. Or, He called them degrees in order to vex them and increase their feelings of pain and grief. Allah the Almighty then says: ‘…Allah will repay them in full for what they have done…’ (al-Ahqaf: 19).

The word *wafa*ʾ (repay) means to give a complete reward without anything missing such as you saying: ‘I repaid (waffaytu) my debt to so-and-so,’ which means ‘I gave it to him in full.’ Allah’s saying: ‘…they will not be wronged,’ (al-Ahqaf: 19) means that nothing will be deducted from their rewards whatsoever.

Allah the Almighty then says:

وَيَوْمَ يُعْرَضُ ٱلَّذِينَ كَفَرُوا۟ عَلَى ٱلنَّارِ أَذْهَبْتُمْ طَيِّبَٰتِكُمْ فِى حَيَاتِكُمُ ٱلدُّنْيَا
وَٱسْتَمْتَعْتُم بِهَا فَٱلْيَوْمَ تُجْزَوْنَ عَذَابَ ٱلْهُونِ بِمَا كُنتُمْ تَسْتَكْبِرُونَ فِى
ٱلْأَرْضِ بِغَيْرِ ٱلْحَقِّ وَبِمَا كُنتُمْ تَفْسُقُونَ ﴿٢٠﴾

On the Day when those who deny the truth are brought before the Fire, it will be said to them, ‘You squandered the good things you were given in your earthly life, you took your fill of pleasure there, so on this Day a punishment of shame is yours: you were arrogant on earth without any right, and exceeded all limits’ [20]
(The Quran, al-Ahqaf: 20)

The meaning here is: Remember, O Prophet Muhammad, the Day when those who have disbelieved will be brought before the fire. Thus, whenever you examine a circumstance, look for the event that takes place in it because time is not intrinsically praiseworthy or blameworthy. Rather, being praiseworthy or blameworthy is determined according to the action that takes place in it. The event here is that those who have disbelieved are being shown to the fire, but who is being shown to whom? The fire is not a rational being while the disbelievers are. The fire is being shown to them, exactly as you say: ‘I showed the material to the customer.’ However, on the Day of Resurrection, it will be made clear to them that the fire is a material being and they are the ones who will be shown to it. This is proved by Allah’s saying: ‘On the day that We will say to hell: Are you filled up? And it will say: Are there any more?’ (Qaf: 30) It is also affirmed by the Noble Hadith that it, i.e. the fire yearns for its people; the disbelievers and the disobedient, and that it speaks and articulates. The True Lord the Almighty address whatever He wants with whatever He wants. Therefore, we do not understand this verse according to human laws because Allah the Almighty has other laws with things. This is why if Allah the Almighty were to teach them to any of His creation, He would teach them and deal with them, as we have seen in the story of Sulaiman (Solomon) peace be upon him. Allah the Almighty says: ‘So We made Solomon to understand it…’ (al-Anbiya’: 79). He understood the language of animals and birds. This is why when he heard the ant and understood it, he smiled and laughed at what it had said, and he thanked the One Who had bestowed this blessing upon him. Some scholars say that the verse contains an inversion, as if you were to say: ‘I showed the pond the camel.’ The actual fact is that you show the camel the pond, so that it can drink from it.

Allah’s saying: ‘…You squandered the good things you were given in your earthly life, you took your fill of pleasure there…’ (al-Ahqaf: 20) means that this speech is said to them in the Hereafter after the Last Hour has been established, but there is another verse that some people think contradicts this. It is Allah’s saying: ‘The Fire; they shall be brought before it (every) morning and evening and on the day when the hour shall come to pass: Make pharaoh’s people enter the severest chastisement,’ (Ghafir: 46). They understand from this that the showing takes place in the life of this world because His saying: ‘…and on the day when the hour shall come to pass…’ (Ghafir: 46) is conjoined to it. However, the one who reflects on the verse will find that the showing is not in the life of this world and not in the Hereafter, but rather in the barzakh (life in the grave). How? It is because morning and evening are a result of the sun’s movement and the presence of night and day, and there is none of this in the Hereafter. In the Hereafter, there is no sun or moon, or night or day; Allah says: ‘On the day when the earth shall be changed into a different earth and the heavens (as well)…’ (Ibrahim: 48). In the worldly life, we live according to means. As for the Hereafter, we live according to the Will of Allah the Almighty the Original Founder of causes. The sun gives us light in the worldly life. As for the Hereafter, Allah says: ‘And the earth shall beam with the light of its Lord…’ (az-Zumar: 69). It is thus clear that Al-‘Ard will be in the grave. Allah the Almighty says: ‘…and on the day when the hour shall come to pass: Make pharaoh’s people enter the severest chastisement.’ (Ghafir: 46) The Hereafter is not for showing, but rather for being admitted into the fire, as the showing in the first is not the showing in the second. What informs you that before they enter the fire it will be shown to them? This is due to the fact that As-Sirat (the bridge) is fixed over the surface of hell, so they are shown to the fire before they enter it. Allah's saying: '…You squandered the good things you were given in your earthly life, you took your fill of pleasure there…' (al-Ahqaf: 20). This verse has solved some problems for us, in that we see that the people of disbelief and heresy have more wealth and embellishment than we do in the life of this world, and some people ask about the inventors and discoverers who are not Muslims and who served humanity with their knowledge. Will they have any reward for what they did? The answer is '…You squandered the good things you were given in your earthly life…' (al-Ahqaf: 20). There is no share in the Hereafter left for them, as this is eternally decreed in Allah's Standard Practice that does not change. This is because Allah the Almighty has given means to the believers and the disbelievers. Whoever has done well with regards to the means will not be denied the fruits of his goodness even if he is a disbeliever; and whoever sits around and languishes will be denied, even if he is a believer because this is the gift of Lordship. As for those who provided this gift to humanity and served them in this way, were they thinking about Allah the Almighty? No, never. They were thinking about civilisation, progress and serving history and mankind, and they have taken their reward of having a reputation and legacy that perpetuates their memory. People have erected statues of them and written books about them. Therefore, take their reward from those whom they worked for, and that is the end of the matter. This is why Allah the Almighty says in describing the state of these people: 'And (as for) those who disbelieve, their deeds are like the mirage in a desert, which the thirsty man deems to be water until when he comes to it he finds it to be naught, and there he finds Allah, so He pays back to him his reckoning in full; and Allah is quick in reckoning' (an-Nur: 39). They are surprised that Allah the Almighty will hold them accountable for their deeds, even though they were not thinking about Him when they were doing their deeds. This is the state of the disbelievers. As for the believers, they do their deeds in the worldly life with an eye on the Hereafter. It has been transmitted that Prophet Muhammad Allah's peace and blessings be upon him passed by the People of the Ledge (As-Suffa) and he found them wearing torn clothes with which they could not find anything to patch. So he said to them: ‘Which of your days is best? Is it today or the day you come with a massive grapevine and you go with a massive grapevine, you come in one suit of clothes and you go in another suit of clothes, and on your doors are veils like the veils of the Kaʿba?’(1) ʿUmar ibn ʿAbd Al-ʿAziz may Allah be pleased with him was well known, before he became a Caliph, as a pampered youth who had luxuries at his disposal, night and day. He would even wear silk, and the servants who would wash his clothes would take bribes from people to wash their clothes in the same water that the clothes of ‘Umar may Allah be pleased with him were washed in because of the how much perfume and musk they had in them. When he became the Caliph, he did without these luxuries and he lived a life of abstinence and asceticism, and he wore coarse clothes. When he was asked about this he said: ‘By Allah, if I wanted I could eat better than any of you and be better dressed than any of you, but I am storing up my delights for the Hereafter, (2) and even though I have a longing soul – he means, it desires betterment – it longed for leadership and when it had obtained it, it longed for the Caliphate; yet when it had obtained that, it longed for Paradise.’(3) This is why it has been transmitted from ʿAisha may Allah be pleased with her that she said: ‘A crescent moon passed followed by another crescent moon and then another crescent moon,’ meaning: three months passed, and no fire was lit in Muhammad’s house. It was said: ‘What do you eat?’ She said: ‘Water and dates.’(4) However, Prophet Muhammad

Allah's peace and blessings be upon him had neighbours from the Helpers who used to give him Allah's peace and blessings be upon him some of their milk to drink. Therefore, the house of Prophet Muhammad Allah's peace and blessings be upon him was a model and example for the poor. Allah the Almighty says: '…in your earthly life (dunya)…' (al-Ahqaf: 20); by Allah, when you think of the meaning of the word dunya (the lowest), can you find any description that is lower and less than this? When you hear the word dunya, you must inevitably be reminded of its opposite, which then must be described as being ʿulya (the highest), and it is the life in which there is reward. Allah's saying: '…so on this Day a punishment of shame is yours…' (al-Ahqaf: 20) means that on the Day of Resurrection, you will be punished for your deeds with the suffering of humiliation, means, disgrace and abasement because you were arrogant in the worldly life with regards to accepting the Truth. From this word hun (humiliation), we get the word hawn which is the device in which we crush things in the kitchen. It is a device that grinds crushes and pulverises the substance that is placed in it. It is as if the suffering that they will receive will crush their arrogance and make them humiliated and disgraced. Allah's saying: '…you were arrogant…' (al-Ahqaf: 20) means that those deniers of the Truth will be punished because of their arrogance and self-exaltation with regards to accepting the Truth. As for Allah's saying: '…on earth without any right…' (al-Ahqaf: 20), it proves that there is arrogance that is right, which is to show arrogance towards the arrogant. This is why it was said: 'Arrogance towards the arrogant is charity.'(1) This is why Hamza may Allah be pleased with him would wear a red death band in battle, and he would raise his sword and then walk between the rows in a haughty manner. Prophet Muhammad Allah's peace and blessings be upon him looked at him and said: 'This is walk that Allah hates, except in this situation.'(2) And he said: 'May Allah have mercy on the person who makes himself look strong in front of them.'(1) We understand from the verses of the Noble Quran that the believer is not described as having one character and one outward form. Rather, the situation that he lives in dictates what character is suited to that situation. Allah the Almighty says: 'Muhammad is the Messenger of Allah, and those with him are firm of heart against the unbelievers, compassionate among themselves…' (al-Fath: 29). He the Almighty also says: '…lowly before the believers, mighty against the unbelievers…' (al-Ma'ida: 54). Therefore, he is proud in one situation and humble in another situation, firm in one situation and full of mercy in another situation; he gathers between two opposites because the situation differs from one case to another. Then Allah the Almighty says: '…and exceeded all limits' (al-Ahqaf: 20). Therefore, there is arrogance and there is iniquity. Arrogance is to be conceited towards accepting the Truth, while fisq (iniquity) means to take a date out of its skin. In their evenness, dates have life spans. When they reach their complete size, they begin to have a red or yellow colour, and then they moisten and have a skin. If they are in dry climate, they become hard and dry and the skin sticks to the flesh of the date, and these are the best kinds of dates. The meaning of fisq here is to leave the way of obedience; and when you reflect on arrogance and iniquity; you find that they bring together the deeds of the heart and the deeds of the limbs. Man has a heart and an outward form; the heart is the place of secrets and hidden things and it is also the place of sincerity or ostentation, the place of humility or self-exaltation, as arrogance is from the deeds of the heart. Allah the Almighty says: 'And they denied them unjustly and proudly while their soul had been convinced of them…' (an-Naml: 14). As for iniquity, it is to exit from obedience which is concerned with the deeds of the limbs.

(1) In his Rasaʾil Al-Intiqad (1/9), Ibn Sharaf Al-Qayrawani mentioned that: 'Treat this category of people by turning away from them, turning your nose up at them and not mentioning them or thinking about them, it means, arrogance, even if you are not from the people of arrogance.' As for those who understand it to be a Hadith, this is not correct.

وَٱذۡكُرۡ أَخَا عَادٍ إِذۡ أَنذَرَ قَوۡمَهُۥ بِٱلۡأَحۡقَافِ وَقَدۡ خَلَتِ ٱلنُّذُرُ مِنۢ بَيۡنِ يَدَيۡهِ وَمِنۡ
خَلۡفِهِۦٓ أَلَّا تَعۡبُدُوٓاْ إِلَّا ٱللَّهَ إِنِّيٓ أَخَافُ عَلَيۡكُمۡ عَذَابَ يَوۡمٍ عَظِيمٖ ٢١

Mention [Hud] of the tribe of ʹ Ad: he warned his people among the sand dunes – other warners have come and gone both before and after him –‘ Worship no one but God: I fear for you, that you will be punished on a terrible Day’ [21] (The Quran, al-Ahqaf: 21)

Allah’s saying: ‘Mention…’ (al-Ahqaf: 21) means: ‘Remember, O Prophet Muhammad’; it is as if this reminder has come to remind him Allah’s peace and blessings be upon him of the situations that his brothers from among the Messengers went through in the procession of faith. The meaning thus is ‘look at those who came before you and what they had to bear for the sake of the call. Thus, you are nothing new with regards to the Messengers.’ Indeed, they bore with difficulty and harm, but Allah spoke the truth when He promised to give them victory in the end. This is why you notice in the style of the Noble Quran that the number of times the one story is mentioned is according to the number of events that happen to the Messenger. Allah the Almighty says: ‘And all we relate to you of the accounts of the apostles is to strengthen your heart therewith…’ (Hud: 120). Whenever something happened to Allah’s Messenger and his people, Allah would remind him of one of the situations of the previous Prophets peace be upon them, in order to reassure him and make his heart firm upon the truth. As long as every Prophet was exposed to harm in accordance with his mission, then there is no doubt that you will be the Messenger that is exposed to the most harm because you are the last of all of them. Allah’s saying: ‘…the tribe of ʿAd…’ (al-Ahqaf: 21) refers to Prophet Hud (Eber) peace be upon him. He the Almighty says: ‘And to ‘Ad (We sent) their brother Hud…’ (al-A‘raf: 65). The word akha (brother) has two plural forms: ikhwa and ikhwan. Ikhwa refers to brotherhood of lineage, as in Allah’s saying: ‘And Yusuf’s brothers came…’ (Yusuf: 58). As for ikhwan, it refers to the brotherhood of a way, religion, and values, a meaning which is clear in Allah’s saying: ‘… (they shall be) as brethren, on raised couches, face to face’ (al-Hijr: 47). Thus, Allah’s saying: ‘…that brother of [the tribe of] ʿAd…’ (al-Ahqaf: 21) means their brother in lineage, and ʿAd is the tribe or the community to whom Hud (Eber) peace be upon him was sent. The genitive construction in Allah's saying: '…that brother of [the tribe of] ʿAd…' (al-Ahqaf: 21) is a means of softening them and invoking feelings of mercy and kinship, as the one who came to them was not a stranger to them. He was in fact a brother of theirs. A Divine Way of Guidance came to them that went against what they were upon, and their Prophet wanted to get them out of the misguidance and corruption to which they had become accustomed. A brother never cheats his brother regardless of whether their brotherhood is one of lineage or one of religion, way, and values. Therefore, they must receive his call with the affection that brotherhood requires. Allah the Almighty says: 'Mention [Hud] of the tribe of 'Ad: he warned his people among the sand dunes…' (al-Ahqaf: 21). The ʿAd are a bygone group of Arabs that lived in sand dunes in the southern part of the Arabian Peninsula. The word ahqaf (sand dunes) is the plural of the word hiqf which means that sand spread out; it becomes taller and shorter and it also moves right and left, here and there. Sand, due to its fineness, is moved by wind and windstorms very easily such that one gust from a windstorm in this place would bury and cover a caravan in this valley. This is why, even until now, the remains of the people of ʿAd have not emerged because they are buried over vast distances under the sand. Likewise, ancient ruins in every place are only found under the earth during excavations because the factors of erosion bury them. This is why if one of us was to travel, for example, and leave his home for a number of months, he would return and find it covered in a layer of dust even if it is locked as best as possible. So, what do you think about the empty space with the winds and windstorms blowing? In the chapter of al-Fajr, the True Lord the Almighty gives us a glimpse of the history of these communities and the punishment that befell them, saying: 'Have you not considered how your Lord dealt with 'Ad, [6] (The people of) Iram, possessors of lofty buildings, [7] The like of which were not created in the (other) cities; [8] And (with) Thamud, who hewed out the rocks in the valley, [9] And (with) Pharaoh, the lord of hosts, [10] Who committed inordinacy in the cities, [11] So they made great mischief therein? [12] Therefore your Lord let down upon them a portion of the chastisement. [13] Most sure your Lord is watching [14]' (al-Fajr: 7-14). Until now, we do not know where their homes are or where their remains are, except what Allah the Almighty has informed us of, and this is because they are spread out over vast distances inside the earth. Allah the Almighty says: '…other warners have come and gone both before and after him…' (al-Ahqaf: 21). This means that he is not the first Messenger to come to them and he is not the last, as Messengers have passed: '…other warners have come and gone both before and after him…' (al-Ahqaf: 21). The word nudhur (admonisher) is the plural of nadheer which means the person who instils fear in you and alerts you about evil before it is time. The benefit of warning is that it makes you aware of danger before it happens so that you can avoid it and the warning must be made some time before the occurrence of the evil so that you are able to take steps to prevent the matter and avoid falling into it. Allah's saying: '…Worship no one but Allah…' (al-Ahqaf: 21) means that this issue is one that all the Messengers peace be upon them agree on, before Hud (Eber) and after him peace be upon him. No religion has come except to serve this issue and call people to it. Worship, as I have explained, means that the slave obeys the commands and prohibitions of the object of worship and this meaning invalidating and nullifying the worship of other than Allah the Almighty. This is because they are all false gods and worship of them is false, as they are gods with no way and no commands or prohibitions. What has the sun ever said to those who worship it? What has it ever commanded or prohibited? What reward has it prepared for those who worship it? What has it prepared for those who disbelieve in it? So you ask: 'Why have people worshipped it and worshipped other things?' I say: 'It is because worship is a natural inclination within man, ever since Allah the Almighty has created him, and since he was in the atomic world.' However, true worship has requirements and responsibilities that curb the defiance of people and keep their desires in check. This is why some people have resorted to a form of worship that satisfies their natural inclination for worship and excuses them with regards to the requirements of true religion. Thus, they go to false gods and worship them because they do not require anything of them and they do not make them legally responsible for anything and their desires have free rein.

Allah says: '…I fear for you, that you will be punished on a terrible Day' (al-Ahqaf: 21). This fear is a requirement of brotherhood, as a brother is eager for the benefit of his brother and eager for his salvation. This is why Allah the Almighty says about Prophet Muhammad Allah's peace and blessings be upon him: 'Certainly a Messenger has come to you from among yourselves; grievous to him is your falling into distress, excessively solicitous respecting you; to the believers (he is) compassionate' (at-Tawba: 128). Here, the day of suffering is described as an awesome day and in your daily lives you describe some things as being awesome. This awesomeness in your material existence will eventually come to an end, regardless of how long it lasts. Likewise, every blessing in this worldly life will cause trouble for its owner in one of two ways: either the blessing will escape him, or he will escape the blessing and leave it when he dies. Thus, this day is described as awesome because it is permanent and never-ending, and the one experiencing it will never die and thus have respite from it.

Allah the Almighty then says:

قَالُوٓاْ أَجِئۡتَنَا لِتَأۡفِكَنَا عَنۡ ءَالِهَتِنَا فَأۡتِنَا بِمَا تَعِدُنَآ إِن كُنتَ مِنَ ٱلصَّٰدِقِينَ ٢٢

But they said, 'Have you come to turn us away from our gods? If what you say is true, bring down that punishment you threaten us with!' [22] (The Quran, al-Ahqaf: 22)

The speech here is about the people of Hud (Eber) peace be upon him for when they were called to worship Allah Alone, '…they said, 'Have you come to turn us away from our gods…' (al-Ahqaf: 22)? This is in reference to their so-called gods. The word ifk means to turn something on its face, to turn the truth into falsehood, and truthfulness into lying. A variation of this word is found in Allah's saying: 'And the overthrown cities did He overthrow,' (an-Najm: 53) and they are the towns that Allah turned upside down. Allah's saying: '…bring down that punishment you threaten us with…' (al-Ahqaf: 22) refers to the suffering they will face in the Hereafter. The suffering that He the Almighty is promising them with is not coming immediately. Rather, it is on the Day of Resurrection, but they are hastening it. This is why He addresses them with this statement: 'And when it comes to pass, will you believe in it? What! Now (you believe), and already you wished to have it hastened on,' (Yunus: 51) and He the Almighty also says: '(It is) the day on which they shall be tried at the fire [13] Taste your persecution! This is what you would hasten on [14]' (adh-Dhariyat: 13-14).

They are hastening the suffering because they do not believe in it and they deny it. If they had believed in it, they would not have hastened it.

Then he responded to them with the normal answer:

قَالَ إِنَّمَا ٱلۡعِلۡمُ عِندَ ٱللَّهِ وَأُبَلِّغُكُم مَّآ أُرۡسِلۡتُ بِهِۦ وَلَٰكِنِّيٓ أَرَىٰكُمۡ قَوۡمٗا تَجۡهَلُونَ ٢٣

He said, 'Only God knows when it will come: I simply convey to you the message I am sent with but I can see you are an insolent people' [23] (The Quran, al-Ahqaf: 23)

That is, the knowledge of the Last Hour rests with Allah the Almighty alone: '…none will reveal its time except Him…' (al-A'raf: 187), and I am only a Messenger conveying to you what my Lord has sent me with: '…but I see that you are a people given to ignorance!' (al-Ahqaf: 23)

The summation of the matter is that you are ignorant. In other words, ignorant of matters relating to truth. Ignorance constituted the greatest problem faced by the Messengers of Allah peace be upon them. Some people think that ignorance is lack of knowledge, but ignorance is knowledge that contradicts the truth.

Therefore, we said that an illiterate person who knows nothing and lacks a cause or subject in life is in a less worse situation than an ignorant person. This is because his mind is empty; when he receives information, he accepts it. In the case of an ignorant person, the knowledge he possesses contradicts the truth, so he needs to be emptied of it first. Consequently, calling him to the truth is more difficult.

Allah's saying: '…I convey to you that wherewith I have been sent…' (al-Ahqaf: 23) means to say: I have not come of my own accord. Rather, I have been summoned to call you to Allah, so the action must be attributed to the One Who does it. '…I have been sent…' (al-Ahqaf: 23), that is, from Allah the Almighty as we said with regards to 'Exalted is He Who took His Servant for a journey by night from the Sacred Mosque (in Mecca) to the Aqsa Mosque (in Jerusalem)…' (al-Isra': 1). Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him did not say: 'I travelled by night' but rather 'I was taken for a journey by night.'

This means that they were lying when they said: ‘…have you come to us…’ (al-Ahqaf: 22) because he did not come of his own accord, Rather, he was sent by Allah the Almighty to convey His Message: ‘…and the duty of the Messenger is only to convey (the Message) plainly’ (al-’Ankabut: 18). That is, I am only sent to deliver the Message, and I do not know when the punishment will come. The only One Who knows it is the One Who can inflict it.

‘…But I see that you are a people given to ignorance!’ (al-Ahqaf: 23) This means that you are ignorant of the fact that the Messenger has come to convey Allah’s Message. He does not know when the punishment will be inflicted on those who deny Him.

فَلَمَّا رَأَوۡهُ عَارِضٗا مُّسۡتَقۡبِلَ أَوۡدِيَتِهِمۡ قَالُواْ هَٰذَا عَارِضٞ مُّمۡطِرُنَاۚ
بَلۡ هُوَ مَا ٱسۡتَعۡجَلۡتُم بِهِۦۖ رِيحٞ فِيهَا عَذَابٌ أَلِيمٞ ٢٤

When they saw a cloud approaching their valley, they said, ‘This cloud will give us rain!’ ‘No indeed! It is what you wanted to hasten: a storm wind bearing a painful punishment [24] (The Quran, al-Ahqaf: 24)

After they had hastened the punishment by saying: ‘…bring us that with which you threaten us, if you are one of the truthful’ (al-Ahqaf: 24), a torment came to them in the form of a cloud. ‘So when they saw it as a cloud appearing in the sky…’ (al-Ahqaf: 24), that is, a cloud obstructing the air in the sky advancing ‘…towards their valleys…’ (al-Ahqaf: 24), that is, coming towards them ‘…they said, ‘this is a cloud which will give us rain’...’ (al-Ahqaf: 24), that is, they thought it was a normal cloud that would pour rain on their valleys and bring them goodness. Therefore, the pronoun ‘it’ in ‘…so when they saw it…’ (al-Ahqaf: 24) is referring to the cloud because it is identifiable from the context; the proof being their statement ‘which will give us rain.’ Only clouds bring rain. Thus, the context proves that it is a cloud.

In its style, the Noble Quran often relies on the context to clarify what the pronoun is referring to, leaving the matter to the discernment of the intellect. You can read, for example: ‘And if Allah were to punish people for that which they earned, He would not leave a moving (living) creature on its surface…' (Fatir: 45). What is meant here is the surface of the earth even though it is not mentioned in the context. But the earth is what crosses the mind, as nothing else can be understood from the statement.

The rule is that the pronoun must have an antecedent reference. There is no third-person pronoun that does not have a referent except in one case which is if the absent third-person refers to the Absolute Unseen, and that is the True Lord the Exalted. They deduced this from His statement: 'Say: He (huwa) is Allah, the One,' (al-Ikhlas: 1), where the pronoun '(huwa; he)' refers to Allah the Almighty because it can only refer to Him. You may say: 'Zayd came and I honoured him,' that is, I honoured Zayd. Also, when you say: 'Fatima came and I honoured her.' The pronoun 'her' refers to Fatima, and so forth. The reference of the pronoun has the same antecedent. Such as when I say: 'A man came to me and I honoured him,' that is, I honoured the man. The pronoun can also refer to other than the referent such as when I say: 'I gave charity of a dirham and half of it.' The 'it' in 'half of 'it' does not refer to the aforementioned dirham, but rather to a dirham like it. Therefore, it refers to half a dirham like it.

However, why did they think that the dense, looming cloud would bring them rain? Some scholars said: 'It is because they were in drought and famine, and they were waiting for water. Then they saw a cloud obstructing the horizon, and they noticed that it was dark and moving slowly. These are the signs of a rain cloud, because the slowest bucket is the one that is full and overflowing. Likewise, the slowest cloud is the one that is most burdened. The slowness of the cloud indicated that it was carrying water and they were looking up for rain, so they thought it was rain. Therefore, it gave them the hope of rainfall, as all the signs indicated this. Then, their hopes were suddenly dashed. When hopes are raised and then suddenly dashed, this causes a kind of grief and sorrow, which is called 'despair following hope.'

This, on its own, is a method of torture used, for example, by those in charge of punishing in prisons. They deny the inmate water until his thirst becomes intense, and he pleads for something to drink. Then the soldier comes with a cup of water and brings it close to him until it is touching his lips, and then he throws it on the ground. This is a form of pain and torture. It would have been less painful if he had not brought the water in the first place. Indeed, bringing the water in front of him causes a greater hardship than that of thirst.

The same goes for these people. They were looking up for rain and they said: ‘It will relieve us of the drought that we are in,’ and then suddenly it sent torment down upon them instead of water. It turned out to be the very punishment that they had denied and asked that it come upon them swiftly. ‘…Nay! It is what you sought to hasten on…’ (al-Ahqaf: 24), that is, the punishment came in the form of ‘…a wind in which is a painful punishment’ (al-Ahqaf: 24).

We said that when the word (rih; wind) appears in the singular form, it indicates that it is carrying punishment and evil. Thus, Allah’s statement (‘…a wind…’) means that it is a general punishment, and then He breaks it down into detail: ‘…in which is a painful punishment’ (al-Ahqaf: 24). But if the word is plural, i.e. (riyah; winds), then it indicates goodness; as in Allah’s statement: ‘…and in the turning about of the winds…’ (al-Jathiya: 5) because the alteration of the wind direction moves clouds, drives ships, pollinates flowers and so forth. Hence says the supplication made at the time of heavy wind, mentioned in the Hadith: ‘O Allah, make it winds, and not a wind.’(1)

We previously explained that the winds are a power and force that bring benefit when they come from all directions, and they are destructive when they come from one direction. Creating a vacuum of air is now a science that has laws, and people use it in demolition.

Furthermore, air itself is an essential aspect of life; without it there would not be any life. This is why Allah the Almighty has made it general and widespread in the universe. No one can own it as some people own food, for example. This is because if the owner of the air were to deny you it for a moment, you would die, as opposed to water and food, for example.

Then, after that, Allah the Almighty goes into detail with the words: ‘…a wind in which is a painful punishment’ (al-Ahqaf: 24).

(1) It was narrated on the authority of Ibn `Abbas that when the wind blew, the Prophet peace and blessings be upon him would turn his face towards it, keel, stretch out his hands and say: ‘O Allah, I beg of You the good of this wind and the good of that which has been sent therewith. And I seek refuge with You from its evil and the evil of that which has been sent therewith. O Allah make it a mercy, not a torment. O Allah, make it winds, not a wind.’ [Narrated by At-Tabarani in Al-Mu`jam Al-Kabir 11368].

تُدَمِّرُ كُلَّ شَيْءٍۭ بِأَمْرِ رَبِّهَا فَأَصْبَحُوا۟ لَا يُرَىٰٓ إِلَّا
مَسَـٰكِنُهُمْ ۚ كَذَٰلِكَ نَجْزِى ٱلْقَوْمَ ٱلْمُجْرِمِينَ ﴿٢٥﴾

Which will destroy everything by its Lord's command.'
In the morning there was nothing to see except their [ruined] dwellings: this is how We repay the guilty [25]
(The Quran, al-Ahqaf: 25)

The words 'Destroying everything…' (al-Ahqaf: 25) means devastating '…everything…' (al-Ahqaf: 25), that is, nothing at all was left of them. '…By the Command of its Lord…' (al-Ahqaf: 25), that is, its Creator and the One Who sets it in motion, as it does not destroy by its own nature, but rather by Allah's Command to it. So instead of bringing them goodness, it brought them evil. Thus, the wind needed an additional command from Allah the Almighty to be transformed into an evil force that destroys instead of builds.

Only Allah the Almighty controls this matter. Only the Creator of the wind the Exalted can bring it out of its nature, as He brought the fire out of its nature in the story of Prophet Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon him. Allah the Almighty said to it: 'O fire, be coolness and safety upon Ibrahim' (al-Anbiya': 69).

Therefore, the wind responded to its Lord's Command and it destroyed them utterly, leaving nothing of their belongings behind except for the ruins of their houses. '…So they became such that nothing could be seen except their dwellings!' (al-Ahqaf: 25) But why were their dwellings allowed to remain?

The scholars said: 'In order to be a lesson for other people and vivid signs of their past existence and of the punishment that befell them, even though these towns are buried under the earth. These people, as we said, lived in a valley of sands, called Ahqaf, and these sands are what buried them.

The scholars also narrated that when Allah the Almighty wanted to destroy them and inflict them with the storm wind, the first person to see the approaching torment was a woman among them. She saw her house flying in the air like a bird.

Once the torment came upon them suddenly, they entered their houses, seeking shelter inside from the severity of the storms. But the wind rushed in right after them, and the sands came in until they had buried them inside. The wind that buried them is the same wind that exposed them and brought out their corpses so that the people could learn a lesson from them. Then they were thrown into the sea.

'…Thisis how…' (al-Ahqaf: 25) means in this way or manner '…We recompense the guilty people' (al-Ahqaf: 25). So the requital was not unjust or aggressive, but rather, it was requital in kind and measure. They deserved this torment because they were wrongdoers.

As for those who believed in Prophet Hud (Eber) peace be upon him and affirmed his call, he protected them from the torment by drawing a line around their houses. It was as if his silent supplication was: 'O Lord! These are the people who have believed in my call, so save and protect them,' and so Allah the Almighty saved them.

Allah's statement: '…thus do We recompense the guilty people,' (al-Ahqaf: 25) is a warning and admonition for the disbelievers of Quryash meaning: 'O disbelievers of Quraysh, take a lesson from those who denied the Messengers before you. This is the requital of every disbeliever who goes against Allah's Way and denies His Messengers. This is a real example in front of you

وَلَقَدْ مَكَّنَّٰهُمْ فِيمَآ إِن مَّكَّنَّٰكُمْ فِيهِ وَجَعَلْنَا لَهُمْ سَمْعًا وَأَبْصَٰرًا وَأَفْـِٔدَةً
فَمَآ أَغْنَىٰ عَنْهُمْ سَمْعُهُمْ وَلَآ أَبْصَٰرُهُمْ وَلَآ أَفْـِٔدَتُهُم مِّن شَىْءٍ إِذْ كَانُوا۟
يَجْحَدُونَ بِـَٔايَٰتِ ٱللَّهِ وَحَاقَ بِهِم مَّا كَانُوا۟ بِهِۦ يَسْتَهْزِءُونَ ﴿٢٦﴾

We had established them in a way we have not established you [people of Mecca]; We gave them hearing, sight, and hearts, yet their hearing, sight, and hearts were of no use to them, since they denied God's revelations. They were overwhelmed by the punishment they had mocked [26] (The Quran, al-Ahqaf: 26)

This is an address to the Quraysh and draws their attention to the following: These deniers from the people of `Ad were more powerful than you. They surpassed you in material power and were better than you in respect of wealth, goods and outward appearance. They left a stronger impact on the earth, and built it up. They had one of the greatest civilisations in the history of this world.

‘Have you not considered how your Lord dealt with (the tribe of) `Ad, [with] Iram – who had lofty pillars, the likes of whom had never been created in the land?’ (al-Fajr: 6-8) Despite all that, this was their end. Their power availed them nothing and their civilisation did not defend them in the slightest against Allah’s punishment. You are not more powerful than them. Thus, take heed from what happened to those who denied their Messenger. Take heed, lest you be afflicted with what afflicted them.

Allah’s statement: ‘We had established them securely in a manner in which We have never established you…’ (al-Ahqaf: 26) means: We (Allah) enabled and empowered the people of `Ad. The word tamkin (enabling, giving power) means that We gave them power and ability and We granted them the means and resources of the life of this world so that they could do what no other nation had done.

The Arabic word (inn) in the part saying: ‘…in a manner in which We have never (inn) established you…’ (al-Ahqaf: 26) is for negation, as in Allah’s statement: ‘…they are not [consequently] their mothers. Their mothers are none (inn) but those who gave birth to them…’ (al-Mujadala: 2). That is, their only mothers are those who gave birth to them. Here (the word stresses that) We empowered them in a way that We have not empowered you, and We granted them means that We have not granted you. Then ‘…and We had endowed them with hearing, and sight, and hearts: but neither their hearing, nor their sight, nor their hearts were of the least avail to them…’ (al-Ahqaf: 26).

Hearing, sight and the heart are the chief means of perception in mankind. Every time they are mentioned in the Noble Quran, they are found in this form: hearing (sam`) is singular, while sight (absar) and hearts (af’idah) are plural.

This is an example of the subtleties of expression in the Noble Quran. Hearing is not made plural because a sound is heard by everyone, as if we were one person hearing. You may be able to see the source of the sound or not see it, but you still hear it.

As for the sight, it differs from one person to the next. One person sees, while another person does not see. One person has sharp vision while another person has weak vision, and a third person is one-eyed. Therefore, sights differ, and hearts differ as well when it comes to how things are received.

The science of physiology has confirmed that the ear is the first organ that functions in a child immediately after birth. As for the eye, it starts to see between three and ten days after birth, and then after that the intellect starts working.

This is the natural order of how these organs, which are the means of perception, start functioning. Due to the importance of hearing, Allah the Almighty made it the first of these sense organs to function, as it is the first organ to receive cognitions after birth. It is also the sense whose task never stops, even during sleep.

The eye, for example, does not see during sleep. As for the ear, it hears because it is the means of being woken up from sleep. Therefore, it must always be prepared to receive and hear.

We have realized this issue in the story of the People of the Cave, when Allah Glorified is He says: ‘So We cast [a cover of sleep] over their ears within the cave for a number of years’ (al-Kahf: 11). This is because the cave was located in a desert in which there were many unsettling sounds at night, in addition to the sounds of thunder, lightning, and wind. If their ears had been allowed to function normally, these sounds would have disturbed them, but Allah the Almighty drew a veil over their ears so that they would not hear.

Because hearing is the means of receiving and accepting that which has been conveyed from Allah the Almighty He made it the first of these senses to function. Therefore, Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him made it a standard practice (sunna) for us to give the call to prayer in the child’s ear as soon as it has been born.(1)

If the ear were not functioning at this time, the commandment would be in vain. If you said, for example: ‘Does the child understand this?’ we would say: ‘Yes, it understands because of the covenant that was taken from Adam peace be upon him while we were still in the particle stage.’

(1) The Hadith referred to was narrated by Ahmad, Abu Dawud and At-Tirmidhi, who declared it authentic on the authority of Abu Rafi` who said: ‘I saw the Prophet peace and blessings be upon him announcing the adhan (the call to prayer) in the ears of Al-Hassan ibn `Ali when Fatima gave birth to him may Allah be pleased with them.’

Therefore, the first thing that the parents must be concerned with is to make the child hear this call: 'Allahu Akbar, Allahu Akbar (Allah is the Greatest, Allah is the Greatest) ' of everything else. This is the nucleus of faith around which all the bases of faith revolve.

You still remember our discussion regarding Allah's statement: 'But [there is many a one] who says to his parents [whenever they try to persuade him to believe in Allah], 'Fie upon you both…' (al-Ahqaf: 17). What are these parents preoccupied with at this stage of their child's life? They are not thinking about primary school and then secondary school and university, at all. They are concerned with that which is most worthy and most important, which is religion and creed. This is the first concern with regards to small children so that they grow up in accordance with it. This is why we receive the newborn children with the words of the call to prayer in order to instil it within them, while their minds are clear and their hearts are pure. Thus, these words take root in the children and establish themselves securely in them, and they never leave them. A poet (1) once expressed:

Passion for her came to me before I knew what passion was

So it came across a heart that was empty, and it established itself securely (2)

We said that hearing precedes sight, and this is in the life of this world. But in the Hereafter, people will say: '…our Lord, we have seen and heard…' (as-Sajda: 12). Thus, sight here precedes hearing because when the Resurrection occurs the human shall be surprised by a horrible sight, so he sees before he hears.

Then Allah Glorified is He says in describing the people of `Ad: '…but neither their hearing, nor their sight, nor their hearts were of the least avail to them…' (al-Ahqaf: 26). So they heard, but it was as if they did not hear. And they saw, but it was as if they did not see. For they did not benefit anything from this, as Allah, the Exalted and Glorious, says: ‘And We have placed over their hearts coverings, lest they understand it, and in their ears deafness…’ (al-Isra’: 46). Consequently, their hearts became empty; Allah Glorified is He states: ‘…and their hearts are void.’ (Ibrahim: 43)

(1) The poet in question was Qays ibn Al-Mulawwih ibn Mazahim Al-`Amiri. He was a romantic poet from the people of Najd and was nicknamed Majnun Layla (Layla's madman) because of his ardent love for Layla bint Sa`d Al-Akhiliyya. Her father kept her away from him until he was found lying dead among some rocks. He was then taken back to his family, and this was in the year 68 A.H. [Al-Mawsu`a Ash-Shi`riyyah]

(2) The verse is from a poem on the tawil meter, and it consists of two verses, the first of which is: Despite being kept away from her for long, the further I get
The keener are my ears and eyes for her

‘And surely, We have created many of the jinn and mankind for Hell. They have hearts wherewith they understand not, they have eyes wherewith they see not, and they have ears wherewith they hear not (the truth). They are like cattle, nay even more astray; those! They are the heedless ones’ (al-A‘raf: 179). However, what is the connection between hearing, seeing and the heart, and why has Allah the Almighty stated them together? Scholars said: It is because hearing realizes that which is heard, seeing realizes that which is seen, and from these recognitions the human can form thoughts and then present them to the intellect to choose from and compare between their constituents. So, it takes the good and leaves the bad, and takes that which is right and leaves that which is wrong, and takes that which agrees with the Revealed Law and leaves that which contravenes it.

When it settles upon a matter, it gives it to the heart so that it can be instilled therein. Thus, the creed is firmly established and does not budge, and the faith does not waver and does not go back to the intellect to be discussed once again. Therefore, the heart is where one’s beliefs are located.

Therefore, Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him said: ‘Indeed, in the body there is a lump of flesh; if it is sound, the whole body is sound; and if it is corrupt, the whole body is corrupt. Indeed, it is the heart.’(1) This is because the heart is the vessel that carries the fluid of life and pumps it to all the parts of the body. When it is filled with faith, it pumps this faith, along with the blood, to all the parts of the body, and thus one’s conduct and actions come about in accordance with this faith, and every sense carries out its task accurately.

(1) Agreed upon Hadith… It was narrated by Al-Bukhari in his Sahih (50), Muslim in his Sahih (2996), and Ibn Majah in his Sunnan (3974); all of them were based on the Hadith of Nu`man ibn Bashir which starts as follows: ‘Verily, the lawful is clear and the unlawful is clear, and between the two of them are doubtful matters about which many people do not know. Thus, he who avoids doubtful matters clears himself in regard to his religion and his honor…’

In this way you find that the One Who gives you life does not grant you that which obstructs you from Him, or that which hinders you in implementing His Way. For this, you must read: 'And when they hear ill speech, they withdraw from it and say, 'To us our deeds, and to you your deeds. Peace be to you. We seek not the ignorant' (al-Qasas: 55).

Allah Glorified is He also says: 'And it has already been revealed to you in the Book (this Quran) that when you hear the Verses of Allah being denied and mocked at, then sit not with them, until they engage in a talk other than that; (but if you stayed with them) certainly in that case you would be like them. Surely, Allah will collect the hypocrites and disbelievers all together in Hell' (an-Nisa': 140).

Therefore, when faith is securely established in the heart of the person nothing issues from it except that which agrees with the requirements of faith, in word and deed, and all his activities in life are stamped with this stamp. As for the people of `Ad whom we are discussing, they did not benefit from hearing their Messenger nor from the signs of the universe that they saw around them. They did not taste, therefore, the flavour of faith in Allah the Almighty.

The part saying: '…seeing that they went on rejecting Allah's signs…' (al-Ahqaf: 26) means that they used to deny them and turn away from them. If they had believed, Allah the Almighty would have opened their hearts. But because they chose disbelief and they preferred it, Allah the Almighty sealed their hearts, their hearing and their sight. Allah the Almighty helped them with what they wanted. This is because He is a Lord Who gives His slave what he wants.

Therefore we advise every woman who excessively grieves over losing someone dear to her: 'Be wary of this. Leave the realm of grief and do not become accustomed to it. Do not look at what has been taken from you but look at what remains. If you do not, Allah will prolong your grief and take away from you what you already have.' This is an important lesson, which is that if something bad afflicts something dear to you, do not look at what the affliction has taken away, but rather look at what you still have. This will help alleviate your grief and keep you from falling into anguish and despair. Then you will find that what remains is greater, and that your affliction is less than other people's afflictions.

This is why when the people came to the Chinese sage and complained to him about the toils and anxieties of life, he said to them: ‘Let each one of you write down his worries and troubles on a piece of paper. Then, put your pieces of paper in this box and come back to me after a week.’ After a week the complainers came back and he said to the first: ‘Put your hand in and take a piece of paper out of the box,’ and so he took a piece of paper. When he looked at it he said: ‘No, I want my piece of paper.’ Why? It is because he found that his calamity was less serious than someone else’s calamity. The common people translated this into in the maxim: ‘Whoever sees the trials of people feels that his own trial pales in comparison.’

It has been narrated that `Urwah ibn Az-Zubayr (1) travelled to see the Umayyad Caliph(2) in Greater Syria. On the way he injured his leg and he could not find anyone to treat it until he reached Damascus. There they found that the wound had festered and there was no solution but to amputate the leg. So, they tried to find an anaesthetic, but he said: ‘No. I do not want to be heedless of my Lord for the blink of an eye. Instead, leave me until I have started praying.’ When he had entered into prayer, they cut off his leg and he did not feel anything. Then they took it and shrouded it, and he said to them: ‘Give it to me.’ When he held it in his hands, he said: ‘O Allah, if you have afflicted me in one limb, You have protected the rest of my limbs.’(3)

(1) His name was `Urwah ibn Az-Zubayr ibn Al-`Awam Al-Qurashi, the jurist scholar (faqih) and one of the seven main Jurists of Medina. He was the son of Asma’ bint Abu Bakr. He was born in the year 24 A.H. and he died in the year 94 A.H. at the age of 70. [Al-Wafi bil Wafyat vol. 6, p. 359]

(2) The Umayyad Caliph that `Urwah went to see was Al-Walid ibn `Abd Al-Malik.

(3) He sustained an ulcer in his leg. During the assembly of Al-Walid, they advised him to cut it off; otherwise, his whole body would be affected by gangrene. When they summoned the amputator to cut off his leg, they said: ‘Let us make you drink some intoxicant (wine) to stop you from feeling the pain.’ He said: ‘I would not resort to anything forbidden for the cure I am seeking.’ They said: ‘Let us give you a soporific.’ He said: ‘I hate to be deprived of a part of me without feeling the pain of it and so lose the reward of having patience over it.’ Some people then came in to him, and he disapprovingly asked: ‘Who are they?’ They replied: ‘To hold you still for pain may drive away patience.’ So he said: ‘Let me pray.’ When he would pray, he would get preoccupied by prayer away from himself.’ And so it was amputated while he was praying. [Al-Wafi bil Wafyat vol. 6, p. 359].

Indeed, does the person who is absorbed in Allah's Company feel any pain? We must believe in these reports and not deem them to be farfetched because it is from the secrets of the ear that if you completely close your ears (from outside noise), you will not feel pain. If you try and you still feel some pain, know that you have not sealed your ears completely.

The call of 'Allahu Akbar (Allah is the Greatest [and more important than everything])' is that which takes you away from the work of the life of this world and places you in front of Allah the Almighty. It is the Opening Takbir (saying: Allahu Akbar) with which you disengage yourself from all things to commence the prayer. We explained before that working and engaging in significant pursuits is considered great, but Allah is the Greatest. Thus, let no one deem working in the life of this world and striving and extracting its treasures to be insignificant because the life of this world is too important to be forgotten about. But at the same time it is not important enough to be our final objective.

Whoever traces the story of the people of `Ad throughout the Noble Quran will find that it is mentioned in several chapters. Here it is mentioned in a general and succinct manner, while the incidents of this story are narrated in detail in the chapter of Hud. Also the brief depiction of the punishment that befell them, which is mentioned here, is described in more detail in the chapter of al-Haqqah. Allah Glorified is He says: 'And as for `Ad, they were destroyed by a furious violent wind which Allah imposed on them for seven nights and eight days in succession so that you could see men lying overthrown (destroyed), as if they were hollow trunks of date-palms! Do you see any remnants of them?' (al-Haqqa: 6-8)

The wind that destroyed them was a storm wind (rih sarsar), that is, a fierce wind with a disturbing sound, coming upon them from above for seven nights and eight days without cessation.

The word husum (used to describe the days; translated as succession) is the plural of hasim. It derives from the word hasimah and this implies that their issue was conclusively settled and that was the end of the matter. There was nothing left of them.

If you were to ask: why did Allah the Almighty say: '…for seven nights and eight days…' (al-Haqqa: 7), when the norm in legislation is that the night precede the day, and timing starts with the night-time and not the daytime? The proof is that we confirm the beginning of Ramadan according to the night (based on moon sighting), so before we start to fast, we start to offer night prayers (tarawih).

This is why they made it a juristic conundrum: what is the sunna (an act recommended by the Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him) that precedes the fard (obligatory act)? It appears that the torment descended upon them at dawn, then the day began, and it ended at sunset. This is how it went on for seven nights and eight days in succession.

The orientalists stopped at this verse and objected to how the Noble Quran makes numbers feminine when the counted noun is masculine, and vice versa. '…For seven nights and eight days (sab`a layalin wa-thamaniyata ayyamin)…' (al-Haqqa: 7).

The rule in Arabic grammar is that the numbers three to nine are the opposite of the counted noun in terms of being masculine or feminine, and there is a rationale behind this. The default position of every word is the masculine, so you say katib (writer). As for the feminine, it needs a sign to distinguish it, so they add the letter ta' to it, and thus we say katibah.

Thus, the feminine is a branch of the masculine, and this is why it needs something to distinguish it. As for the terms used to express numbers three to nine, their default position is to be feminine, so we say: thalatha (three), arba`ah (four), khamsah (five) and so forth.

When a number comes with a masculine counted noun, both words remain in their original form, and with the feminine it needs a sign. So, instead of adding another sign, they chose to remove the sign that indicates the feminine.

This is how the numbers have come to contradict their counted nouns with regards to being masculine and feminine. Allah Glorified is He says: '…for seven nights and eight days…' (al-Haqqa: 7).

Also, there is the fact that, according to astronomers, a day is calculated from one point in time until the same point in time on the following day. This is why we find them at one o'clock in the afternoon saying: 'One o'clock in the evening,' even though we are still in the middle of the day. The same goes for one hour after midnight. They say: 'One o'clock in the morning' even though we are still in the middle of the night. As for the day in legislation, it is counted from sunrise to sunset, and the night from sunset to sunrise.

We notice that this chapter has mentioned some scenes from Hud's (Eber's) peace be upon him story, but its details are found in the chapter named after him, which is the chapter of Hud. It goes into a lot of incidents that are not narrated here.

In the chapter at hand, the context focuses on three scenes or issues which are: the call to worship Allah the Almighty alone; warning against worshipping other than Him because by worshipping other than Him, they would expose themselves to punishment; and the fact that he was their brother and was keen on their salvation. Then they responded to him: 'They said, 'Have you come to turn us away from our gods? Then bring us that with which you threaten us, if you are one of the truthful!' (al-Ahqaf: 22)

As for the chapter of Hud, it adds more scenes in the portrayal of the story as Allah the Almighty says there: 'And to `Ad [We sent] their brother Hud. He said, 'O my people worship Allah; you have no god other than Him…' (Hud: 50). This agrees with the verses we have in this chapter. Hud (Eber) peace be upon him also said: '…Indeed, I fear for you the punishment of a terrible Day,' (al-Ahqaf: 21) and he said: '…you are not but inventors [of falsehood]' (Hud: 50).

Accordingly, here Hud (Eber) peace be upon him talks about the resulting consequences and there he talks about the cause. The cause of the great punishment is that you invented falsehoods about Allah the Almighty by ascribing partners to Him.

Then He mentions an additional aspect in the chapter of Hud which is His statement: 'O my people I ask of you no reward for it (the Message). My reward is only from Him, Who created me. Will you not then understand?' (Hud: 51)

It is as though the issue, when viewed logically, according to the law of trade-offs, would entail that you should pay me for delivering the Message to you. However, I do not want any payment from you as you can never pay me back. My just reward is great and surpasses your capacity. This is why I only ask it from Allah, the One Who has sent me and assigned me this task.

His statement: '…from Him, Who created me…' (Hud: 51) means created me and brought me into existence. He did not say: 'The One Who sent me,' as the intended meaning is that Allah Glorified is He created me to be a messenger who is qualified to bear His Call and act as His ambassador to His creation.

Even Hud's (Eber's) peace be upon him name agrees with this mission. The word Hud comes from hada which means to desist, repent and return to Allah the Almighty. An example of this is Allah's saying: '…we have turned back (hudna) to You…' (al-A'raf: 156), that is, we have repented and turned back to Allah the Almighty.

Then, in the chapter of Hud, he did command his people to seek forgiveness and repent to Allah the Almighty: 'And O my people! Ask forgiveness of your Lord and then repent to Him…' (Hud: 52). Seeking forgiveness is for sins that have been committed in the past, while repentance means to be determined not to return to the sin once again in the future. Then, Hud (Eber) peace be upon him explained to them the fruits of doing so. 'He (Allah) will send you (from the sky) abundant rain, and add strength to your strength…' (Hud: 52). This part has not been mentioned in the chapter of al-Ahqaf.

Also, one of the details that is mentioned in the chapter of Hud and not here is their statement: 'All that we say is that some of our gods (false deities) have seized you with evil (madness).' He said, 'I call Allah to witness and bear you witness that I am free from that which you ascribe as partners in worship' (Hud: 54).

Here we notice that he did not just refute the claim on his own behalf, but rather called Allah the Almighty to bear witness for him, and thus absolved himself from this statement. Then he said to them: 'I put my trust in Allah, my Lord and your Lord! There is not a moving (living) creature, but He has grasp of its forelock. Verily, my Lord is on the Straight Path (the truth)' (Hud: 56).

His words demonstrate the confidence that a believer has in his Lord, so he said, challenging them: 'Do whatever you want. I have not come of my own accord and I am not confronting you with my own might, or my own power or my supporters. Rather, I am confronting you with Allah, Who has sent me and upon Him do I rely in my call.'

Here is an important doctrinal lesson, which is that if a trial befalls you do not despair or become angry, but go back to the balance of faith that you have within yourself. If your own laws are suspended remember that Allah's Laws are never suspended; and if worldly ways and means forsake you, remember that the Causer of all things is there, so return to Him.

In the chapter of Hud, Allah the Almighty gives us a portrayal of the salvation attained by the believers in Him that is not mentioned here: 'And when Our Commandment came, We saved Hud and those who believed with him by a Mercy from Us, and We saved them from a severe torment' (Hud: 58). This was a universal sign that broke all laws. 'And when Our Commandment came…' (Hud: 58) to destroy the people of `Ad with the torment they were hastening to receive, We (Allah) saved Hud (Eber) peace be upon him and those who believed along with him. And how were they saved? '…By a Mercy from Us…' (Hud: 58). It was only Allah's Mercy that protected them because what happened was an upheaval of nature and an act of wrath against those who sinned against the Creator of this nature. The wind is a tempest; destructive, agitating, and furiously raging. Despite this, it broke all the physical laws of the universe, as it destroyed these people and left other people safe

وَلَقَدۡ أَهۡلَكۡنَا مَا حَوۡلَكُم مِّنَ ٱلۡقُرَىٰ وَصَرَّفۡنَا ٱلۡأٓيَٰتِ لَعَلَّهُمۡ يَرۡجِعُونَ ٢٧

We have also destroyed other communities that once flourished around you – We had given them various signs so that they might return to the right way [27]
(The Quran, al-Ahqaf: 27)

The address here is for the Quraysh. He wants to turn their attention towards the end of those denying the communities around them: '…what surrounds you of [those] cities…' (al-Ahqaf: 27) meaning around Mecca.

Allah the Almighty has addressed them in another place: 'And, verily, you pass by them (the remnants of their dwellings) at morning-time and by night. Will you not, then, use your reason?' (as-Saffat: 137-138) Indeed, they passed by the cities of Saleh (Shelah), the people of Nuh (Noah) peace be upon them, and the wind-curved sand hills of `Ad and Thamud, and they witnessed their remnants and Allah's punishment that befell them.

In another place Allah Glorified is He says: 'Do they not see how We come to [their] land and shrink its borders? Allah decides— no one can reverse His Decision— and He is swift in reckoning' (ar-Ra'd: 41). It means: 'Oh Quraysh, wake up and do not be deluded by the position of leadership you have over the Arabs and the authority you have over the tribes of the Arabian Peninsula, and that you have a place in the hearts of people because the power of faith that is entering the hearts of people will strip you of your leadership from right under your feet.

And here you are, seeing the territory of faith increasing every day and the territory of disbelief retreating, so take a lesson from this. This issue is what caused Khalid ibn Al-Walid, ʿAmr ibn Al-`As(1) and other chiefs and leader of disbelief to become believers may Allah be pleased with them. When they saw Prophet Muhammad's followers increasing they said: 'Muhammad's call has emerged and become established, and he has come to have such power that no one can confront.' They certainly believed in his call.

His statement: '…and We have diversified the signs [or verses]…' (al-Ahqaf: 27) means that Allah the Almighty showed them all kinds of proofs and in different ways. 'That perhaps they might return [from their evil ways],' (al-Ahqaf: 27) that is, turn back from their arrogance, insolence and stubbornness, and turn back from their disbelief and their ingratitude towards Allah's Blessings. This is because these people, after receiving Allah's Bounties and Favours, disbelieved in the Bestower of them and set up partners with Him. Therefore, Allah the Almighty says in the following verse:

(1) Khalid and `Amr became Muslims at the same time. Khalid made up his mind to become a Muslim and he headed towards Medina, and on the way he met `Amr. `Amr said to him: 'Where are you going?' I (Khalid) said: 'What has made you go out?' He said: 'And what has made you go out?' I (Khalid) said: 'I want to embrace Islam and follow Muhammad.' `Amr said: 'This is what has brought me here.' This occurred in the year 7 A.H., i.e. after Badr, Uhud, Al-Khandaq, and several other battles, and before the Conquest of Mecca. `Amr said openly: 'When we left the Khandaq with the confederate clans, I said to my companions: 'I think that Muhammad's matter is rising tremendously.'

فَلَوۡلَا نَصَرَهُمُ ٱلَّذِينَ ٱتَّخَذُواْ مِن دُونِ ٱللَّهِ قُرۡبَانًا ءَالِهَةَۢۖ بَلۡ ضَلُّواْ
عَنۡهُمۡۚ وَذَٰلِكَ إِفۡكُهُمۡ وَمَا كَانُواْ يَفۡتَرُونَ ﴿٢٨﴾

So why did their gods not help them, those they set up as gods besides God to bring them nearer to Him? No indeed! They failed them utterly: it was all a lie of their own making [28] (The Quran, al-Ahqaf: 28)

The word (falawla; why did not) is equivalent to (halla); it denotes incitement and admonition. Accordingly, the part saying '…why did those (falawla) whom they had taken for gods besides Allah, as a way of approach not help them?' (al-Ahqaf: 28) carries an ironic tone regarding these gods that they adopted besides Allah the Almighty. It intends to mock them by saying: why have they not helped you and stood by you through your afflictions? '…As a way of approach (to Allah)…' (al-Ahqaf: 28) means as a way of bringing them closer to Allah the Almighty. None of this happened. Why? It is because they are false, claimed deities, and they can neither harm nor benefit.

Rather, these gods are the work of their own hands. They made them themselves. They would stand a rock up and give it arms and legs and a nose and ears, and if it fell, they would pick it up; and if its arm broke, they would fix it. In Allah's Name, is there any rationality in this?

Their statement '…as a way of approach (to Allah)…' (al-Ahqaf: 28), is just as they said in another place: '…We worship them only that they may bring us near to Allah…' (az-Zumar: 3). Such statements of theirs are astonishing considering that they were a people of eloquence and fluency. They knew very well the meaning of worship. If they had said that they only respect them so as to draw closer to Allah the Almighty this would have made sense. But they said: '…we worship them…' (az-Zumar: 3). Although you clearly know that worship means to obey the commands and prohibitions of the object of worship. Do these idols have commands and prohibitions?

Therefore, Allah the Almighty responds to them: '…nay, but they vanished completely from them (when there came the torment)…' (al-Ahqaf: 28), that is, they strayed and vanished from them (bal dallu `anhum). It similar to us saying: 'So-and-so has lost his way,' and also Allah's saying: 'And when harm touches you upon the sea, those that you call upon besides Him vanish from you except Him (Allah Alone)…' (al-Isra': 67). Why? It is because the matter involves destruction.

The human cannot cheat himself, and in times of adversity, he abandons these false gods and he seeks refuge in the True God Who possesses benefit and harm. In this situation, he never says: 'O Hubal (an idol worshipped in pre-Islamic times)!' because he knows that Hubal will never save him. Rather, he says: 'O Allah!'

'And that (wadhalika)…' (al-Ahqaf: 28) is a demonstrative pronoun that indicates their taking gods besides Allah the Almighty. While the Arabic word (ifk) in '…was their lie…' (al-Ahqaf: 28) stands for deliberate falsehood, which is the worst kind of lying. 'And their inventions…' (al-Ahqaf: 28) refer\ to their fabrication of lies by claiming that these objects were gods. Thus, it is as if the general meaning is: indeed, the lack of help and support is the result of your self-delusion and false claims regarding Allah the Almighty by attributing divinity to other than Him.

فَلَمَّا قُضِىَ وَلَّوْا۟ إِلَىٰ قَوْمِهِم مُّنذِرِينَ ﴿٢٩﴾ قَالُوا۟ يَٰقَوْمَنَآ إِنَّا سَمِعْنَا كِتَٰبًا أُنزِلَ
مِنۢ بَعْدِ مُوسَىٰ مُصَدِّقًا لِّمَا بَيْنَ يَدَيْهِ يَهْدِىٓ إِلَى ٱلْحَقِّ وَإِلَىٰ طَرِيقٍ مُّسْتَقِيمٍ ﴿٣٠﴾

We sent a group of jinn to you [Prophet] to listen to the Quran. When they heard it, they said to one another,
'Be quiet!' Then when it was finished they turned to their community and gave them warning [29] They said,
'Our people, we have been listening to a Scripture that came after Moses, confirming previous scriptures, giving guidance to the truth and the straight path [30]
(The Quran, al-Ahqaf: 29 - 30)

The context now takes us to another sphere of the call. After telling us about the situation regarding human beings and how, among them, there were those who believed and others who denied Allah's Messenger, it tells us about the jinn. With regards to the call, they are the counterparts to human beings.

Since Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him was sent to both human beings and the jinn, the jinn are therefore morally responsible and accountable creatures like us. But they are hidden from us, and so we cannot see them. In this regard, the Noble Quran says: '…indeed, he sees you, he and his tribe, from where you do not see them…' (al-A'raf: 27).

The jinn have agility and the ability to penetrate things because of their igneous nature. This is why, if you were to light a fire behind this wall, in a few moments the heat would be felt. Hence, you must believe that they are from fire, that they are able to penetrate things, and that they have a nature unlike that of human beings.

The True Lord wants to make it clear to us that the jinn, even though they are hidden from us, are like us in terms of legal responsibility. Like us they are addressed by the Noble Quran. Among them there are believers and disbelievers, the obedient and the disobedient.

We know the story of the conflict between the jinn and human beings that has existed ever since Adam peace be upon him was created and Satan was commanded to prostrate to him and he refused and acted arrogantly. His argument was that he was created from fire and Adam peace be upon him was created from clay, so how could he prostrate to him when he was superior to him, as he said: '…I am better than him. You created me from fire and created him from clay' (al-A'raf: 12).

It is true that Adam peace be upon him also fell into disobedience, but there is a massive difference between the disobedience of Adam peace be upon him and that of Satan. Adam peace be upon him disobeyed his Lord when he ate from the tree that his Lord had forbidden him to eat from. He disobeyed his Lord due to heedlessness, and due to being overpowered by his desire and listening to Satan's whisperings.

Then he realized his disobedience and admitted it. He repented from it and acknowledged that he erred against his Lord and that he had wronged himself: 'Our Lord, we have wronged ourselves, and if You do not forgive us and have mercy upon us, we will surely be among the losers,' (al-A'raf: 23). And also in the chapter of al-Baqara: 'Then Adam received from his Lord

Words. And his Lord pardoned him (accepted his repentance). Verily, He is the One Who forgives (accepts repentance), the Most Merciful,' (al-Baqara: 37).

Therefore, Adam's repentance was accepted because He did not reject Allah's Judgement. As for Satan, he rejected His Judgement and did not submit to it, so he was banished from Allah's Mercy and exiled. There is a difference between disobeying a judgment or a law while acknowledging it and affirming that it comes from Allah, and rejecting it altogether.

This is why we use this speech with whoever argues, for example, about religious issues that have a clear ruling, such as usury or growing a beard. Some people say: 'Dealing in usury is now permissible.' We respond to this by saying: 'With this statement you are rejecting Allah's Ruling regarding usury. It is safer for you to say that it is prohibited, but your circumstances are forcing you to deal in it,' for example.

Then it is for you to decide to follow Adam peace be upon him and repent, and seek forgiveness so that perhaps Allah the Almighty will forgive you, instead of stubbornly opposing your Lord regarding His Ruling which is something you cannot do. Remember Satan's words: '…and indeed I will order them to change the nature created by Allah…' (an-Nisa': 119).

Be wary of this matter, as you know that Satan was once known as the 'Peacock of the Angels.'(1) After he stubbornly opposed Allah's Command, acted proudly and rejected Allah's Judgement, Allah the Almighty made him accursed and expelled him from His Mercy.

There is an important point for us to note regarding Allah's Command to Adam peace be upon him not to eat from the tree: '…but do not approach this tree…' (al-Baqara: 35). The prohibition was only regarding approaching it, and the same goes for every command concerning what Allah the Almighty has prohibited: '…These are the limits [set by] Allah, so do not approach them…' (al-Baqara: 187).

(1) Narrated by Al-Alusi in his Tafsir (vol. 1, no. 272) from Abu Al-`Aliyah regarding the meaning of '...and was one of the disbelievers.' (al-Baqara: 34) Furthermore, the outward meaning is that his disbelief was due to his ignorance, since Allah the Exalted took back from him the knowledge that He had lent him and which he had dressed himself in when he was the 'Peacock of the Angels.'

Regarding what Allah the Almighty has made permissible for you, He says: '…These are the limits of Allah, so do not transgress them…' (al-Baqara: 229). That is, do not overstep what Allah has allowed you. As for the prohibited, do not come near it because whoever grazes his animals near the forbidden pasture of someone else is liable to slip into it at any moment.(1)

The progeny of Satan have followed his path in deluding the children of Adam peace be upon him. We cannot see them just as we cannot see the angels despite the difference between the two of them, which is that angels are from light, while demons are from fire.

Here the discussion moves, with regards to the message of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him from human beings to the jinn, informing that the jinn are legally responsible and accountable for their actions and that they can listen to the Noble Quran. Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him did not mention this to us himself, but rather, he related to us what Allah the Almighty had informed him concerning the jinn listening to the Noble Quran.

Allah said in the chapter of al-Jinn: 'Say [O Muhammad], 'It has been revealed to me that a group of the jinn listened (to the Quran) and said: Indeed, we have heard an amazing Quran. It guides to the right course, and we have believed in it.' (al-Jinn: 1-2)

It is as if the True Lord the Exalted is saying to His Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him: 'I have not sent you to go to the jinn and address them because you cannot see them. Therefore, We led a group of the jinn to you and brought them to your presence so that they can listen to the Noble Quran without you perceiving them. And if I had not told you this, you would not have known it.'

(1) Agreed upon Hadith… It was narrated by Al-Bukhari in his Sahih (50), Muslim in his Sahih (2996), and Ibn Majah in his Sunnan from the Hadith of Nu`man ibn Bashir that he heard the Messenger of Allah peace and blessings be upon him saying: 'Verily, the lawful is clear and the unlawful is clear, and between the two of them are doubtful matters about which many people do not know. Thus, he who avoids doubtful matters clears himself in regard to his religion and his honor. And whoever falls into doubtful matters falls into the unlawful, just like the shepherd who grazes (his flock) around a private pasture almost grazes (his flock) in it. Behold! Every king has a private pasture, and Allah's Private Pasture is what He has prohibited.'

Here Allah the Exalted says: ‘And [mention, O Muhammad], when We directed to you a group of the jinn, listening to the Quran…’ (al-Ahqaf: 29). You were reciting the Noble Quran and they were around your listening.

There is also their statement in the chapter of al-Jinn: ‘It guides to the right course…’ (al-Jinn: 2). And here the jinn said: ‘…a [recited] Book revealed after Musa (Moses)…’ (al-Ahqaf: 30), which proves that the jinn have a connection to the previous prophets and that, like us, they are legally responsible and accountable for their actions.

There is also reference to them in the chapter of ar-Rahman: ‘We (Allah) shall attend to you, Oh you two classes (jinn and mankind)’ (ar-Rahman: 31). That is, We shall devote Ourselves to calling you to account for your deeds, after leaving you free to do whatever your wanted. Do not think that this was heedlessness on Our Part. Rather, We gave you respite in order to confirm the ability of free choice that We created within you and granted you.

The jinn and human beings, referred to by the Quranic word (ath-thaqalan; ‘the two classes’), are equal in reckoning just as they are equal in legal responsibility and accountability.

It was narrated that Anas Allah be pleased with him said: ‘I was with the Messenger of Allah peace and blessings be upon him on one of the mountains of Mecca when an old man with a staff, on which he was leaning, approached us. On seeing him, the Messenger of Allah peace and blessings be upon him recognized him. He said: ‘His walk and his structure are like that of the jinn.’ The man said: ‘Yes, I am one of the jinn.’ So, the Messenger of Allah peace and blessings be upon him said to him: ‘Who are you?’ He said: ‘I am Hamah ibn Him ibn Laqis ibn Iblis.’ He then said: ‘Between you and your father Iblis there are only two fathers?’ He said: ‘Yes. Indeed, I have lived to see most of time and the lesser part of it remains, and I witnessed Cain killing Abel.’(1)

(1) Narrated by Fakhr Ad-Din Ar-Razi in his Tafsir (Mafatih Al-Ghayb) as part of his explanation of this verse… and it includes: ‘At the time Cain killed Abel I was walking among the hills.’ It was stated by Al-`Uqayli in Ad-Du`afa’ Al-Kabir (Hadith no. 1809). Its chain of narration is long, strange and contains untrustworthy transmitters. Al-`Uqayli said: ‘Its chain of narrations includes Muhammad ibn `Abdullah Al-Ansari Abu Salamah, who is untrustworthy in narrating Hadith.’ =

This narration is proof that they live a long time and that they can take on different forms, just as angels take on different forms. We do not see angels in their real form and we do not see the jinn in their real form, unless they assume the form of a human being.

You know the long Hadith of Jibril (Gabriel) peace be upon him when he came to the assembly of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him in the form of a strange man, yet no signs of travel could be seen on him. None of those present recognised him until he sat down close to the Messenger of Allah peace and blessings be upon him and started asking him about Islam, Iman (belief), and Ihsan (excellence) and the Messenger answering him. Then he left; and when the Companions asked about him, the Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him replied: 'Indeed that was Jibril. He came to teach you the matters of your religion.'(1)

On this account, we saw some of the enemies of Prophet Muhammad's call trying to stir up obstacles regarding it such as saying that the Messenger should be an angel. This problem has been dealt with. If the Messenger had come as an angel, he would have had to come to people in the form of a man; otherwise, how could he convey the teachings to them and how would they learn from him?

Therefore, the obstacle would remain. Furthermore, an angel cannot be a proper example to be followed because angels do not disobey Allah the Almighty in whatever He has commanded them, but always do what they are bidden to do. So, how can an angel be an example for those who, by their very nature, make mistakes, fall into heedlessness, and forget?

Therefore, it is a condition for a Prophet and Messenger to be of the same species as those he is sent to so that he can act as an example for them.

= Ibn Al-Jawzi said in the book Al-Mawdu`at: 'This Hadith is fabricated and there is no doubt about it. It has two paths of narration. The first of them contains Ishaq ibn Bishr and he was a liar who fabricated Hadiths. While the other contains Muhammad ibn `Abdullah Al-Ansari Abu Salamah, who was untrustworthy in narrating Hadith'

(1) Narrated by Al-Bukhari in his Sahih (48) and likewise Muslim in his Sahih (9) According to his version, the Messenger of Allah peace and blessings be upon him said: 'That was Jibril. He came to teach the people their religion'; and according to the version of Muslim, he said: 'Indeed that was Jibril; he came to you to teach you your religion.'

The True Lord the Exalted has given us a detailed illustration of the state of the jinn, and that among them there is the believer and the disbeliever. He said, quoting them: ‘And among us are Muslims [in submission to Allah], and among us are the unjust. And whoever has become Muslim – those have sought out the right course. But as for the unjust, they will be, for Hell, firewood’ (al-Jinn: 14-15).

Therefore, the Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him said: ‘I read the chapter of ar-Rahman to your brothers from among the jinn, and they were more responsive to it than you. Whenever they heard: ‘Which, then, of your Lord’s favours do you deny?’ (ar-Rahman: 13), they would all say in one breath: ‘Our Lord, we do not deny any of your favours! For you is all praise,’ (1) and they would repeat this every time the verse was repeated.

And you can hear them saying: ‘And exalted be the Majesty of our Lord...’ (al-Jinn: 3), that is, sublimely exalted is His Glory, and due to this sublimity: ‘…He has taken neither a wife, nor a son (or offspring or children).’ (al-Jinn: 3) Therefore, the jinn have knowledge of the matters of belief and the truth of Allah’s Oneness, and maybe they are more accurate than us in expressing them. It suffices that they deemed Satan to be a fool, as they said: ‘And that our foolish one has been saying about Allah an excessive transgression’ (al-Jinn: 4).

We return to Allah’s statement that we were discussing: ‘And [mention, O Muhammad], when We directed to you a group of the jinn, listening to the Quran…’ (al-Ahqaf: 29). The Arabic word (nafar; group) denotes a company of people consisting of anywhere between three to forty individuals. ‘…When We directed to you a group of the jinn…’ (al-Ahqaf: 29), means that We brought them to you instead of you going to them.‘And when they attended it…’ (al-Ahqaf: 29), that is, they were present for the recitation: ‘…they said (to one another), ‘Listen quietly’…’ (al-Ahqaf: 29). Listen with interest and contemplation, which indicate that they advised one another to listen in silence. '…And when it was concluded…' (al-Ahqaf: 29), that is, when the recitation came to an end '…they went back to their people as warners' (al-Ahqaf: 29). They went back to their people, warning them and conveying to them what they had heard.

(1) Narrated by Al-Bayhaqi in Dala`il An-Nabuwwah (vol. 2, p. 108, Hadith no. 522) on the authority of Jabir ibn `Abdullah Allah be pleased with him who said: ‘When the Messenger of Allah peace and blessings be upon him read the chapter of ar-Rahman to the jinn, they remained quiet and did not say anything, so the Messenger of Allah peace and blessings be upon him said: ‘The jinn responded better than you. Whenever I read to them: ‘Which, then, of your Lord’s favors do you deny?’ (ar-Rahman: 13), they would say: ‘Our Lord, We do not deny a single one of Your Favors!’

'They said, 'O our people, indeed we have heard a [recited] Book revealed after Musa (Moses)…' (al-Ahqaf: 30), that is, the Noble Quran, and their statement '…after [that of] Musa…' (al-Ahqaf: 30) proves that they had a connection to the previous Messengers and that they believed in our master Musa (Moses) peace be upon him, i.e. they were Jews.

The jinn mentioned Musa (Moses) peace be upon him and not `Isa (Jesus) peace be upon him because the Book of Musa presented the doctrine for regulating life's affairs and actions and it contained laws and rulings. As for the book of `Isa, it was merely spiritualties and pieces of advice. This is why they became aware of this matter and they put the Gospel and the Torah in one book despite the partisanship between them, and called it 'The Holy Bible.'

The meaning of '…confirming…' (al-Ahqaf: 30) is that the Noble Quran confirms '…what was before it…' (al-Ahqaf: 30), that is, the divine books that came before it. As long as it affirms them, then it has brought what they brought, but it gives even more as it: '…guides to the truth and to a straight path,' (al-Ahqaf: 30), in that it suits the universality and oneness of religion

This is because every Messenger before Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him came to treat the diseases of his own community in a particular time and place. It is possible for two messengers to be contemporary, as we have seen with our masters Ibrahim (Abraham) and Lut (Lot) as well as Musa (Moses) and Shu`aib (Jethro) peace be upon them all.

The world at that time was in a state of isolation and solitude, and there was no coming together as there is now, which has made the entire world like a small village. This isolated way of life meant that each community was unaware of other communities.

Consequently, each community had their own social ills and plagues and each needed a messenger to put them right and take his people by the hand back to Allah the Almighty. Thus, there were people who worshipped idols instead of Allah the Almighty others who cheated in weights and measures, and still others that deviated sexually from the natural way that Allah the Almighty had created. Each one of these groups needed a messenger.

However, when the world came together and means of communication became spread worldwide, it was necessary to have one messenger because the world's ills and the different horizons would be united. There must be one messenger to put things right in every time and place. Therefore, every time and place has been honoured by the one who combined all good qualities, anytime and anywhere, Prophet Muhammad ibn `Abdullah peace and blessings be upon him.

Therefore, a group of the jinn heard the message and took the task of conveying it to others. This is why Prophet Muhammad may the peace and the blessings of Allah be upon him said: 'May Allah bless the person who hears one of my sayings, contemplates it, and then conveys it to those who did not hear it. Indeed, the person who the message is later conveyed to may be more aware of its meanings than the one who initially heard it.'(1) Indeed, the one who the message is conveyed to may be more eager to implement it than the one who initially heard it. An Arabic poet understood this concept and illustrated it when he said (2)

'Take my knowledge and do not look at my actions,
Reap the fruits and leave the branch for the fire.'(3)

Then, this group of jinn continued to convey the message to their people and warned them concerning what they had heard, Allah Glorified is He said, reporting the jinn's message to their people:

(1) Narrated by Abu Dawud in his Sunnan (3175) and At-Tirmidhi in his Sunnan (2580, 2581)... He declared the first to be a good (hasan) narration and the second (the Hadith of Ibn Mas'ud) to be hasan sahih (two chains of narrations, one is good and the other is authentic). It was also narrated by Ibn Majah in his Sunnan (226, 227, and 228) and he also narrated it from the Hadith of Anas ibn Malik (Hadith 232).

(2) He is the Sheikh, the jurist, Imam Khalaf ibn Abu Al-Qasim Muhammad Al-Azdi Al-Qayrawani Al-Baradhiʿi, and it is also pronounced as Al-Baradiʿi. It is not known exactly when he was born or when he died. (Tahdhib Al-Mudawana 1/2)

(3) He said this verse about himself to his students, and the meaning is to take knowledge from him and not pay attention to the one carrying it. Thus, you should eat the ripe fruits and let the rods be used as firewood.

يَٰقَوۡمَنَآ أَجِيبُواْ دَاعِيَ ٱللَّهِ وَءَامِنُواْ بِهِۦ يَغۡفِرۡ لَكُم مِّن ذُنُوبِكُمۡ وَيُجِرۡكُم مِّنۡ
عَذَابٍ أَلِيمٖ (٣١) وَمَن لَّا يُجِبۡ دَاعِيَ ٱللَّهِ فَلَيۡسَ بِمُعۡجِزٖ فِي ٱلۡأَرۡضِ وَلَيۡسَ
لَهُۥ مِن دُونِهِۦٓ أَوۡلِيَآءُۚ أُوْلَٰٓئِكَ فِي ضَلَٰلٖ مُّبِينٍ (٣٢)

Our people, respond to the one who calls you to God.
Believe in Him: He will forgive you your sins and protect you from a painful torment. [31] Those who fail to respond to God's call cannot escape God's power anywhere on earth, nor will they have any protector against Him: such people have clearly gone far astray [32]
(The Quran, al-Ahqaf: 31-32)

The words: '…Allah's caller,' (al-Ahqaf: 30) are primarily referring to Prophet Muhammad may the peace and the blessings of Allah be upon him. Additionally, they are referring to the Prophet's followers who strive to convey his message to their people. 'And have faith in him,' (al-Ahqaf: 30) is an order that we should have faith in what he has brought. 'He will forgive you (whatever is past) of your sins, and save you from a grievous suffering (in the life to come)' (al-Ahqaf: 31). Allah Glorified is He said: '…forgive you (whatever is past) of (min) your sins,' (al-Ahqaf: 31) and the Arabic word min (of) indicates portioning. This means that He forgives some sins, and this forgiveness is a fruit of faith. He did not refer to the forgiveness of all their sins because Allah Glorified is He leaves other sins for us to repent and turn to Him. For example, there are sins that are forgiven from one prayer to the next, from one Friday prayer to the next or from one Ramadan to the next.(1) However, there are also sins that cannot be erased by repentance alone, as the sinner must fulfil additional conditions for the sins to be forgiven. These include the transgressions against the rights of other creatures, and the injustices in which objects are forcibly taken from others. In such cases, the sinner must return the rights of the other creatures before the sins are forgiven by Allah Glorified is He.

(1) Narrated by Ahmad in his Musnad (6832) from Abu Hurayra may Allah be pleased with him that Prophet Muhammad said: "Each prescribed prayer after a prescribed prayer is expiation for (the sins) between them." And he said: "And one Friday to the next and one month to the next (are also expiations)." This means that in every month of Ramadan is forgiveness for the sins that were done since the preceding Ramadan.

Allah Glorified is He said: '…and (He will) save you from a grievous suffering (in the life to come)' (al-Ahqaf: 31). Since these sins may result in punishment in the Hereafter, it follows that if Allah Glorified is He forgives these sins, He will save the sinner from the fire. This is the principle of emptying oneself from sins before filling our work with good deeds as we have previously mentioned.

However, Allah Glorified is He did not mention in this verse the entry of these jinn to paradise. This caused some people to ask, 'Do the believing jinn enter paradise?' Some people are of the opinion that they will be transformed into dust after the reckoning, and that will be the end of their matter. The proof these people presented for this argument is that Allah Glorified is He did not say that the jinn will enter paradise after being delivered from the fire.

However, we know that the jinn are legally responsible like us, and they include believers and disbelievers. Therefore, the more acceptable opinion is that they are like us, in that they will be rewarded with paradise for their righteous deeds or punished in the fire for their disbelief.

Some people ask, 'How can they be punished with the fire when they were created from it?' This is easy for the Creator to establish, as He has other laws that are beyond our capacity to understand. We previously stated that people are created from mud, but that does not make them dissolve when immersed into water. Allah Glorified is He said: '…for, behold, it is a tree that grows in the very heart of the blazing fire (of hell)' (as-Saffat: 64). How can a tree grow in the very heart of hell-fire, when the worldly laws of nature state that such a tree will burn instantaneously? Thus, there is another set of divine laws concerning such concepts, and we should not consider these matters impossible, when Allah Glorified is He knows His creation better than we do.

Then, Allah Glorified is He said in the verse we are studying: 'But he who does not respond to Allah's call can never elude (Him) on earth' (al-Ahqaf: 32). The Arabic word mu'jiz was used here ('elude'), and it is generally used to refer to a person who is incapacitating someone else. Incapacity ('ajz) is the state of weakness in which a person cannot perform any actions. So, when a person is a mu'jiz to another person, it means that he has rendered him unable to act. We also say that the Quran is muʿjiz which means that the Arabs were incapable of bringing anything like it. In this verse, Allah Glorified is He said that the person who disobeyed Allah’s caller and disbelieved in him will never be mu’jiz (eluding) to Him, and they will never escape or flee from Allah’s punishment.

Then, Allah Glorified is He said: ‘…nor can he have any protector against Him (in the life to come),’ (al-Ahqaf: 32). This disbeliever will not find any other power that can defend or intercede for them in front of Allah Glorified is He. Indeed, no forces will be able to protect him from Allah’s chastisement. In the following words, Allah Glorified is He described the forces that the disbelievers are naively relying upon: ‘…all these will be in a clear (mubeen) loss’ (al-Ahqaf: 32). This means that the protectors themselves will abandon them and will themselves be lost on the Day of Judgment, as they had no real power. The word mubeen (clear) means that their loss or confusion will encompass them and that they will search for their destination in every direction, just as a wandering person does after losing the right path.

Then, the context of the verses returned to the universal signs that Allah Glorified is He created, instructing the disbelievers to contemplate Allah’s power. This is because these disbelievers had denied the tools of hearing, sight and discernment that Allah Glorified is He had created in them, and they did not benefit from these means of contemplation. Therefore, Allah highlighted these signs repeatedly to them, as a varying form of lesson and example, Allah Glorified is He said:

أَوَلَمۡ يَرَوۡاْ أَنَّ ٱللَّهَ ٱلَّذِى خَلَقَ ٱلسَّمَٰوَٰتِ وَٱلۡأَرۡضَ وَلَمۡ يَعۡىَ بِخَلۡقِهِنَّ
بِقَٰدِرٍ عَلَىٰٓ أَن يُحۡـِۧىَ ٱلۡمَوۡتَىٰۚ بَلَىٰٓۚ إِنَّهُۥ عَلَىٰ كُلِّ شَىۡءٖ قَدِيرٞ ﴿٣٣﴾

Do the disbelievers not understand that God, who created the heavens and earth and did not tire in doing so, has the power to bring the dead back to life? Yes indeed! He has power over everything [33] (The Quran, al-Ahqaf: 33)

Here, Allah Glorified is He has mentioned one of the most overwhelming signs of His creation, which is the creation of the heavens and the earth. Allah Glorified is He also said in another chapter: ‘Greater indeed than the creation of man is the creation of the heavens and the earth’ (Ghafir: 57). Thus, He mentioned the creation of the heavens and the earth without mentioning the creation of man because they are a greater sign. Each person lives a minute number of years. Even if a person’s age reaches a hundred years, this age is minuscule in comparison to the age of the heavens and the earth.

Allah Glorified is He said: ‘…and (He) was never wearied by their creation’ (al-Ahqaf: 33). This means that Allah Glorified is He did not become tired because of this creation, as He said in another verse: ‘…and (that) no weariness could ever touch Us’ (Qaf: 38). If someone has these attributes and these are the signs of His creation, is He not fully Capable of bringing the dead back to life? The answer to this question comes as: ‘Verily, indeed (bala).’ Indeed, Allah Glorified is He is fully Capable of resurrecting the dead, just as He had the power to create everything in the heavens and the earth. The Arabic word bala indicated affirmation in this context because the question asked in the verse was a negating question. The basic lexical rule is that negating a negation is actually an affirmation.

The verse is then concluded with the phrase: ‘He has power over everything’ (al-Ahqaf: 33). This conclusion emphasises all of Allah’s overwhelming power, and not just the lighter concept of resurrecting the dead. Indeed, His power is capable of every concept, even the transformations that are greater than resurrection, Allah Glorified is He said:

وَيَوۡمَ يُعۡرَضُ ٱلَّذِينَ كَفَرُواْ عَلَى ٱلنَّارِ أَلَيۡسَ هَٰذَا بِٱلۡحَقِّۖ قَالُواْ بَلَىٰ وَرَبِّنَاۚ
قَالَ فَذُوقُواْ ٱلۡعَذَابَ بِمَا كُنتُمۡ تَكۡفُرُونَ ٣٤

On the Day the disbelievers are brought before Hell [it will be said to them], ‘Is this not real?’ ‘Yes, by our Lord,’ they will reply and He will say, ‘Then taste the punishment for having denied the truth’ [34]

This is another event that will happen when the disbelievers will see the fire, and we seek refuge in Allah Glorified is He from their destiny. Allah Glorified is He said in a previous verse in the same chapter: 'And on the Day when those who disbelieved will be brought within sight of the fire, (they will be told, 'You have exhausted your (share of) good blessings in your worldly life, having enjoyed them (without any thought of the hereafter)' (al-Ahqaf: 20). Thus, He mentioned the reason why they will be punished by the fire, which is that they had exhausted their entire share of good bounties in the life of this world. Therefore, there is nothing left for them to enjoy in the Hereafter.

In that respect, we previously said that an apparent blessing which occupies a servant's time or keeps his attention away from Allah Glorified is He is in fact a trial and a plight. A true blessing is that which reminds you of the One Who bestowed all these blessings and bounties. This is why Prophet Muhammad may the peace and the blessings of Allah be upon him taught us to say a particular prayer whenever we see a blessing that we possess or that someone else possesses. He instructed us to say: 'This is what Allah wills (Masha'a Allah). Indeed, there is no power except with Allah (La quwata illa billah).'(1)

In that Prophetic saying of remembrance, you are attributing the favour to Allah, the One Who created everything and you are freeing yourself from any delusions in attributing the blessing to yourself. You should realize that you do not possess any bounties by virtue of your own skilfulness and cleverness. This was the delusion of the (disbeliever) Qarun when he said: 'This (wealth) has been given to me only by virtue of the knowledge that is in me!' (al-Qasas: 78) The result of that delusion was that Allah Glorified is He punished him, as Allah said: 'And thereupon We caused the earth to swallow him and his dwelling' (al-Qasas: 81). It is as if Allah Glorified is He was saying to him: 'As long as this wealth was given to you by virtue of the knowledge that is in you, then protect your wealth with your knowledge.'

It has been narrated that 'Umar ibn Al-Khattab may Allah be pleased with him came to our Prophet Muhammad may the peace and the blessings of Allah be upon

(1) Narrated by At-Tabarani in his Mu'jam Al-Kabir (14275) from 'Uqba ibn 'Amir who said that He said: {Whoever has been blessed with a blessing and he wants it to remain, then let him say 'There is no strength and no power except in God.'} Then The Messenger of Allah read: "And (he continued:) "Alas, if thou hadst but said, on entering thy garden, 'Whatever Allah wills (shall come to pass, for) there is no power save with God!'…" (al-Kahf: 39)

him and found him sleeping on a mat that had left marks on his skin. He did not find any objects of material bliss in the Prophet's room. 'Umar may Allah be pleased with him was saddened by the modest state of the Prophet's room, and he was unable to hide his emotion from the Prophet may the peace and the blessings of Allah be upon him. He said to Prophet Muhammad, 'O Messenger of Allah! Ask Allah to grant to your community material bounties, just as He has granted to the Persians and the Romans.' The Prophet Muhammad may the peace and the blessings of Allah be upon him looked at him and said: 'Are you in doubt, O, son of Al-Khattab? These people (the Persians and Romans) have had their entire share of good bounties hastened for them in the life of this world.'(1)

We have mentioned the statement of ʿUmar ibn ʿAbd Al-ʿAziz, 'By Allah, if I had wanted, I could have had better food served to me than any of you, and be better dressed than any of you, but I am storing up my delights for the Hereafter.'(2) This is why Allah Glorified is He said: '(And all who are thus blest will be told 'Eat and drink with good happiness in return for all (the good deeds) that you have sent ahead in the past (worldly) days!' (al-Haqqa: 24)

Therefore, whoever remembers the divine reward, calling to mind the bliss which is prepared in the Hereafter, will find it easy to obey Allah Glorified is He in this worldly life. This is like the student who revises for long nights and denies himself the pleasure of rest because he desires a greater pleasure which is the pleasure of success.

Allah Glorified is He said: 'And so, on the Day (yawm) when those who disbelieved will be brought within sight of the Fire' (al-Ahqaf: 34). The word yawm (day) on its own is a circumstance of time. Allah was ordering Prophet Muhammad may the peace and the blessings of Allah be upon him in this verse to remind the disbelievers of the punishment prepared for them in the Hereafter. Prophet Muhammad may the peace and the blessings of Allah be upon him was ordered to warn them of that day and to ask them: ‘Is this not the truth?’ (al-Ahqaf: 34) that you have been denying. On that day, this truth will become a reality in their eyes.

(1) Narrated by Al-Bukhari in his Sahih (2288) and also Muslim in his Sahih (2707) as part of a long, Hadith from Ibn ʿAbbas

(2) This statement was attributed to ʿUmar ibn Al-Khattab and not to ʿUmar ibn ʿAbd Al-ʿAziz. It has been mentioned by Al-Qurtubi in his Tafsir regarding the verse: "You have exhausted your (share of) good things in your worldly life," (al-Ahqaf: 20) and likewise, was mentioned by Ar-Razi in his Tafsir, An-Nasafi in his Tafsir and As-Suyuti in Ad-Durr Al-Manthur.

We previously explained that knowledge (and certitude) has three phases. These are the prior knowledge of a certain event before it occurs (‘ilm-ul-yaqeen), the sight of that event when it happens in front of our eyes (‘ayn-ul-yaqeen) and the immersive experience of that event (haqq-ul-yaqeen). Information regarding the Hereafter, including the details of reward or punishment, is part of the knowledge of a certain event that will happen in our next life. When we see these events happening with our eyes, this knowledge will be transformed into a sight of certainty. After that, when we come into direct contact with the reward or the punishment, after the people of paradise enter paradise and the people of the fire enter the fire, the sight will become an experience of certainty.

These phases were mentioned in two chapters in the Noble Quran. The first mention was in Allah’s Verses: ‘You are obsessed by greed for more (bounties), until you go down to your graves. Nay, in time you will come to understand! Then, (and once again) nay, in time you will come to understand! Nay, if you could but understand (it) with an understanding (born) of certainty, you would indeed, most surely, see the blazing fire (of hell)! In the end you will indeed, most surely, behold it with the eye of certainty: and on that Day you will most surely be called to account for (what you did with) the boon of life!’ (at-Takathur: 1-8)

As for the truth of certainty, it is mentioned in Allah’s statement: ‘But if one happens to be of those misguided people who deny the truth, a welcome of burning despair (awaits him in the life to come,) and the heat of a blazing fire! Verily, this is indeed the truth of certainty! Extol, then, the limitless glory of your Lord’s mighty name!’ (al-Waqi‘a: 92-96)

After being asked the question, ‘Is this not the truth?’ (al-Ahqaf: 34) on the Day of Judgment, they will answer: ‘Verily (bala), by Our Lord (it is the truth)!’ Answering the negating question with the word bala is an affirmation because negating a negation is a positive affirmation. Indeed, this is the truth that they were denying.

In fact, they will not just affirm it lightly, but will pledge by Allah’s Name that it is the truth, as a result of the severity of the experience. They will say: ‘Verily (bala), by Our Lord,’ (al-Ahqaf: 34), after seeing the punishment and coming into direct contact with it. Then, Allah Glorified is He will issue the final verdict, as He will say to them: ‘Taste, then, this suffering as an outcome of your denial of the truth!’ (al-Ahqaf: 34) Therefore, this punishment was a direct result of their disbelief, Allah Glorified is He said:

فَٱصۡبِرۡ كَمَا صَبَرَ أُوْلُواْ ٱلۡعَزۡمِ مِنَ ٱلرُّسُلِ وَلَا تَسۡتَعۡجِل لَّهُمۡۚ كَأَنَّهُمۡ يَوۡمَ يَرَوۡنَ مَا
يُوعَدُونَ لَمۡ يَلۡبَثُوٓاْ إِلَّا سَاعَةٗ مِّن نَّهَارِۭۚ بَلَٰغٞۚ فَهَلۡ يُهۡلَكُ إِلَّا ٱلۡقَوۡمُ ٱلۡفَٰسِقُونَ (٣٥)

Be steadfast [Muhammad], like those messengers of firm resolve. Do not seek to hasten the punishment for the disbelievers: on the Day they see what they had been warned about, it will seem to them that they lingered no more than a single hour of a single day [in this life]. This is a warning. Shall any be destroyed except the defiant? [35]
(The Quran, al-Ahqaf: 35)

Prophet Muhammad may the peace and the blessings of Allah be upon him is the one being addressed in this verse. Allah Glorified is He consoled him and affirmed his status so that he can be patient and bear the harm that came from the disbelievers. Prophet Muhammad may the peace and the blessings of Allah be upon him was not the first messenger to be harmed in this way, as he was preceded by many messengers who were also harmed. Therefore, this verse was instructing him to be patient, just as his brothers who carried the message before were patient with their disbelieving peoples.

Indeed, Prophet Muhammad may the peace and the blessings of Allah be upon him was exposed to a lot of harm from his people. They harmed him in their allegations when they said that he was a sorcerer, a poet, a madman, a soothsayer or a liar. Then they went on to harm him physically, as they harmed him in Ta’if until his feet bled. In the Battle of Uhud, one of his molars was broken, and once, while he was praying, they threw the intestines of a camel on his back.(1)

(1) Mentioned by At-Tahawi in Mushkil Al-Athar (Hadith 3327) from ʿAbdullah ibn Masʿud

In addition to harming him personally, they also harmed him regarding his family and those who believed in him. They persecuted him to such an extent that he was forced to leave Mecca and immigrate to Medina, and they even plotted to kill him. Prophet Muhammad may the peace and the blessings of Allah be upon him was patient during all of this harm. However, the harm was still overwhelming, just as it is difficult to any human being.

Thus, Allah Glorified is He wanted to give him an example and a model of patience from the stories of the previous messengers. Allah Glorified is He said: ‘Remain, then, (O believer,) patient in adversity, just as all of the apostles who had firm hearts, were patient’ (al-Ahqaf: 35). Prophet Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon him was thrown into a fire, but despite that, he did not lose his trust in his Lord. The proof is that when Angel Jibril (Gabriel) peace be upon him came to him and offered to put out the fire, Prophet Ibrahim (Abraham) said to him: ‘I do not ask for help from you (but from Allah).’(1) Then, Allah’s Command came from the heavens: ‘O fire! Be thou cool, and (a source of) inner peace for Ibrahim (Abraham)!’ (al-Anbiya’: 69)

Therefore, Prophet Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon him was tested in his youth, and was also tested in his adulthood with the command to slaughter his only son at the time, Prophet Ismail (Ishmael) peace be upon him. Prophet Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon him was patient with this test as well, and Allah Glorified is He granted him a ram to slaughter instead of his son. Then, Allah Glorified is He granted him another son, Ishaq (‘Isaac), and a grandson, Ya’qub (Jacob), and both of them were prophets peace be upon them.

These blessings were the result of Prophet Ibrahim’s (Abraham’s) submission to Allah’s Commands and his acceptance of the divine fate. Therefore, we should follow this good example of Prophet Ibrahim (Abraham), the Father of the Prophets, who was always submissive to the divine ruling, and we should raise our younger generations to imitate his way. In addition, we should know that the main way through which hardships can be lifted is being pleased with

(1) Narrated by Ibn Jarir At-Tabari from Muʿtamir ibn Sulayman At-Taymi from some of his companions. He said: {Gabriel came to Abraham and he was certain that he was going to be thrown into the fire, so he said: ‘O Abraham! Do you need anything?’ He said: ‘From you, no.’ (Mentioned by As-Suyuti in Ad-Durr Al-Manthur 5/641)

Allah's decrees. This is because the order is not lifted until the person experiencing it is pleased with Allah's choice in it. Otherwise, it remains afflicting that person until he submits to Allah Glorified is He.

If a person is experiencing a prolonged adversity that has been decreed by Allah Glorified is He then they should know that the main reason for this prolonged hardship is showing objection towards Allah's judgment. On the other hand, if they were pleased with Allah's ruling, Allah Glorified is He would alleviate their hardships.

Take the example of a father who punishes his child for a mistake that the youngster has made. If the child submits and accepts the parental ruling, his father will leave him alone, or will even show compassion, mercy and pleasure towards his child. However, if the child objects to the father's rules, he may extend the punishment until the child learns the intended lesson.

In the most sublime manner, Allah Glorified is He wants to raise and nurture His servants by testing them. That is why Allah Glorified is He said in the Qudsi Hadith 'If someone is pleased with My destiny I will give to him (blessings) according to My power.'(1)

One of the prophets who had great firmness of heart was Prophet Nuh (Noah) peace be upon him. He continued to call his people to faith for nine hundred and fifty years. His people used to harm him until he would lose his consciousness and only a small minority of them believed his message.

Look at the tests that Prophet Yusuf (Joseph) peace be upon him endured. In his young age, he was thrown into a well and sold as a slave. In his old age, he was tested by the wife of the nobleman and was thrown into prison. However, he was patient with all of these tests, and therefore, Allah Glorified is He established him securely over the authority of Egypt: 'and thus We established Yusuf (Joseph) securely in the land (of Egypt): he had full mastery over it,

(1) Narrated by At-Tirmidhi in his Sunnan (2320), Ibn Majah in his Sunnan (4021) Al-Bayhaqi in Shu'ab Al-Iman (9444) and Al-Qada'i in Musnad Ash-Shihab (1041) that Anas ibn Malik narrated that Prophet Muhammad said: "Indeed, a remarkable reward comes with a remarkable test, and indeed, when Allah loves a people He tests them... Whoever is pleased will receive Allah's pleasure, and whoever is angry will receive anger."

(doing) whatever he willed. (Thus do) We cause Our grace to alight upon whomever We will' (Yusuf: 56).

We also previously explained that our destinies are full of divine wisdom, and that an event is never separated from its doer. So, before objecting to an action, look at the doer of the action. When Prophet Muhammad may the peace and the blessings of Allah be upon him reflected on the actions of his brothers from amongst the previous messengers and what they were exposed to, the harm that he was receiving from his own people appeared to be less than the afflictions of the previous nations, and this was a consolation for Prophet Muhammad may the peace and the blessings of Allah be upon him.

Allah Glorified is He said: 'and do not ask for a quick end of those (who still deny the truth),' (al-Ahqaf: 35). Allah Glorified is He was instructing Prophet Muhammad may the peace and the blessings of Allah be upon him not to ask that their chastisement be hastened, especially as the disbelievers themselves were mockingly asking for a faster chastisement, out of their own ignorance and stubbornness. This is why His Lord addressed Prophet Muhammad may the peace and the blessings of Allah be upon him by saying: 'And whether We show you (in this world) something of what We hold in store for those (deniers of the truth), or whether We cause you to die (before that retribution takes place) know that, in the end, it is unto Us that they will be brought back' (Ghafir: 77). If you die, Oh Muhammad, before you see Allah Glorified is He taking revenge from them, then what We have in store for them will be given to them in the Hereafter.

Allah Glorified is He said: '…on the Day when they see (the fulfilment of) what they were promised' (al-Ahqaf: 35). That will be the Day of Resurrection. 'It will seem to them) as though they had dwelt (on earth) no longer than one hour of (an earthly) day' (al-Ahqaf: 35). Everyone will pass through the stage of the grave, known as the barzakh (isthmus), as if it was one hour in a worldly day.

For instance, since Prophet Adam peace be upon him died, he did not notice the passage of time, and he will not notice the passage of time until the Last Hour is established. For him, not more than an hour of a day has passed because the perception of time, as we have said, is a result of the events occurring during that time. If there are no events happening, then there is no perception of time, such as when someone is sleeping, for example.

This is what we saw in the story of the people of the cave. Allah Glorified is He put them into a deep sleep and they slept: '…three hundred years and an additional nine years (to that number)' (al-Ahqaf: 25). Despite that, when they woke up, they said: 'We have remained thus (asleep) a day, or part of a day' (al-Kahf: 19). This is because of the lack of events by which they can tell the time. Therefore, we should not ask for the speedy chastisement of the disbelievers because the chastisement is already only an hour away, however long the time until the Day of Judgment may be.

We have also known of the story of 'Uzair (Ezra), regarding whom Allah Glorified is He said: 'Or as he who passed by a town deserted by its people, with its roofs caved in, (and) said, 'How could Allah bring all this back to life after its death?' Thereupon Allah caused him to be dead for a hundred years' (al-Baqara: 259).

Then, Allah Glorified is He said in the verse we are studying: '(This is our) message (balagh)' (al-Ahqaf: 35). The Arabic word balagh (message) literally refers to a person's arrival to their destination. Here, the word refers to the message arriving to its intended audience. Allah Glorified is He said in another chapter: 'This is a message (balagh) unto all mankind. Hence, let them be warned thereby' (Ibrahim: 52). This divine message is the utmost of what people can be warned.

Allah Glorified is He used the word: 'This…' (Ibrahim: 52). It means that, indeed, Allah's promise will happen and nothing can prevent it because Allah Glorified is He is the only Power, and He has no partner or adversary. 'Will, then, any people be (really) destroyed except the iniquitous (fasiqoon) folk?' (al-Ahqaf: 35) The word fisq (iniquity) means the deviation from obedience, and this is the sole reason for destruction in the Hereafter and one of the reasons of destruction in the life of this world.

Muhammad

In the Name of God, the Most Merciful, the Dispenser of Mercy

The chapter Muhammad (1) . Allah Glorified is He said:

ٱلَّذِينَ كَفَرُواْ وَصَدُّواْ عَن سَبِيلِ ٱللَّهِ أَضَلَّ أَعۡمَٰلَهُمۡ ١

God will bring to nothing the deeds of those who disbelieve and bar others from the way of God [1]
(The Quran, Muhammad: 1)

Take notice that the end of the preceding chapter al-Ahqaf corresponds beautifully with the beginning of this chapter. In the final verse of the chapter of al-Ahqaf, Allah Glorified is He said: ‘Will, then, any people be (really) destroyed except the iniquitous folk?’ (al-Ahqaf: 35) Then, the first verse of our current chapter said: ‘As for those who disbelieved (kafaru) and barred (others) from the path of Allah, He (Allah) will misguide (or nullify) all their deeds’ (Muhammad: 1). It is as if the iniquitous folk mentioned in the final verse of the last chapter were accurately defined in the first verse of this chapter. These iniquitous folks are those who deny the truth and bar others from the path of Allah Glorified is He.

We have previously defined kufr (disbelief) as being a veil that hides reality or that prevents the effects of reality from being manifested properly.

(1) The chapter of Muhammad is the 47th chapter in the ordering of the noble mushaf and it consists of 38 verses. It is a Medinan chapter and it was revealed after chapter al-Hadid and before the chapter of ar-Raʿd, and thus it is the 94th chapter to be revealed. It is also called the chapter of Qital (Fighting) (Al-Itqan fi ʿUlum Al-Qurʾan (1/27)) and it was given that name because of verses 4 and 20.

Thus, the word kufr indicates that there must be something that is veiled, so what does the disbelievers' kufr hide? It covers its opposite, which is faith. This is because the reality of faith was present before the concept of kufr was invented by the disbelievers to hide the truth.

Therefore, the word kufr is the first pointer to the truth of faith because faith is part of the natural dispositions and inclinations of the human soul. Allah Glorified is He installed this inclination in the primordial world of Dharr, when Allah Glorified is He took the covenant from the souls: 'Am I not your Lord?' (al-A'raf: 172)

Sometimes, kufr may not cover the truth itself, but seeks to cover its effects and implications, as in Allah's statement: 'And Allah propounded (to you) a parable: (Imagine) a town which was (once) secure and at ease, with its sustenance coming to it abundantly from all quarters, and which thereupon blasphemously showed ingratitude (kafarat) towards Allah's blessings' (an-Nahl: 112).

Therefore, kufr (disbelief) in Allah's existence is one form of misguidance, and kufr in Allah's blessings is another form of misguidance. Kufr in Allah's blessings can occur in a number of aspects. These include heedlessness and disregard to these blessings, as well as the failure to search for their sources or failing to extract them from the universe along with some of their means: the water, the air and the earth.

Read, for example, what Allah Glorified is He said: 'Say (to them), 'Would you indeed disbelieve in Him who has created the earth in two aeons? Do you claim that there is any power that could rival Him, The Lord of all the worlds? For He it is (after creating the earth), who placed firm mountains on it, (towering) above its surface, and bestowed blessings on it, and equitably apportioned its means of subsistence to all who would seek it' (Fussilat: 9-10).

Therefore, our Lord has given us the means of sustenance and commanded us to look for them and extract them from their burial grounds. Therefore, we should not be lazy in searching for the treasures that exist in nature. After Allah Glorified is He has given you these blessings, you should not be negligent concerning them, choosing to live like a beggar who is dependent on others.

Another form of misguidance is when man extracts these blessings, but then veils them or holds them away from other people who deserve a share in them. Allah Glorified is He said about these people who unjustly gather such riches: '...But as for all who lay up treasures of gold and silver and do not spend them for the sake of Allah – give them the tiding of a grievous suffering (in the life to come), on the Day when that (hoarded wealth) shall be heated in the fire of hell and their foreheads and their sides and their backs (will be) branded therewith, (those sinners shall be told) 'These are the treasures which you have gathered for yourselves! Taste, then, (the evil of) your hoarded treasures!' (at-Tawba: 34-35) Therefore, kufr (disbelief) can either be through denying the existence of Allah Glorified is He by neglecting His blessings and favours or by holding the shares of other people who deserve part of them.

Allah Glorified is He said that the disbelievers were those who are: '...barring (others) from the path of Allah' (Muhammad: 1).This is because they directly prohibited people from believing in Allah Glorified is He or prevented the people's ears from hearing the call to the truth. They may have also covered the people's eyes from seeing Allah's signs in the universe, or prevented these signs from being considered as proofs for the existence of the Creator. Additionally, they may have barred their hearts from having faith and certainty in Allah's existence. Therefore, these people did not just disbelieve in Allah Glorified is He, but they were not satisfied with their own disbelief. So, they attempted to misguide other people with them.

Some orientalists said, 'If the Quranic verses were clear and decisive, we find a contradiction between the verse: 'And no bearer of burdens shall be made to bear another's burden,' (az-Zumar: 7) and the verse: 'They shall bear the full weight of their own burdens, as well as some of the burdens of those ignorant ones whom they have led astray' (an-Nahl: 25). In actual fact, there is no contradiction between these two verses and the orientalists' claim is false. This is because the event illustrated in each verse is different. When the disbelievers lead themselves astray and commit sins, they will bear their own burdens, but when they lead others astray, they will bear the burden of misguiding others in addition to their own personal sins.

The meaning of the words: 'He (Allah) will misguide (or nullify) (adalla) all their deeds,' (Muhammad: 1) is that Allah Glorified is He will nullify their actions and make them of no benefit. This is because the literal meaning of the word adalla (lead them astray) is ‘not guiding them to the path that leads to their objective’. Indeed, these disbelieving people committed actions that brought no benefit to them, as there is no benefit from kufr and barring others from Allah’s path.

There are people who perform acts of goodness, but are still outside the realm of faith. This goodness will not be accepted from them and it will not intercede for them in the Hereafter because these acts did not emanate from true belief. Rather, their actions may have emanated from a desire towards fame and reputation, civilization, serving humanity or other slogans. This is why Allah Glorified is He said: ‘We shall turn towards all the (supposedly good) deeds they ever wrought, and shall transform them into scattered dust’ (al-Furqan: 23).

Allah Glorified is He also said: ‘But as for those who are bent on denying the truth, their (good) deeds are like a mirage in the desert, which the thirsty (person) supposes to be water – until, when he approaches it, he finds that it was nothing: instead, he finds (that) Allah (has always been present) with him, and (that) He will pay him his account in full – for Allah is swift in reckoning’ (an-Nur: 39).

These are the people to whom it will be said on the Day of Resurrection: ‘You have exhausted your (share of) good things in your worldly life, having enjoyed them (without any thought of the hereafter)’ (al-Ahqaf: 20).

Then, Allah Glorified is He said regarding the believers:

وَٱلَّذِينَ ءَامَنُواْ وَعَمِلُواْ ٱلصَّٰلِحَٰتِ وَءَامَنُواْ بِمَا نُزِّلَ عَلَىٰ مُحَمَّدٍ وَهُوَ ٱلْحَقُّ
مِن رَّبِّهِمْ كَفَّرَ عَنْهُمْ سَيِّـَٔاتِهِمْ وَأَصْلَحَ بَالَهُمْ ٢

but He will overlook the bad deeds of those who have faith, do good deeds, and believe in what has been sent down to Muhammad — the truth from their Lord — and He will put them into a good state [2] (The Quran, Muhammad: 2)

We previously said that contrasting images make each other more manifest. One of the Quranic styles is illustrating contrasting pictures so that there can be a comparison between the two images and a depiction of a clearer meaning. This can be seen in Allah's statement: 'Behold, (in the life to come) the truly virtuous will indeed be in bliss, whereas, behold, the wicked will indeed be in a blazing fire' (al-Infitar: 13-14).

In this verse, Allah Glorified is He mentioned the group of people who opposed disbelief. He said: 'And those who have believed,' (Muhammad: 2). He did not mention what they believed in because faith is a natural disposition, and when the word 'belief' is used, it generally refers to faith in Allah Glorified is He because it is the first faith.

The verb amana (to believe) can be used as a transitive verb when the letter 'bi' is used, as in the saying amana bi-hi which means, 'He believed in His existence.' It can also be used as a transitive verb when the letter 'la' is used, as in the saying, amana la-hu which means 'He believed Him.' Furthermore, it can be made transitive without any preposition, as in the verse: '...And made them safe (amana-hum) from danger' (Quraysh: 4). These modifications of the verb convey the meaning of safety, tranquillity and peace.

Allah Glorified is He then described the believers as those who '...did righteous deeds' (Muhammad: 2). The Noble Quran frequently mentions faith and righteous deeds together because faith is a deed of the heart alone, whereas righteous deeds are the deeds of the outward form and the limbs. Thus, compliance must be provided from the heart through the affirmation of creed, and from the outward form through obeying the commands of the One God, Allah, in which the heart believes.

The master of all the limbs is the heart. It is the instrument that pumps blood, which is the fluid of life, to all the parts of the body. If the heart is filled with faith, it will pump it to all the limbs as well, and thus they will become upright. This is why Prophet Muhammad may the peace and the blessings of Allah be upon him said: 'Indeed in the body there is a morsel of flesh, that, if healthy, the whole body is sound, and if it is corrupt, the whole body is corrupt. Indeed, it is the heart.'(1)

(1) This narration is agreed on. It was narrated by Al-Bukhari in his Sahih (50) and by Muslim in his Sahih (2996) from the Hadith of Nuʿman ibn Basheer, and it is part of the Hadith: "Indeed the lawful and the unlawful is clear, and between them are doubtful matters that most people do not know. Whoever is cautious with doubtful matters has preserved his religion and his honour," as well as the rest of the Hadith.

The deed of the heart is to believe in Allah Glorified is He and in the unseen things of which Allah Glorified is He has informed us. Therefore, we need to believe in Allah, His Angels, His Books, His Messengers, The Last Day, and to believe in divine predestination or fate, whether it seems good or is apparently detrimental.

Then, there are the deeds of the limbs. For instance, the eye must not look at the unmarriable kin of others while the tongue must not bear false witness, backbite people, slander chaste women, or swear false oaths. The belly must only be filled with that which is permissible and the hand must not be used to steal or kill a soul that Allah Glorified is He has made sacred unless it is out of justice. The feet must not move towards the impermissible actions. Therefore, every limb has a righteous deed, and they must avoid the impermissible deeds.

There is also a righteous deed that includes all the limbs, which is filial piety, where a person is benevolent and charitable towards their parents. This is why Allah Glorified is He connected this deed to worshipping Him, when He said: 'And worship Allah (alone), and do not ascribe divinity, in any way, to aught beside Him. And do the good unto your parents' (an-Nisa': 36).

In the chapter of al-'Asr, the importance of righteous deeds after faith is made clear, as Allah Glorified is He said: 'Consider the flight of time! Verily, man is bound to lose himself, unless he be of those who believed and did righteous deeds' (at-Takathur: 1-3).

Allah Glorified is He then said in our verse: '...and have come to believe in what has been revealed to Muhammad – for it is the truth from their Lord' (Muhammad: 2). He mentioned this after His statement: 'And those who have believed and did righteous deeds' (Muhammad: 2). This is proof that we are obliged to believe in the previous messengers. This is also why Allah Glorified is He said: 'In matters of religion, He has ordained for you that which He had enjoined upon Nuh (Noah) – and into which We gave you (O Muhammad) insight through revelation – as well as that which We had enjoined upon Ibrahim (Abraham), Musa (Moses) and 'Isa (Jesus): Steadfastly uphold the (true) faith, and do not break up your unity therein' (ash-Shura: 13).

This is because there is one foundation of religion which is the worship of Allah Glorified is He alone, and the issue of faith is the same with all of Allah's Messengers. Faith in Allah Glorified is He leads to faith in His Books and Messengers, as well as faith in the Hereafter and the Reckoning. Thus, believing in all of these concepts emanates from our faith in Allah Glorified is He.

However, is Allah Glorified is He addressing you alone when He orders you with certain commands and prohibits you from certain actions? No. Rather, He chooses messengers to convey His Message: ‘Allah chooses message-bearers from among the angels as well as from among men’ (al-Hajj: 75). He chose Jibril (Gabriel) peace be upon him to be the one entrusted with His revelation from among the angels, and He chose certain people to be the messengers and prophets of mankind. Thus, faith in Allah Glorified is He causes us to having faith in all of Allah’s Messengers in which we regard all of them highly and equally.

I remember that one of the orientalists in San Francisco once asked me, ‘How is it that you allow a Muslim man to marry a woman from the people of the Book, but you forbid a man from the people of the Book to marry a Muslim woman? Why did you not make all marriages lawful to the people of the Book just as you made their food and drink lawful for yourselves?’(1) I said to him, ‘It is because the Muslim man believes in the Messenger who the woman (from the people of the Book) believes in, while the man from the people of the Book does not believe in the Messenger of the Muslim woman he wants to marry.’

Allah’s statement: ‘...for it is the truth from their Lord,’ (Muhammad: 2) means that the message that has been revealed to Prophet Muhammad may the peace and blessings of Allah be upon him is the firm and established truth that never changes or alters. Then, Allah Glorified is He mentioned the fruit of this faith in His words: ‘He will efface their (past) bad deeds, and will set their hearts at rest’ (Muhammad: 2).

It is from Allah’s mercy that He has allowed people to repent, and opened the door of forgiveness for them. He is their Creator and He knows best what is good for them. He also knows that it is part of man’s nature to be temporarily unmindful. This is why He said: '...and to pardon many (of their actions)' (al-Ma'ida: 15). He legislated expiations for us, from one prayer to the next, from one Friday to the next and from one Ramadan to the next. All of these times are expiations for our sins and occasions for forgiveness so that we do not despair from Allah's Mercy. They are meant to encourage us to stop our wrongdoing. Therefore, the forgiveness of sins is a mercy that Allah Glorified is He shows to His servants so that despair and disobedience do not spread amongst mankind.

(1) Allah said regarding the permissibility of the food of the people of the Book: “...And the food of those who have been given revelation aforetime is lawful to you” (al-Ma’ida: 5).

Allah Glorified is He said: '...and will set their hearts (baal) at rest' (Muhammad: 2). All the Quranic commentators(1) said that the meaning of these words is that Allah Glorified is He will establish the soundness of their psychological, spiritual and material state (haal). However, there is a difference between the Arabic words baal and haal. The word baal refers to the ideas that occupy a person's mind. When you say that a particular thing is in your baal, this means that it is concerning your mind. Usually, a man's baal is occupied with the concerns of his current state. For example, a student's baal is concerned with success in an exam, a university admission, or working after graduation. If Allah Glorified is He rectified the student's baal, then his haal (state) will also be put in order, Allah Glorified is He said:

ٱلْحَقَّ مِن رَّبِّهِمْ ۚ كَذَٰلِكَ يَضْرِبُ ٱللَّهُ لِلنَّاسِ أَمْثَٰلَهُمْ ﴿٣﴾

This is because the disbelievers follow falsehood, while the believers follow the truth from their Lord. In this way God shows people their true type [3] (The Quran, Muhammad: 3)

Allah's word: 'This,' (Muhammad: 3) at the beginning of this verse is an indication that this verse is going to be an explanation of the preceding verse.

---

(1) The commentators say the following regarding "...and will set their hearts at rest." (Muhammad: 2):
- It means that He will rectify their affairs, and this is the opinion of Mujahid and others.
- It means that He will rectify their state, and this is the opinion of Qatada.
- It means that He will rectify their matters, and this is the statement of Ibn ʿAbbas.

Al-Qurtubi said in his Tafsir (9/6275): 'The three opinions are close to each other and they interpret rectification with regards to their lives in this world. An-Naqqash interprets the meaning to be that He rectifies their intentions, and based on this interpretation, the verse means that their religiosity will be rectified."

Therefore, the preceding reward mentioned for the believers and the preceding punishment mentioned for the disbelievers has a particular rationale and reasoning which will be explained in this verse. The rationale for the punishment of the disbelievers is that they intentionally followed falsehood, while the rationale for Allah's grace towards the believers is that they strived to follow the truth. Falsehood is an illusion, while the truth is manifest and established. Therefore, whoever follows that which is non-existent loses all goodness, while following the truth leads to established and true integrity.

However, why do the people of falsehood follow falsehood? They follow it because it does not have any commandments that restrict their desires. It does not warn them from any punishment, but rather, gives their souls the freedom to indulge in their wants, desires, and passions. Falsehood can steal and live off the efforts and even the blood of others. With falsehood, people may loathe, envy, or even kill one another.

On the other hand, the truth forbids and restricts us from doing things that go against the requirements of our faith. Indeed, the people who worshipped idols, the sun, the moon, or the stars knew that these false deities cannot harm or bring about benefit. However, these false deities did not have any commandments that restricted their worshippers, and this is why they worshipped them.

Allah Glorified is He then said: 'In this way does Allah set forth unto people the parables of their true state' (Muhammad: 3). Setting forth parables is a method by which the meanings are explained in the Noble Quran. Thus, Allah Glorified is He clarified matters, in which people's understanding may come to a stop, by using parables. These parables made complex concepts easier to understand.

For instance, in another chapter, Allah Glorified is He sets forth a parable of those who associate partners with Allah. Allah said: '(To this end,) Allah set forth a parable: (Compare) a man who has several masters, (all of them) at variance (quarrelling) with one another, (compared) with a man who depends wholly on one master: can the conditions of these two servants be deemed equal?' (az-Zumar: 29) When you read this parable, the absurdity of idolatry and the soundness of monotheism become clear to you. These two concepts are not equal because a servant cannot be equally obedient to a number of masters. Their mastery is not agreed upon but rather disagreed over such that the servant cannot possibly please any one of them completely. On the other hand, in monotheism, the servant only obeys one master.

Likewise, Allah Glorified is He set forth parables for us in the chapter of an-Nur, to illustrate His Light that illuminates the universe. Allah Glorified is He said: ‘Allah is the Light of the heavens and the earth. The parable of His light is, as it were, that of a niche containing a lamp; the lamp is (enclosed) in glass, the glass is (shining) like a radiant star: (a lamp) lit from a blessed tree – an olive-tree that is neither of the east nor of the west – the oil whereof (is so bright that it) would well-nigh give light (of itself) even though fire had not touched it: light upon light!’ (an-Nur: 35)

An example of a clarifying parable is the following verse, in which Allah Glorified is He said: ‘The parable of those who worship (beings or forces) other than Allah as their protectors is that of a spider which makes for itself a house: for, behold, the frailest of all houses is the spider’s house. Could they but understand this?’ (al-’Ankabut: 41) Allah Glorified is He said:

فَإِذَا لَقِيتُمُ ٱلَّذِينَ كَفَرُواْ فَضَرۡبَ ٱلرِّقَابِ حَتَّىٰٓ إِذَآ أَثۡخَنتُمُوهُمۡ فَشُدُّواْ ٱلۡوَثَاقَ فَإِمَّا مَنَّۢا بَعۡدُ
وَإِمَّا فِدَآءً حَتَّىٰ تَضَعَ ٱلۡحَرۡبُ أَوۡزَارَهَاۚ ذَٰلِكَ وَلَوۡ يَشَآءُ ٱللَّهُ لَٱنتَصَرَ مِنۡهُمۡ وَلَٰكِن لِّيَبۡلُوَاْ
بَعۡضَكُم بِبَعۡضٖۗ وَٱلَّذِينَ قُتِلُواْ فِي سَبِيلِ ٱللَّهِ فَلَن يُضِلَّ أَعۡمَٰلَهُمۡ ﴿٤﴾

When you meet the disbelievers in battle, strike them in the neck, and once they are defeated, bind any captives firmly — later you can release them by grace or by ransom — until the toils of war have ended. That [is the way]. God could have defeated them Himself if He had willed, but His purpose is to test some of you by means of others. He will not let the deeds of those who are killed for His cause come to nothing [4] (The Quran, Muhammad: 4)

Allah’s statement: ‘Now when you meet (in war) those who are bent on denying the truth,’ (Muhammad: 4) refers to meeting the enemies in the field of battle when war breaks out between the two groups. ‘Strike their necks,’ (Muhammad: 4) refers to killing them, whether by striking the necks or other actions, but striking the necks is mentioned because it is the most swift and certain way of killing. Then, Allah Glorified is He said: '...until you overcome them fully' (Muhammad: 4). The Arabic word used is athkhantum, which refers to taking away the enemy's ability to move. This Arabic word is derived from the word thakheen which is a substance that has become thick that it clings together due to a viscosity that slows its movement.

This can be seen when rice is cooked in milk or soup, or when honey is boiled in order to make jam. The boiling water forms steam and the remaining substance becomes dense and heavy. This is why it does not move when boiled and we say that the remaining liquid is thakheen which means that it is thick and solid-like.

The words: '...then, tighten their bonds,' (Muhammad: 4) means that proper shackles should be placed and that they should be tied properly with chains and ropes, so that they remain as prisoners who cannot escape easily. Then, Allah Glorified is He said: '...but thereafter (set them free,) either by an act of grace or in exchange for ransom' (Muhammad: 4).

Now, when do we release them and let them go by an act of grace, without asking for anything in return, and when do we do that in exchange for ransom? You should let them go without asking for anything in return in situations in which their army releases our prisoners without asking us for anything in return. Likewise, you should take a ransom if they ask for a ransom in order to release our prisoners. This is what is called a like-for-a-like treatment, and this is what the United Nations have now concluded with regards to these kinds of situations.

Allah Glorified is He then said: '...so that war can lift its burdens (awzaraha)' (Muhammad: 4). The word 'war' here is metaphorically used to refer to the soldiers who are partaking in it. Therefore, the meaning of this phrase is that we should follow the verse's commands until the fighting stops. The word: '...burdens (awzaraha),' (Muhammad: 4) indicates the heavy weights of war, as war is a hardship and a difficulty upon all the people participating in it. This is why Allah Glorified is He said about war: 'Fighting is ordained for you, even though it is despised by you' (al-Baqara: 216). This is because, in war, you are liable to lose wealth, family, or even your entire life, in addition to the difficulties and hardships of attacking and retreating, striking, being wounded and so forth.

Then Allah Glorified is He said in the verse we are studying: '...And (know that) had Allah so willed, He could indeed defeat them (Himself),' (Muhammad: 4) which means that, indeed, Allah Glorified is He can exact revenge upon them with His power, without the believers having to fight. This is a simple matter for Allah Glorified is He. In fact, this is what Allah Glorified is He decreed upon many previous nations when He destroyed them with punishments that they could not repel. This is something to which history bears witness. Read, for instance, Allah's words: 'For every one of them did We take to task for his sin: and so, upon some of them We let loose a deadly storm-wind; and some of them were overtaken by a (sudden) blast; and some of them We caused to be swallowed by the earth; and some of them We caused to drown' (al-'Ankabut: 40).

Then, why was this fighting legislated upon the believers, when it is detested by them and contains such hardships and difficulty? Allah Glorified is He said: 'Fight against them! Allah will chastise them by your hands, and will bring disgrace upon them, and will succour you against them; and He will soothe the hearts of those who believe,' (at-Tawba: 14). Thus, fighting was legislated to manifest the strength of the believers, test the firmness of their faith and to distinguish the believers from the hypocrites. Allah Glorified is He said: '...but (Allah wills you to struggle) so as to test you (all) by means of one another' (Muhammad: 4). Therefore, the believers are tested by the disbelievers and the disbelievers are tested by the believers. This was to purify the faith of the believers, who were going to be the bearers of the message, and the people responsible for conveying Allah's call. They will travel with this call all over the earth, and thus, they had to be purified in order to distinguish the valuable people from the ineffective individuals.

The person who will be patient with the pains of wars will not flee and will sacrifice his wealth and himself for Allah Glorified is He. Indeed, Allah does not test human beings to know facts about them because He already knows everything about His creation. These tests are made for us to realize our own strengths or weaknesses.

Allah Glorified is He ordained these tests to allow people to distinguish the nature of this community and the nature of this message. Through them, they will get to recognize the greatness of Prophet Muhammad may the peace and the blessings of Allah be upon him who was sent as the Seal of all the Prophets, to convey Allah's message to all of mankind in every time and every place. Therefore, his followers must be suitable to hold this responsibility and must be worthy of bearing the burdens of the message following Prophet Muhammad may the peace and the blessings of Allah be upon him.

It was narrated(1) that Mus'ab ibn 'Umayr(2) may Allah be pleased with him had been a proud Qurayshi young man before embracing Islam. For instance, before he became a Muslim, he used to leave his home several times a day, each time wearing new clothes that would give off various scents of musk.

His state transformed when he became a Muslim, and Prophet Muhammad may the peace and the blessings of Allah be upon him sent him to Medina to teach the people about Islam. He put on rough clothes and did without the life of ease that he used to have before he became a Muslim.

When his mother learned of his state, she grieved over him, went on a hunger strike, and sat in the heat of the sun in order to turn her son away from Islam. She wanted to make him go back to the religion of his parents and grandparents. When Mus'ab may Allah be pleased with him learned of what his mother did to herself, he said to them, 'Tell my mother, that by Allah Glorified is He if she had a hundred souls and one came out after the other so that I left this religion for her, I would not leave Islam. Leave her and when her hunger becomes severe, she will eat, and when the heat of the sun starts to afflict her, she will seek shade.'(3)

(1) The story of Mus'ab ibn 'Umayr's conversion to Islam and the reaction of his mother

(2) He is Mus'ab ibn 'Umayr ibn Hashim ibn 'Abd Al-Manaf Al-Qurashi from the clan of Bani 'Abd Ad-Dar, who was a Companion and amongst the earliest people to embrace Islam. He became a Muslim in Mecca and initially hid his Islam. His family then found out, and thus, they tied him up and detained him. He emigrated to Medina and was the first person to gather people for the Friday prayer there. Usayd ibn Hudayr became a Muslim at Mus'ab's hands, as well as Sa'd ibn Mu'adh. In the Age of Ignorance (Jahaliyyah) he was a young, handsome man, who had lived a life of ease and luxury. His nickname was Mus'ab Al-Khayr (Mus'ab, the Person of Good), and he died in the year 3 A.H. (Al-'Alam by Az-Zirikli).

(3) Mentioned by As-Shami in Subul Al-Huda wa Ar-Rashad (11/315), Adh-Dhababi in Siyar 'Alam An-Nubala' (1/109), Ibn 'Asakir in Tarikh Dimashq (20/331), Ibn Al-Athir=

Mus'ab may Allah be pleased with him then lived in Medina until Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him migrated to it. Prophet Muhammad saw Mus'ab wearing the hide of a ram and said: 'Look at what faith has done to your companion.'

Therefore, war was legislated in Islam for wisdom, as it is like the fire that removes dirt from metals and is therefore used to purify gold and iron. War was the way through which Allah Glorified is He prepared the nation of the Arabs to be a nation of courage, even before Prophet Muhammad may the peace and the blessings of Allah be upon him was sent. When Prophet Muhammad was later compelled to fight, he did not need to train any soldiers or open a military academy. Rather, he found men who were experienced in the arts of war because the wars that broke out between the tribes lasted for forty years before Islam was revealed(1) had made a fully prepared army out of the Arabs. Whenever they heard a cry of transgression, they would rush towards it fearlessly.

Furthermore, the Arabs were a Bedouin community that lived a nomadic life. They used to carry their tents on the backs of camels while following the rainfall and the lands of pasture. It was as if Allah Glorified is He was preparing them to carry His message to great distances.

Allah Glorified is He said: '...And as for those who are killed in Allah's Cause, never will He let their deeds go to waste' (Muhammad: 4). Those who were killed in Allah's path are martyrs and Allah Glorified is He will never invalidate their deeds. In fact, He will compensate them and reward them fully for their righteous efforts. This is because the martyrs have given their lives for Allah Glorified is He and sacrificed the most valuable things they owned in Allah's cause. Allah Glorified is He will reward them generously with favours they could not have imagined. Indeed, this reward will be according to the rule announced in His verse: 'But when you are greeted with a greeting (of peace), answer with an even better greeting' (an-Nisa': 86).

= in Usd Al-Ghaba (1/469) and Ibn Kathir in Al-Bidaya wa An-Nihaya (8/81), but it is actually regarding Sa'd ibn Malik ibn Abu Waqas and not Mus'ab ibn 'Umayr.

(1) An example of these wars was the war of Da'is and Al-Ghabra', which happened fifty years before Islam, and was between the two tribes of 'Abas and Fazara.

These martyrs have provided their own self in Allah’s Cause, and therefore, Allah Glorified is He will free them from having to die another time. Therefore, the martyr’s worldly life will be connected to the life of the Hereafter. An Arab poet drew his listeners’ attention to this meaning when he praised Hamza may Allah be pleased with him Prophet Muhammad’s uncle and the master of the martyrs. The poet said(1):

‘Is Hamza not the uncle of The Chosen One and the master
Of the martyrs, all of them without exception
It suffices you from this martyrdom, immunity
From death, while joining the two lives together.’

Some people objected to the concept that martyrs remains alive, saying that if we dig up a martyr’s grave, we would only find a dead body. However, this is a restricted view of the matter of life and death. In order to put yourself at ease, read Allah’s words: ‘But do not think of those that have been killed in Allah’s Cause as dead. Nay, they are alive, with their Lord, receiving their sustenance’ (Al-‘Imran: 169). Reflect upon the words: ‘...with their Lord’ (Al-‘Imran: 169). Allah Glorified is He did not say that they are alive with us, but rather, they are alive with their Lord, in a life that only Allah Glorified is He knows. This is from the unseen matters that we must submit to. The martyr is alive with His Lord even though he appears dead in your eyes.

Then, Allah Glorified is He said regarding these martyrs: ‘...receiving their sustenance’ (Al-‘Imran: 169). This is another indication that they are alive because sustenance is from the means of maintaining life, Then, Allah Glorified is He said:

سَيَهۡدِيهِمۡ وَيُصۡلِحُ بَالَهُمۡ ﴿٥﴾ وَيُدۡخِلُهُمُ ٱلۡجَنَّةَ عَرَّفَهَا لَهُمۡ ﴿٦﴾

He will guide them and put them into a good state [5]
He will admit them into the Garden He has already made known to them [6] (The Quran, Muhammad: 5 - 6)

How can Allah Glorified is He guide them when they are already guided? Did they attain martyrdom without being guided? This is as the guidance mentioned in Allah's words: '…just as for those who are (willing to be) guided, He increases their (ability to follow His) guidance' (Muhammad: 17). This means that He will guide them to paradise or to acknowledge His blessings and favours with gratitude. This is why Allah Glorified is He told us that the people of paradise will exclaim: 'All praise is due to Allah who has made His promise to us come true' (az-Zumar: 74). Allah Glorified is He also said regarding the people of the fire, and we seek refuge in Allah from their destiny: '(And Allah will thus command :) 'Assemble all those who were bent on evildoing, together with others of their ilk and (with) all that they were wont to worship instead of Allah, and lead them all onto the way to the blazing fire' (as-Saffat: 22-23). Therefore, the believers and martyrs will be guided to a life of ease, while the disbelievers will be guided to the blazing fire.

(1) From the poetry of the Sheikh

Part of this guidance is that the martyr will know his palace in paradise without knowing the address and without anyone showing it to him. (1) This is why Allah Glorified is He said afterwards: '...and will set their hearts at rest, and will admit them to the paradise which He has promised(2) them' (Muhammad: 5-6). Therefore, Allah Glorified is He will establish them in the best state, Then, Allah Glorified is He said:

(1) It was narrated by Abu Saʿid Al-Khudri may Allah be pleased with him that Prophet Muhammad said: "The believers are rescued from the fire and are detained on a bridge between paradise and the fire. Then, certain injustices that occurred between them in the life of this world will be settled, until they are purified and cleansed so they can enter paradise. By The One Who has Muhammad's soul in His hand, each one you will know the way to his home better than he did in the life of this world." (Narrated by Al-Bukhari in his Sahih (6054), Ahmad in his Musnad (10673, 11123, 11175, 11281), Al-Bayhaqi in Shuʿab Al-Iman (350) and ʿAbd ibn Ḥamid in his Musnad (938)). Al-Qurtubi (9/6281) said: "When they enter paradise it is said to them, 'Disperse to your homes,' and they will know their homes better than they did when they went to their homes after a Friday prayer." This meaning is the opinion of Mujahid and most Quranic commentators.

(2) ʿarrafaha lahum ("He has made it (paradise) known to them,") means that He has made it so clear to them that they know it without having to be shown their places in it. Al-Hasan said: "Allah described paradise for them in the life of this world, so when they enter it, they will know it according to its description." Ibn ʿAbbas said: "The words ʿarrafaha lahum ("...He has made it (paradise) known to them,") means that He has added a scent to it to make it pleasant with all kinds of pleasures, and it is taken from the word ʿarf which is a pleasant scent. Muʿarraf food is food that has been scented. (Al-Qurtubi 9/6282)

يَٰٓأَيُّهَا ٱلَّذِينَ ءَامَنُوٓاْ إِن تَنصُرُواْ ٱللَّهَ يَنصُرۡكُمۡ وَيُثَبِّتۡ أَقۡدَامَكُمۡ (٧)

You who believe! If you help God, He will help you and make you stand firm [7] (The Quran, Muhammad: 7)

This is a matter of military combat for the Muslims. The principal outlined in this verse does not change because it is one of Allah's standard rules. As long as the Muslim army is fighting for Allah's Cause and to support His religion, they will be granted victory. Allah will give victory to the righteous army if they are fighting for His true cause. This is why we said that if you ever see Muslims being defeated in a battle, you must know that they were not fulfilling the conditions of being Allah's soldiers. You have to examine their intentions closely to find the reasons for their defeat.

Allah Glorified is He said: 'For, long ago, has Our word gone forth unto Our servants, the message-bearers, that, verily, they indeed, would be succoured, and that, verily, Our hosts would (in the end) be victorious!' (as-Saffat: 171-173) This is why we saw what happened in the Battle of Uhud when the archers went against the commands of Prophet Muhammad may the peace and the blessings of Allah be upon him and abandoned their obedience to Allah's Commands.(1)

Similar conditions occurred in the Battle of Hunayn, of which Allah Glorified is He said: 'And on the Day of Hunayn, when you took pride in your great numbers and they proved of no avail to you – for the earth, despite all its vastness, became (too) narrow for you and you turned back, retreating,' (at-Tawba: 25). Even Abu Bakr As-Siddiq may Allah be pleased with him himself felt proud regarding the Muslims' strength over the enemy. It is narrated that he said, ‘We will not be defeated today because, indeed, we are numbered.’ When the Muslims became filled with delusion and pride because of their numbers, they were afflicted with defeat at the very beginning of the battle.

(1) Narrated by Al-Bukhari in his Sahih (3737) from Al-Bara' who said: 'We met the polytheists on that day and The Prophet made a group of archers sit down and he put them under the command of ʿAbdullah. Prophet Muhammad said to the archers: "Do not leave your posts, even if you see us overwhelming them do not leave. If you see them overwhelming us do not come down to help us." Then, the disbelievers were defeated and I saw the women fleeing, lifting up their clothes, and revealing their leg-bangles and their legs. Thus, the companions of ʿAbdullah said, "The war-spoils! The war-spoils!" ʿAbdullah said, "Allah's Messenger told me that you must not leave." They refused to obey, and when they refused, they were forced to turn back, they were defeated and seventy Muslims were killed." The Hadith then continued. It is also narrated by Abu Dawud in his Sunnan (3288) and Ahmad in his Musnad (17854 and 17859).

However, Allah’s Mercy allowed them to re-organize their lines and they were victorious towards the end of the battle. Thus, this was a disciplinary practical lesson from Allah Glorified is He to His believing servants so that when they enter a war, their only thoughts should be connected to Allah Alone and fighting for His Cause without fail.

Allah Glorified is He said: ‘...and (Allah) will make your feet firm’ (Muhammad: 7). Making the feet firm is a reference to being determined and withstanding in the battlefield because feet are what is used to flee from war. Therefore, with Allah’s support, the feet will not flee during combats, Then, Allah Glorified is He said:

وَٱلَّذِينَ كَفَرُوا۟ فَتَعْسًا لَّهُمْ وَأَضَلَّ أَعْمَٰلَهُمْ ﴿٨﴾

As for the disbelievers, how wretched will be their state! God has brought their deeds to nothing [8] (The Quran, Muhammad: 8)

After mentioning the believers and their promise of victory, Allah Glorified is He then mentioned the disbelievers and the ill fortune (ta’s) that will befall them. Ta’s is an Arabic word that refers to a person falling down on their face, and the face is the noblest part of a person’s body. This is why, when expressing ignominy and dejection to a person, some people say, ‘The person’s nose was rubbed in the dirt.’

Therefore, the words: ‘...ill fortune awaits them,’ (Muhammad: 8) mean that they will experience shame and ruin, and their faces will be humiliated with the worst kind of humiliation that a person can suffer. Allah Glorified is He said in another chapter, regarding the children of Israel: ‘...And so, when the prediction of the second (period of your iniquity) came true, (We raised new enemies against you, and allowed them) to disgrace your faces utterly (yasu’u wujuhakum)’ (al-Isra’: 7).

Allah’s statement: ‘...since He will let all their (good) deeds go to waste,’ (Muhammad: 8) means that He will nullify their good deeds and make them worthless such that they will be of no benefit. This is because they did not do these deeds for Allah’s sake. Therefore, their good deeds will dissolve and they will not benefit from them in any degree.

Allah Glorified is He said in another chapter: ‘But as for those who are bent on denying the truth, their (good) deeds are like a mirage in the desert, which the thirsty (person) supposes to be water – until, when he approaches it, he finds that it was nothing: instead, he finds (that) Allah (has always been present) with him, and (that) He will pay him his account in full – for Allah is swift in reckoning!’ (an-Nur: 39) Then, Allah Glorified is He said:

ذَٰلِكَ بِأَنَّهُمۡ كَرِهُواْ مَآ أَنزَلَ ٱللَّهُ فَأَحۡبَطَ أَعۡمَٰلَهُمۡ ٩

It is because they hate what God has sent down that He has caused their deeds to go to waste[9]
(The Quran, Muhammad: 9)

The word: ‘It’ (Muhammad: 9) is referring to the ill fortune and nullification of deeds that has been mentioned as part of the punishment of the disbelievers. The reason for this punishment is that ‘they hated (the very thought of) what Allah has revealed’ (Muhammad: 9). This is the reason for the nullification of their good deeds.

These disbelievers hated what Allah Glorified is He has revealed and sent down because they saw that Allah’s commands will strip them of their authority, leadership, and power. Allah’s way made them equal to their servants after they had become accustomed to leadership, rank, and dominance over all the other creatures. This is why they hated the truth that Prophet Muhammad may the peace and the blessings of Allah be upon him conveyed to them.

While Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him was going to Medina, they were preparing 'Abdullah ibn Ubay to be crowned a king of Medina.(1) When the Messenger of Allah, Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him arrived, the people dispersed from around him and became preoccupied with the advent of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him. ‘Abdullah held a grudge deep in his soul against the Messenger of Allah, Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him and he persisted in his enmity towards the Messenger such that when he declared his Islam he was not sincere but rather a hypocrite, and his hypocrisy was well-known

(1) It is mentioned by As-Suhayli in Ar-Rawd Al-Anf 3/18 that the Helpers were arranging pearls from Abdullah ibn Ubay ibn Salul in order to crown him and make him their king.

Despite that, he had a son who became Muslim and whose Islam was sincere and he was a companion of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him. When his son learned that Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him had commanded that this hypocrite be killed, he came to Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him and asked him for exclusive permission to kill him so that no other man would do it from amongst the Companions. He wanted to avoid the feeling of resentment against any one of them. When he said this to the Messenger of Allah, Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him the Messenger refused and chose to show ‘Abdullah ibn Ubay mercy and pardon him. He said: ‘Do not kill him. Let his punishment be postponed to be carried out by Allah.’(1)

His statement: ‘...caused their deeds to go to waste,’ (Muhammad: 9) means, as we have said, that He invalidates their deeds, be it their actions, planning or plotting against the Muslims. This was achieved by the Muslims’ victory over them. Thus Allah Glorified is He made their plotting fall back on them. The meaning of this part of the verse might also be that Allah Glorified is He caused their deeds to go to waste because they did not do them for the sake of Allah Glorified is He or seeking His pleasure.

(1) Mentioned by Ibn Kathir in Al-Bidverse wa an-Nihverse 4/181 in which he said that Ibn Ishaq said: ʿAsim ibn ʿUmar ibn Qatada related to me that ‘Abdullah ibn ‘Abdullah ibn Ubay ibn Salul came to The Messenger of Allah Glorified is He, Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him and said: ‘O Messenger of Allah Glorified is He! It has reached me that you want to kill ‘Abdullah ibn Ubay because of what has reached you concerning him. If that is the case, then leave it to me and I will bring you his head, for by Allah Glorified is He, I know that amongst Al- Khazraj there is no one more dutiful to his father than me and I fear that you will command someone else to kill him. Do not leave me to look at the killer of ‘Abdullah ibn Ubay walking amongst the people because I will kill him and killing a believing man because of a disbeliever will cause me to enter the fire.’ Thus, The Messenger of Allah Glorified is He, Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him said: ‘We shall be gentle with him and treat him well as long as he is with us.’

It is known that amongst these people there were those who had righteous deeds that carried weight in their society. It is related that Ibn Jud'an and Al-Mat'am ibn 'Adiyy had pots of food under which a man could seek shade. They had great deeds in generosity, courage, and helping those in trouble, but they did not do this to seek Allah's pleasure, and thus these deeds go to waste.

أَفَلَمۡ يَسِيرُواْ فِي ٱلۡأَرۡضِ فَيَنظُرُواْ كَيۡفَ كَانَ عَٰقِبَةُ ٱلَّذِينَ
مِن قَبۡلِهِمۡۚ دَمَّرَ ٱللَّهُ عَلَيۡهِمۡۖ وَلِلۡكَٰفِرِينَ أَمۡثَٰلُهَا ١٠

Have they not travelled the earth and seen how those before them met their end? God destroyed them utterly: a similar fate awaits the disbelievers [10] (The Quran, Muhammad: 10)

His statement: 'Have they not travelled the earth...' (Muhammad: 10) is a question whose purpose is to show astonishment at what the disbelievers did. How could they disbelieve in Allah Glorified is He when they were a nation of nomads who travelled regularly, and in their journeys they passed by the ruins of houses that belonged to the previous disbelieving nations, seeing the punishment that befell them and how Allah Glorified is He took them to task. Did they not take a lesson from this?

He says in another verse: 'You [people] pass by their ruins morning* and night: will you not take heed?' (as-Saffat: 137-138) He also says: 'Do they not see how We come to [their] land and shrink its borders? Allah decides—no one can reverse His decision—and He is swift in reckoning' (ar-Ra'd: 41). He says in another verse: '...We have allowed these sinners and their fore-fathers to enjoy life for a long time. But do they not see how We are shrinking their borders? Is it they who will prevail?' (al-Anbiya': 44) That is take a lesson from the facts of life. Have you ever seen a Messenger being defeated by his enemies? Therefore, let them take a lesson from the previous nations: '...and seen how those before them met their end' (Muhammad: 10). What did Allah Glorified is He do to them? '...Allah destroyed them utterly...' (Muhammad: 10). The meaning of dammara (destroyed) is that Allah Glorified is He ruined them within themselves, while dammara alayhim, as mentioned in this verse, mean that He surrounded them with torture and devastation. Thus, He destroyed them, their property, and their families so that nothing was left of them.

'A similar fate awaits the disbelievers' (Muhammad: 10), i.e. this outcome is not far from you, Oh disbelievers of Mecca; so beware! In the same vein, the True Lord says in another verse: '...It is not far from the evildoers.' (Hud: 83)

Then, the True Lord says:(1)

ذَٰلِكَ بِأَنَّ ٱللَّهَ مَوۡلَى ٱلَّذِينَ ءَامَنُواْ وَأَنَّ ٱلۡكَٰفِرِينَ لَا مَوۡلَىٰ لَهُمۡ ١١

That is because God protects the believers while the disbelievers have no one to protect them [11]
(The Quran, Muhammad: 11)

Allah Glorified is He says: 'That...' (Muhammad: 11) referring to Allah's exacting revenge from the disbelievers, as well as His saving the believers and granting them victory: '...because Allah is the protector of the believers,' (Muhammad: 11). Mawla (Protector) is the One Who gives them victory and takes charge of their affairs; He is the Mighty who is never overcome. 'While the disbelievers have no one to protect them' (Muhammad: 11). They will have no helper and no one to grant them victory because they worshiped gods that cannot harm nor benefit them. Then, the True Lord says:

إِنَّ ٱللَّهَ يُدۡخِلُ ٱلَّذِينَ ءَامَنُواْ وَعَمِلُواْ ٱلصَّٰلِحَٰتِ جَنَّٰتٖ تَجۡرِي مِن تَحۡتِهَا ٱلۡأَنۡهَٰرُۖ
وَٱلَّذِينَ كَفَرُواْ يَتَمَتَّعُونَ وَيَأۡكُلُونَ كَمَا تَأۡكُلُ ٱلۡأَنۡعَٰمُ وَٱلنَّارُ مَثۡوٗى لَّهُمۡ ١٢

God will admit those who believe and do good deeds to Gardens graced with flowing streams; the disbelievers may take their fill of pleasure in this world, and eat as cattle do, but the Fire will be their home [12] (The Quran, Muhammad: 12)

Here, The True Lord is telling us about the deeds of the people of faith and their consequences, and the deeds of the people of disbelief and their consequences. The believer has maintained his heart with faith, and thus his limbs were maintained with righteous actions. The consequence is: ‘...Gardens graced with flowing streams...’ (Muhammad: 12), where the life of ease is eternal and never-ending.

(1) Qatada said: 'It was sent down on the Day of Uhud on the mountain path. When the polytheists cried out: 'A day for a day. We have 'Uzza and you have no 'Uzza' The Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him said: 'No. Say: 'Allah Glorified is He is our Protector and you have no protector.' (The Quran, Mentioned by Al-Qurtubi in his Tafsir 9/6285)

The meaning of min tahtiha (literally: under which), ‘...graced with...’ (Muhammad: 12) is that its water is inherent and constantly provided. It does not come from far away and there is no fear of it being cut off.

As for the disbelievers, they eat and enjoy food and drink, and they fill their bellies and their bodies. As for their hearts, they are empty and desolate with no meaning and no faith. Therefore, they live a life that is similar to the life of animals and beasts. They have material glut but in terms of values and spirituality they are impoverished. This is their state in the life of this world. Then, the consequence and normal reward will come as mentioned in the verse: ‘...but the Fire will be their home’ (Muhammad: 12), i.e., the fire will be their end, their place of return, their place of settlement and their final destination.

وَكَأَيِّن مِّن قَرۡيَةٍ هِيَ أَشَدُّ قُوَّةٗ مِّن قَرۡيَتِكَ ٱلَّتِيٓ أَخۡرَجَتۡكَ أَهۡلَكۡنَٰهُمۡ فَلَا نَاصِرَ لَهُمۡ ﴿١٣﴾

We have destroyed many a town stronger than your own [Prophet] – the town which [chose to] expel you – and they had no one to help them [13] (The Quran, Muhammad: 13)

His statement: ‘Many a town...’ (Muhammad: 13), i.e. many towns ‘...stronger than your own [Prophet]—the town which [chose to] expel you—we have destroyed, and they had no one to help them’ (Muhammad: 13). The town referred to here is Mecca, as it is the city that drove out Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him and how does it compare to the towns that Allah Glorified is He destroyed—which were of greater power, had greater numbers of people, and were more advanced in terms of civilization and development.

The True Lord says about them: ‘Have they not travelled through the land and seen how their predecessors met their end? They were mightier than them: they cultivated the earth more and built more upon it...’ (ar-Rum: 9).

How do they compare to ‘Ad, the like of which were not created in the land, with the tribe of Thamud, who hewed out the rocks in the valley or with Pharaoh, the lord of hosts? How do they compare to these people who were eventually destroyed? ‘We have destroyed, and they had no one to help them’ (Muhammad: 13). They had no one to defend them and repel the punishment from them.

Then, the True Lord says:

أَفَمَن كَانَ عَلَىٰ بَيِّنَةٍ مِّن رَّبِّهِۦ كَمَن زُيِّنَ لَهُۥ سُوٓءُ عَمَلِهِۦ وَٱتَّبَعُوٓاْ أَهْوَآءَهُم ﴿١٤﴾

Can those who follow clear proof from their Lord be compared to those whose foul deeds are made to seem alluring to them, those who follow their own desires? [14]
(The Quran, Muhammad: 14)

The True Lord Glorified is He wants to affirm this fact, but He does it in the form of a question: ‘Is this equal to this?’ ‘Can those who follow clear proof from their Lord...’ (Muhammad: 14)? Ala bayyinah means: on guidance, clear evidence and light from His Lord.

The Lord is The Creator and He is The Nurturer. What do you think of nurturing if it is from Allah Glorified is He? This is why Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him said in the context of stating a favour done to him by his Lord: ‘My Lord refined me and He perfected my refinement.’(1)

The meaning of ala bayyinah ‘...who follow clear proof from their Lord...’ (Muhammad: 14) is to be on clear evidence, unshakeable certainty and an upright way that secures goodness in the life of this world and well-being in the Hereafter. Is this person equal to someone whose evil deed is made fair to him so much so that he considers it good and he follows his vain passions and desires? You must say that they are not equal.

(1) Mentioned by As-Sakhawi in Al-Maqasid Al-Hasana and he attributed it to Al-Askari in Al-Amthal, and he said: ‘Its chain of transmission is very weak and our Sheikh (The Quran, i.e. Ibn Hajar Al-Asqalani) restricted its judgement to being gharib (The Quran, having one narrator absolutely, or only one person adding to the text or to the chain of transmission) in some of his legal verdicts fatawa. Ibn Taymiyyah said: ‘It is not known to have an established chain of transmission.’ Ibn Al-Jawzi mentioned it in Al-Ahadith Al-Wahiyya from the Hadith (Prophetic tradition) of ‘Ali and he said: ‘It is not authentic.’

One of the most severe tribulations that man falls into is when his passions make his evil deeds seem goodly to him. Desires are the inclinations and passions that make you deviate from the straight path. This is why they said(1): ‘The bane of opinion are desires; and this is why Allah Glorified is He praised His Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him by saying: ‘Nor does he speak out of desire’ (an-Najm: 3).

Then, the context goes back to striking parables one more time, as the True Lord says:

مَّثَلُ ٱلْجَنَّةِ ٱلَّتِي وُعِدَ ٱلْمُتَّقُونَ ۖ فِيهَآ أَنْهَٰرٌ مِّن مَّآءٍ غَيْرِ ءَاسِنٍ وَأَنْهَٰرٌ مِّن لَّبَنٍ لَّمْ يَتَغَيَّرْ
طَعْمُهُۥ وَأَنْهَٰرٌ مِّنْ خَمْرٍ لَّذَّةٍ لِّلشَّٰرِبِينَ وَأَنْهَٰرٌ مِّنْ عَسَلٍ مُّصَفًّى ۖ وَلَهُمْ فِيهَا مِن كُلِّ ٱلثَّمَرَٰتِ
وَمَغْفِرَةٌ مِّن رَّبِّهِمْ ۖ كَمَنْ هُوَ خَٰلِدٌ فِى ٱلنَّارِ وَسُقُوا۟ مَآءً حَمِيمًا فَقَطَّعَ أَمْعَآءَهُمْ ﴿١٥﴾

Here is a picture of the Garden promised to the pious: rivers of water forever pure, rivers of milk forever fresh, rivers of wine, a delight for those who drink, rivers of honey clarified and pure, [all] flow in it; there they will find fruit of every kind; and they will find forgiveness from their Lord. How can this be compared to the fate of those stuck in the Fire, given boiling water to drink that tears their bowels? [15]
(The Quran, Muhammad: 15)

The word mathal ‘...parable...’ is pronounced mithl with a kasra below the mim when likening a singular object to another singular object that is similar. Thus, you say: ‘Hadha mithl hadha’ (this is like this). You say it with a fat’ha when you want to liken an image that has parts to another image that has parts. This is why He says here: ‘Mathalu al-jannati allati wu’ida al-muttaqun,’ ‘Here is a parable of the Garden promised to the pious...’ (Muhammad: 15), with a fat’ha above the mim because it represents an aggregation and a comprehensive image that has various parts and elements.

Read His statement: ‘...parable of the life of this world...’ (al-Kahf: 45), i.e. this indicates life including what it contains from birth to death, ‘... like water which We send down from the cloud so the herbage of the earth becomes tangled on account of it, then it becomes dry broken into pieces which the winds scatter; and Allah is the holder of power over all things' (al-Kahf: 45).

(1) This was said by Aktham ibn Sayfi in a speech that he gave as part of the delegations to Khosrau, and it was mentioned by Ibn ʿAbd Rabbuh in Al-Iqd Al-Farid 1/97.

A parable mathal is a comparison in which you link something unknown to you with something known to you, and this is why, Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him was asked about the descriptions of Musa (Moses) 'Isa (Jesus) peace be upon them he compared them to what was known of the Companions. Thus, he said: 'As for Musa (Moses), he was a tall man as if he were from the men of Azd Shanuʾa(1)', who were known to them, 'As for 'Isa (Jesus) his face has many beautiful features, and water drips from his face as if he had just come out of the bathroom; from amongst my Companions, he is most similar to 'Urwa ibn Mas'ud Ath-Thaqafi'. So, he likened something unknown to something known.

Likewise, Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him has given us parables in order to clarify matters of religion for us, as he said in a Hadith: 'My parable and that of yours is like a man who kindled a fire. When it has illuminated all around him, the moths and grasshoppers began to fall therein. He tried to push them away, but they overcame him and jumped into it. I am catching hold of your waists ties (to save you) from fire, but you slip away from my hands.'(2) He said: 'Mathali wa mathalukum…' (My parable and that of yours…)'.

The word janna '…paradise…' originally means something that is veiled, and from it we have jann (cover); for example, we say: 'jann al-layl' (it became dark because it is night time). The word janna—which also means garden—has this same meaning because a garden is a piece of land that is filled with trees that have overlapping branches such that they cover and hide what they contain. Another meaning is that a garden covers and veils its owner and prevents him from leaving because it provides him with everything that he needs for living.

(1) Azd Shanuʾa: they are the descendants of Kaʿb ibn 'Abd Al-Malik ibn Nasr ibn Al-Azd, and they are currently the tribes of Ghamid and their cousins from Zhahran. Shanuʾa, with the letter hamza, is taken from shanan, which means 'mutual' hatred'. Ibn Darid said: 'The father of this tribal community from the Azd was called this.' Al-Khafaji said: 'They were called this because of their noble lineage and the excellence of their actions.' One of the things they say is 'a man of Shanuʾa', which means that he has pure lineage and manly virtues. They originate from Yemen.

(2) Agreed upon Hadith, narrated by Al-Bukhari in his Sahih 6002 and Muslim in his Sahih 4224, 4225 from the Hadith of Abu Hurayra peace be upon him. As for the Hadith of Jabir ibn 'Abdullah, it is narrated by Muslim in his Sahih 4226 and At-Tirmidhi in his Sunnan 2799.

The True Lord strikes a parable of it when He says: '...is as the parable of a garden on an elevated ground, upon which heavy rain falls so it brings forth its fruit twofold, but if heavy rain does not fall upon it, then light rain (is sufficient)…' (al-Baqara: 265). He also says: 'And set forth to them a parable of two men; for one of them We made two gardens…' (al-Kahf: 32).

The difference between the jannatayn (two gardens)—the janna in these verses and the janna in the verse we are studying—is that the janna in the life of this world is man-made and is physically brought about by the means of tilling and cultivating. As for the janna of the Hereafter that Allah Glorified is He has promised the pious, it exists without any means. It exists according to the power of The Original Creator. This is why there has been a difference of opinion regarding the janna that Adam peace be upon him entered. Was it a garden in the life of this world or was it the garden of the Hereafter?

When we read this story in Allah's Book, we learn that it is Allah's janna, the janna of the Hereafter, and the proof is that there is no tilling or cultivating therein, and no means are applied. Rather, Adam peace be upon him ate from what Allah Glorified is He had prepared for him, and he enjoyed inherent security as long as he adhered to obeying Allah's Commands with regards to eating.

When Satan had deceived him into eating from the tree that Allah Glorified is He had forbidden him from, he underwent a transformation in his natural state and came to experience the process of excretion, which he had not known before. He and his wife became aware of their nakedness and they rushed to cover it with leaves.

This experience was a practical training for Adam peace be upon him to respect Allah's way and not deviate from it. We also understand form this that nakedness does not appear in Muslim society unless there is deviation from the way. Adam peace be upon him was not a normal man. He was a Prophet and a Messenger and The True Lord wanted to teach him the lesson in a practical way.

The True Lord's statement: '...promised to the pious...' (Muhammad: 15) means that Allah Glorified is He promised them; and Allah's Promise is true and is certain to happen because He is One and has no partner to oppose him. There is no force that can come between Him and the implementation of what He has promised, as is the case, for example, when human beings make promises to one another. Moreover, there is no force that can prevent Him from accomplishing His promise, like what happens with humans, who are subject to change and none of them ever escapes death.

As for The True Lord, He is The Eternal and the Ever-Abiding, and He is the True Lord.

The janna (garden) that Allah Glorified is He has promised has not been promised by anyone else. To whom has it been promised? It has been promised to the pious who are mindful of Allah. The pious are those who live in accordance with Allah's way, and place a protective barrier between themselves and Allah's punishment. This can only be done by following His Way and not following Satan and one's vain desires.

The True Lord says: 'Satan threatens you with the prospect of poverty and commands you to do foul deeds; Allah promises you His forgiveness and His abundance: Allah is limitless and all knowing' (al-Baqara: 268). Allah's promise is the promise of veracity and truth. He says: '...Who speaks more truly than Allah?' (an-Nisa': 122)

His statement: 'Here is a parable of the Garden...' (Muhammad: 15) means that this description is not a description of paradise, but rather, a parable that illustrates it to make it easier to perceive because if He had wanted to give us a literal description of paradise, He would have been able to do so only by way of terms that express meanings.

In language, it is known that the meaning exists first, and then we give it a term that refers to it. When Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him described paradise for us He said: 'It contains what no eye has seen, what no ear has heard and what has not occurred to the heart or mind of any man.'(1)

(1) Agreed upon Hadith, narrated by Al-Bukhari in his Sahih 3005, 4406, 4407, 6944 and Muslim in his Sahih 5050, 5051, 5052 from the Hadith of Abu Hurayra may Allah be pleased with him.

First of all, reflect on the progressive development with regards to senses and conceptions that we have in this Hadith. The eye sees that which is within the scope of vision. As for the ear, it hears what you can see and what others can see, while that which occurs to the mind or heart is more expansive.

If our conceptions cannot arrive at what paradise contains, and not even that which occurs to our minds, then how can we describe it? How can we give it terms that express it? Therefore, there is no literal description of paradise. There is only a parable that makes it easier for us to understand. This is why the True Lord says about paradise: 'No soul knows what joy is kept hidden in store for them...' (as-Sajda: 17).

Therefore, it contains things that we do not know, so how can we give names to such things? This is why we make such things easier to perceive by using parables of that which we know in the life of this world.

Paradise contains, as in the life of this world, water, milk, wine, and honey, but they are bettered and purified from anything that could spoil them. Thus, they do not resemble the blessings of the life of this world except in their names: '...Therein are rivers of water that does not alter...' (Muhammad: 15).

The water in the life of this world alters and corrupts and its smell changes. As for the water of paradise, it does not corrupt. The True Lord begins with water because it is the basis for quenching one's thirst, and with it food ripens and man's cleanliness is completed. Indeed, it is the fundamental element in the creation of every living thing. He said: '...and We have made of water everything living...' (al-Anbiya': 30).

We know that the source of freshwater in the life of this world is the sea and that by the process of evaporation and cloud formation that water is purified of its salinity and becomes proper freshwater, yet, we do not know the source of the water in paradise.

Allah Glorified is He says about it: '...pure water...' (al-Furqan: 48) nothing spoils, sullies or corrupts it. Therefore, it is a blessing that is not disturbed by anything and is not spoiled by anything because you live in this world according to your means. These means are the ones that Allah Glorified is He has created for you.

Amongst us are those who disturb the order of these means. As for the Hereafter, you live directly according to The Original Cause. In the life of this world, you seek light from the sun in the daytime and from the moon and stars at night, whereas, in the Hereafter, there is no sun, moon, or stars. Rather, you live with the light of Allah Glorified is He: ‘And the earth shall beam with the light of its Lord...’ (az-Zumar: 69), i.e. without the need of any means

Moreover, in the life of this world you have water via means, while in paradise there are no means to have water. Read His statement about water in the life of this world: ‘We send the winds to fertilize, and We bring down water from the sky for you to drink...’ (al-Hijr: 22).He says about the water of paradise: ‘...their Lord will give them a pure drink.’ (al-Insan: 21)

There is a difference in meaning between asqa and saqa. Asqa means that the water which we obtain for drinking is brought into existence. Thus, water is sent down from the clouds and we store it in reservoirs until we need it. Saqa indicates that giving the water has already been started.

What is amazing about the rivers of paradise is that they do not have shores, and that they merge with one another without mixing. Do not ask about how this is done because these blessings do not exist via means which we know, but rather by the Causer (the Original Cause). So, do not impose upon such blessings your worldly standards. His word: ‘...Therein...’ (Muhammad: 15) means that these rivers are contained here (in the Garden).

He says: ‘...rivers of milk forever fresh...’ (Muhammad: 15). By contrast, the taste of milk in the life of this world changes with time and it corrupts. ‘Rivers of wine, a delight for those who drink...’ (Muhammad: 15). Yes, rivers of wine that are prepared and ready. There are no grapes that are pressed. It is simply a matter of ‘Be!’ and it is.

If the wine in the life of this world is impermissible, and it clouds the intellect and has a repulsive smell, the wine in the Hereafter is delightful to drink and does not cloud the intellect, so the only thing it shares with the wine in the life of this world is its name.

In our worldly life there are no rivers of wine because wine, here, comes about via means. Only small quantities of wine are made, according to the quantity of grapes, or other fruits, pressed. When the True Lord speaks about the wine of this world, He says: ‘They ask you [Prophet] about intoxicants and gambling: say, ‘There is great sin in both and some benefit for people: the sin is greater than the benefit.’ (al-Baqara: 219) Its benefits have no worth when compared to its harms as well as its being forbidden; and though it makes you feel drunk and happy that you laugh, rejoice and forget your worries, yet, after that it clouds your intellect and strips you of your dignity.

If you add to that the fact that it is forbidden, and that it is one of the worst enormities, the harm it can do to you becomes evident. It is true that there is profit for whoever trades in it, but it is unlawful profit. This is why Allah Glorified is He made the wine in the life of this world to be a small amount. As for the wine in the Hereafter, it flows in rivers because in the Hereafter it is a joy for those who drink it. ‘There shall be no trouble in it, nor shall they be exhausted therewith’ (as-Saffat: 47). This means that it does not cloud the intellect, and there is no harm as a result of drinking it. An-nazf means to extract something from something such as someone who vomits after drinking it or is afflicted with dizziness or a headache.

‘Rivers of honey clarified and pure...’ (Muhammad: 15). Therefore, He mentioned water first because of its first-rank importance, and then milk because it takes the place of water until water is found, and it is a fundamental element of nourishment. Then He mentioned wine because after man eats and drinks he needs to complete his happiness with a cup of this wine.

As for honey, it is mentioned last because Allah Glorified is He says about it: ‘...wherein there is cure for man...’ (an-Nahl: 69). Therefore, that which distinguishes honey is not its taste or its sweetness, but rather the fact that it is a cure, and in paradise there is no sickness. So, it is drunk in paradise in order to be enjoyed and because of its beautiful taste.

The use of ‘...clarified and pure...’ (Muhammad: 15) is to distinguish between it and the honey in the life of this world which is not free of impurities. Man gathers it from mountains which are the bee’s first pastures: ‘And your Lord inspired the bee, saying, ‘Build yourselves houses in the mountains and trees and what people construct…’ (an-Nahl: 68).

The American scientist who researched the history of the bee found that the most ancient kind of bee are those that live in mountains, and as long as it comes from mountains it will not be free of impurities. As for the honey of paradise, it is cleansed with the power of the One Who prepared it.

Then He says: '...there they will find fruit of every kind...' (Muhammad: 15). After mentioning the fluids that are in paradise the True Lord then mentions the fruits it contains without naming them because we do not know them.

This is why He says in another verse: '...because they were provided with something like it...' (al-Baqara: 25), i.e. fruits that resemble what they had before, but taste different; thus, even if He gives us examples of grapes and fruits generally known, in paradise they will be other than what we know in this world.

If the fruits that we know of have environments that suit them and seasons that they grow in, the fruits in paradise are available at all times. The environments in the life of this world are among the means, whereas in the Hereafter there are no means, but in the Hereafter there is only the Causer.

He then says: '...and they will find forgiveness from their Lord...' (Muhammad: 15). After our Lord has given material, outward delight in paradise, He gives us a higher delight, which is the delight of obtaining from Allah out of His Generosity and favour because people do not enter paradise except through forgiveness. However, one of them may mention his sin and He will say to him: 'You are forgiven.'

It is related in the Qudsi Hadith that after the people of paradise have entered paradise, the Lord of Might will ask them: ''Are you pleased, my servants?' They will say: 'How could we not be pleased, O Lord? You have given us such-and-such and such-and-such.' Then He will say: 'Now, I bestow upon you My Pleasure, and I will never be angry with you after this.''(1)

(1) Agreed upon Hadith narrated by Al-Bukhari in his Sahih 6067, 6964 and Muslim in his Sahih 5057 from the Hadith of Abu Sa'id Al-Khudari may Allah be pleased with him... Its wording according to Muslim is that The Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him said: 'Indeed Allah Glorified is He says to the people of paradise: 'O people of paradise!' And they say: 'Here we are, at your pleasure! Goodness is in Your hands.' Then He says: 'Are you pleased?' They reply: 'How can we not be pleased, O Lord,=

Then, The True Lord asks us to compare between the people of paradise and the people of the fire. He says: '...How can this be compared to the fate of those stuck in the fire, given boiling water to drink that tears their bowels?' (Muhammad: 15) That is to say, which is better? Judge for yourselves and we will accept your judgement.

This is paradise or a likeness of it: is it equal to its counterpart the fire as an eternal abode? 'Given boiling water to drink that tears their bowels?' (Muhammad: 15) Just as water is mentioned first in Paradise it is also mentioned first in the Fire—and we seek refuge in Allah Glorified is He.

His word: 'suqu', '...given waters of burning despair to drink...' (Muhammad: 15), does not simply mean 'drink' because drinking is a voluntary act. Rather, 'suqu', '...given boiling water to drink...' (Muhammad: 15) means that they drink it reluctantly and against their will, just like when you give a small child medicine. You force him to drink it because he does not like it.

'Boiling water...' (Muhammad: 15): water is known to be drunk in order to quench thirst and it is drunk cold. As for the water of hellfire—and we seek refuge in Allah Glorified is He—it will be boiling, i.e. of the maximum temperature. How will they be in the fire when they will want to cool the heat in their throats and they will be given boiling water that will increase the heat and make it hotter than the fire? This is why Allah Glorified is He says in another verse: '...If they call for relief, they will be relieved with water like molten metal, scalding their faces...' (al-Kahf: 29).

Then, He explains the effect of this boiling water: '...that tears their bowels' (Muhammad: 15). If only it would turn and that would be the end of the matter, but instead it is an everlasting punishment that will never be mitigated for them.

When their skins have been burned away, We shall replace them with new ones so that they may continue to feel the pain...' (an-Nisa': 56). Al-am'a' '...bowels...' is the plural of mi'i, and in the Noble Hadith we have the statement

= when You have given us what You have not given any of Your creation?' He then says: 'Shall I give you something better than this?' They reply: 'O Lord! What could be better than this?' He then says: 'I bestow upon you My Pleasure, and I will never be angry with you after this.''

of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him: ‘The Muslim eats in one intestine, and the disbeliever eats in seven.’(1) That is, the believer eats according to his need or in his food there are blessings. As for the disbeliever, he eats until he fills his stomach.

Then, the True Lord says:

وَمِنۡهُم مَّن يَسۡتَمِعُ إِلَيۡكَ حَتَّىٰٓ إِذَا خَرَجُواْ مِنۡ عِندِكَ قَالُواْ لِلَّذِينَ أُوتُواْ ٱلۡعِلۡمَ
مَاذَا قَالَ ءَانِفًاۚ أُوْلَٰٓئِكَ ٱلَّذِينَ طَبَعَ ٱللَّهُ عَلَىٰ قُلُوبِهِمۡ وَٱتَّبَعُوٓاْ أَهۡوَآءَهُمۡ ١٦

Some of these people listen to you [Prophet], but, once they leave your presence, they sneer at those who have been given knowledge, saying, ‘What was that he just said?’ These are the ones whose hearts God has sealed, those who follow their own desires [16] (The Quran, Muhammad: 16)

In His statement: ‘Some of these people...’ (Muhammad: 16), Who are these people? You will know after you have read their description: ‘...listen to you...’ (Muhammad: 16), i.e. they listen to the Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him reading the Quran: ‘...but once they leave your presence...’ (Muhammad: 16), Oh Muhammad ‘...they sneer at those who have been given knowledge...’ (Muhammad: 16), like Ibn Mas’ud and Ibn Abbas ‘...saying, ‘What is it that he has said just now?’...’ (Muhammad: 16) That is what is new about what Muhammad has said? It is as if they despise what they have heard from Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him.Therefore, these are not the attributes of disbelievers because the disbelievers would not listen to the Noble Quran. Rather, these are the attributes of the hypocrites who would participate with the Muslims in their prayers and their gatherings and mingle with them subtly and cynically. However, the Quran was being sent down to Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him and it would expose them.

(1) Authentic Hadith narrated by Malik in his Muwatta’ 1442, Al-Bukhari in his Sahih 4977,4978, Ibn Majah in his Sunnan 3247 and Ahmad in his Musnad 7184, 9008, 9248, 9496 and all of them from the Hadith of Abu Hurayra peace be upon him and in the chapter regarding Ibn ‘Umar and Abu Musa Al-Ash’ari.

This is why hypocrisy was worse and more harmful for the Muslims than disbelief because disbelievers are known and they manifest their enmity so one can be on guard against them whereas a hypocrite belongs to the Muslim society and openly declares Islam while concealing his disbelief and thus his enmity is not manifest and his danger is immense.

When one follows the history of hypocrisy in Islam, he will find that it did not emerge in Mecca but rather in Medina. Thus, despite the severe enmity that existed between Islam and disbelief in Mecca, it was still open, declared enmity that could be confronted. There was no hypocrisy there. It did not emerge in Mecca, but it did in Medina, why? It is because hypocrisy only exists in the presence of those who are strong. A weak person will not be hypocritical with another weak person. He would openly declare his enmity, whereas a strong person is dealt with hypocritically in order to avoid any harm of his power.

Therefore, there was no need for hypocrisy in Mecca while the Muslims therein were a weak minority. This means that hypocrisy is a phenomenon that indicates the strength of faith and that it now had a force that was receiving hypocritical treatment. This is what happened in Medina. This is why the True Lord says bout them: '...as are some of the people of Medina— they are obstinate in their hypocrisy...' (at-Tawba: 101).

Regarding the word yastami'u '...listen...' (Muhammad: 16), the root letters are found in the Noble Quran as sami'a, istama' and tasamma'. Sami'a means to hear, i.e. without any desire to do so. Istama' means to listen, i.e. to hear something that you love to hear. As for tasamma', it indicates assuming and being burdened by listening.

Therefore, He says: 'Some of these people listen to you...' (Muhammad: 16), i.e. by choice, and it is something to which they love to listen. This is how the hypocrites were. They would sit in the front rows and show such interest, unlike anyone else, and they would not miss a word or a prayer in order to contrive their plan and hide their hypocrisy.

'These are the ones whose hearts Allah has sealed...' (Muhammad: 16) because they heard the speech and did not believe in it or act according to its requirements, thus, the reward is that Allah Glorified is He seals and stamps their hearts. It is as if Allah Glorified is He is saying to them: 'As long as you chose hypocrisy, then I will increase you in it and I will seal your hearts so that hypocrisy never exits from them and faith never enters.’

In ‘Those who follow their own desires’ (Muhammad: 16): al-hawa (desires) means that your heart inclines towards something that you believe will make you happy and delighted, but it is an immediate delight and temporary pleasure without considering the consequences of this pleasure. Therefore, you must place controls over your desires and choose the desires that have a lasting effect and longer lasting benefit. Make your desires be for that which benefits you and not that which harms you like the person who eats chilli powder because he enjoys eating it as well as its taste. He likes it whilst eating it, but he is heedless of how he will excrete this food because it will bring about pain that will surpass the pleasure of eating.

The intelligent person must contemplate the consequences of his desires and be on guard against inclining towards them. This is why Allah Glorified is He says: ‘but if the truth were in accordance with their desires, the heavens, the earth, and everyone in them would disintegrate...’ (al-Mu’minun: 71).

The True Lord has brought us a way in order to protect us from vain desires because desires of different individuals contradict and conflict with one another. Thus, it is a device of differing and disagreement, and Allah Glorified is He wants us to agree and to support one another, not oppose one another.

In the Noble Hadith, Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him says: ‘None of you truly believes until his desires are subservient to that which I have brought.’(1)

Some people stop at this statement: ‘These are the ones whose hearts Allah has sealed...’ (Muhammad: 16), and say that as long as Allah Glorified is He has sealed their hearts and willed misguidance for them, why does He punish them? We say: Allah Glorified is He guides his servants and does not misguide them. They are the ones who choose misguidance and are not guided to faith.

(1) Narrated by Ibn Batta in his book Al-Ibana al-kubra291 from the Hadith of ‘Abdullah ibn ‘Amr ibn Al-ʿAs and mentioned by As-Suyuti in Ad-Durr Al-Manthur 2/307 and he attributed it to Al-Asbahani in At-Targhib with the wording: ‘No believer has completed his faith until his lusts are in accordance with what I have brought to you.’ Also narrated by Al-Faswi in Al-Arbaʿin 8 and Ibn Abi ʿAsim in As-Sunna 14.

This is why we read: '...Allah does not guide the disbelievers,' (al-Baqara: 264) and '...and Allah does not guide the transgressing people,' (al-Ma'ida: 108) and '...and Allah does not guide aright the unjust people' (al-Baqara: 258).

Misguidance and going astray is therefore the lack of guidance that comes from them and is a result of them following other than the straight path. Thus, Allah Glorified is He did not guide them because they were disbelieving, transgressing, or unjust people.

Indeed, the True Lord, in fact, has guided everyone, the believer, and the disbeliever because He called on all of them in His statement: 'O Mankind...' (al-Baqara: 21), and He indicated and showed all of them His way and the consequences of following His way, and He warned them of the consequences of not doing so.

He made it clear to them that the way has been laid down for their benefit by setting right their affairs in the life of this world and ensuring their well-being in the Hereafter. Indeed He does not benefit from His servant's obedience and He is not harmed by their disobedience. He is no need of them and has no need of their worship because He has had the attributes of perfection before He created them. This is why He says to His servants: 'O My servant, come near to Me and I will give you my goodness.'

Read His statement regarding the people of Thamud: 'And as for Thamud, We guided them, but they preferred blindness over guidance...' (Fussilat: 17), i.e. we indicated and showed them the way of goodness '...but they preferred blindness to guidance...' (Fussilat: 17), and when they preferred blindness, Allah Glorified is He blinded them.

Furthermore, regarding those who say: 'Why does Allah punish them when He is the One Who misguided them?' Why do they not mention the other side and say: 'As long as He has written obedience for them, then why does He reward them?'

This is why it is mentioned in the Qudsi Hadith: 'the sky said: 'O Lord! Allow me to send down an eclipse upon the children of Adam because they enjoy your goodness and they refrain from thanking you.' The earth said: 'O Lord! Allow me to swallow up the children of Adam because they enjoy your goodness and they refrain from thanking you.’ And the mountains said: ‘O Lord! Allow me to fall upon the children of Adam because they enjoy your goodness and they refrain from thanking you.’ Allah Glorified is He then said to them: ‘Leave Me and My creation. If you had created them you would have shown them mercy. If they repent to me then I am their beloved, and if they do not repent then I am their doctor. I test them with afflictions in order to purify them of vices.’’(1)

We gave an example of guidance before – and to Allah Glorified is He belongs the highest similitude – of a traffic officer when you go to him and you ask about the road and then he tells you that the road is from here. If you obey him he gives you more and says: ‘In the road there is an obstacle in such-and-such place so be careful’ or he takes you himself until you reach where you want to go.

Likewise, The True Lord has indicated and shown everyone where to go, so whoever hears and obeys He increases in guidance and whoever rejects and rebels He increases in misguidance by sealing their hearts.

This is why the scholars have divided guidance into two types; the guidance of showing which is for both the believer and the disbeliever, and the guidance of enabling success and support which is exclusive to the believer. This is why He says in the following verse

وَٱلَّذِينَ ٱهۡتَدَوۡاْ زَادَهُمۡ هُدٗى وَءَاتَىٰهُمۡ تَقۡوَىٰهُمۡ ١٧

God has increased the guidance of those who follow the right path, and given them their awareness [of Him] [17]
(The Quran, Muhammad: 17)

His statement: ‘...‘Allah has increased the guidance...’ (Muhammad: 17) means He increased their success, His help to them and their obedience to his commands

(1) Mentioned by Al-Ghazali in Ihya’ ‘Ulum Ad-Din 4/52 from a statement of some of the first three generations, the wording of which is: ‘There is no slave who disobeys except that his place on earth asks for permission to swallow him and the place above him in the sky asks for permission to send down an eclipse, Then Allah Glorified is He says to the earth and the sky: ‘Hold back from My slave and give him respite, for indeed you two did not create, and had you created him, you would show him mercy. Maybe he will repent to Me and I will forgive him. Maybe he will become righteous and I will turn his bad deeds into good deeds.’’

'And given them their awareness [of Him]' (Muhammad: 17). It is as if taqwa (piety and being mindful of Allah) comes to them instead of them going to it (seeking it). He makes it easy and desirable to them, while some find religious responsibility arduous, considering it a chain that shackles them constantly.

When we reflect on religious responsibility, we find that it provides the soul with relief and reassurance. Religious responsibility is protects and safeguards the soul against perils. This is why Allah Glorified is He says: 'Such people are following their Lord's Guidance...' (al-Baqara: 5). The meaning of '...following their Lord's Guidance...' (al-Baqara: 5) is that the guidance is their means towards the objective that they seek, as it is not a burden upon the slave because The Creator never burdens us with what we are incapable of, and He has not enslaved us except for our benefit so that we can have uprightness in the life of this world and well-being in the Hereafter.

This is why we said that servitude to any other than Allah Glorified is He is humiliation and a disgrace while servitude to Allah Glorified is He is glory and an honour. This is because servitude to a human being gives the goodness of the servants to the master, but servitude to Allah Glorified is He is rewarded by being granted goodness from Allah Glorified is He.

When the servant understands worship in this way he loves it and yearns for it. Moreover, he finds pleasure therein to which no other pleasure comes close. This is why Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him said to Bilal, his caller to prayer: 'Give us comfort with it, O Bilal!'(1) This is because prayer is easy and light to the believing heart, but burdensome to the heart of the hypocrite.

Therefore, it is from guidance that you pray as the generality of people pray, and it is an increase in guidance that you yearn for the prayer and you wait for it and you find your comfort therein; for in prayer you are in the presence of your Lord. Allah Glorified is He is unseen and He also makes His servant righteous through the unseen because prayer makes you righteous it rectifies your state from whither you know not.

(1) Narrated by Ahmad in his Musnad 5/364 and Abu Dawud in his Sunnan 4985 from a man from amongst the Companions which is that the man from Khuza'a said: 'If only I had prayed, I would have felt rested'... It is as if they found fault with him for this, so he said: 'I heard The Messenger of Allah, Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him say: 'O Bilal! Establish the prayer and give us rest with it.'

Among the benefits of piety and being mindful of Allah is what He states in the verse: ‘Believers, if you remain mindful of Allah, He will give you a criterion [to tell right from wrong] and wipe out your bad deeds, and forgive you: Allah’s favour is great indeed’ (al-Anfal: 29).

Thus, whoever is conscious of Allah Glorified is He in accordance with the standard that has come from Allah Glorified is He which is the Noble Quran, He increases him by giving him another standard that is exclusive to him, a standard that guides him, illuminates the path for him and with it he is able to distinguish between good and evil.

Therefore, with regards to being mindful of Allah Glorified is He all you have to do is to seek it with the intention of acting and obeying. Then, you will find it, itself, pursuing you and seeking you.

Then, the True Lord says:

فَهَلْ يَنظُرُونَ إِلَّا ٱلسَّاعَةَ أَن تَأْتِيَهُم بَغْتَةً ۖ فَقَدْ جَآءَ
أَشْرَاطُهَا ۚ فَأَنَّىٰ لَهُمْ إِذَا جَآءَتْهُمْ ذِكْرَىٰهُمْ ﴿١٨﴾

What are the disbelievers waiting for, other than the Hour which will come upon them unawares? Its signs are already here, but once the Hour has actually arrived, what use will it be then to take heed? [18] (The Quran, Muhammad: 18)

The discussion is about the disbelievers who do not pay heed to the proofs of Allah’s existence in the universe, or to the miracles of the Messengers peace be upon them and thus do not believe in them and affirm them, nor to Allah’s rulings and thus do not act according to them. What are these people waiting for?

‘What are the disbelievers waiting for...’ (Muhammad: 18)? Yanzhuroon means waiting ‘...for the Last Hour...’ (Muhammad: 18). The Last Hour, with regards to them, is death because a man’s lifetime comes to an end at death. Once someone dies, his resurrection is established. No one knows his appointed time and when he will die because Allah Glorified is He has hidden it and kept it to Himself and not revealed it to anyone.

Thus, we have no say regarding how long and how short a life is, and we have no control over it. This is because it has been left to the One Who holds all actions and appointed times in His hand to decide. However, it is in your hands to occupy your lifespan with good works and to expand the sphere of goodness in your life and benefit others, just as it is possible for you to add another dimension to your life by doing good deeds that you will be remembered for after you die and will be stored up for you with your Lord.

If you know that your lifetime is subject to a breath that one inhales and may not be able to exhale, or a blink of an eye that does not return, then you must be wary of dying, while in a state of disobedience to Allah Glorified is He and be wary of delaying your repentance or postponing it because you cannot guarantee when death will overtake you.

When you hear the call to prayer rise and respond to the call, and do not say that there is plenty of time and that you will pray later. If you have wealth and you are able to perform the pilgrimage, do not say that you will perform it next year. This is because you cannot guarantee that you will be alive in the next moment, so how can you guarantee it after a year. It is true that there is no punishment attached to delaying these works but by delaying you lose out on the bounty of praying on time and praying in congregation. This is why it is mentioned in a saying of one of the Companions: ‘Work for your life in this world as if you are going to live forever, and work for the Hereafter as if you are going to die tomorrow.’

Some people understand the statement: ‘Work for your life in this world...’ to mean that which will suffice you for however long your life is, but the purport here is to work: work in the life of this world but take it easy and do not drown yourself therein. If you miss out on something today you will get it tomorrow, i.e. leisurely. Do not base the matter on the first deal.

That which is blameworthy with regards to striving for the sake of the life of this world is when the life of this world takes precedence over all your other concerns and takes up all your time and you want it immediately. What is even more dangerous than that is for us to seek help from blessings and wealth in order to disobey or we sell a commodity for something that is legally impermissible, and thus the blessing in our hands turns into adversity.

This is why Allah says: ‘do you not see those who, in exchange for Allah’s favour, offer only ingratitude...’ (Ibrahim: 28) such as so many of our girls nowadays whom we see clothed yet naked, manifesting the beauty that Allah Glorified is He has given them and instead of showing gratitude for such a blessing by safeguarding it, they show ingratitude by displaying it.

If only the misguided person would only misguide himself! What is worse than misguidance is that one becomes an example for others and thus tribulation spreads throughout society. This is why He says at the end of the verse: ‘...and make their people end up in the home of ruin’ (Ibrahim: 28). What is the home of ruin? ‘Hell, where they burn. What an evil place to stay!’ (Ibrahim: 29)

These tribulations carry away the youth especially in the phases of adolescence and when there are no job opportunities and they are still dependent on their families. This is why we say to our daughters: Be conscious of Allah Glorified is He for youth is a time that is excused and overcome and it suffices one to resist the voracity of adolescence. Thus, do not provoke any new voracity by doing things like displaying yourself in public, unveiling and having no modesty.

I remember a time when they wanted to honour one of their prominent figures, so they arranged a party for him and they brought female dancers and so forth. I said: ‘Glory be to Allah Glorified is He! Is this how we honour our prominent figures?’ Then I grabbed my companion and said to him: ‘Oh dear! Dancing at nighttime used to be delightful, as the girl was dancing with piety, praising Allah with piety! What are you really doing?’

Yes, indeed. ‘Make their people end up in the home of ruin,’ (Ibrahim: 28). His statement: ‘...will come upon them unawares?...’ (Muhammad: 18), i.e., will come upon them by surprise. His words: ‘...Its signs are already here...’ (Muhammad: 18), i.e. its signs and distinguishing characteristics that give warning of its proximity are already here. Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him mentioned some of these signs to us. He said: ‘...and the women who will be dressed but appear to be naked, who will be inclined to evil and make others incline towards it. Their heads will be like the humps of long-necked camels inclined to one side. They will not enter paradise and they will not smell its odour, whereas its odour will be smelt from such and such distance.'(1) True, their hair is made in unknown way, their lips are coloured with red, their eyebrows are thinned…etc. They change Allah's Creation and they use Allah's Blessings to disobey Him. This is one of the signs of the Last Hour.

This is why we ask Allah Glorified is He to guide our daughters and to protect the beauty of each of them and that there be praise of Allah Glorified is He for His blessings and obedience to Him, and that Allah's Blessings are not poisoned by disobeying him. I say to guardians of women: be conscious of Allah Glorified is He regarding your daughters and do not force them to work in morally depraved advertisements because it is impermissible, and the money that comes of it is impermissible.

Likewise, Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him informed us of other signs of the Last Hour such as: '...when you see stinginess obeyed, passions followed, and everyone who has an opinion being amazed with their own opinion, wait for the Last Hour.'(2) He also said: 'When power and authority come into the hands of those who are unfit, wait for the Last Hour'(3)…etc.

(1) Narrated by Muslim in his Sahih 3971, 5098 and Imam Malik in his Muwatta' 1421 from the Hadith of Abu Hurayra (may Allah be pleased with) and also Ahmad in his Musnad 8311, 9203.

(2) Narrated by Abu Dawud in his Sunnan 3778 from the Hadith of Abu Tha'laba Al-Khashni in which The Messenger of Allah Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him said: 'Rather, enjoin the doing of what is right and forbid the doing of what is wrong until when you see stinginess being obeyed, passions followed, worldly interests being preferred, and everyone who has an opinion being amazed with their own opinion, then you must take care of yourself and leave the common people for indeed there are coming days of patience in which it will be like holding on to hot coal. The one who acts rightly during that period will have the reward of fifty men who act as he does.' The same has been narrated by At-Tirmidhi in his Sunnan 2984 and Ibn Majah in his Sunnan 4004.

(3) Narrated by Al-Bukhari in his Sahih 57 from Abu Hurayra peace be upon him who said: While The Prophet, Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him was saying something in a gathering, a Bedouin came and asked him, 'When will the Last Hour take place?' Allah's Messenger continued his talk, so some people said that Allah's Messenger had heard the question but did not like what he had said. Some of them said that Allah's=

His statement: '...but once the Hour has actually arrived, what use will it be then to take heed?' (Muhammad: 18), i.e. how will they take heed when it is too late and the Resurrection will be upon them? What will their remembrance avail them? How will good deeds be of any benefit to them?

Then, He seals it with the peak of all matters which, if it is sound, everything for man is sound. He says:

فَٱعۡلَمۡ أَنَّهُۥ لَآ إِلَٰهَ إِلَّا ٱللَّهُ وَٱسۡتَغۡفِرۡ لِذَنۢبِكَ وَلِلۡمُؤۡمِنِينَ
وَٱلۡمُؤۡمِنَٰتِۗ وَٱللَّهُ يَعۡلَمُ مُتَقَلَّبَكُمۡ وَمَثۡوَىٰكُمۡ ١٩

So [Prophet], bear in mind that there is no god but God, and ask forgiveness for your sins and for the sins of believing men and women. God knows whenever any of you move, and whenever any of you stay still [19] (The Quran, Muhammad: 19)

The meaning of 'So [Prophet], 'know bear in mind that there is no Allah but Allah...' (Muhammad: 19) is: do not, by any means, think that there is a cause besides Allah, and it is not permissible for you to seek refuge in other than Allah because seeking refuge in other than Allah Glorified is He is of no benefit. Regarding His statement: 'fa'alam', 'know bear in mind...' (Muhammad: 19), al-'ilm (knowledge) is either certain knowledge when you are informed of it by someone whose veracity you trust, or it is the essence of certainty when you see it with your own eyes and you see its effects, or it is the truth of certainty when you experience it directly.

When The True Lord says to His Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him 'know that there is no Allah but Allah...' (Muhammad: 19), does this mean that he does not know it? No. Rather, the objective is to remain upon it. As you knew it in the past, make sure you know it in the present and in the future. This is similar to His statement: ‘You, who believe, believe...’ (an-Nisa’: 136). Thus, He commands them to believe when He has already called believers.

= Messenger had not heard it. When the Prophet finished his speech, he said, 'Where is the questioner, who enquired about the Last Hour?' The Bedouin said, 'I am here, O Allah's Messenger.' Then the Prophet said, 'When trustworthiness is lost, then wait for the Last Hour.' The Bedouin said, 'How will that be lost?' The Prophet said, 'When power and authority come into the hands of those who are unfit, wait for the Last Hour.'

They said: when Allah Glorified is He commands something that is already taking place then what is meant is persistence in that thing. You are a believer, but you are required to persist with your faith into the future.

When The True Lord gives His Prophet this command it is only to reassure him that if he is rejected or shown hostility or harmed with all kinds of harm and ridicule he must not grieve or be concerned, because Allah Glorified is He is by his side, helping him and supporting him. Whatever humanity may do, they will never prevent his call from being implemented.

It is Allah’s standard practice with regards to the Messengers peace be upon them that He give them victory: ‘Our word has already been given to Our servants the messengers: * it is they who will be helped,* and the ones who support* Our cause will be the winners’ (as-Saffat: 171-173). This is why we said before that if you see an Islamic army being defeated, know that the conditions for being an army were not being fulfilled. Otherwise it would not have been defeated.

We provided an example of this from what happened to the Muslims on the day of Uhud when the command of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him was contravened and they were defeated even though he was amongst them. This is Allah’s standard practice, and you will never find any change in Allah’s standard practice. If they had been given victory after contravening, the commands of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him would have been taken lightly by them and they would have said to themselves: ‘We disobeyed him and we were still victorious.’

Thus, the defeat came to make them return to the right path and wake them up from their heedlessness with regards to obeying the command of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him.

He says: ‘...and ask forgiveness for your sins and for the sins of believing men and women...’ (Muhammad: 19). Does this mean that Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him has sins for which he must seek forgiveness?

This is a matter over which there has been much discussion. The meaning here: if your soul is inattentive, then you have sinned, so seek forgiveness, but not because it is an actual sin. His Lord is saying to him: ‘If there is any sin from you, seek forgiveness for it, and likewise seek forgiveness for the believing men and women.’

In another verse He says: ‘Truly We have opened up a path to clear triumph for you [Prophet], *so that Allah may forgive you your past and future sins…’ (al-Fath: 1-2). He mentioned sin with regards to Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him even though he is infallible. When the scholars looked into these kinds of verses they said: it is from the category of the good deeds of the pious al-abrar and is considered the evil deeds of those who draw near to Allah Glorified is He: al-muqarrabin.(1) It is known that those who draw near to Allah Glorified is He are at a degree of obedience and compliance to Allah Glorified is He which is higher than the degree of the pious because the pious are those who obey Allah Glorified is He, do good deeds and carry out His Commands.

As for those who draw near to Him, they are the ones who do more than that in order to draw near to Allah Glorified is He. Even in the customs of people the person who is close to you is the one who is truthful and sincere and stays with you and never leaves you, and they love you and fear for you.

The same goes for those who draw near to Allah Glorified is He. They are treated according to a law that is different to the law of the pious, and they have a different scale for good deeds and bad deeds that suits their degree of nearness to their Lord.

Imagine, for example, that you were sick and someone you knew came to visit you while you were sick, even if it was just once. What would you do? You would thank him and you would feel that he had performed his duty.

(1) Mentioned by Al-Qurtubi in his Tafsir in a number of places 1/309 11/255 and attributed to Al-Junayd may Allah rest his soul. As-Sakhawi mentioned in Al-Maqasid Al-Hasana 1/103 that it is from the speech of Abu Sa'id Al-Kharaz and he said: ‘It was related by Ibn Asakir in his biography.’ Al-'Ajluni mentioned something similar in Kashf al-Khafa' and similarly Al-Fitni in Tadhkira Al-Mawdu'at 1/188.

As for your close friend, if he visited you only once, like the other person, what would you do? You would rebuke him and censure him because you expect more than just one visit. This is what is meant by the good deeds of the pious and are considered the evil deeds of those who draw near to Allah Glorified is He.

Therefore, a good deed done by a normal person could be considered an evil deed if done by Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him. Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him is someone who draws near to Allah Glorified is He and the one who draws near has a different estimation. There is also a price for this nearness. It is as if Allah Glorified is He is saying to you: 'Maintain this degree of nearness to Me and beware of doing certain things, even if they are simple matters with regards to someone else.' This also may mean what Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him said: 'My community is excused for what they do by mistake, out of forgetfulness, or what they are forced to do.'(1) When he said: 'My community' it means that he is not included under this ruling. It is not permissible for him to forget as it is permissible for others, so forgetfulness with regards to him is considered a sin.

This is why, when Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him was praying a four-unit prayer and he concluded it after two units, one of his Companions, Dhu Al-Yadayn, said to him: 'Did you shorten the prayer or did you forget, O Messenger of Allah?' He said: 'That is not entirely what happened.' The Companion responded: 'But that is some of what happened.'(2) Look at the augustness of the Companion in asking, the augustness of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him in responding, and the greatness of the faith of the one who nurtured these people.

(1) The wording of the Hadith is: 'Indeed Allah Glorified is He overlooks what my community does by mistake, out of forgetfulness or what they are forced to do.' Narrated by Ibn Majah in his Sunnan 2033, the Hadith of Abu Dharr Al-Ghifari, 2035, the Hadith (Prophetic tradition) of Ibn Abbas, and also narrated by Al-Bayhaqi in his Sunnan Al-Kubra 6/84 from the Hadith of Ibn 'Umar with the wording 'my community is unburdened' and the rest of the Hadith is the same.

(2) Narrated by Malik in Al-Muwatta' 196,197, Abu Dawud in his Sunnan 585, An-Nasa'i in his Sunnan 1211 and 'Abd Ar-Razzaq in his Musannaf 3448 from Abu Hurayra peace be upon him who said: 'The Messenger of Allah, Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him prayed 'Asr and after two units, he concluded the prayer with the greetings of peace, so Dhu Al-Yadayn stood up and said: 'Did you shorten the prayer or did you forget, O Messenger of Allah Glorified is He?' The Messenger of Allah, Muhammad=

Therefore, it is possible for Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him to forget and forgetfulness to be considered a sin. Why? It is because he is a Messenger and the possessor of a message, and he is responsible for conveying it and the radiances of prophethood never leave him, so how can he forget? This is why, when one(1) of the common people asked a devout scholar who had secluded himself to be with Allah Glorified is He: 'What is the ruling for someone who forgets in prayer?' he said: 'For us or for you?' The man said: 'For us.' He said: 'Do a forgetfulness prostration.' The man said: 'and what about for you?' He replied: 'We kill such a person.'

We go far when the story of Adam's disobedience is known to everyone. The True Lord says regarding Adam peace be upon him: '... Adam disobeyed his Lord and was led astray...' (Ta Ha: 121). Adam's forgetfulness is called disobedience. Why?

Scholars said: it is because Allah Glorified is He created Adam peace be upon him directly by His hands and breathed into him from His spirit. Thus, Adam peace be upon him is distinguished amongst all other creatures by the advantage of the way of his creation that no one else has. As well, he was only given one commandment which was not to eat from the tree. So, the orders were not so many that he might forget some of them; indeed there was none but one command.

This is why forgetfulness in his case was a matter of disobedience because he is both a prophet and messenger and he is the father of mankind. Therefore, Adam's disobedience took place for a reason. He is the father of all people. There are two categories of people: infallible and the fallible. The infallible

---

= peace and blessings be upon him said: 'That is not entirely what happened.' The Companion responded: 'But some of that happened, O Messenger of Allah Glorified is He?' The Messenger of Allah, Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him thus faced the people and said: 'Is Dhu Al-Yadayn speaking the truth?' They said: 'Yes.' So, The Messenger of Allah Glorified is He stood and completed what was left of the prayer and then, after the greeting of peace, did two prostrations while sitting.

(1) The story of the layman who asked the worshiper about he who gets distracted in his prayer are the Messengers, and the fallible are the rest of creation. Thus, it is necessary for both categories to be embodied in Adam peace be upon him

When the True Lord Glorified is He addresses His Prophet Muhammad peace and blessing be upon him He says to him: '...ask forgiveness for thy sins...' (Muhammad: 19), i.e. from the forgetfulness that I have overlooked when anyone of your community does it, you must seek forgiveness for it because Allah Glorified is He does not forgive you in the same way that He forgives your community.

Then, we should examine the occurrences in the Noble Quran in which Allah Glorified is He blamed Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him. Read, for example: 'O Prophet! Why dost thou, out of a desire to please [one or another of] thy wives, impose [on thyself] a prohibition of something that Allah has made lawful to you?(1) But Allah is much-forgiving, a dispenser of grace' (at-Tahrim: 1). It is as though Allah Glorified is He says: it is not acceptable that you forbid for yourself something Allah had permitted for you just because one of your wives became angry about it; this was considered a sin.

Likewise, when he permitted some of the Companions to stay behind at their houses instead of fight, Allah Glorified is He blamed him: 'May Allah pardon thee [O Prophet]! Why didst thou grant them permission [to stay at home] ere it had become obvious to thee as to who was speaking the truth, and [ere] thou came to know [who were] the liars?' (at-Tawba: 43) Therefore, His Lord blamed him for this, but He began by pardoning him.

(1) There are different positions regarding the reason for revelation behind the beginning of this chapter. It has been said that it was revealed regarding Mariya and The Messenger of God had made her forbidden for himself. Ibn Jarir At-Tabari narrates that The Messenger of God slept with Mariya (the mother of his son Ibrahim) in the house of one of his wives (one narration states that it was Hafsa's house) and she said: 'What O Messenger of God? In my house and on my bed? Thus, he made her impermissible for himself, so she said: 'O Messenger of God, How can you make the permissible impermissible for yourself?' Then, he swore to God that he would not sleep with her and so God sent down: 'O Prophet! Why dost thou, out of a desire to please [one or another of] thy wives, impose [on thyself] a prohibition of something that God has made lawful to thee?...' (at-Tahrim: 1) Ibn Kathir said in his Tafsir (4/387): The correct opinion is that he forbade honey for himself. He was drinking honey with Zaynab bint Jahsh and then 'A'isha and Hafsa Allah be pleased with them agreed to say to him: 'You have eaten maghafir (i.e. honey)' and he replied: 'I will never go back to it' and then the verse was sent down.

Then, there is the fact that a messenger represents two aspects: the aspect of humanity and the aspect of the Prophet's Mission. Adam peace be upon him disobeyed out of his humanity; the proof is the Quran verse: '…And [thus] did Adam disobey his Lord, and thus did he fall into grievous error [121] thereafter, [however,] his Lord elected him [for His grace], and accepted his repentance, and bestowed His guidance upon him [122]' (Ta Ha: 121-122). Thus, the Prophet's Mission was not granted to him until after he had gone through this experience, and had behaved humanly. Then, Allah Glorified is He chose him to be a Messenger.

When we reflect on the issues for which Allah blamed Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him we find that they are general matters for which there were no divine orders or religious rulings that the Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him contravened. He exercised his own judgement using his independent reasoning as a human being, and according to the situation at hand.

For example, in the story of ‘Abdullah ibn Umm Maktum(1) may Allah be pleased with him in which Allah Glorified is He blamed Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him because of this Companion. Allah Glorified is He said: 'He frowned and turned away [1] because the blind man approached him! [2]' (‘Abasa: 1-2) This blame is not an objection to what Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him did, but rather a show of mercy and compassion towards him.

It is because the Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him left ʿAbdullah, who was a believer and had come to him to ask about a religious ruling, turning away from him in order to focus on the notables from amongst the disbelievers. Humanly thinking, Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him was very keen to guide these people. As for ʿAbdullah may Allah be pleased with him he was of course a believer then.

(1) He is ʿAmr ibn Qays ibn Zaʾida ibn Al-Asam, a courageous Companion who was blind. He embraced Islam in Mecca and immigrated to Medina after the battle of Badr. He would give the call to prayer on behalf of God’s Messenger peace and blessing be upon him in Medina along with Bilal. Also, The Prophet would appoint him, in general, as his deputy in charge of Medina and he would lead the people in prayer while the Prophet was engaged in raids. He was present at the war of Al-Qadisiyya and he fought while being blind. Afterwards, he returned to Medina and died there in the year of 23, just before the death of ʿUmar ibn Al-Khattab. (Al-ʿAlam, Az-Zirkili (5/83)

Therefore, the Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him was hard on himself for the sake of his mission. Then, read until the end of the story: 'Yet for all thou didst know, [O Muhammad,] he might perhaps have grown in "purity," [3] or have been reminded [of the truth], and helped by this reminder. [4] Now as for him who believes himself to be self-sufficient [5] to him didst thou give thy whole attention, [6] although thou art not accountable for his failure to attain to purity; [7] "but as for him who came unto thee full of eagerness [8] and in awe [of Allah] – [9] him didst thou disregard! [10]' ('Abasa: 3-10)

It is as if the True Lord Glorified is He is saying to His Prophet: 'O Muhammad! It is not your task to make these people believe. Your job is only to indicate and to show them; '...thy duty is no more than to deliver the message...' (Al-'Imran: 20). Also, Allah Glorified is He addressed him in another verse, saying: 'Wouldst thou, perhaps, torment thyself to death [with grief] because they [who live around thee] refuse to believe [in it]?' (ash-Shu'ara': 3)

As well, in the chapter of al-Kahf: 'But wouldst thou, perhaps, torment thyself to death with grief over them if they are not willing to believe in this message?' (al-Kahf: 6) That is, you only have to convey the message. As for the matter of faith, I want them to be believers fully convinced in their own minds, not their outward forms; that is to enter into faith voluntarily and not by force.

In this regard, Allah Glorified is He said: 'had We so willed, We could have sent down unto them a message from the skies, so that their necks would [be forced to] bow down before it in humility,' (ash-Shu'ara': 4); i.e. We could force them to have faith.

'For Allah knows all your comings and goings as well as your abiding [at rest]. (Muhammad: 19) The meaning of '...your comings and goings...' (Muhammad: 19) is your going out to work and striving all over the vast earth, seeking sustenance. The meaning of '...as well as your abiding [at rest]' (Muhammad: 19), is your return to your homes and seeking rest in your beds at night.

The meaning is that Allah Glorified is He knows all of your states and nothing about you is hidden from him. Previously, we talked about the virtue of striving throughout the earth and extracting its treasures; when you stay in your own environment, you only take the treasures that are there. But, when you travel throughout the earth, you find other kinds of treasures.

The Creator Glorified is He has distributed treasures all over the earth, and every land has a share of wealth and resources. The desert has certain resource and farmland has other kind of resources. There is no land that is poor while another is rich. If you were to take a longitudinal segment of the earth's sphere, you would find that it contains just as many treasures as all the other segments.

We used to think that the bleak desert has no goodness in it. Now, it is a source of abundant sustenance for its owners who had lived a long life of hardship previously.

This is why, Allah Glorified is He says: 'Say: "Go all over the earth and behold...' (an-Naml: 69), and He said: 'Say: "Go all over the earth, and behold...' (al-An'am: 11); i.e. reflect on the signs and lessons therein. Man travels and moves either as a tourist or to seek sustenance. In both cases, he should not be heedless of considering and examining the signs of the universe. In another verse, Allah Glorified is He said: '... "Was, then, Allah's earth not wide enough for you to forsake the domain of evil?"' (an-Nisa': 97)

The word At-taqallub ('...your comings and goings...') can be understood as to leave the place that you normally reside in and go to a place that you do not normally reside in. This requires financial capacity, companionship, and strength. Therefore, Allah Glorified is He said: 'Or that He will not take them to task [suddenly] in the midst of their comings and goings, without their being able to elude, [Him]' (an-Nahl: 46).

Therefore, coming and going is an evidence of strength; a rich man is the one who travels every day to different places and he comes and goes throughout the earth. As for the poor person, he stays in his place and never leaves it

وَيَقُولُ ٱلَّذِينَ ءَامَنُوا۟ لَوْلَا نُزِّلَتْ سُورَةٌ ۖ فَإِذَآ أُنزِلَتْ سُورَةٌ مُّحْكَمَةٌ
وَذُكِرَ فِيهَا ٱلْقِتَالُ ۙ رَأَيْتَ ٱلَّذِينَ فِى قُلُوبِهِم مَّرَضٌ يَنظُرُونَ إِلَيْكَ
نَظَرَ ٱلْمَغْشِىِّ عَلَيْهِ مِنَ ٱلْمَوْتِ ۖ فَأَوْلَىٰ لَهُمْ ﴿٢٠﴾

Those who believe ask why no sura [about fighting] has been sent down. Yet when a decisive sura [that mentions fighting] is sent down, you can see the sick at heart looking at you [Prophet] and visibly fainting at the prospect of death – better for them [20] (The Quran, Muhammad: 20)

Regarding the phrase: 'Would that a revelation [allowing us to fight] was bestowed from on high,' (Muhammad: 20) when you hear the conditional particle 'law' (if, would that, etc.), it is as if it is a wish that something would happen. They wish that the Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him would receive a revelation from on high commanding them to fight. A revelation had already been sent down but it commanded them to be patient and to bear with adversity and not to stand up to their enemies.

However, everything has its proper time. This means that the believers' activity and movement have become regulated with the commands of the True Lord. The stubbornness of the disbelievers and their standing in the way of the Prophetic Message does not mean that we will automatically attack them and fight them. Rather, we wait for the higher command.

'...But now that a revelation clear in and by itself, mentioning war, has been bestowed from on high...' (Muhammad: 20) which you want, '...thou canst see those in whose hearts is disease...' (Muhammad: 20); i.e. the hypocrites '...looking at thee, [O Muhammad,] with the look of one who is about to faint for fear of death!' (Muhammad: 20) This simile of someone who looks like they are about to faint out of fear of death means that they are unconscious out of fear and alarm.

It is easy for the hypocrite to go to the mosque and pray with the congregation, and indeed stand in the front row. However, when it comes to fighting, the matter is different, and the hypocrisy that was hidden is now exposed.

'...But now that a revelation clear in and by itself...' (Muhammad: 20); i.e. clearly showing the intended meaning; '...thou canst see those in whose hearts is disease looking at thee, [O Muhammad,] with the look of one who is about to faint for fear of death' (Muhammad: 20). Censuring himself, a hypocrite person says to himself: ‘Death is approaching, O you who has left off prayer! Shall I go out to fight and waste myself?’

'...And yet, far better for them would be,' (Muhammad: 20) to obey the command and go out to fight. The scholars have explained this verse and said that, '...And yet, far better for them would be' (Muhammad: 20) means ruin for them; and this is a threat if they do not abandon their hypocrisy.

طَاعَةٞ وَقَوۡلٞ مَّعۡرُوفٞۚ فَإِذَا عَزَمَ ٱلۡأَمۡرُ فَلَوۡ صَدَقُواْ ٱللَّهَ لَكَانَ خَيۡرٗا لَّهُمۡ ٢١ would be obedience and fitting words; it would also be better for them to be true to God when the decision to fight has been made [21] (The Quran, Muhammad: 21)

The word: 'obedience...' (Muhammad: 21) coming after '...And yet, far better for them would be,' (Muhammad: 20) makes us turn away from affirming ruin for them and instead we say: their obedience to Allah’s Command and their saying a word that could win His approval is better than their current position and better than their hypocrisy.

'For, since the matter has been resolved [by His revelation]...' (Muhammad: 21), i.e. has been determined and set to action, as Allah Glorified is He said: '...then, when thou hast decided upon a course of action, place thy trust in Allah...' (Al-‘Imran: 159). The Arabic verse is in active voice making the word 'matter' the subject of the sentence, literally saying 'since the matter resolved itself.' Therefore the Sheikh asked the following question. However, is it the matter that makes the resolution or a person?

Therefore, there is hyperbole which personifies the matter and makes it resolve, determine, and set itself to action. This is because the discussion here is about fighting, and fighting is the most difficult thing that a person can bear because it means that either one will be martyred or one will be given victory over the enemy.

'Say: "Are you, perchance, hopefully waiting for something [bad] to happen to us – [the while nothing can happen to us] save one of the two best things?

But as far as you are concerned, we are hopefully waiting for Allah to inflict chastisement upon you, [either] from Himself or by our hands! Wait, then, hopefully; behold, we shall hopefully wait with you!'" (at-Tawba: 52)

Therefore, saying: '...for, since the matter has been resolved [by His revelation]...' (Muhammad: 21), is a more eloquent way of expressing the meaning than saying: you were resolved upon the matter. Thus, it is as if the matter itself urges you, and the matter only urges you because there is much goodness in it for you. Is there anything better than being martyred for Allah's sake?

The story of Mukhayriq (1) the Jew may Allah be pleased with him is well known. After declaring his conversion to Islam, he was called to fight and so he went out and fought until he was killed. He entered paradise without even praying a single unit of prayer.

This is why Prophet Muhammad peace and blessing be upon him said about him: 'Mukhayriq is the best of the Jews.'(2) Thus, it is true that if you are eager for death, you will be given the life, the eternal life with Allah Glorified is He in paradise.

Allah's statement: '...it would be but for their own good to remain true to Allah' (Muhammad: 21) means if they believed Allah Glorified is He with regards to His commands and His system, it would be better for them. The Good in this context is the freedom of fire after death. When a believer sacrifices himself for Allah's sake, Allah Glorified is He grants him the eternal life in the paradise.

(1) He is Mukhayriq An-Nadir from Bani An-Nadir, a Companion, a wealthy Jew and one of their scholars. He embraced Islam and bequeathed his wealth to the Prophet peace and blessing be upon him. He was martyred at Uhud and died in the year 3 A.H. [Al-ʿAlam Az-Zirikli (7/194)]. He said: 'If I die then my wealth is for Muhammad and he can do with it whatever God shows him.' He had seven gardens in the neighborhood of Banu An- Nadir and they were the first endowment property in Islam.

(2) Mentioned by Al-Muttaqi Al-Hindi in Kanz Al-ʿAmal (46154), which is that God's Messenger said it after Mukhayriq had been martyred in the Battle of Uhud, and this was also mentioned by As-Suhayli in Ar-Rawd Al-Anf (2/375), Ibn Hisham in As-Sira An-Nabawiyya (2/88), Ibn Saʿd in At-Tabaqat Al-kubra (1/501) and Ibn Kathir in Al-Bidaya wa An-Nihaya (3/291)

فَهَلۡ عَسَيۡتُمۡ إِن تَوَلَّيۡتُمۡ أَن تُفۡسِدُواْ فِي ٱلۡأَرۡضِ وَتُقَطِّعُوٓاْ أَرۡحَامَكُمۡ ﴿٢٢﴾
أُوْلَٰٓئِكَ ٱلَّذِينَ لَعَنَهُمُ ٱللَّهُ فَأَصَمَّهُمۡ وَأَعۡمَىٰٓ أَبۡصَٰرَهُمۡ ﴿٢٣﴾

‘If you turn away now, could it be that you will go on to spread corruption all over the land and break your ties of kinship?’ [22] These are the ones God has rejected, making their ears deaf and their eyes blind [23] (The Quran, Muhammad: 22-23)

This is a yes/no question from Allah Glorified is He using the particle 'hal' (would), and there is also an expression of hope from Allah Glorified is He using the word ʿasa ('...perchance...'). Allah Glorified is He does not ask a question in order to know something, but rather, He asks in order to affirm an actual fact.

The word ʿasa is a verb that indicates hope and it is followed by the thing for which is hoped. Possible hope is for something that is loved and expected to happen. It is different from the impossible wish which is for something loved but impossible to be realised such as the statement of the poet:

If only youth would return one day
For I would inform it of what old age has done

As for hope, you say: ‘Perchance, if you study, you will pass.’, but hope differs according to who is speaking and to who is being spoken. When I say to you: ‘Go to so-and-so and he will perchance fulfil your need’, or ‘Perchance I will do something for you,’ this hope is dependent on human beings. When a hope is attributed to Allah Glorified is He it is more possible; for example, you say: ‘Perchance Allah will forgive me.’

His statement: '[Ask them:] "Would you, perchance, after having turned away [from Allah’s Commandment, prefer to revert to your old ways, and] spread corruption on earth, and [once again] cut asunder your ties of kinship?' (Muhammad: 22) means perhaps if you abandon faith, you will do such and such. Therefore, keep clinging to faith and obedience and do not approach sins and disobedience.

'After having turned away [from Allah’s Commandment, prefer to revert to your old ways, and]...' (Muhammad: 22), i.e. turned away from faith, or (if we considered the meaning according to another form of the Arabic verb

'Tawalaitum') it can mean that if you take on some of the positions of leadership, for example presidency, they may cause you some troubles.

'Spread corruption on earth...' (Muhammad: 22), i.e. cause harm to the entire creation, '...and [once again] cut asunder your ties of kinship' (Muhammad: 22). Even your relatives and ties of kinship will be affected which means that your corruption transgresses against all people, including relatives and family members.

Or we say that, '[Ask them:] "Would you, perchance...' (Muhammad: 22) means: what is it that made you turn away from the truth that Muhammad has brought? Why do you put obstacles in his path? The first of these obstacles is that you mock him, and you falsely describe him as being sorcerer, soothsayer, poet, and liar.

Then, you caused him harm by insulting him personally, as well as his family and Companions. Indeed, you plotted to kill him. What made you do such a thing? Did you think and hope that if you did that, you would be free to corrupt in the earth and cut ties of kinship?

The True Lord Glorified is He wants to teach us that the Messengers do not interfere and the heavens do not bring a new system unless corruption has spread throughout the entire society. Corruption has stages. The first of them is the corruption of the soul. This type of corruption has a deterrent in the form of the reproachful self (an-nafs al-lawama) which is a power of resistance within the human soul that takes it back to righteousness and makes its behaviour upright.

If the soul has become corrupt and the role of the reproachful self has vanished, the role of deterring then comes from the society by enjoining that which is right and forbidding that which is wrong. When there is no deterrent from society and corruption has spread amongst everyone, it is at this point that the heavens intervene with a new Messenger who brings a miracle in order to convince mankind so that they believe in what he has brought.

When you avoid and turn away from the Prophetic Message and place barriers in its way, it seems that you expect to remain in the corruption that you caused to grow in the earth generally, or keep cutting the ties of kinship!

On the contrary, you are destroying yourselves. Have you not seen what happened to your ancestors? Where did they go? Indeed your outcome is like their outcome, so be warned. 'Are they [who are lost in sin] but waiting for the Last Hour – [waiting] that it come upon them of a sudden, without their being aware [of its approach]?' (az-Zukhruf: 66)

And He said: 'And ere that suffering comes upon you of a sudden, without your being aware [of its approach "follow the most goodly [teaching] that has been revealed unto you by your Lord," [55] lest any human being should say [on Judgment Day], "Alas for me for having been remiss in what is due to Allah, and for having been indeed one of those who scoffed [at the truth]! [56] or lest he should say, "If Allah had but guided me, I would surely have been among those who are conscious of Him!" [57] or lest he should say, when he becomes aware of the suffering [that awaits him], "Would that I had a second chance [in life] so that I could be among the doers of good!" [58]' (az-Zumar: 55-58) Therefore, why do you not act in consideration of this day?

Those who spread corruption think that it will benefit them, but spreading corruption in the world harms everyone. Those who plunder the wealth of people will eventually encounter someone who will be stronger than them and will plunder their wealth. Therefore, you are not safe from being affected by corruption and being burned by its fire because society is one vessel that comprises everyone.

Furthermore, established values are not disagreed over. Goodness is goodness, even according to the people of evil. The proof for this is that when there is a group of bad people, and one of them wants to marry the sister of the other, the latter says to the former: 'No, I will not marry my sister to you (anyone but you, you sinful person.) Therefore, values are values. The liar respects the truthful person, and the deviant respects the upright, etc.

Therefore, The True Lord Glorified is He is telling them: 'Do not sow corruption in the earth, and be keen to put an end to corruption in your society. If you have the power with which to impose corruption now upon people, then there will come someone more powerful than you, and they will impose the same or even worse case on you.'

The phrase: '…after having turned away…' (Muhammad: 22) means being heedless which indicates that they heard some speech that did not please them, If it had pleased them, they would have be attentive to it would not have avoided it. However, how can this be the case while they want corruption that fulfils their desires? Thus, corruption is preceded by turning away from and neglecting the good.

This is why Allah Glorified is He says: 'Hast thou considered whether he may [not] be giving the lie to the truth and turning his back [upon it]?' (al-'Alaq: 13) You (the disbeliever) 'gave the lie to the truth' because the speech did not correspond with your passions not because it did not correspond with reality. Therefore, you are mistaken in this matter and in your denial. Then another mistake emerged from this mistake; it is that you turned away and you thought and expected that you would continue to sow corruption in the earth and cut off the ties of kinship.

Sowing corruption in the earth means to make that which is proper improper. The Creator Glorified is He created the universe in a state of absolute properness before He created man. Therefore, you should increase usability of the universe through your ambition for advancement. Or, you should facilitate usability of the universe for other people. If you will not increase usability of the universe, then the least you can do is to leave it as usable as it is and do not corrupt it.

This is why we have seen that the imperfections of society have emerged with the emergence of corruption in the earth, along with pollutants in the environment that corrupt the water, air, food and everything else; '[Since they have become oblivious of Allah,] corruption has appeared on land and in the sea as an outcome of what men's hands have wrought…' (ar-Rum: 41).

When The True Lord Glorified is He warns us against sowing corruption in the earth, He only wants us to have a balance of goodness throughout society and for everyone to share in it.

Afterwards, He said: '…and [once again] cut asunder your ties of kinship' (Muhammad: 22) because sowing corruption in the universe afflicts all mankind, relatives and non-relatives; He mentioned relatives in particular because they take priority when it comes to doing goodness and charity, not cutting off ties and abandoning. Relatives are either males or females; males have stamina while women are weak and need help. This is why cutting ties of kinship with them is more severe and oppressive in Allah’s sight. Therefore; society reaches the peak of corruption when corruption reaches the stage of neglecting and insulting women even though they are from your family. When you see a woman who is helpless, or she is being oppressed or she has been made to fend for herself and earn her livelihood, then know that there are imbalances in the family, and that the man in the family is not doing his job, or say that he does not have any chivalry or sense of honour because he has left his wife to suffer and he has not satisfied her basic needs. But when does a woman go out to work, and how does she go out?

We find the answer in the story of Musa (Moses) with the two daughters of Shu’aib (Jethro) peace be upon them. Read: 'Now when he arrived at the wells of Midyan, he found there a large group of men who were watering [their herds and flocks]; and at some distance from them he came upon two women who were keeping back their flock. He asked [them]: “What is the matter with you?” They answered: "We cannot water [our animals] until the herdsmen drive [theirs] home – for [we are weak and] our father is a very old man' (al-Qasas: 23).

Therefore, the rationale behind them going out was that their father, Shu’aib (Jethro) peace be upon him was an old man who was incapable of carrying out this task. Then when circumstances had compelled them to go out, they did not abandon dignity and decency, and they did not mix with men. ‘We cannot water [our animals] until the herdsmen drive [theirs] home…' (al-Qasas: 23). That is when the men have left.

Then the practical role of faith takes place into society: 'So he watered [their flock] for them...' (al-Qasas: 24). There must be this model of gallantry in society, and manliness must also play a part. I have mentioned (1) to you the incident when I travelled to Saudi Arabia in the year 1950 and I took a car to get to the college. Suddenly, the driver got out and he took a wooden board that had dough on it from in front of one of the houses. So, I asked him: ‘Why did you take it when the door is closed?’ He said: ‘this dough means that the owner of the house is not in, and whoever sees it has to take it, bake it and then put it back.'

(1) The story of the friend of Sheikh Ash-Shʿrawi with the dough board in Mecca

His statement 'It is such as these…' (Muhammad: 23) means those who are pleased with turning away from and avoiding the call of truth and denying the caller in order to sow corruption in the earth and cut off the ties of kinship ‘Whom Allah curses…' (Muhammad: 23), i.e. whom He banishes them from His mercy and places them far away from his pleasure. Those whom Allah Glorified is He curses are also cursed by the angels, and the cursers curse them in every time and place, and they are cursed by everyone who suffers from their corruption ‘And whom He makes deaf [to the voice of truth], and whose eyes He blinds [to its sight]!' (Muhammad: 23) This is the normal consequence for whomever Allah Glorified is He has cursed. He deafens their ears blocking them from hearing the truth and he blinds their eyes from seeing the signs, and thus they do not ponder over them.

Therefore, they can hear and see, but they only hear evil and they only see falsehood. Allah Glorified is He has indeed veiled them from goodness and opened upon them the door of every evil as a meet requital because they closed their hearts against the truth and they preferred falsehood; indeed, Allah Glorified is He helped them with it and facilitated it for them!

أَفَلَا يَتَدَبَّرُونَ ٱلْقُرْءَانَ أَمْ عَلَىٰ قُلُوبٍ أَقْفَالُهَآ ﴿٢٤﴾

Will they not contemplate the Quran? Do they have locks on their hearts? [24] (The Quran, Muhammad: 24)

His statement 'Will they not, then…' (Muhammad: 24) is a question that encourages and urges pondering; '…ponder over…' (Muhammad: 24), i.e. reflect on and consider the meaning, signs and miracles of '…this Quran' (Muhammad: 24). It is Allah’s Speech that was sent down to the heart of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him and which presents Allah's System to mankind. It is also a miracle that proves the veracity of the Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him.

To ponder over it, means to reflect deeply on it such that we do not stop at the outside of the verses and only look at them superficially. Rather, we must plunge into their depths, reflect on their data, and search for their secrets, as the Noble Quran contains treasures and every day we discover a new one.

It contains a clarification of everything, and from it
I take everything, as much as my mind can take

His question '…or are there locks upon their hearts?' (Muhammad: 24) means they do not ponder over the Noble Quran but instead their hearts are locked and thus they do not understand or reflect it. There are padlocks on their hearts that prevent them from interacting with and being affected by Allah’s Speech. Allah Glorified is He has no need of the believers’ faith and He has no need of the obedience of the obedient, as Allah Glorified is He is not benefitted by obedience and He is not harmed by disobedience. Indeed, He had the attributes of absolute perfection before He created this creation.

It is with His attributes of perfection that He created the creatures, and with His attributes of perfection He nurtured and provided sustenance to them. With His self-sustainment, He made His blessings towards His creation endless, even towards the disbelievers amongst them.

You remember the story(1) of Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon him when a guest came and knocked on his door because he needed something. Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon him went and asked him, first of all, about his religion. The man said: ‘I am a Magian’, so he closed the door against his face.

When the man had left, Allah Glorified is He blamed His Prophet Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon him for what he had done to the man and he said to him: ‘Do you want, for the sake of some comfort at night, this man to change his religion while I accommodate him throughout his life even though He does not believe in Me?’ Thus, Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon him went out and followed the man until he caught up with him and then said to him: ‘Come, for my Lord has blamed me for how I treated you.’ The man responded: ‘It is a good Lord who censures His Prophets with regards to His enemies’, and then he testified that there is no God but Allah.

Therefore, the general mercy in this life and blessings of the True Lord Glorified is He being the Lord of all beings, accommodates the whole creation.

(1) The story of Abraham peace be upon him and his guest, the fire worshiper

But the specific major mercy and the special divine gifts are designated for those who believe in Him.

إِنَّ ٱلَّذِينَ ٱرۡتَدُّواْ عَلَىٰٓ أَدۡبَٰرِهِم مِّنۢ بَعۡدِ مَا تَبَيَّنَ لَهُمُ ٱلۡهُدَى ٱلشَّيۡطَٰنُ سَوَّلَ
لَهُمۡ وَأَمۡلَىٰ لَهُمۡ ﴿٢٥﴾ ذَٰلِكَ بِأَنَّهُمۡ قَالُواْ لِلَّذِينَ كَرِهُواْ مَا نَزَّلَ ٱللَّهُ
سَنُطِيعُكُمۡ فِي بَعۡضِ ٱلۡأَمۡرِۖ وَٱللَّهُ يَعۡلَمُ إِسۡرَارَهُمۡ ﴿٢٦﴾

Those who turn on their heels after being shown guidance are duped and tempted by Satan [25] they say to those who hate what God has sent down, 'We will obey you in some matters' — God knows their secret schemes [26]
(The Quran, Muhammad: 25 - 26)

These verses are speaking about the hypocrites. We have explained that hypocrisy did not emerge in Mecca despite its hostility to the religion. However, it emerged in Medina which embraced Islam and spread it throughout the entire world. The reason for this is that no one acts hypocritically towards a weak person. People only act hypocritically towards a strong person. So, when the Muslims became strong in Medina, some disbelievers concealed themselves in hypocrisy amongst the Muslim community.

Allah Glorified is He says about them: 'Verily, those who turn their backs [on this message]…' (Muhammad: 25); that is they were only believers by their tongues, but their hearts did not believe. '…after guidance has been vouchsafed to them…' (Muhammad: 25). Indeed, the truth, guidance and straight path that Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him had brought were clearly seen in front of them.

'Do it because] Satan has embellished their fancies…' (Muhammad: 25) means that Satan has influenced them and made their view of deviating away from the truth seem goodly; the meaning of the verb 'sawwala' ('…embellished…') is to whisper, as Allah Glorified is He quotes him: '[Whereupon Iblis] said: "Now that Thou hast thwarted me I shall most certainly lie in ambush for them all along Thy straight way' (al-A'raf: 16).He also said: '[Whereupon Iblis] said: "Then [I swear] by Thy very might: I shall most certainly beguile them all into grievous error' (Sad: 82). Then, he sticks to his limits, saying: '[all] save such of them as are truly Thy servants!' (Sad: 83) This is so he has no control over these people and he has no means of getting through to them.

It is amazing that Iblis (Satan) reveals his plans to lead people astray; he says: '…I shall most certainly lie in ambush for them all along Thy straight way' (al-A'raf: 16), i.e. on the path of obedience in order to corrupt it for you. This is why we said that Satan attends the mosque and he does not attend the tavern.

As well, He said: 'and shall most certainly fall upon them openly as well as in a manner beyond their ken, and from their right and from their left…' (al-A'raf: 17), from every direction, in any form and from any point in which he finds some weakness of yours, Thus, he will attack you through the gate of wealth and love of possession, or through the gate of women, or the gate of fame and love of being seen, and so forth. This is because every human being has a 'key', a vulnerability through which Satan attacks him.

It is from Allah's mercy that He has taught us how to protect ourselves against Satan. Allah Glorified is He has said: 'And if it should happen that a prompting from Satan stirs thee up [to blind anger], seek refuge with Allah…' (al-A'raf: 200) because you are not able to ward him off yourself, so seek help from the One Who created him. If you seek refuge in Allah Glorified is He against Satan, he withdraws and shrinks. This is why Allah Glorified is He called him the whispering, elusive tempter.

If you try to ward him off by yourself, then the battle between the two of you will be a long one because he is stronger than you are and he has a lot of experience in misguiding and leading astray using various means against you. He wraps the ropes around you in such a way that you do not realise until he makes you fall into one of his traps.

However, it is from Satan's stupidity that he discloses to us his plans to lead people astray because a one who makes a trap for you does not disclose it. However, Satan does so in order for the proof to be established against everyone who obeys him and listens to him. This is why he will say afterwards: '…Yet I had no power at all over you: I but called you – and you responded unto me. Hence, blame not me, but blame yourselves. It is not for me to respond to your cries, nor for you to respond to mine…' (Ibrahim: 22).

Man is able to identify the source of the whispering whether it is from his soul or from Satan? Satan wants you to be disobedient in any way, shape or form. Thus, if he is unsuccessful with you when using the gate of wealth he will attack to you from the gate of fame; if he still is not successful, he will come to you from the gate of women, and so on until he traps you. As for the soul, it has its own specific desire that it concentrates on and urges you to fulfil.

Then, you notice that Satan, as he said, comes to you from every direction except for two; above and below. Why? Scholars said that is because these two directions represent the relationship between the slave and his Lord. The loftiness of Divinity appears when a believer looks upwards and the humility of slavery to Allah Glorified is He appears when he prostrates and places his forehead on the ground, acknowledging his slavery to his Lord. This is why Satan does not come from these two directions.

Allah's statement: '…and filled them with false hopes,' (Muhammad: 25) means that Allah Glorified is He gives them time and prolongs their hopes for them so that they would persist in their misguidance and stick to their desires. '[They do turn their backs on it] inasmuch as they are wont to say unto those who abhor all that Allah has revealed…' (Muhammad: 26). These are the two Jew tribes: Banu An-Nadir and Banu Qurayzha. '…"We will comply with your views on some points."…' (Muhammad: 26), i.e. we will assist you and support you in some matters which place obstacles in the path of Muhammad's Message.

In another verse, the True Lord Glorified is He explained the meaning of the phrase ('…some points…'); He said: 'Art thou not aware of how those who would always dissemble [their real feelings] speak to their truth-denying brethren from among the followers of earlier revelation: "If you are driven away, we shall most certainly go forth with you, and shall never pay heed to anyone against you; and if war is waged against you, we shall most certainly come to your succour." But Allah bears witness that they are most flagrantly lying: [11] [for] if those [to whom they have pledged themselves] are indeed driven away, they will not go forth with them; and if war is waged against them, they will not come to their succour; and even if they [try to] succour them, they will most certainly turn their backs [in flight], and in the end will [themselves] find no succour [12]' (al-Hashr: 11-12).

'But Allah knows their secret thoughts' (Muhammad: 26), i.e. their secret and hidden plotting against Islam; but as long as Allah Glorified is He knows about it, He will make it come to nothing.

How will they feel when the angels take them in death and beat their faces and their backs [27]
(The Quran, Muhammad: 27)

This means: what will their state be when they are doing this? What will they do when the angels come to gather them in death striking their faces and their backs? What will they do in this situation? Are they able to defend themselves? Therefore, why do they stubbornly resist? Why do they stand in the way of the Prophetic Message and conspire against it? It would have been better for them to support it because they practised things that incurred God's wrath, and disdained to please Him? He makes their deeds go to waste [28] (The Quran, Muhammad: 28)

ذَٰلِكَ بِأَنَّهُمُ ٱتَّبَعُواْ مَآ أَسۡخَطَ ٱللَّهَ وَكَرِهُواْ
رِضۡوَٰنَهُۥ فَأَحۡبَطَ أَعۡمَٰلَهُمۡ ٢٨

His statement: 'This…' (Muhammad: 28) is a demonstrative pronoun that refers to their evil end, which includes the angels striking their faces and backs. Why? '…because they were wont to pursue what Allah condemns…' (Muhammad: 28); they followed falsehood which befalls Allah's Wrath upon them, and more besides '…and to hate [whatever would meet with] His goodly acceptance…' (Muhammad: 28); they hated the truth that leads to Allah's Goodly Acceptance '…and so He has caused all their [good] deeds to come to nought' (Muhammad: 28); He makes them come to nothing and to be of no benefit.

Did they have deeds that merited reward and Allah Glorified is He made them come to nothing? Scholars said: yes. They would honour guests and help those in trouble, and other, similar good deeds. However, they did acts of goodness seeking results other than the pleasure of Allah Glorified is He. They did it for fame and reputation, and so that people would talk about them. So, let them take their reward from those whom they acted for their sake since they have no share in the reward of the Hereafter.

Allah Glorified is He said: 'for We shall have turned towards all the [supposedly good] deeds they ever wrought, and shall have transformed them into scattered dust' (al-Furqan: 23) and He said: '[This, then, is] the parable of those who are bent on denying their Lord: all their works are as ashes which the wind blows about fiercely on a stormy day: [in the life to come,] they cannot achieve any benefit whatever from all [the good] that they may have wrought…' (Ibrahim: 18).

أَمۡ حَسِبَ ٱلَّذِينَ فِي قُلُوبِهِم مَّرَضٌ أَن لَّن يُخۡرِجَ ٱللَّهُ أَضۡغَٰنَهُمۡ ٢٩

Do the corrupt at heart assume that God will not expose their malice? [29] (The Quran, Muhammad: 29)

That is, do these people who have '…disease…' (Muhammad: 29), i.e. hypocrisy think '...that Allah would never bring their moral failings to light' (Muhammad: 29) that is manifesting their resentment and exposes their secrets? Indeed, Allah Glorified is He is able to do such a thing as He exposed them to His Messenger and showed them to him and He laid bare their hidden resentment. This is why He said in the following verse:

وَلَوۡ نَشَآءُ لَأَرَيۡنَٰكَهُمۡ فَلَعَرَفۡتَهُم بِسِيمَٰهُمۡۚ وَلَتَعۡرِفَنَّهُمۡ
فِي لَحۡنِ ٱلۡقَوۡلِۚ وَٱللَّهُ يَعۡلَمُ أَعۡمَٰلَكُمۡ ٣٠

We could even point them out to you [Prophet] if We wished, and then you could identify them by their marks, but you will know them anyway by the tone of their speech. God knows everything you [people] do [30] (The Quran, Muhammad: 30)

Deeds include statements and actions. It is not difficult for an intelligent person to identify a hypocrite from the looks of his face and outward appearance. A liar has characteristics that distinguish him and the truthful person has a shining face that indicates his veracity, and so forth.

His statement: '…by the tone of their voice…' (Muhammad: 30) means: in the slips of the tongue, or in twisting expressions and playing with them. For example, the Jews said to Prophet Muhammad peace and blessing be upon him: 'As-sam ʿalaykum (death be upon you) twisting the greeting: As-salam ʿalaykum, Oh Muhammad!' Then ʿAʾisha may Allah be pleased with her became aware of this and responded to them with what they deserve.(1) Therefore, the poet from the pre-Islamic era said:

Whenever someone has some trait
And they think of hiding it from people, it becomes known

Indeed Allah Glorified is He exposed them in His statement: 'And among those [enemies of the truth] there are such as malign the Prophet by saying, "He is all ear." Say: "[Yes,] he is all ear, [listening] to what is good for you! He believes in Allah, and trusts the believers, and is [a manifestation of Allah's] grace towards such of you as have [truly] attained to faith. And as for those who malign Allah's Apostle – grievous suffering awaits them [in the life to come]!"' (at-Tawba: 61)

Their statement about Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him: '…"He is all ear."…' (at-Tawba: 61) is similar to what is commonly said about someone that is 'widani', that is listening too much to others speaking. Thus, Allah Glorified is He responded to them: '…Say: "[Yes,] he is all ear, [listening] to what is good for you!"…' (at-Tawba: 61) Yes, he is all ear, but a good ear hearing goodness and points it out to you.

His statement: '…by a visible mark…' (Muhammad: 30) means clear signs on their faces. By '… the tone of their voice…' (Muhammad: 30) means their changing of expressions from their recognized meanings.

(1) Narrated by Al-Bukhari in his Sahih (5575) that ʿAʾisha Allah be pleased with her said: 'A group of Jews entered upon God's Messenger peace and blessing be upon him and they said: 'Death be upon you (as-sam ʿalaykum)' (instead of saying the greeting: As-salam ʿalaykum) ʿAʾisha responded, as she understood what they had said: 'And upon you be death and curses (wa ʿalaykum as-sam wa al-laʿna)'. Then The Messenger of God said: {Take it easy, ʿAʾisha. Indeed God loves gentleness in every matter.} She responded: 'O Messenger of God, did you not hear what they said?' The Messenger of God said: {You could have said 'and upon you'.} It is also narrated by Muslim in his Sahih (4027).

وَلَنَبۡلُوَنَّكُمۡ حَتَّىٰ نَعۡلَمَ ٱلۡمُجَٰهِدِينَ مِنكُمۡ وَٱلصَّٰبِرِينَ وَنَبۡلُوَاْ أَخۡبَارَكُمۡ ﴿٣١﴾

We shall test you to see which of you strive your hardest and are steadfast; We shall test the sincerity of your assertions [31] (The Quran, Muhammad: 31)

The speech here is addressed to the believers who have believed in Allah Glorified is He and have affirmed Allah’s Messenger. Allah Glorified is He says to them: 'and most certainly We shall try you all…' (Muhammad: 31), i.e. We will test you and examine you with hardships and difficulties. '…so that We might mark out those of you who strive hard [in Our cause] and are patient in adversity: for We shall put to a test [the truth of] all your assertions,' (Muhammad: 31), i.e. in order to know those who are firm with the trial from those who are in doubt and hesitancy, Allah Glorified is He wants to purify the believers and test the strength of their faith, patience and capacity to bear with difficulty; this is because they will bear the burdens of the divine message on their shoulders. It is a global mission. No one applies themselves to it except someone who is firm in their faith and established in their creed, and unshakeable, as the poet defined:

I am not concerned when I am killed as a Muslim
Either way, my death is according to Allah

These are the people who were eager for death just as much as others were eager for life. Therefore, Allah Glorified is He gave them the rank of martyrdom and freed them from death after they had sacrificed their lives in His cause, and He connected their life in this world to their life in the Hereafter.

His statement '…patient in adversity…' (Muhammad: 31), i.e. the difficulty of conveying Allah's Message (Da'awah) and the difficulty of religious obligations. When you reflect on the state of this nation before Islam, you find that it is as if Allah Glorified is He was preparing it to bear the message of Islam. It is a nation of war and fighting. It knows the arts of war and it has mastered attack and retreat. It is a Bedouin nation that does not settle in any place. Rather, their houses were on the backs of their riding beasts. It was also a nation that does not have a system or law or way of life.

All of this made it suited to carry and convey the message of truth to the entire world, fight falsehood and make people understand Allah’s Religion. Allah Glorified is He said: '…From within every group in their midst, some shall refrain from going forth to war, and shall devote themselves [instead] to acquiring a deeper knowledge of the Faith, and [thus be able to] teach their homecoming brethren…' (at-Tawba: 122).

Therefore, in its struggle with its enemies, Islam needs two forces of struggle (jihad); a force that strives to preserve the word and a force that strives to affirm the veracity of the word. This is why trials and tribulations were necessary. A test, 'and most certainly We shall try you all…' (Muhammad: 31) is not praised or blamed for its own sake, but rather according to its result. If someone does a test and passes we praise him, and if he fails we blame him.

In 'So that We might mark out…' (Muhammad: 31), the literal translation of the Arabic word corresponding 'mark out' is 'know'. Allah Glorified is He says 'So that We might know' even though He already knows. Therefore, the meaning is to match the abstract knowledge with the actual fact so that the fact can be a proof against the one who practices the action. Thus, he cannot say: ‘If I had taken the test, I would have passed’.

The words '…patient in adversity…' (Muhammad: 31) show that there is difficulty in the religious commandments and the human soul might feel some tightness in them. This is why some people bear with it and are patient, while others feel restricted by it and are anxious.

Allah Glorified is He said: 'Endure, then, with patience [all that they who deny the truth may say] – always remembering that it is none but Allah who gives thee the strength to endure adversity…' (an-Nahl: 127); Allah is The One Who helps you have patience by explaining to you its good consequences.

Allah Glorified is He said: '…and enjoin upon one another the keeping to truth, and enjoin upon one another patience in adversity' (al-’Asr: 3). Enjoining upon one another means that each one of you advises the other because sometimes man is patient and he endures, and sometimes he is weak and unhappy. Sometimes, you advise me and sometimes I advise you. The word wasiyyah (advice), as an exact term, is only used with regards to something that is valuable and precious, something that we should be concerned with and vigilant over.

إِنَّ ٱلَّذِينَ كَفَرُوا۟ وَصَدُّوا۟ عَن سَبِيلِ ٱللَّهِ وَشَآقُّوا۟ ٱلرَّسُولَ مِنۢ بَعْدِ مَا تَبَيَّنَ
لَهُمُ ٱلْهُدَىٰ لَن يَضُرُّوا۟ ٱللَّهَ شَيْـًٔا وَسَيُحْبِطُ أَعْمَـٰلَهُمْ ﴿٣٢﴾

Those who disbelieve, bar others from God’s path, and oppose the Messenger when they have been shown guidance, do not harm God in any way. He will make their deeds go to waste [32] (The Quran, Muhammad: 32)

Then, these people did not stop at disbelief. Rather, they went even beyond that: '…and on barring [others] from the path of Allah…' (Muhammad: 32), i.e. they prevented people from believing in Allah Glorified is He and they stood up in the face of the Message and fought it. Then '…and [who thus] cut themselves off from The Apostle…' (Muhammad: 32), i.e. they went against him and opposed him such that they were on one side and he was on another side. '…after guidance has been vouchsafed to them…' (Muhammad: 32), i.e. the clear truth; the consequence is that they: '…can in no wise harm Allah…' (Muhammad: 32).

These are all futile attempts that will not benefit them in the slightest and will not affect the progress of the Message. Why? It is because The True Lord Glorified is He has never sent a messenger to the creation and then surrendered him to his enemies so that they could kill him. This is a Divine Rule in the universe. A messenger is never killed. Yes, The True Lord Glorified is He has informed us that the children of Israel used to kill prophets, but he did not say messengers; '…Say: “Why, then, did you slay Allah’s prophets aforetime, if you were [truly] believers?”' (al-Baqara: 91) Reflect on the word '…aforetime…'; it means that no one from the Jews or even the Muslims can say it is possible for the Jews to kill Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him just as they killed their prophets because this killing was before Muhammad. Therefore, be reassured that they will never kill Prophet Muhammad peace and blessing be upon him as this verse brought reassurance to the Muslims and despair to the disbelievers with regards to this issue. The disbelievers certainly did try but how impossible it was for them.

Furthermore, a disbeliever assumes the bad consequences of his own denial of faith as well as they will be subjected for another punishment for barring others from having faith because they have gone astray on their own and misguided others too. We understand from the words '…and on barring [others] from the path of Allah…' (Muhammad: 32), that the path of Allah Glorified is He is a straight and even road that attracts people to it with straightforward logic, sweet speech and a beautiful, splendid style that softens hearts towards it, even if they are hard.

It is natural for the disbelievers to stand up in this way and prevent people from having faith and from hearing the Noble Quran. This is why the Noble Quran related their statement: 'Now those who are bent on denying the truth say [unto one another]: "Do not listen to this Quran, but rather talk frivolously about it so that you might gain the upper hand!"' (Fussilat: 26) They are thus certain that hearing the Noble Quran will affect them and incline their hearts towards it. They did not stop at preventing themselves and other people from listening to the Noble Quran. Rather, they went beyond it: '…but rather talk frivolously about it…' (Fussilat: 26); they spread confusion about it so that it does not reach the ears of others. This is because they are native speakers of the Arabic language having its sense and eloquence. They thoroughly enjoy expressions and styles and they are affected by them.

His statement '…but He will cause all their deeds to come to nought,' (Muhammad: 32) means that He will invalidate their deeds and make them futile. The meaning of ('…their deeds…') is that deed of barring others from Allah's Path or it is their good deeds that they did in the life of this world. Their deeds included spending wealth in order to bar people from the truth.

Regarding this, Allah Glorified is He says: 'Behold, those who are bent on denying the truth are spending their riches in order to turn others away from the path of Allah; and they will go on spending them until they become [a source of] intense regret for them; and then they will be overcome! ...' (al-Anfal: 36) They spent their wealth and they got nothing in return. The people took it from them and laughed at them, as in the case nowadays with elections. They use their wealth to buy votes and then people take the wealth and do not vote for them because they do not deserve it.

The second category of their actions, after wealth, is fighting; fighting is a reality in their struggle against the truth. Allah Glorified is He is calling on them: ‘O you who carry weapons in opposition to the Messenger, you should consider the reality before you: 'Have, then, they [who deny the truth] never yet seen how We visit the earth [with Our punishment], gradually depriving it of all that is best thereon?…' (ar-Ra‘d: 41) Have they not noticed that the territory of Islam is growing every day, and the territory of disbelief is decreasing and shrinking every day?

Regarding the Battle of Badr, Allah says: 'and, lo, Allah gave you the promise that one of the two [enemy] hosts would fall to you:…' (al-Anfal: 7), i.e. the group of the caravan that was carrying goods and wealth and only had a few guards, and the group that went out to protect the caravan and was led by Abu Sufyan. The Muslims wanted the caravan that had the wealth, but Allah Glorified is He decided another matter. They want wealth while Allah Glorified is He wants truth to prevail, His word to be uppermost, and for disbelief to be banished so that there is no doubt that could be attached to the Muslims on the basis that they only went out for the wealth and spoils that would compensate for their loss in Mecca.

Allah Glorified is He says: '…and you would have liked to seize the less powerful one…' (al-Anfal: 7), i.e. the caravan '…whereas it was Allah’s will to prove the truth to be true in accordance with His words, and to wipe out the last remnant of those who denied the truth, [7] so that He might prove the truth to be true and the false to be false, however hateful this might be to those who were lost in sin. [8] Lo! You were praying unto your Lord for aid, whereupon He thus responded to you: "I shall, verily, aid you with a thousand angels following one upon another!" (al-Anfal: 7-9)

Yes, Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon you sought refuge in his Lord and asked Him for help: ‘Oh Allah, grant me your victory that You promised me. O Allah, if this small group is destroyed, you will not be worshipped on the earth.’(1) The Companion Abu Bakr may Allah be pleased with him said to Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him: ‘O Messenger of Allah, have mercy upon yourself, you did prayer for your Lord enough.’

(1) Narrated by Muslim in his Sahih (3309) and also At-Tirmidhi in his Sunnan (3006) and Ahmad in his Musnad (216,203) from the Hadith of ‘Umar ibn Al-Khattab Allah be please with him… It is also narrated by ‘Abd ibn Hamid in his Musnad (31) and the wording of Muslim is that God’s Messenger called out on the Day of Badr: {O God, fulfil what you have promised me! O God, bring about what you have promised me! O God, if this small group of Muslims is destroyed, you will not be worshipped on the earth.}

Prophet Muhammad peace and blessing be upon him was looking forward to victory over the group that had power because he did not want wealth. Instead, he wanted to make the truth prevail and to obliterate falsehood. According to how much patience a believer has, Allah Glorified is He supplies them with support and power. If you want more support, then have more patience, have more contentment and have greater resolve.

If Allah Glorified is He willed, He would afflict the disbelievers with defeat without fighting, but He wanted you to fight them in order to show your strength and your superiority over them. 'Fight against them! Allah will chastise them by your hands, and will bring disgrace upon them, and will succour you against them; and He will soothe the bosoms of those who believe' (at-Tawba: 14). If Allah Glorified is He defeated them with a natural disaster, they would say: ‘This is a natural phenomenon, and we have no power over it.’

Likewise, on the Day (Battle) of Hunayn: 'Indeed, Allah has succoured you on many battlefields, [when you were few;] and [He did so, too,] on the Day of Hunayn, when you took pride in your great numbers and they proved of no avail whatever to you – for the earth, despite all its vastness, became [too] narrow for you and you turned back, retreating' (at-Tawba: 25).

When the Muslims were deluded by their greater number, Allah Glorified is He taught them a lesson in order to discipline them and gave their enemies the upper hand in the beginning of the battle. Then, out of His mercy, He corrected them and decreed victory for them in the end. Thus, on the same occasion, He disciplined both those who believe in Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him and those who denied and opposed him.

This teaches us a lesson which is that when the believers are defeated, it is not because Allah Glorified is He is disgracing them. Rather, He is refining them, correcting their understandings, and revising their course of action. This lesson is clear in the Battle of Uhud, as you know. When they disobeyed the orders of the commander, they were defeated. If they had been given victory in this battle, they would have then attached little importance to the commands of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him. They would have said: ‘We disobeyed his orders at Uhud and we were still victorious.’

This is why scholars say regarding this battle: ‘The Muslims were defeated but Islam was given victory.’ Thus, Allah Glorified is He made the disbelievers deeds come to naught with regards to two things; wealth and fighting.

يَٰٓأَيُّهَا ٱلَّذِينَ ءَامَنُوٓاْ أَطِيعُواْ ٱللَّهَ وَأَطِيعُواْ ٱلرَّسُولَ وَلَا تُبۡطِلُوٓاْ أَعۡمَٰلَكُمۡ ﴿٣٣﴾

believers, obey God and the Messenger: do not let your deeds go to waste [33] (The Quran, Muhammad: 33)

The call here is directed to the believers, as faith is the basis for giving them the command in '…Pay heed unto Allah, and pay heed unto The Apostle…' (Muhammad: 33) and in the prohibition '…and let not your [good] deeds come to nought!' (Muhammad: 33)

The believer is the one who hears the address and obey the commands because he knows that they are from a wise Lord who is The Creator, The All-Provider and The All-Sustaining.

Goodness is in obeying Him, and loss is in contravening His command. This is why, when the believer is afflicted with some test or adversity, he says to himself: ‘What have I done? I must have contravened my Lord’s way.’ And thus he rectifies his action.

It is also worth noting the repetition of the imperative verb '…pay heed…' (Muhammad: 33) once with Allah Glorified is He and once with Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him. There must be a reason for this. Yes, scholars said: ‘It is because Allah Glorified is He legislates the general principle in a comprehensive way, while Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him legislates the detailed rulings of the general principle; an example of this is the prayer. Allah Glorified is He has obligated us to perform prayer in a general sense, while Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him has explained the times of each prayer, how many units each prayer consists of and everything that is connected to it.

Therefore, Allah Glorified is He is to be obeyed with regards to the general principle, while Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him is to be obeyed with regards to the details. If the verb is not repeated, as in 'And pay heed unto Allah and the Apostle,' (Al-'Imran: 132) then the command is one and it refers to both the speech of Allah Glorified is He and the speech of the Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him. The command also comes in another form: '…Pay heed unto Allah, and pay heed unto The Apostle and unto those from among you who have been entrusted with authority…' (an-Nisa': 59). He did not say: 'obey those in authority over you', but rather, He made obedience to them to be included within obedience to Allah Glorified is He and obedience to Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him. Thus, they are owed no exclusive obedience or obedience that is separate from obedience to Allah Glorified is He and obedience to Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him. This is because, as you know, there is no obedience to a creation in disobedience to The Creator, and this is a religious legislative maxim. His statement: 'and do not invalidate your deeds' because you do good deeds, so preserve them and do not nullify them with sins, as the poet said:

I have not seen amongst the faults of mankind a fault so great
Like the inability of those able to be complete, to initiate

Imam Ash-Shafiʿi (1) says:

If you are in a blessing, take care of it
For indeed disobedience removes blessings

It is a fault for the Muslim to relapse and commit evil deeds after being given success to do good deeds. He Glorified is He says: 'Indeed, good deeds do away with misdeeds. That is a reminder for those who remember' (Hud: 114).

In a Qudsi Hadith: 'Follow up an evil deed with a good deed and it will wipe it out.'(2) It is from Allah's Mercy towards us that good deeds wipe out evil deeds. However, a bad deed does not wipe out a good deed, but it does necessitate that one seeks forgiveness. One of the most dangerous diseases that nullify righteous action is when a desire for ostentation, reputation, or hypocrisy intervenes, or a suspicion of idolatry. We seek refuge in Allah Glorified is He.

(1) He is Imam Muhammad ibn Idris Ash-Shafiʿi, who died 203 A.H., and one if the four Imams of Muslim Orthodoxy (As-Sunna) and all Shafiʿis are affiliated to him. He was born in Gaza in the year 150 A.H., visited Baghdad twice, and headed to Egypt in the year 199 A.H. He died there. He was the most poetic and cultured of people and the most knowledgeable of them in jurisprudence and Quranic recitations. [Al-ʿAlam by Az-Zirikli 6/26]

(2) Related by At-Tirmidhi in his Sunnan (1910), Ahmad in his Musnad (20556, 20512, 20435, 20392), Al-Hakim in his Mustadrak (165), Al-Bayhaqi in Shuʿab Al-Iman (7795) and Al-Qadaʿi in Ash-Shihab (611), and all of them from Abu Dharr Al-Ghifari and in the chapter on Muʿadh ibn Jabal.

إِنَّ ٱلَّذِينَ كَفَرُواْ وَصَدُّواْ عَن سَبِيلِ ٱللَّهِ ثُمَّ مَاتُواْ وَهُمۡ كُفَّارٞ فَلَن يَغۡفِرَ ٱللَّهُ لَهُمۡ (٣٤)

God will not forgive those who disbelieve, bar others from God's path, and die as disbelievers [34]
(The Quran, Muhammad: 34)

His statement 'then died while they were disbelievers,' (Muhammad: 34) means that they died on disbelief and they did not amend the matter by repenting before death befell them. 'Never will Allah forgive them' (Muhammad: 34). This means that if they had repented before the death rattle, while still in this life, He would have forgiven them.

In another verse Allah Glorified is He says: 'Indeed, Allah does not forgive association with Him, but He forgives what is less than that for whom He wills.' (an-Nisa': 48). Dying upon disbelief after guidance had been clarified and shown to mankind is a proof of stubbornness, so how can such a person be the recipient Allah's Mercy?

فَلَا تَهِنُواْ وَتَدۡعُوٓاْ إِلَى ٱلسَّلۡمِ وَأَنتُمُ ٱلۡأَعۡلَوۡنَ وَٱللَّهُ مَعَكُمۡ وَلَن يَتِرَكُمۡ أَعۡمَٰلَكُمۡ (٣٥)

So [believers] do not lose heart and cry out for peace. It is you who have the upper hand: God is with you. He will not begrudge you the reward for your [good] deeds [35]
(The Quran, Muhammad: 35)

The meaning of 'So do not weaken,' (Muhammad: 35) is: do not be weak when confronting your enemies because they are standing before you in battle, even if they try to make you feel weak by intimidating you or enticing you. One of the manifestations of weakness is that it calls them to reconciliation and a parting of ways. 'While you are superior,' (Muhammad: 35) means to act on the basis of this perspective.

Why would it not be so as 'Allah is with you,' (Muhammad: 35) to strengthen you and guard your backs, as He is the One Who never forsakes the one who seeks refuge in Him. It is His way that you are fighting for, so how can He abandon you or allow you to surrender to your enemies? Therefore, when there is fierce fighting and the battle becomes harsh, be firm, and do not let them frighten you with their equipment, or numbers, or their stratagems and scheming because Allah Glorified is He is with you.

This is why, in the story of Musa (Moses) peace be upon him when Pharaoh and his army almost caught up with him, one of Musa's (Moses's) soldiers said: 'Behold, we shall certainly be overtaken' (ash-Shu'ara': 61). What did Musa (Moses) peace be upon him say: 'He replied: 'No indeed! My Lord is with me, (and) He will guide me!' (ash-Shu'ara': 62) He said it with a ring of deep conviction and he was certain of Allah's victory.

We understand from His statement 'So do not weaken and call for peace,' (Muhammad: 35) that He has forbidden us from seeking peace. He has forbidden us from raising the white flag. Rather, we leave them to seek it. This is why Allah Glorified is He says in another verse: 'But if they incline to peace, incline to it as well' (al-Anfal: 61). This is because they understand that peace coming from you would be weakness and submission. You also would not call for peace because you are bound to rise above them and you are mightier and stronger.

'And Allah is with you' (Muhammad: 35). If someone is in Allah's company, Allah Glorified is He bestows upon him some of His attributes. Have you seen in the Story of the People of the Cave how they stood at the opening of the cave, and even As-Siddiq may Allah be pleased with him said: 'O Messenger of Allah! If one of them were to look at his feet, he would see us.' So, the Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him said to him: 'Oh Abu Bakr! What do you think of two and Allah is the third of them?'(1) As long as Allah Glorified is He is the third of them, then they are in His company, and as long as Allah is not encompassed by human vision, then whoever is in His company will also not be encompassed by human vision.

The meaning of 'and will never deprive you of [the reward of] your deeds,' (Muhammad: 35) is that He will not let you lose the reward of your deeds in the slightest. Rather, He will give you the full extent and then more.

(1) Agreed upon, authentic Hadith, related by Al-Bukhari in his Sahih (4295), Muslim in his Sahih (4389), At-Tirmidhi in his Sunnan (3021) and Ahmad in his Musnad (11), and all of them from the Hadith of Abu Bakr As-Siddiq may Allah be pleased with him.

إِنَّمَا ٱلۡحَيَوٰةُ ٱلدُّنۡيَا لَعِبٞ وَلَهۡوٞۚ وَإِن تُؤۡمِنُواْ وَتَتَّقُواْ يُؤۡتِكُمۡ أُجُورَكُمۡ وَلَا يَسۡـَٔلۡكُمۡ
أَمۡوَٰلَكُمۡ ﴿٣٦﴾ إِن يَسۡـَٔلۡكُمُوهَا فَيُحۡفِكُمۡ تَبۡخَلُواْ وَيُخۡرِجۡ أَضۡغَٰنَكُمۡ ﴿٣٧﴾

The life of this world is only a game, a pastime, but if you believe and are mindful of God, He will recompense you. He does not ask you to give up [all] your possessions [36] you would be grudging if He were to ask you and press you for them, and He would bring your ill-will to light [37]
(The Quran, Muhammad: 36 - 37)

The Noble Quran gives us various illustrations of this life which overall show that it is a short, insignificant life that deludes and deceives mankind. One of these illustrations is His statement ‘And present to them the example of the life of this world, [its being] like rain which We send down from the sky, and the vegetation of the earth mingles with it and [then] it becomes dry remnants, scattered by the winds’ (al-Kahf: 45). And here: ‘[This] worldly life is only play and diversion’ (Muhammad: 36). This is a style of restriction which affirms that this life is nothing but a play and a passing delight, so let the intelligent person be wary of it and not deluded by it.

Amusement means to be preoccupied with something that does not harm you, but it does not benefit you either, and this is why some advanced societies made practical the amusement of children such that they fulfil the purpose of entertaining children and also teaching them something for the future. This is why the Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him said: ‘Teach your children swimming, archery and horseback riding.’(1)

Play, for children, is before the age of legal responsibility. As for ‘diversion’, it is to preoccupy yourself by doing something that does not benefit and it distracts you from doing something that does benefit, like the person who sits in the café, for example, playing chess, and he hears the call to the noon prayer, but he does not pray.

(1) On the authority of Abu Bakr ibn ʿAbdullah ibn Rabiʿ Al-Ansari who said: ‘The Messenger of Allah peace and blessings be upon him said: “Teach your children swimming and archery. The spinning mill is a good passing delight for the believing woman in her house. If your parents call on you then answer your mother.” Related by Abu Naʿim in Maʿrifat As-Sahaba (the chapter on whoever is named Bisr) and mentioned by Al-Muttaqi Al-Hindi in Kanz Al-ʿUmmal (45343) and he attributed it to Ibn Mundih in Al-Maʿrifa, Abu Musa in Adh-Dhayl and Ad-Daylami in Al-Firdaws.

In the chapter of al-Jumuʿa: ‘But when they saw a transaction or a diversion, [O Muhammad], they rushed to it and left you standing. Say, ‘What is with Allah is better than diversion and then a transaction, and Allah is the best of providers’ (al-Jumu‘a: 11).

The one who follows the verses of the Noble Quran will find that they describe the life of the world in more than one place with this description; a play and diversion, in that order because play is for children and a diversion is for adults. The only exception is in the chapter of al-ʿAnkabut: ‘And this worldly life is not but diversion and play. And indeed, the home of the Hereafter - that is the [eternal] life, if only they knew,’ (al-’Ankabut: 64) because the speech here is about the tribulations that have dire consequences in the Hereafter and make one lose out on its reward, so diversion is mentioned before play.

Furthermore, the name of this life (ad-dunya; low) is enough to show how contemptible and insignificant it is: ‘…this life is only play and diversion…’ (Muhammad: 36), as there is nothing less than this description. When you say the word ad-dunya you remember its counterpart which is al-akhira (the Hereafter). If this is the most inferior, then that is the most superior, and if this is fleeting, then that is everlasting.

Despite this, this life is not generally blameworthy. It is only blameworthy if something happens in it that is blameworthy, and it is praiseworthy if something happens in it that is praiseworthy. It is a place of cultivation for the Hereafter, as you only enter paradise with action from this life. Thus, this life is the subject of the religion, while the Hereafter is the reward, and the reward for something is not the thing itself.

We said previously that for the believer, this life is too important to be forgotten about because it leads you to the Hereafter, but it is too insignificant to be an objective because the objective of something is its end; and this life is not your end. Rather, behind it there is another objective which is the Hereafter. It is the true objective after which there is no other dimension.

Allah’s statement ‘And if you believe and fear Allah’ (Muhammad: 36), i.e. you believe in Allah Glorified is He and you apply His way with regards to ‘Do!’ and ‘Do not do!’ ‘He will give you your rewards and not ask you for your properties,’ (Muhammad: 36), i.e. He will give you the complete reward of your deeds without any decrease, and He will not take your possessions from you, which He favoured you with.

The proof is that when Allah Glorified is He commands you to give in charity, He considers this charity to be a loan which He will give back to you, and more. ‘Who is it that would loan Allah a goodly loan so He may multiply it for him many times over? And it is Allah who withholds and grants abundance’ (al-Baqara: 245).

His statement ‘If He should ask you for them and press you, you would withhold, and He would expose your unwillingness’ (Muhammad: 37). The True Lord Glorified is He does not ask us for our possessions because man has been moulded to love possessions and long for them if they are taken away from him. Thus, Allah Glorified is He says: ‘If I were to ask you for possessions, the question would require an earnest request.’ ‘And press you,’ (Muhammad: 37) He earnestly requests when asking and you hate this because it exposes whatever stinginess you have and it exposes your moral failings and your resentment.

When the moral failings of people are exposed, you ruin the relations between the individuals of society and you have seen an example of this in the issue of nationalization that has taken place because possessions are something that you normally acquire with toil and sweat and it is hard for you to see it taken from you and given to someone else. Here a moral failing is exposed.

And they said regarding: ‘and not ask you for your properties,’ (Muhammad: 36) that it indicates the generality of negation and not the negation of generality. How? It is similar to us saying: ‘Not all the students passed.’ This means that some of them passed. Thus, the negation here is for generality, as opposed to saying: ‘All the students did not pass.’ This is the generality of negation such that not a single one of them passed.

He asks you for some of it, as is what happens with alms, charity, ransom and expiation.

هَٰٓأَنتُمْ هَٰٓؤُلَآءِ تُدْعَوْنَ لِتُنفِقُوا۟ فِى سَبِيلِ ٱللَّهِ فَمِنكُم مَّن يَبْخَلُ ۖ
وَمَن يَبْخَلْ فَإِنَّمَا يَبْخَلُ عَن نَّفْسِهِۦ ۚ وَٱللَّهُ ٱلْغَنِىُّ وَأَنتُمُ ٱلْفُقَرَآءُ ۚ وَإِن
تَتَوَلَّوْا۟ يَسْتَبْدِلْ قَوْمًا غَيْرَكُمْ ثُمَّ لَا يَكُونُوٓا۟ أَمْثَٰلَكُم ﴿٣٨﴾

Though now you are called upon to give [a little] for the sake of God, some of you are grudging. Whoever is grudging is so only towards himself: God is the source of wealth and you are the needy ones. He will substitute other people for you if you turn away, and they will not be like you [38]
(The Quran, Muhammad: 38)

His statement ‘Here you are,’ (Muhammad: 38) is to draw attention in order for the person to be ready and not miss anything that is being said. The True Lord Glorified is He is addressing them with all of these tools in order to emphasise His call to them, which is to spend out: ‘those invited to spend in the cause of Allah’ (Muhammad: 38). Who is the one inviting? Allah Glorified is He is inviting them to spend freely.

Reflect here on how the True Lord Glorified is He respects and appreciates the efforts of human beings. Even though Allah Glorified is He is the Creator, the All-Provider, the Original Cause of causes, Who granted you the strength that you work with, the intellect that you think with, the material that you use despite that He respects your part in directing the energy that Allah Glorified is He has created towards beneficial things, and He says to you: ‘Spend freely as if the wealth is your wealth’ and He is borrowing it from you as a goodly loan.

It is similar to you giving your child a daily allowance and he saves it, for example, in a collection box. Then, you fall into difficult circumstances and you need what is in your child’s collection box, so you say to him: ‘Give me what is in the collection box as a loan and I will return it to you when I am able to.’

He Glorified is He says: ‘Who is it that would loan Allah a goodly loan so He may multiply it for him many times over?’ (al-Baqara: 245) The True Lord Glorified is He has forbidden usury in transactions between human beings, but He has permitted it for Himself when He borrows from you. This is a favour and generosity from Allah Glorified is He towards the creation, in the beginning and in the end.

His statement ‘to spend in the cause of Allah’ (Muhammad: 38), i.e. in all the ways that Allah loves. Allah Glorified is He is fully capable of enriching everyone such that no one would need anyone else, but instead Allah Glorified is He wanted hearts to be interconnected and interests to be interwoven, and for the creation to be joined in the feelings of faith such that the rich are compassionate towards the poor and the poor do not despise the rich, and the strong are merciful towards the weak.

However, when Allah Glorified is He calls upon them to spend freely, some of them are miserly: ‘but among you are those who withhold [out of greed]’ (Muhammad: 38). They are the ones who understand the philosophy of trade with Allah Glorified is He but not the consequences of spending freely. They do not know that spending in this way increases wealth and does not decrease it. Read: ‘Who is it that would loan Allah a goodly loan so He may multiply it for him many times over? And it is Allah who withholds and grants abundance, and to Him you will be returned’ (al-Baqara: 245).

Spending freely in Allah’s cause is like a man who harvests wheat and puts it in storage. He has a certain amount of it, for example, and he takes some of it in order to cultivate the earth again. Would one say that the wheat has decreased by that some taken out? No, because he will take a manifold increase from it.

Therefore, do not just look at what is departing but also look at what is coming in order to complete the illustration and make your calculation sound. Even usury in transactions between people only gives you five or ten per cent more.

As for your Lord Glorified is He He gives you seventy or seven hundred times more, or even more than that. Read: ‘The example of those who spend their wealth in the way of Allah is like a seed [of grain] which grows seven spikes; in each spike is a hundred grains. And Allah multiplies [His reward] for whom He wills. And Allah is all-Encompassing and knowing’ (al-Baqara: 261).

This is why the orientalists had issue with the Hadith of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him: ‘It is written on the door of paradise that charity is rewarded ten times over, and a loan is rewarded eighteen times over.’(1)

(1) Mentioned by Al-Muttaqi Al-Hindi in Kanz Al-ʿUmmal (10382) and he attributed it to At-Tabarani in Al-Kabir and Al-Hakim in Nawadir Al-Usul from Abu Umama: “I saw=

They said: ‘This contradicts the Noble Quran which states that a good deed is rewarded ten times over.’ The fact of the matter is that there is never a contradiction between the two because when I give one dirham as a loan, He gives me ten dirhams which means that He has actually given me nine. When it is multiplied it becomes eighteen.

When the True Lord Glorified is He encouraged us to give loans, He taught us how to deal with the debtor. He said: ‘…and if someone is in hardship, then [let there be] postponement until [a time of] ease. But if you give [from your right as] charity, then it is better for you, if you only knew’ (al-Baqara: 280).

The first stage is that you wait and give him time to pay it back. Then, after that, you can complete your excellence and show good will with this loan, or at least some of it, by way of charity. This is the goodness of the one whose soul aspires to noble things.

Then, in His statement ‘…but among you are those who withhold [out of greed],’ (Muhammad: 38) there is equity for the community of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him and a clarification of its honour, as it is the majority that spend freely and the minority that is miserly. Amongst the community are those who spend all their wealth in Allah’s Cause and there are those who spend half their wealth in Allah’s Cause.

The spending and giving of this community has reached such an extent that there is none like it in all of history. There is the Ansari who said to his brother, the Muhajir: ‘Look at my wives. If one of them pleases you I will divorce her so that you can marry her.’ It is known that the woman has a special rank with the man, but this is magnanimity and sacrifice.

At the opposite end, you find the Muhajir Companion, ʿAbd Ar-Rahman ibn ʿAwf(1) may Allah be pleased with him who refused this generous offer and instead called on his brother(1) and said to him: 'No, Oh brother. May Allah bless you with regards to your women, but show me where the market is.'(2)

ʿAbd Ar-Rahman may Allah be pleased with him went to the market and engaged in trade until he was the wealthiest companion of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him. They used to say: 'If he traded in dirt, he would be successful.'

He had a thousand slaves and a man came and asked one of them: 'How is Ibn ʿAwf with you?' The slave said: 'By Allah, if you were to come across us while he was with us, you would not distinguish him among us because he lets us wear what he wears, and he lets us eat what he eats.'

Despite the love of wealth that is seated in the human soul, and the love of ownership, there are still some people who are like a mountain of generosity and benevolence, who give without limit and give as if they do not fear poverty. Look at the example of generosity in Hatim At-Taʾi(3) who said to his slave:

Light a fire, for indeed the night is a night of coldness
The wind, o boy, is violent and cold

Show me where the market is.' So he showed him and he went, and he bought and sold and made a profit and then brought some cottage cheese and clarified butter.*

(3) Hatim At-Taʾi is Hatim ibn ʿAbdullah ibn Saʿd ibn Al-Hashraj At-Taʾi Al-Qahtani Abu ʿUday is a horseman, poet and generous man from the age of ignorance. Examples are given of his generosity. He was from the people of Najd and he visited Sham and married Mawiya bint Hajr Al-Ghasaniyyah in ʿIwarad (a mountain in the land of Tayʾ). He had a lot of poetry, but most of it is lost. All that remains is a small, printed collection. He died in the year 46 A.H. [Al-ʿAlam by Az-Zarkali 2/151]

Perhaps someone passing by sees your fire

It is related(1) that a group of people sat in an open space in Mecca and they were talking about the generous person of their time, and they were differing over this. One of them said: ‘The most generous is Saʿid ibn Saʿd ibn ʿUbada. Another said: ‘No, it is ʿAbdullah ibn Jaʿfar.’ Another said: ‘No, ʿUraba Al-Awsi(2) is more generous than both of them.’ They were about to fight with one another when an intelligent man amongst them said: ‘Send a man to each of these people who approaches them as a wayfarer and is in need. Look at how they receive him.’

So, they sent a man to ʿAbdullah ibn Jaʿfar may Allah be pleased with him and he found him mounted in order to hunt, so he placed one leg on the mount and the other on the ground. The man said to him: ‘Oh son of the daughter of Allah’s Messenger, I am a wayfarer and possessor of need.’ Then ʿAbdullah may Allah be pleased with him took his leg down from his riding beast and said to him: ‘Ride, and in this bag, there are four thousand dinars, such-and-such clothes and the sword of ʿAli ibn Abu Taleb, so take care of it.’

Another man went to Saʿid ibn Saʿd ibn ʿUbada may Allah be pleased with him knocked on his door, and his female slave replied: ‘Who is it?’ He said: ‘A wayfarer and a possessor of need.’ She said: ‘the lord of the house is sleeping so what do you want?’ He said: ‘I am a possessor of need.’ She said: ‘Your need is not important enough for me to wake him up. By Allah, all he has is seven hundred dinars. Take it and go to where his camels are tied up. Choose a female riding camel for yourself and a servant to take care of it. When Saʿid may Allah be pleased with him woke up, she told him what had happened, so he said: ‘Did you really do that?’ She said: ‘Yes.’ He said: ‘Consider yourself free.’

He was alive at the time of The Prophet peace and blessings be upon him and he embraced Islam as a youth. He travelled to the Levant in the days of Muʿawiya and he had news with him. He died in Medina in the year 60 A.H. [Al-ʿAlam by Az-Zirikli 4/222]*

Then you notice that the command to spend freely here is for whom? It is specific to the believers, who are being called. ‘O you who have believed, obey Allah and obey the Messenger’ (Muhammad: 33). This is due to the honour and rank of spending out and the manifold increase of its reward. The believer does not want to deny himself this goodness.

Even the word nafaqa (spending out) is taken from a market that is nafiqa (selling well), i.e. in demand and profitable because it is trade with Allah Glorified is He. Thus, you must not think that it is a losing trade that has little demand. Yes. It is a market that the True Lord Glorified is He has set up between His servants for a reason that He wanted, so He made some of them rich, some of them poor, some of them strong, some of them weak, and each one of them is tested by the other so that there can be this complementary activity in a society of faith.

This is why we said that Allah Glorified is He wants the believer to act according to his capacity and not according to his need because if he acted according to his need and the need of those who are dependent on him, there would be nothing left for the weak person who is incapable of doing anything. Then there is the fact that circumstances change. The strong person could become weak and thus has need, or the rich person could become poor, and then he finds someone who gives to him. Man is the child of change.

Therefore, we are able to say that the spending out that Allah Glorified is He has commanded is like insurance for the believer’s future. Thus, he does not fear for himself or for his children if his circumstances put him in a state of need, and he is certain that the believing society will give him a helping hand.

The amazing thing about the command to spend out is that the True Lord Glorified is He has not excused anyone from it. Whoever is not able to spend out in wealth must spend out in speech. Read Allah’s statement: ‘There is not upon the weak or upon the ill or upon those who do not find anything to spend any discomfort when they are sincere to Allah and His Messenger. There is not upon the doers of good any cause [for blame]. And Allah is Forgiving and Merciful’ (at-Tawba: 91).

If someone is stingy, then others must wake him up, and if they do not they are in sin, even if they do not have this and that.

The True Lord Glorified is He explained this in his statement: ‘Nor [is there blame] upon those who, when they came to you that you might give them mounts,(1) you said, ‘I can find nothing for you to ride upon,’ (at-Tawba: 92). What did they do, then? ‘They turned back while their eyes overflowed with tears out of grief that they could not find something to spend [for the cause of Allah]’ (at-Tawba: 92).

This is the person who does not own anything but tears and impassioned feelings that express his desire and longing to spend out, but he does not have anything so these feelings suffice, and for him actions are reckoned according to intentions. This stance may encourage him to strive in order to do something so that he can give anything.

Let the rich person be warned that he can be a tribulation for the poor person when he denies him his right, as he may be ruined and object to the fact that Allah Glorified is He has decreed poverty for him and wealth for someone else. Do not let him be poor as well as displeased with Allah’s Decree.

Read: ‘And those who hoard gold and silver and spend it not in the way of Allah - give them tidings of a painful punishment. The Day when it will be heated in the fire of hell and seared therewith will be their foreheads, their flanks, and their backs, [it will be said], ‘This is what you hoarded for yourselves, so taste what you used to hoard’ (at-Tawba: 34-35).

The intelligent person is the one who lightens his load when the loads become burdensome for their bearers, and no one else will carry for them. Whoever wants to lighten his soul, and then there is nothing less than giving what he does not need to someone who deserves it.

Regarding the words ‘…but among you are those who withhold [out of greed],’ (Muhammad: 38) withholding to spend out is an active process that emerges as a result of deep-rooted feelings in the human soul. They are the feelings of stinginess that call on the person not to give out. This is why He Glorified is He said: ‘And whoever is protected from the stinginess of his soul - it is those who will be the successful’ (al-Hashr: 9). The one who overcomes this natural inclination within himself and he inhibits the reins of his soul, and thus he spends out willingly.

(1) This verse was sent down regarding the weepers, and there are six of them: ʿAbdullah ibn Mughaffal, Sakhar ibn Salman, ʿAbdullah ibn Kaʿb Al-Ansari, ʿUlba ibn Zayd Al-Ansari, Salim ibn ʿUmayr and Thaʿlaba ibn ʿAtama. They came to the Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him and asked for mounts and equipment for battle and he said to them: ‘I cannot find any mounts for you.’ Then they left in tears, and they had wanted one of three things: riding beasts, victuals, or footwear. [Zad Al-Masir by Ibn Al-Jawzi, commenting on the chapter of at-Tawba, verse 9]

Then the True Lord Glorified is He explains the consequence of stinginess: ‘And whoever withholds only withholds [benefit] from himself’ (Muhammad: 38), i.e. he is stingy with himself because he denies himself the reward of charity and spending out and he denies himself the reward that is multiplied many times over.

The insightful scholars understood this meaning, as Imam ʿAli was once asked: ‘I want to know if I am from the people of this life or the people of the Hereafter.’ He said to him: ‘The answer is with you.’ He said: ‘How?’ He replied: ‘If someone comes to you with a gift and another comes to you asking for something, which of them makes you happy and joyous?’ If you are happy with the one who brings a gift, then you are from the people of this life, and if you are happy with the one who asks for something then you are from the people of the Hereafter.

This is why some of the righteous would welcome someone when they asked for something, and they would say: ‘Welcome to the one who comes carrying my provision to the Hereafter without a fee.’

His statement ‘Allah is the Free of need, while you are the needy’ (Muhammad: 38) was because the Jews said: ‘Indeed Allah is in need and we are self-sufficient because He borrows from us.’ Thus, Allah Glorified is He responds to them. Rather, it is Allah Who is Self-sufficient. Self-sufficient in His essence with no need of His creation, He gives abundantly from His wealth and He enriches the creation by cultivating love and mercy between them and making them love spending out. Thus, the wealthy do not become proud of their wealth, and the poor do not hate the wealthy because they are poor. Everyone is pleased and says: ‘Praise be to Allah.’ It is as if the source of all wealth is the True Lord Glorified is He.

Then Allah Glorified is He says: ‘And if you turn away’ (Muhammad: 38), i.e. you avoid and refrain from spending that Allah Glorified is He has commanded you, and you do not affirm the increase that Allah has promised you, then know that Allah will not leave the weak, the poor and the powerless without acquisition. Rather, He will replace you with those who are better than you and they will respond to Allah’s Command; they will spend out on Allah’s Creation.

‘He will replace you with another people; then they will not be the likes of you’ (Muhammad: 38). They will not be like you in stinginess and withholding from giving out because you are My slave and I own you. If you disobey Me I will bring someone else who will be better than you. If there is no goodness in a people, it will be found in others, and if it not found in a land, it will be found in another land.

It is known that when Islam spread to the East and the West, the people of generosity increased in all the lands of Islam, and there are stories and narrations about their generosity.

the chapter of

al-Fath

In the Name of God, the Most Merciful, the Dispenser of Mercy

The chapter of al-Fath (1) :

إِنَّا فَتَحْنَا لَكَ فَتْحًا مُّبِينًا ١

Truly We have opened up a path to clear triumph for you [Prophet] [1] (The Quran, al-Fath: 1)

The True Lord Glorified is He speaks here in the plural, ‘We’, called the ‘plural of majesty’; for Allah Glorified is He does not sustain His dominion with only one single attribute, but with many attributes and numerous perfections of power, knowledge, wisdom, and other attributes of His. But when He speaks about Allah’s own Essence, He uses the singular form, saying for example: ‘Verily, I – I alone – am Allah; there is no deity save Me’ (Ta Ha: 14); this is in order to affirm His Oneness. And when He speaks about one of His actions, He says: ‘Indeed, it is We who sent down the Quran and indeed, We will be its guardian’ (al-Hijr: 9).

We can observe here that Allah Glorified is He puts emphasis on the pronoun ‘We’ by saying ‘indeed’. The purpose of this is to emphasise for us the importance of the guidance which the Noble Quran brought, and that it is a heavenly way of guidance from Allah Himself, and that it is a miracle for mankind; this clearly shows the merit of The Noble Quran.

(1) The chapter of al-Fath was revealed in the Medinan period according to all the scholars, and contains 29 verses. It was revealed at night in between Mecca and Medina. From the beginning to the end, it speaks about the events of Hudaybiyya. The Messenger of Allah peace and blessings be upon him said about it: “This night there has been revealed unto me a chapter more beloved to me than all that over which the sun rises.” It is the 48th chapter in the written order of the Quran, and was revealed between the chapters of as-Saff and al-Ma’ida. (Tafsir Al-Qurtubi).

The meaning of ‘give’ is ‘victory’ which is what it means in the verse we are currently examining which is borne out by how Allah Glorified is He says shortly after it: ‘And [that] Allah may aid you with a mighty victory’ (al-Fath: 3). For when the call was first made, and the disbelievers of Mecca opposed it, and turned deaf ears to it, and stubbornly resisted it mocking Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him and harming him and those who believed in his call. It was as though a door had been closed in the face of the call. So Allah Glorified is He said to him: ‘Indeed, We have given you, [O Muhammad], a clear conquest,’ (al-Fath: 1). That is, a plain and clear victory, and an opening of the door for the call to be spread and strengthened so that it would have power, influence and protection. After Quraysh had stifled the call and attempted to destroy it, Allah Glorified is He opened the door for it so that it spread throughout the whole of Arabia; and after Quraysh had put a stranglehold on the call, all the Arabs came to protect it and defend it.

And in another verse, Allah Glorified is He explained this ‘victory’ to us, saying: ‘Have they not seen that We set upon the land, reducing it from its borders? And Allah decides; there is no adjuster of His decision’ (ar-Ra‘d: 41). He judges that Islam shall be victorious, and spread over the world; and when Allah judges, nothing can annul His verdict or repel His judgement. ‘Whatever grace Allah opens up to man, none can withhold it’ (Fatir: 2). And as long as Allah Glorified is He has opened it, do not worry that any human being could close it.

Allah Glorified is He then says:

لِّيَغْفِرَ لَكَ ٱللَّهُ مَا تَقَدَّمَ مِن ذَنۢبِكَ وَمَا تَأَخَّرَ وَيُتِمَّ نِعْمَتَهُۥ عَلَيْكَ
وَيَهْدِيَكَ صِرَٰطًا مُّسْتَقِيمًا ﴿٢﴾ وَيَنصُرَكَ ٱللَّهُ نَصْرًا عَزِيزًا ﴿٣﴾

So that God may forgive you your past and future sins, complete His grace upon you, guide you to a straight path [2] and help you mightily [3] (The Quran, al-Fath: 2-3)

In the chapter of Muhammad, we explained the meaning of a ‘sin’ where the Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him is concerned since he is divinely protected from sin. We said that it is a case of ‘The good deeds of the pious are the sins of the great saints'(1); therefore even forgetfulness on his part was considered a fault because he was a divinely-inspired prophet, trusted to convey Allah's way of guidance, so it is unimaginable that he could forget in the same way that the rest of his community do.

Therefore Allah Glorified is He excuses them their forgetfulness, but does not excuse it of His Messenger. To illustrate this, we gave the example of the forgetfulness of Adam peace be upon him: 'And We had already taken a promise from Adam before, but he forgot; and We found not in him determination,' (Ta Ha: 115) and this forgetfulness was called a sin.

So, the forgiveness given here to the Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him was for these matters, such as the times Allah Glorified is He upbraided him: 'Oh Prophet, why do you prohibit [yourself from] what Allah has made lawful for you, seeking the approval of your wives?' (at-Tahrim: 1) And 'We know that you, [O Muhammad], are saddened by what they say. And indeed, they do not call you untruthful, but it is the verses of Allah that the wrongdoers reject' (al-An'am: 33), and 'Then perhaps you would kill yourself through grief over them, [O Muhammad] if they do not believe in this message, [and] out of sorrow' (al-Kahf: 6).

So Allah Glorified is He admonished Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him out of pity and compassion for him, as though He were saying to him: 'O Muhammad, do not grieve, and do not take on more burdens that you can bear, for Allah will come to your aid.' So when the Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him sought forgiveness of Allah, it was for these kinds of things, not for any kind of sin against Allah's way of guidance – far be it for him to do any such thing!

'That Allah may forgive for' (al-Fath: 2) a fault might either be covered after it has been committed by excusing its punishment, or else it might be covered before it even happens so that it does not happen at all – and this is the meaning of 'what preceded of your sin and what will follow' (al-Fath: 2). In other words, what has passed shall not be punished, and the faults which might have occurred in the future shall not occur at all.

(1) Related by Al-Qurtubi as a saying of Al-Junayd; As-Sakhawi said it was a saying of Abu Sa'id Al-Kharraz

‘And complete His favour upon you’ (al-Fath: 2). The full measure of Allah’s Blessing upon the Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him was that He sent him to all people in all times and places, whilst before him each messenger was sent to a specific people at a specific time. As Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him he came forth at a time when the civilisations of the world all began to meet and connect from East to West, and thus he came as a universal messenger and a seal upon all the divine messages, and thus we call him the Master of Messengers and the Seal of Prophets.

The full measure of Allah’s Blessings was also that Allah Glorified is He opened the way to victory for him, and removed from his way the obstacles which had stood in the way of the call, so that all of Arabia yielded to him and Islam spread throughout it; and through Him, Allah guided this community which bore his message after him and took it to the rest of the inhabited world.

Allah Glorified is He brought to him the two greatest civilisations of the time, the Persians in the East and the Byzantines in the West; and because of this, they say that one of the wonders of this religion is that it spread through half the planet Earth in half a century, and this had never happened before.

The True Lord Glorified is He explains to us the meaning of the full measure of His blessings when He says: ‘This day I have perfected for you your religion and completed My favor upon you and have approved for you Islam as religion’ (al-Ma‘ida: 3).

Therefore when Abu Bakr may Allah be pleased with him heard this verse, he said, ‘Muhammad has announced his own death by reciting this verse, for when something is completed, it must then decline.’(1) So they understood this verse to be a sign that the Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him would soon die and pass away to the Supreme Companion, to attain to his reward.

Therefore, when the Angel of Death came to Him and bade him to choose, he said, ‘I choose the Supreme Companion.’(2) He chose to be with his Lord, not to evade any responsibility, but because he knew that his mission had been completed and fulfilled, and that he had nothing more to do after having fulfilled his trust, conveyed his message, counselled his community, seen the religion become ascendant, and firmly established its foundations.

(1) A similar statement is Related from ‘Umar may Allah be pleased with him not Abu Bakr in the exegeses of Al-Baghawi, Al- Alusi, Al-Baqa‘i, Ibn ‘Adil and Abu As-Sa‘ud.

(2) Related by Ahmad (25142) on the authority of ‘A’isha may Allah be pleased with her.

He then says: ‘guide you to a straight path’ (al-Fath: 2). So after he saw that the blessing was completed, and nothing was any longer closed upon him, he was reassured that Allah Glorified is He would never forsake him. He then says: ‘Allah may aid you with a mighty victory’ (al-Fath: 3). Is the victory mighty, or the victorious? The victorious is mighty, but He described the victory as mighty because it is as though Allah’s victory is pleasing to the victory itself and makes it feel proud and mighty, and also in order to say to Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him: ‘With this victory, you have been given something that no one has ever been given before.’

Elsewhere in the Noble Quran, the True Lord Glorified is He explains that He granted Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him with victory at times of ease, such as was the case at the conquest of Mecca, and He also did at times of hardship, such as was the case at Hunayn: ‘Allah has already given you victory in many regions and [even] on the day of Hunayn, when your great number pleased you, but it did not avail you at all, and the earth was confining for you with its vastness; then you turned back, fleeing. Then Allah sent down His tranquillity upon His Messenger and upon the believers and sent down soldiers angels whom you did not see and punished those who disbelieved. And that is the recompense of the disbelievers’ (at-Tawba: 25-26).

So, when they were deluded by their own great numbers, He corrected them, and then granted them His mercy and vicotry; and Allah Glorified is He would not have granted it to them at Badr and then forsaken them at Hunayn. It is as though Allah Glorified is He were saying to Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him: ‘Know that Allah is behind you, and will grant you victory and aid you; but you and your community must not be deluded by victory, power, or numbers, for: ‘How often has a small host overcome a great host by Allah’s leave!’ (al-Baqara: 249)

هُوَ ٱلَّذِىٓ أَنزَلَ ٱلسَّكِينَةَ فِى قُلُوبِ ٱلْمُؤْمِنِينَ لِيَزْدَادُوٓا۟ إِيمَـٰنًا مَّعَ إِيمَـٰنِهِمْ ۗ
وَلِلَّهِ جُنُودُ ٱلسَّمَـٰوَٰتِ وَٱلْأَرْضِ ۚ وَكَانَ ٱللَّهُ عَلِيمًا حَكِيمًا ﴿٤﴾

It was He who made His tranquillity descend into the hearts of the believers, to add faith to their faith — the forces of the heavens and earth belong to God; He is all knowing and all wise [4] (The Quran, al-Fath: 4)

‘Tranquillity’ is assurance after a time of severe difficulty, when they had been humbled: ‘and when eyes shifted [in fear], and hearts reached the throats and you assumed about Allah [various] assumptions. There the believers were tested and shaken with a severe shaking’ (al-Ahzab: 10-11).

Indeed, when things became intense, Allah Glorified is He granted ease; and despite the difficulty, deliverance came and Heaven intervened, and Allah’s victory came, ‘that they would increase in faith along with their [present] faith,’ (al-Fath: 4) and to remove from them the delusions they had entertained about their large numbers, therefore contravening the basic conditions of those who wish to fight as Allah’s hosts.

‘And to Allah belong the soldiers of the heavens and the earth’ (al-Fath: 4), that is, do not think that you are the only forces Allah Glorified is He possesses, for He has many forces: ‘And none can comprehend your Lord’s forces save Him alone’ (al-Muddaththir: 31). Among Allah’s soldiers are the angels who manage the affairs of the universe by Allah’s Command: ‘For each one is successive [angels] before and behind him who protect him by the decree of Allah’ (ar-Ra‘d: 11). And Allah Glorified is He swore by these angels, saying: ‘And those who arrange [each] matter’ (an-Nazi‘at: 5). These are the forces of Allah Glorified is He in the heavens.

Indeed, Allah Glorified is He has forces in the heavens and forces on earth, by which He destroyed those communities who denied His message: ‘So each We seized for his sin; and among them were those upon whom We sent a storm of stones, and among them were those who were seized by the blast [from the sky], and among them were those whom We caused the earth to swallow, and among them were those whom We drowned’ (al-’Ankabut: 40).

These are all forces of Allah: the storm-wind, the blast, the swallowing of the earth, drowning, and more besides. Only Allah Glorified is He has knowledge of these forces, how they attain their knowledge, and how they manage to fight Allah's enemies; for they operate mysteriously.

Despite all this, when the True Lord Glorified is He wanted to aid His Messenger, He did not do so with any of these natural phenomena, but rather with the strong faith of the believers, and their steadfast position against their enemies; for otherwise, they would have said, 'Were it not for these natural phenomena, they would not have been able to defeat us!' But the True Lord Glorified is He did attribute victory to these subtle forces in fact, although on the surface it was attributed to these believers so that they would continue to strike dread in the hearts of their enemies.

Allah Glorified is He says about the Emigration: 'If you do not aid the Prophet Allah has already aided him when those who disbelieved had driven him out [of Mecca] as one of two, when they were in the cave and he said to his Companion, 'Do not grieve; indeed Allah is with us.' And Allah sent down his tranquillity upon him and supported him with angels you did not see' (at-Tawba: 40).

Allah's forces were in effect at his time, for Abu Bakr may Allah be pleased with him said to the Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him: 'If one of them looks beneath his very feet, he will see us!'(1) So there were forces which prevented them from seeing: the dove which built her nest, and the spider which spun its web, were nothing but forces of Allah Glorified is He.

And when the horse of Suraqa ibn Malik got its feet stuck in the sand, the sand was a force of Allah Glorified is He. Even more incredible than this, Allah Glorified is He subdued one of the disbelievers themselves to aid the Emigration, the road guide 'Abdullah ibn 'Urayqit, who was a disbeliever who did not know Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him.(2) This is because Allah Glorified is He has full power to execute His will, and thus destined that the spiritual guide be guided by the material guide!

(1) Related by Al-Bukhari (4295) and Muslim (4389) on the authority of Anas may Allah be pleased with him

(2) Abu Bakr may Allah be pleased with him hired him to guide them, and they trusted him to do so even though he was a disbeliever

Allah said: ‘…and know that Allah intervenes between man and his heart’ (al-Anfal: 24). We said that this is because the notion Allah Glorified is He inspires cannot be deposed by the notions which Satan inspires, and we saw this in the story of the mother of Musa (Moses) peace be upon him when Allah Glorified is He inspired her to cast him into the sea. Even though she was a mother, and feared for her child, she indeed did cast him. We also saw this principle in the story of Pharaoh, who was killing the male children of the Israelites, yet when Musa (Moses) peace be upon him came to him in this way he did not suspect him, and raised him in his household. So Allah is the Lord of all hearts and their Creator, and He can turn them whichever way He pleases, and make them accept His decree without debate.

He then says: ‘…and ever is Allah Knowing and Wise’ (al-Fath: 4). He knows His forces well, and directs them with wisdom at specific times towards specific people; it is not a matter of unbridled force, tyranny, or injustice – far be it indeed for Allah to do such a thing. The True Lord says :(1)

لِّيُدْخِلَ ٱلْمُؤْمِنِينَ وَٱلْمُؤْمِنَٰتِ جَنَّٰتٍ تَجْرِى مِن تَحْتِهَا ٱلْأَنْهَٰرُ خَٰلِدِينَ فِيهَا
وَيُكَفِّرَ عَنْهُمْ سَيِّـَٔاتِهِمْ ۚ وَكَانَ ذَٰلِكَ عِندَ ٱللَّهِ فَوْزًا عَظِيمًا ﴿٥﴾

So as to admit believing men and women into Gardens graced with flowing streams, there to remain, absolving their bad deeds a great triumph in God’s eyes [5] (The Quran, al-Fath: 5)

It is related that when the beginning of this chapter was revealed, the Companions said: ‘Congratulations to you, Oh Messenger of Allah! This is what Allah has in store for you, but what does He have in store for us?’ Then the verse was revealed: ‘[And] that He may admit the believing men and the believing women to gardens beneath which rivers flow to abide therein eternally,' (al-Fath: 5). This is what was in store for them.

(1) Anas may Allah be pleased with him said: The verse “Verily, [O Muhammad,] We have given you a clear conquest” was revealed to The Prophet peace and blessings be upon him when he returned from Hudaybiyya, the Companions were saddened because they had not been able to make their offerings at the Ka‘ba, offering them instead at Hudaybiyya. When the verse was revealed, He peace and blessings be upon him said to them, “A verse has been revealed to me which is better than the entire world,” and when he recited it to them, they said, ‘Great joy and congratulations to you, O Messenger of Allah, for your Lord has made clear what He will do with you – but what will He do with us?’ So Allah revealed: “[And] that He may admit the believing men and the believing women to gardens” (al-Fath: 5).

The orientalists have objected to Allah's Words '…and remove from them their sins,' (al-Fath: 5) saying: 'Why would He remove their bad deeds, when He has already admitted them into paradise? They do not enter paradise until after He removes their bad deeds.'

We say: The meaning is that He will conceal these bad deeds so that they do not overshadow their lives in paradise, nor their position in the sight of their Lord; or He will conceal their bad deeds so that they forget them and do not feel ashamed of them – for the more you treat well the one who was bad to you, the more he reproaches himself; therefore Allah Glorified is He will conceal their bad deeds so they cannot remember them so that the joy of paradise is not diminished for them in any way.

The purpose of the creation was worship. As for the opinion which states that Allah's actions have no purpose, we say that they do not have the purpose of giving benefit to Him, but rather, they give benefit to others – and therefore they do have purpose.

Also, He mentions the believing women here after the believing men – why did He single them out for mention when usually in the Noble Quran men and women are included in the same plural, such as when He says: 'O you who believe,' (al-Baqara: 104), and not 'O you men and women who believe'; for the woman is concealed and included with the man, and she does not need to be specifically mentioned unless something concerns her specifically – so why does He mention her here?

They say it is because the context here is that of armed struggle, since Allah has just said 'And [that] Allah may aid you with a mighty victory' (al-Fath: 3). Women do not participate in armed struggle, and therefore the True Lord Glorified is He mentions women here to affirm that they also share in the reward of the struggle, and to dispel any doubt about this.

He says: '…gardens beneath which rivers flow,' (al-Fath: 5), and we explained before that elsewhere Allah says: '…gardens, through which running waters flow' (at-Tawba: 100). The two verses do not mean exactly the same thing, for when water springs forth from right underneath you, you are assured that it will continue to do so, and no one can withhold it from you because it flows from your own property.

As for 'gardens, through which running waters flow,' (at-Tawba: 100), this means that it flows from somewhere else and passes you by, and therefore might be cut off from you. He says 'to abide therein eternally,' (al-Fath: 5) in order to dispel any fears you might have that this bliss will ever come to an end; for no matter how great the bliss of this world might be, it is spoiled for you by your fear that it might leave you or you might leave it. Allah Glorified is He therefore reassures you that the bliss of paradise is constant and uninterrupted, eternal and unending; it will never leave you by going away from you, and you will never leave it by dying.

Therefore, He calls it a supreme triumph: '…and ever is that, in the sight of Allah, a triumph supreme!' (al-Fath: 5) What do you think of a triumph which is described as supreme? And what do you think when all of this comes from Allah Glorified is He? A gift is commensurate with the power of the giver: you are happy and delighted when a person of importance is pleased with you, and you are happy when you do someone a favour so he gives you a present or a reward – so what about if Allah Glorified is He rewards you?

I always remember the day I went with some ministers to San Francisco and we went to a grand hotel, and everyone admired its design, its beautiful appearance and its facilities; and when I saw the admiration in their eyes, I said to them: 'Take this as a proof of faith, and say: This is what human beings have made for other human beings, so imagine what the Lord of mankind has in store for mankind!'

وَيُعَذِّبَ ٱلْمُنَٰفِقِينَ وَٱلْمُنَٰفِقَٰتِ وَٱلْمُشْرِكِينَ وَٱلْمُشْرِكَٰتِ
ٱلظَّآنِّينَ بِٱللَّهِ ظَنَّ ٱلسَّوْءِ ۚ عَلَيْهِمْ دَآئِرَةُ ٱلسَّوْءِ ۖ وَغَضِبَ ٱللَّهُ
عَلَيْهِمْ وَلَعَنَهُمْ وَأَعَدَّ لَهُمْ جَهَنَّمَ ۖ وَسَآءَتْ مَصِيرًا ﴿٦﴾

And to torment the hypo- critical and idolatrous men and women who harbour evil thoughts about God — it is they who will be encircled by evil! — who carry the burden of God's anger, whom God has rejected and for whom He has prepared Hell, an evil destination! [6] (The Quran, al-Fath: 6)

Reflect on this contrast, which clearly shows the difference, and invites you to compare the reward Allah Glorified is He has prepared for the believers, and the end He has in store for the hypocrites and disbelievers. Mentioning contrasting things side by side is a rhetorical style employed by the Noble Quran to show the difference between them; and the Arab poet said, describing his beloved:

A face as white as the dawn,
Hair as black as night:
Two opposites which are beautiful when combined,
For each opposite shows the beauty of the other.

We may observe here that Allah Glorified is He mentions the hypocrites before the polytheists when speaking of the suffering that awaits them. The hypocrite is indeed worse than the polytheist, for he conceals his disbelief and acts as though he has faith so that he can infiltrate the ranks of the believers and conceal himself behind their banner, yet in reality, he is a stubborn polytheist who secretly plots against the believers.

As for the ordinary polytheist, his outward appearance is the same as his inward reality, his enmity is apparent and thus it is easy to guard oneself against him. Therefore, Allah Glorified is He said of the hypocrites: 'Indeed, the hypocrites will be in the lowest depths of the fire - and never will you find for them a helper' (an-Nisa': 145). That is, they shall be below the polytheists, on a lower level than them.

Allah Glorified is He says: 'those who assume about Allah a thought of evil nature,' (al-Fath: 6). A 'thought' means an unproven opinion about something, and when you say, 'I think so', you mean that you are not certain about it. Whim is lower than a thought. But what was the thought they had, which Allah Glorified is He describes as being evil? They said, 'Muhammad shall never gain victory over us'; and The True Lord Glorified is He made this concept clear when He said: ‘Whoever should think that Allah will not support [Prophet Muhammad] in this world and the Hereafter - let him extend a rope to the ceiling, then cut off [his breath], and let him see: will his effort remove that which enrages [him]?’ (al-Hajj: 15) That is, the one who thinks this thought has nothing left to do but attach a rope to the ceiling and hang from it like a hanged man, and then cut it down, and see if this has removed his anguish.

As for these thoughts, they had about Allah Glorified is He the first thing they thought about Him is that He does not exist; others say that He does exist, but has associates; others say that the Noble Quran is not from Allah Glorified is He but from Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him; and others deny that the dead will be resurrected.

These are all evil thoughts about Allah Glorified is He and therefore the True Lord Glorified is He meets them with an evil punishment, saying: ‘Upon them is a misfortune of evil nature’(al-Fath: 6). They cannot escape from it because it surrounds them. And elsewhere, He Glorified is He says: ‘While Allah encompasses them from behind’ (al-Buruj: 20). Not only this, but also: ‘and Allah has become angry with them and has cursed them and prepared for them hell, and evil it is as a destination’ (al-Fath: 6). Glory be to Allah! Look at the abundance of punishment, suffering, wrath, and curse which He has in store for them!

‘Anger’ (al-Fath: 6) is an emotion which causes the angry person to seek revenge on the one who has angered him. Now the True Lord Glorified is He is far above any emotional reaction, but He is speaking to us according to the limits of our own understanding and the modes of expression which our language possesses.

In His words ‘And has cursed them’ (al-Fath: 6), He has expelled them from His vast mercy and exiled them from it; and after this, the angels also reject them, and so does everyone else; ‘and prepared for them Hell,’ (al-Fath: 6) meaning that He has already made it, and it exists even now; so, ‘and evil it is as a destination’ (al-Fath: 6), tell us the natural consequence of the evil thoughts they entertain about Allah.

وَلِلَّهِ جُنُودُ ٱلسَّمَٰوَٰتِ وَٱلْأَرْضِ ۚ وَكَانَ ٱللَّهُ عَزِيزًا حَكِيمًا ﴿٧﴾

The forces of heaven and earth belong to God; He is almighty and all wise[7] (The Quran, al-Fath: 7)

The True Lord also speaks of His forces here, for His forces come forth in two ways: there are the forces of mercy which descend bearing goodness such as the angels who bring inspiration and revelation, or the sending down of rain; and then there are forces which bring down destruction, chastisement, and humiliation. ‘And ever is Allah Exalted in Might and Wise’ (al-Fath: 7). We understand from these words that the forces of chastisement are meant here, which complement the attribute of Almightiness. The Almighty is the One Who always overcomes and cannot be overcome, and this might is directed by wisdom and free of any tyranny or wrongdoing – far be it for Allah Glorified is He to indulge in such things!

إِنَّآ أَرْسَلْنَٰكَ شَٰهِدًا وَمُبَشِّرًا وَنَذِيرًا ﴿٨﴾ لِّتُؤْمِنُوا۟ بِٱللَّهِ
وَرَسُولِهِۦ وَتُعَزِّرُوهُ وَتُوَقِّرُوهُ وَتُسَبِّحُوهُ بُكْرَةً وَأَصِيلًا ﴿٩﴾

We have sent you [Prophet] to bring good news and to give warning [8] so that you [people] may believe in God and His Messenger, support Him, honour Him, and praise Him morning and evening [9] (The Quran, al-Fath: 8 - 9)

These words are addressed to the Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him: ‘We have sent you as a witness,’ (al-Fath: 8), that is, a witness over your community and over those messengers who came before you, that they delivered the message. Indeed, he is a witness over them because of what Allah Glorified is He told him in the Noble Quran.

And in another verse, He says: ‘And thus we have made you a just community that you will be witnesses over the people and the Messenger will be a witness over you’ (al-Baqara: 143). That is, so that you might bear witness before mankind that you have conveyed the message to them, for this community inherited the call from the Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him and continued to bear it after him. Therefore, it is related that Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him said: ‘Allah shall give radiance to anyone who hears what I say and understands it, and then passes it on to he who heard it not; for many a one who is told (of it) understands better than the one who heard (it).'(1)

Allah says: 'and a bringer of good tidings and a warner' (al-Fath: 8). We said before that tidings and warnings are given before the event actually happens. But why is he a bringer of good tidings and a warner? Allah Glorified is He says: 'That you [people] may believe in Allah and His Messenger and honour him and respect the Prophet and exalt Allah morning and afternoon' (al-Fath: 9). So, the reason He peace and blessings be upon him was sent is that you believe in Allah and His Messenger 'and honour Him,' (al-Fath: 9), extolling Him, succouring His religion and upholding His Word; 'and respect the Prophet' (al-Fath: 9), i.e. extol Him and give Him all the praise that is due to Him, for He Glorified is He provided His creatures a way of guidance to guard the motions of their lives from imbalance.

When Allah Glorified is He created Adam peace be upon him formed him and breathed of His spirit into him. Life came into him and he became a complete being. He did not start off as a child and then grow into a man, but rather, life came into him when he was a full-grown man.

Adam peace be upon him was brought into a universe in which Allah Glorified is He had prepared for him all the constituents of his life such as air, water, the earth, the sun and the moon; and after giving him his material nourishment, He gave him the moral values which nourish the spirit.

Therefore, after giving him the material spirit, Allah Glorified is He gave him another spirit of moral values: 'And thus We have revealed to you an inspiration of Our command' (ash-Shura: 52). Therefore, the Noble Quran is called an inspiration, and the angel who brought it down is a 'spirit': 'the Trustworthy Spirit has brought it down' (ash-Shu'ara': 193). Allah Glorified is He addressed the living people by saying to them: 'Oh you who have believed, respond to Allah and to the Messenger when he calls you to that which gives you the life' (al-Anfal: 24). This shows us that there are two lives: the material life, and the spiritual life of Allah's way of guidance.

(1) The like of it was related by Abu Dawud (3175), At-Tirmidhi (2580), Ibn Majah (226) and Ahmad (20608).

إِنَّ ٱلَّذِينَ يُبَايِعُونَكَ إِنَّمَا يُبَايِعُونَ ٱللَّهَ يَدُ ٱللَّهِ فَوْقَ أَيْدِيهِمْ ۚ فَمَن نَّكَثَ فَإِنَّمَا
يَنكُثُ عَلَىٰ نَفْسِهِۦ ۖ وَمَنْ أَوْفَىٰ بِمَا عَٰهَدَ عَلَيْهُ ٱللَّهَ فَسَيُؤْتِيهِ أَجْرًا عَظِيمًا ﴿١٠﴾

Those who pledge loyalty to you [Prophet] are actually pledging loyalty to God Himself – God's hand is placed on theirs — and anyone who breaks his pledge does so to his own detriment: God will give a great reward to the one who fulfils his pledge to Him [10] (The Quran, al-Fath: 10)

These words refer to the Pledge of Hudaybiyya which took place underneath a tree, of which Allah Glorified is He says in this very chapter: 'Certainly was Allah pleased with the believers when they pledged allegiance to you, [O Muhammad], under the tree, and He knew what was in their hearts, so He sent down tranquillity upon them and rewarded them with an imminent conquest' (al-Fath: 18).

The victory which we are currently examining was heralded by this pledge which was the beginning of the most supreme victory. Therefore, when 'Umar may Allah be pleased with him objected, and said to the Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him, 'Why do we yield in such a lowly way against the honour of our religion?' Abu Bakr may Allah be pleased with him rebuked him and said, 'Cleave to your stirrup, 'Umar!'(1), that is, do not go too far, and know your place. Abu Bakr may Allah be pleased with him would say, 'By Allah, there was no victory in Islam's history greater than the victory of Hudaybiyya.' Why? That was because it paved the way to the conquest of Mecca. But at the time, the people did not know the truth of what was between Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him and his Lord and it is the nature of man to be hasty.

As for the True Lord Glorified is He He does not hasten as His servants do until things turn out as He wills. You know the story of Umm Salama may Allah be pleased with her when the Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him came to her in a vexed state, and she said to him, 'What vexes you, O Messenger of Allah?' He said, 'The Muslims are ruined, Umm Salama! I commanded them, but they did not obey.' She said, 'O Messenger of Allah, they are disappointed, for they came longing to see the Ka'ba, but then were prevented from doing so when they were so close. Pardon them, O Messenger of Allah, and see to what Allah has commanded you, and do it without speaking to anyone, for when they see you do it, they shall do it.'(1) The plan of Umm Salama may Allah be pleased with her succeeded and the Muslims were saved from a trial which could have destroyed them. It is true that their stubbornness was born of faith, and it, on the surface, might have been pleasing to the Prophet Muhammad peace be upon him; but if a commandment comes from Allah on high, then it is essential to hear and obey.

(1) The like of it is related by Muslim (1785) and Al-Bukhari (4844), on the authority of Sahl ibn Hanif may Allah be pleased with him.

Therefore, they say that part of bravery is to know when to be cowardly. Suppose that we are sitting somewhere and there are great and important men among us, and then a criminal comes in with a gun and tells us to stand up, and threatens us. What should we do? We must obey what he says in such a situation so that we do not endanger ourselves.

So sometimes bravery is displayed towards others, and sometimes one must be brave towards one's own self, and this is a matter of wisdom and strategy. This is what the Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him did, and he arrived at this opinion by means of the illumination which the True Lord Glorified is He gave him.

This treaty was a way of raising the status of Islam and unfurling its banner even though they went back home without entering Mecca. This is because Quraysh had declared their enmity towards Islam, and had not allowed it to express itself, but now the door of negotiation and discussion was opened. Islam became an established reality, a word to be heard and was lifted above the humiliation and lowliness of the past.

Moreover, the treaty was a way of calming Quraysh and lessening the hatred they felt towards the Muslims; for by making a treaty with them, we were safe from them and could go about spreading the call to the rest of Arabia. And even before the Muslims had got back to Medina, the True Lord Glorified is He explained the matter to His Messenger saying: 'Indeed, those who pledge allegiance to you, [O Muhammad] - they are actually pledging allegiance to Allah' (al-Fath: 10).

(1) Related by Ahmad (18102)

A pledge of allegiance is an agreement made between two parties. ‘They made this deal with Allah, for you, Oh Muhammad, are not taking anything for yourself, you are only taking it for the sake of Allah’s way of guidance which He sent you to convey.’

So, to pledge allegiance to the Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him is really to pledge allegiance to Allah Glorified is He and therefore He says: ‘The hand of Allah is over their hands’ (al-Fath: 10). That is, over the hands which stretched out to pledge allegiance to the Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him; so Allah’s hand was above all their hands because the favour here was from Allah Glorified is He. Do not think that the favour is from you because you have pledged allegiance; rather, the favour is from Allah Glorified is He to you, and His hand is above your hands, and He is the One Who sent this goodness to you which will give you happiness in this life and the next. The hand here is not like our own hands, but rather, it is the hand of favour and grace such as when you say, ‘He gave me a hand’, meaning that he helped you or did you a favour.

He then says: ‘So he who breaks his word only breaks it to the detriment of himself,’ (al-Fath: 10) because Allah Glorified is He cannot be harmed by any of His servants’ actions; obedience does not benefit Him, and disobedience does not harm Him.

On the other hand: ‘he who fulfils that which he has promised Allah’ (al-Fath: 10), that is, he faithfully keeps to the covenant to which he has bound himself, ‘He will give him a great reward’ (al-Fath: 10).

Al-Bukhari and Muslim both mention this story, and say that Hudaybiyya was a place around 22 kilometres from Mecca, at a spot where a bent tree stood; or there may have been a spring there where they used to collect water. There were one thousand, four hundred people there, and Salam ibn Al-Akwa’ stated that they pledged allegiance to the Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him to the death;(1) Muslim also mentions that they pledged to him that they would never flee from battle. فِي قُلُوبِكُمْ وَظَنَنتُمْ ظَنَّ ٱلسَّوْءِ وَكُنتُمْ قَوْمًۢا بُورًا ﴿١٢﴾

The desert Arabs who stayed behind will say to you, ‘We were busy with our property and our families: ask forgiveness for us,’ but they say with their tongues what is not in their hearts. Say, ‘Whether it is God’s will to do you harm or good, who can intervene for you?’ No! God is fully aware of everything you [people] do [11] No! You thought that the Messenger and the believers would never return to their families and this thought warmed your hearts. Your thoughts are evil, for you are corrupt people [12] (The Quran, al-Fath: 11-12)

Allah Glorified is He here informs Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him of a matter of the unseen, telling him what these people will do. ‘Those who remained behind,’ (al-Fath: 11) were the ones who were asked to set out with the Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him to make the minor pilgrimage (u*mrah*), but did not set out and then tried to explain their actions with these excuses which the Noble Quran reveals here as false, exposing their intentions and the thoughts that were in their minds. The ‘Bedouin’ (al-Fath: 11) are the nomads who live in the wilderness, and they said ‘Our properties and our families occupied us’ (al-Fath: 11). ‘They busied us from setting out with you.’ And their words ‘so ask forgiveness for us,’ (al-Fath: 11) indicate that they had sinned and erred, for otherwise, they would not have asked the Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him to pray for their forgiveness.

The reality is that they were lying about this, for it was not their chattels or families that kept them busy, but rather, they feared to set out because they thought in their hearts that Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him would not return from this pilgrimage and that he would never come home because Quraysh were plotting against him with groups of their confederate allies from Ahabish, Thaqf, Kinana, and elsewhere. They thought to themselves what Allah Glorified is He here reveals: 'But you thought that the Messenger and the believers would never return to their families, ever' (al-Fath: 12). And therefore, those who had thought this were dumbfounded when they heard Allah reveal it, exposing what their hearts concealed.

What is incredible is that this statement 'Those who remained behind of the Bedouins will say,' (al-Fath: 11) was issued in the chapter which was recited publicly, heard by those who stayed behind themselves, and they had the ability to refrain from making these excuses. Yet, Allah Glorified is He spoke the truth, and indeed they did say what the Noble Quran had predicted they would.

This is just like what happened when Allah Glorified is He said about the changing of the prayer-direction: 'foolish among the people will say, 'What has turned them away from their qibla which they used to face?' (al-Baqara: 142)

The Jews heard these words and this description, yet they still went ahead and said what Allah Glorified is He had predicted they would, thereby proving themselves to be weak-minded. These kinds of occurrences are a sign of the truth of the Noble Quran, for the One Who is speaking knows all that will occur in the future. He states that it will happen before it happens, and then things unfold just as He said they would.

They say that those who stayed behind were the members of six tribes, namely Ghifar, Mazina, Jahina, Ashja, Ad-Dayl, and Aslam,(1) and they said, 'Muhammad has cast himself into ruin, and he will never return from this pilgrimage' because of the forces they knew would oppose him there, so they stayed behind. Yet they were keen enough to go out to Khaybar because of the untold riches and spoils that were to be found there.

Allah Glorified is He says: 'They say with their tongues what is not within their hearts,' (al-Fath: 11) referring to their words 'so ask forgiveness for us,' (al-Fath: 11) for they only spoke these words with their tongues, but they were not really concerned with being forgiven. The True Lord Glorified is He then makes it clear to them the truth of the matter: 'Say' to them, Oh Muhammad:

(1) As stated by Ibn 'Abbas may Allah be pleased with him (Ash-Shawkani, Fath Al-Qadir)

‘Then who could prevent Allah at all if He intended for you harm or intended for you benefit?’ (al-Fath: 11) This is a rhetorical question meant to express incredulity and rebuke. He was saying to them: Who can hold back Allah’s decree from you, and who can keep you from harm if it afflicts your wealth or your families? Who? No one can.

Likewise, no one can keep benefit from you if Allah Glorified is He wills it for you. So, these are false excuses and useless lies. ‘Rather, ever is Allah, with what you do, Acquainted’ (al-Fath: 11), that is, none of your affairs escape His attention.

He then rebukes them by revealing the speech which they concealed amongst themselves, saying: ‘But you thought that the Messenger and the believers would never return to ‘their families,’ (al-Fath: 12) and they were completely convinced of this thought of theirs, due to ‘and that was made pleasing in your hearts’ (al-Fath: 12).

‘And you assumed an assumption of evil,’ (al-Fath: 12) meaning the thought that the Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him would not return to his kin, and nor would the believers who set out with him; and this would have meant the end for the call of Islam. ‘And became a people ruined’ (al-Fath: 12). You are like a barren land, a people of corruption, bereft of all good.

وَمَن لَّمۡ يُؤۡمِنۢ بِٱللَّهِ وَرَسُولِهِۦ فَإِنَّآ أَعۡتَدۡنَا لِلۡكَٰفِرِينَ سَعِيرٗا ١٣

We have prepared a blazing Fire for those who do not believe in God and His Messenger [13] (The Quran, al-Fath: 13)

There is a clear allusion in these words to the aforementioned people; and when He says ‘We have prepared,’ (al-Fath: 13) this means that He has actually readied it, so it exists even now. The blazing fire will not be readied for them after they are brought forth to enter it, but rather, it has already been prepared, and it awaits them and longs for them even now.

We have already explained how the True Lord Glorified is He readied paradise with enough space to accommodate all humanity if they were all believers, and readied hell with enough space to accommodate all humanity if they were all disbelievers. So when the dwellers of paradise enter it, and the dwellers of hell enter it, there will remain empty spaces in paradise, and Allah Glorified is He will cause the dwellers of paradise to inherit them, as He says: ‘Those are the inheritors. Who will inherit al-Firdaus. They will abide therein eternally.’ (al-Mu’minun: 10-11)

وَلِلَّهِ مُلْكُ ٱلسَّمَٰوَٰتِ وَٱلْأَرْضِۚ يَغْفِرُ لِمَن يَشَآءُ وَيُعَذِّبُ
مَن يَشَآءُۚ وَكَانَ ٱللَّهُ غَفُورًا رَّحِيمًا ﴿١٤﴾

Control of the heavens and earth belongs to God and He forgives whoever He will and punishes whoever He will: God is most forgiving and merciful [14] (The Quran, al-Fath: 14)

The scholars of rhetoric say that the reason the word ‘Allah’ comes first before ‘the dominion of the heavens and the earth,’ (al-Fath: 14) is to emphasise that it belongs to Allah Alone and exclusively without any associate. So ‘to Allah belongs the dominion of the heavens and the earth,’ (al-Fath: 14) is a signal for us to reflect on the wonders of the heavens and the earth in themselves.

And He then says: ‘He forgives whom He wills and punishes whom He wills’ (al-Fath: 14). Some people understand this verse incorrectly, saying ‘Then what is the point of free will?’ But the meaning is that Allah Glorified is He forgives the believer who follows His guidance, and He does not forgive the disbeliever who rejects His guidance. So, when He says ‘Allah does not guide those who disbelieve,’ this means that He declines to guide them because of their disbelief because the heart of the disbeliever is filled with disbelief and there is no room in it for faith as two things cannot be in the same place at once. He must therefore first remove the disbelief from his heart before considering the matter of faith.

If he removes the desire from his heart and discusses the matter with himself, comparing faith to disbelief and then accepting whichever of them seems best to him, he will inevitably choose faith. Therefore, we say that the disbeliever does not give himself any chance to engage in proper rational enquiry.

And read what He says: ‘Say, ‘I only advise you of one [thing] - that you stand for Allah, [seeking truth] in pairs and individually, and then give thought.’ There is not in your companion any madness,’ (Saba’: 46).

The True Lord Glorified is He does not want us to engage in chaotic thought or fruitless debate, so He tells us that the proper way to reflect, meditate and examine is to discuss the matter alone with yourself, or with one other person at the most, each speaking and responding to the other, far from any argument or partisan bickering, both close to reaching the truth.

Although the verse speaks about both forgiveness and suffering, it ends with mention of forgiveness and grace, since they are dominant: ‘And ever is Allah Forgiving and Merciful’ (al-Fath: 14).

يُرِيدُونَ أَن يُبَدِّلُوا۟ كَلَٰمَ ٱللَّهِ ۚ قُل لَّن تَتَّبِعُونَا كَذَٰلِكُمْ قَالَ ٱللَّهُ مِن قَبْلُ ۖ
فَسَيَقُولُونَ بَلْ تَحْسُدُونَنَا ۚ بَلْ كَانُوا۟ لَا يَفْقَهُونَ إِلَّا قَلِيلًا ﴿١٥﴾

When you [believers] set off for somewhere that promises war gains, those who [previously] stayed behind will say, ‘Let us come with you.’ They want to change God’s words, but tell them [Prophet], ‘You may not come with us: God has said this before.’ They will reply, ‘You begrudge us out of jealousy.’ How little they understand! [15] (The Quran, al-Fath: 15)

Again, the True Lord Glorified is He predicts what those who stayed behind will say; and the booty they desired was the booty of Khaybar, saying: ‘Let us follow you’ (al-Fath: 15), that is, so that we can take the spoils just as you will take them. ‘They wish to change the words of Allah,’ (al-Fath: 15) meaning they wish to change His ruling forbidding them to go. The True Lord Glorified is He made this clear when He said: ‘And if they had intended to go forth, they would have prepared for it [some] preparation. But Allah disliked their being sent, so He kept them back, and they were told, ‘Remain [behind] with those who remain. Had they gone forth with you, they would not have increased you except in confusion, and they would have been active among you, seeking [to cause] you fitnah. And among you are avid listeners to them. And Allah is knowing of the wrongdoers.’ (at-Tawba: 46-47)

The meaning of ‘the Word of Allah,’ (al-Fath: 15) here is His ruling that they would not be permitted to go out to Khaybar; and Allah’s Ruling cannot be annulled, and His Word cannot be rebuffed. Allah Glorified is He gave them another chance later on, permitting them to fight in the Wars of Apostasy.

The response to them then comes: ‘Never will you follow us. Thus, did Allah say before’ (al-Fath: 15), that is, before we returned. So, they will say, ‘Rather, you envy us’ (al-Fath: 15). Indeed, they understand only a little, for it is not an issue of war-booty.

قُل لِّلْمُخَلَّفِينَ مِنَ ٱلْأَعْرَابِ سَتُدْعَوْنَ إِلَىٰ قَوْمٍ أُو۟لِى بَأْسٍ شَدِيدٍ
تُقَٰتِلُونَهُمْ أَوْ يُسْلِمُونَ ۖ فَإِن تُطِيعُوا۟ يُؤْتِكُمُ ٱللَّهُ أَجْرًا حَسَنًا ۖ وَإِن
تَتَوَلَّوْا۟ كَمَا تَوَلَّيْتُم مِّن قَبْلُ يُعَذِّبْكُمْ عَذَابًا أَلِيمًا ﴿١٦﴾

Tell the desert Arabs who stayed behind, ‘You will be called to face a people of great might in war and to fight them, unless they surrender: if you obey, God will reward you well, but if you turn away, as you have done before, He will punish you heavily [16]
(The Quran, al-Fath: 16)

That is, ‘Oh you who did not set out alongside the Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him to perform the pilgrimage of Hudaybiyya, Allah has forbidden you from going to Khaybar because there are other people who deserve to go ahead of you, namely those who obeyed the Prophet Muhammad in going out to Hudaybiyya.

As for you, your opportunity will come in the Wars of Apostasy, wherein you will fight people ‘[face] a people of great military might,’ (al-Fath: 16) men of strength and skill in warfare, ‘but if you turn away as you turned away before,’ (al-Fath: 16) at Hudaybiyya, ‘He will punish you with a painful punishment’ (al-Fath: 16).

لَّيۡسَ عَلَى ٱلۡأَعۡمَىٰ حَرَجٞ وَلَا عَلَى ٱلۡأَعۡرَجِ حَرَجٞ وَلَا عَلَى ٱلۡمَرِيضِ حَرَجٞۗ وَمَن يُطِعِ ٱللَّهَ
وَرَسُولَهُۥ يُدۡخِلۡهُ جَنَّٰتٖ تَجۡرِي مِن تَحۡتِهَا ٱلۡأَنۡهَٰرُۖ وَمَن يَتَوَلَّ يُعَذِّبۡهُ عَذَابًا أَلِيمٗا ﴿١٧﴾

The blind, the lame, and the sick will not be blamed.' God will admit anyone who obeys Him and His Messenger to Gardens graced with flowing streams; He will painfully punish anyone who turns away [17] (The Quran, al-Fath: 17)

That is, these people are not guilty of any sin or fault for not going out to fight, for they have legitimate excuses, (1) and do not have the means to fight. The discourse then presents us with a comparison between the act and the reward of the act: 'And whoever obeys Allah and His Messenger' (al-Fath: 17) in going out to fight, ' He will admit him to gardens beneath which rivers flow,' (al-Fath: 17) but whoever refuses to go out, ' He will punish him with a painful punishment' (al-Fath: 17).

لَّقَدۡ رَضِيَ ٱللَّهُ عَنِ ٱلۡمُؤۡمِنِينَ إِذۡ يُبَايِعُونَكَ تَحۡتَ ٱلشَّجَرَةِ
فَعَلِمَ مَا فِي قُلُوبِهِمۡ فَأَنزَلَ ٱلسَّكِينَةَ عَلَيۡهِمۡ وَأَثَٰبَهُمۡ فَتۡحٗا قَرِيبٗا ﴿١٨﴾
وَمَغَانِمَ كَثِيرَةٗ يَأۡخُذُونَهَاۗ وَكَانَ ٱللَّهُ عَزِيزًا حَكِيمٗا ﴿١٩﴾

God was pleased with the believers when they swore allegiance to you [Prophet] under the tree: He knew what was in their hearts and so He sent tranquillity down to them and rewarded them with a speedy triumph [18] And with many future gains. God is mighty and wise [19] (The Quran, al-Fath: 18 - 19)

This is the Pledge of Ar-Ridwan, or the Pledge of Hudaybiyya. 'He knew what was in their hearts,' (al-Fath: 18) the longing they had to see the Ka'ba and perform the pilgrimage. 'So He sent down tranquillity upon them' (al-Fath: 18), i.e. stillness and tranquillity because they obeyed the command of the Prophet

(1) Ibn 'Abbas may Allah be pleased with him said that when "but if you turn away as you turned away this time, He will chastise you with grievous chastisement" (al-Fath: 16) was revealed, the infirm said, 'What about us, O Messenger of Allah?', and shortly afterwards "No blame attaches to the blind, nor does blame attach to the lame, nor does blame attach to the sick" (al-Fath: 17) was revealed. (Al-Qurtubi, Tafsir)

Muhammad peace be upon him, ‘and rewarded them with an imminent conquest,’ (al-Fath: 18) namely the Treaty of Hudaybiyya, which paved the way for the greatest conquest, the Conquest of Mecca. ‘And much war booty which they will take’ (al-Fath: 19) namely the spoils of Khaybar.

وَعَدَكُمُ ٱللَّهُ مَغَانِمَ كَثِيرَةٗ تَأۡخُذُونَهَا فَعَجَّلَ لَكُمۡ هَٰذِهِۦ وَكَفَّ أَيۡدِيَ
ٱلنَّاسِ عَنكُمۡ وَلِتَكُونَ ءَايَةٗ لِّلۡمُؤۡمِنِينَ وَيَهۡدِيَكُمۡ صِرَٰطٗا مُّسۡتَقِيمٗا ﴿٢٠﴾

He has promised you [people] many future gains: He has hastened this gain for you. He has held back the hands of hostile people from you as a sign for the faithful and He will guide you to a straight path [20] (The Quran, al-Fath: 20)

His words ‘and has hastened for you this,’ (al-Fath: 20) refer to the spoils of Khaybar. ‘And withheld the hands of people from you’ (al-Fath: 20), that is, He has prevented your enemies such as the Jews and others who were in the regions of Medina, by casting dread into their hearts.

وَأُخۡرَىٰ لَمۡ تَقۡدِرُواْ عَلَيۡهَا قَدۡ أَحَاطَ ٱللَّهُ بِهَاۚ وَكَانَ ٱللَّهُ عَلَىٰ كُلِّ شَيۡءٖ قَدِيرٗا ﴿٢١﴾

There are many other gains [to come], over which you have no power. God has full control over them: God has power over all things [21] (The Quran, al-Fath: 21)

That is, other battle-spoils, meaning the spoils of the Battle of Hunayn; Allah Glorified is He gave them tidings of this future event, and indeed it took place after the Conquest.

وَلَوۡ قَٰتَلَكُمُ ٱلَّذِينَ كَفَرُواْ لَوَلَّوُاْ ٱلۡأَدۡبَٰرَ ثُمَّ لَا يَجِدُونَ وَلِيّٗا وَلَا نَصِيرٗا ﴿٢٢﴾
سُنَّةَ ٱللَّهِ ٱلَّتِي قَدۡ خَلَتۡ مِن قَبۡلُۖ وَلَن تَجِدَ لِسُنَّةِ ٱللَّهِ تَبۡدِيلٗا ﴿٢٣﴾

If the disbelievers had fought against you, they would have taken flight and found no one to protect or support them [22] such was God’s practice in the past and you will find no change in God’s practices [23] (The Quran, al-Fath: 22-23)

When He says ‘they would have turned their backs,’ (al-Fath: 22) this means that they will flee and capitulate. And this is ‘the established way of Allah' (al-Fath: 23), i.e. the usual way He deals with His creatures. Allah Glorified is He succours the people of truth and brings the people of falsehood to ruin. 'Which has occurred before,' (al-Fath: 23) meaning it came to pass for all the previous communities.

وَهُوَ ٱلَّذِى كَفَّ أَيْدِيَهُمْ عَنكُمْ وَأَيْدِيَكُمْ عَنْهُم بِبَطْنِ مَكَّةَ مِنۢ
بَعْدِ أَنْ أَظْفَرَكُمْ عَلَيْهِمْ ۚ وَكَانَ ٱللَّهُ بِمَا تَعْمَلُونَ بَصِيرًا ﴿٢٤﴾

In the valley of Mecca it was He who held their hands back from you and your hands back from them after He gave you the advantage over them — God sees all that you do [24] (The Quran, al-Fath: 24)

'After He caused you to overcome them,' (al-Fath: 24) means that He succoured you against them and gave you the upper hand over them, This is the power which forced the disbelievers of Mecca to sit and negotiate with the Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him for the Muslims had secured an acknowledgeable and respectable presence, and so Quraysh came to make a treaty with them.

هُمُ ٱلَّذِينَ كَفَرُوا۟ وَصَدُّوكُمْ عَنِ ٱلْمَسْجِدِ ٱلْحَرَامِ وَٱلْهَدْىَ مَعْكُوفًا أَن
يَبْلُغَ مَحِلَّهُۥ ۚ وَلَوْلَا رِجَالٌ مُّؤْمِنُونَ وَنِسَآءٌ مُّؤْمِنَٰتٌ لَّمْ تَعْلَمُوهُمْ أَن تَطَـُٔوهُمْ
فَتُصِيبَكُم مِّنْهُم مَّعَرَّةٌۢ بِغَيْرِ عِلْمٍ ۖ لِّيُدْخِلَ ٱللَّهُ فِى رَحْمَتِهِۦ مَن يَشَآءُ ۚ لَوْ
تَزَيَّلُوا۟ لَعَذَّبْنَا ٱلَّذِينَ كَفَرُوا۟ مِنْهُمْ عَذَابًا أَلِيمًا ﴿٢٥﴾

They were the ones who disbelieved, who barred you from the Sacred Mosque, and who prevented the offering from reaching its place of sacrifice. If there had not been among them, unknown to you, believing men and women whom you would have trampled underfoot, inadvertently incurring guilt on their account – God brings whoever He will into His mercy – if the [believers] had been clearly separated, We would have inflicted a painful punishment on the disbelievers [25] (The Quran, al-Fath: 25)

The True Lord Glorified is He makes clear to them here the wisdom of the Treaty and the reason why they did not engage the disbelievers in fighting at that time; ‘It is true that they barred you from the Ka‘ba and prevented you from entering Mecca, although you were filled with longing for the House, and you had brought offerings for it with you – and the offerings proved that you had come in peace and were not seeking war, but rather had come to perform religious observances.’ ‘While the offering was prevented from reaching its place of sacrifice’ (al-Fath: 25). The offerings were cattle traditionally given to the poor people in the House, yet on this occasion they were ‘prevented,’ (al-Fath: 25) and restrained from this purpose.

Allah Glorified is He then reveals to us the true situation of the Meccans at that time: ‘For some of the folk of Mecca are your fellow Muslims, but they are concealing their Islam; amongst the disbelievers there are believing men and women who you do not know, and if you engage in war against the Meccans, you will kill these believers without knowing it.’ ‘And there would befall you because of them dishonour without [your] knowledge’ (al-Fath: 25). A grievous wrong means a serious harm; ‘And it would have been a great blemish against your names for you to kill your own brethren.’ ‘If they had been apart [from them], We would have punished those who disbelieved among them with painful punishment’ (al-Fath: 25). ‘Were the believers clearly distinguishable from the disbelievers, We would have punished them by your hands, and allowed you to fight them.’

إِذۡ جَعَلَ ٱلَّذِينَ كَفَرُواْ فِي قُلُوبِهِمُ ٱلۡحَمِيَّةَ حَمِيَّةَ ٱلۡجَٰهِلِيَّةِ فَأَنزَلَ ٱللَّهُ
سَكِينَتَهُۥ عَلَىٰ رَسُولِهِۦ وَعَلَى ٱلۡمُؤۡمِنِينَ وَأَلۡزَمَهُمۡ كَلِمَةَ ٱلتَّقۡوَىٰ
وَكَانُوٓاْ أَحَقَّ بِهَا وَأَهۡلَهَاۚ وَكَانَ ٱللَّهُ بِكُلِّ شَيۡءٍ عَلِيمٗا ٢٦

While the disbelievers had fury in their hearts – the fury of ignorance – God sent His tranquillity down on to His Messenger and the believers and made binding on them [their] promise to obey God, for that was more appropriate and fitting for them. God has full knowledge of all things[26]
(The Quran, al-Fath: 26)

The True Lord Glorified is He makes clear to His Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him the reason why they barred him from entering Mecca that year. It was purely a matter of rancour and the stubbornness of pagan ignorance which had taken root in the hearts of these people so that it seemed a grave thing for Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him and his Companions to enter Mecca, and for them to have entered that year would have been a disgrace for the disbelievers.(1)

‘Chauvinism,’ (al-Fath: 26) means rashness, delusion and haughtiness, and power is only praised or blamed according to the effect it has on a person: power is praised if it brings goodness to the one who possesses it, and it is blamed if it draws him into evil and destruction.

‘But Allah sent down His tranquillity upon His Messenger,’ (al-Fath: 26) meaning confidence in Allah’s succour, and acceptance of the Treaty and of the return home without entering Mecca that year. ‘And imposed upon them the word of righteousness,’ (al-Fath: 26) namely the tenet of monotheism; ‘and they were more deserving of it and worthy of it,’ (al-Fath: 26) because of their obedience of Allah Glorified is He and His Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him

لَّقَدۡ صَدَقَ ٱللَّهُ رَسُولَهُ ٱلرُّءۡيَا بِٱلۡحَقِّۖ لَتَدۡخُلُنَّ ٱلۡمَسۡجِدَ ٱلۡحَرَامَ إِن
شَآءَ ٱللَّهُ ءَامِنِينَ مُحَلِّقِينَ رُءُوسَكُمۡ وَمُقَصِّرِينَ لَا تَخَافُونَۖ فَعَلِمَ مَا لَمۡ
تَعۡلَمُواْ فَجَعَلَ مِن دُونِ ذَٰلِكَ فَتۡحٗا قَرِيبًا ﴿٢٧﴾

God has truly fulfilled His Messenger’s vision: ‘God willing, you will most certainly enter the Sacred Mosque in safety, shaven- headed or with cropped hair, without fear!’ – God knew what you did not – and He has granted you a speedy triumph [27] (The Quran, al-Fath: 27)

The True Lord Glorified is He tells us of the yearning the Muslims had for the House, after they had been away from Mecca for such a long time, and their yearning to perform the rites of the pilgrimage and walk around the Ka‘ba, but the stubborn disdain of pagan ignorance, together with its false delusion in its own power, came between them and what they wanted. When the True Lord Glorified is He speaks about this matter, He speaks about it as though it was a vision which occurred before the events actually came to pass; and as you know, a vision is what a sleeping person sees – and it might be true, or it might not.

(1) This is because they said, ‘They have killed our sons and our brothers, and now they will enter our very houses! By Lat and by ‘Uzza, they shall never enter them!’ (Al-Qurtubi, Tafsir)

The Noble Quran also speaks about visions in the story of Yusuf (Joseph) peace be upon him: '[Of these stories mention] when Joseph said to his Father, 'O my Father, indeed I have seen [in a dream] eleven stars and the sun and the moon; I saw them prostrating to me' (Yusuf: 4).

The orientalists have objected to this verse and the rhetorical style of the Noble Quran because it repeats the words: 'I saw them prostrate themselves before me!' (Yusuf: 4)

But the one who reflects on the story and its details will find that this is not repetition because each verb has its own meaning and purpose. In the first, he said: 'I have seen [in a dream] eleven stars and the sun and the moon,' (Yusuf: 4), but did not say 'prostrate themselves'; and then the second time, he says: 'I saw them prostrating to me' (Yusuf: 4). This means that there were two separate visions. In the first vision, he saw them in their usual form, not prostrating, and then after that he saw them prostrating. You could not tell if the sun was prostrating, for example, unless you first of all saw it in its usual form, and then it prostrated.

So, the vision must have been repeated once without the prostration and once with it, which means that they prostrated all of a sudden before him. If he had said, 'I saw them prostrate themselves' right from the start, we would say, 'How?' Because prostration starts from a position of stillness and then takes form. The True Lord Glorified is He does not use a word unless it has a specific purpose meaning to convey and a necessary reason for being there.

When Yusuf (Joseph) peace be upon him told his Father of this vision: 'He said, 'O my son, do not relate your vision to your brothers or they will contrive against you a plan' (Yusuf: 5). Ya'qub (Jacob) peace be upon him knew that this vision meant that Yusuf (Joseph) peace be upon him would be raised above his brothers; and if they resented him because his Father cared for him, or showed more affection to him, then what would they do if he told them of this vision? What would they do if they knew that the celestial bodies had prostrated before him?

And here, too, there is mention of a vision: ‘Certainly has Allah showed to His Messenger the vision in truth’ (al-Fath: 27). This implies that the Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him had seen a vision, which was: ‘You will surely enter Al-Masjid Al-Haram, if Allah wills, in safety, with your heads shaved and [hair] shortened, not fearing [anyone]’ (al-Fath: 27).

Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him told his Companions about this vision of his, and so they felt assured that they indeed would enter Mecca and perform the pilgrimage. When the fools of Quraysh forbade them from entering Mecca, they were amazed, and objected to being barred from entering.

And ‘Umar said to the Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him, ‘Are we not in the right? Are they not in the wrong?’ He said, ‘Indeed yes,’ and so ‘Umar said: ‘Then why do we yield in such a lowly way against the honour of our religion?’

It is true that they were in the right, and they came filled with longing for the House of Worship; but had they entered Mecca by force without the sanction of its inhabitants, there would have been a battle, and this would mean that those living secretly as Muslims in Mecca would have been hurt, as the previous verse explained.

Therefore, the True Lord Glorified is He then says: ‘He knew what you did not know’ (al-Fath: 27). The True Lord Glorified is He showed His Prophet the vision, and He showed the truth of it; but it has not yet happened, for Allah Glorified is He knows the truth of the matter even if you do not know it, and therefore He has postponed the minor pilgrimage this year, and made the Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him agree to a treaty with the disbelievers of Mecca that the Muslims shall be allowed to perform the minor pilgrimage next year.

And read what He says: ‘You will surely enter Al-Masjid Al-Haram, if Allah wills’ (al-Fath: 27). He did not specify when this would be, so if anyone says, ‘Did you not say that we would perform the minor pilgrimage and enter the Sacred Mosque?’ He may say to them, ‘Not necessarily this year.’

The one who reflects on the wording of the verse will find that this is what it implies, and that the minor pilgrimage would not be performed that year. We can infer this from the words: ‘with your heads shaved and [hair] shortened, not fearing [anyone]’ (al-Fath: 27). For had you entered Mecca without the permission and consent of Quraysh, this security would not have been given you, for they would have fought you and aggressed against you; and even if they had let you enter, they would not have been able to bear seeing you walking around the Ka‘ba, and they would inevitably have fallen under the spell of the stubborn disdain of pagan ignorance.

He then says: ‘not fearing [anyone]’ (al-Fath: 27). This is another assurance of security, referring to the time after the rites of the pilgrimage are finished; for once someone entered the Sanctuary to perform the rites, Quraysh would not touch them, but they would attack them as soon as they finish their rites.

His Words ‘without any fear,’ (al-Fath: 27) indicate that they would be safe both at the start of the pilgrimage and the end of it, and this could only be the case if they entered with the consent and permission of Quraysh.

Concerning the words ‘vision in truth,’ (al-Fath: 27) as long as Allah Glorified is He showed him the vision, it would inevitably be borne out in reality because the visions of the prophets are always true. The prophethood of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him began with true visions, and for six months he continued to receive these visions.

And if we compare this with the 23 years his mission lasted, we find that it is one 46th; and this explains why the Noble Ḥadith says that true visions are one forty-sixth of prophethood.(1) Prophethood begins with true visions because they come when the person is asleep, having no particular thoughts or desires.

Allah Glorified is He says: ‘and has arranged before that a conquest near [at hand]’ (al-Fath: 27). He ordained, after the Truce of Hudaybiyya and their return home without having performed the pilgrimage, a victory soon to come for Islam and the Muslims. It was a victory for several reasons: Firstly, it resulted in an armistice and truce with Quraysh which gave an opportunity for the call to be spread outside Mecca, for the Muslims could do this freely without worrying about attacks from Quraysh.

(1) Related by Al-Bukhari (6474) and Muslim (4203) on the authority of Abu Hurayra may Allah be pleased with him

This also means that they acknowledged Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him and his call, and respected the covenant made with him; so, Islam had become notable after having been an object of persecution.

Moreover, this treaty gave dignity to the Muslims, and do not think that when Quraysh bar you from entering the Sacred Mosque, this is an honour for them. Never, for in Allah's sight all honour and dignity are found in being conscious of Allah Glorified is He not in tyranny or false delusions of strength.

In this treaty, the Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him gave us a lesson in good polity; for he accepted to make this treaty with the disbelievers, and to return home with his companions without entering Mecca that year despite how close they were to it because this was good for the Muslims and for Islam. In the course of making the pact, He peace and blessings be upon him agreed to things which no one could have guessed he would agree to.

For when they came to write the treaty down, the Prophet dictated to 'Ali may Allah be pleased with him who served as the scribe: 'This is what has been agreed by Muhammad, the Messenger of Allah.' Suhayl ibn 'Amr said, 'If we believed you were the Messenger of Allah, we would not have fought you, and we would not be here now.' So the Messenger of Allah said to 'Ali, 'Write instead, 'Muhammad ibn 'Abdullah,'' deferring to Suhayl's opinion, but 'Ali may Allah be pleased with him objected to this and insisted on writing 'The Messenger of Allah', so the Messenger of Allah peace and blessings be upon him said to him, 'Write it, for you shall have to endure it one day, too.'

Indeed, the years passed and the dispute arose between 'Ali and Mu'awiya may Allah be pleased with them. When they came to make a treaty, 'Ali said, 'Write: This is what has been agreed by 'Ali ibn Abu Taleb, the Commander of the Faithful,' but they objected to the title 'Commander of the Faithful', and said, 'If we believed you were that, we would not have fought you.' So he accepted this, and wrote only his name.(1) And this was a miraculous sign of prophethood.

(1) At-Tabari, Ar-Riyad An-Nadira

In addition, when the Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings upon him dictated the word ‘In the Name of Allah, The Most Merciful, The Bestower of Mercy’ at the start of the document, they refused to write it because they did not know this formula, and they insisted it be phrased: ‘In Your Name, O Allah’; and the Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings upon him assented to this as well.

These were all concessions which the Messenger of Allah made, and he did so for the good of Islam and the Muslims, in light of Allah’s words: ‘ He knew what you did not know,’ (al-Fath: 27). And the outcome was: ‘and has arranged before that a conquest near [at hand]’ (al-Fath: 27). And indeed, after this treaty, the conquests came one after another, for they were safe from the Quraysh’s harm for ten years.

هُوَ ٱلَّذِىٓ أَرْسَلَ رَسُولَهُۥ بِٱلْهُدَىٰ وَدِينِ ٱلْحَقِّ
لِيُظْهِرَهُۥ عَلَى ٱلدِّينِ كُلِّهِۦ ۚ وَكَفَىٰ بِٱللَّهِ شَهِيدًا ﴿٢٨﴾

It was He who sent His Messenger, with guidance and the religion of Truth, for him to show that it is above all [false] religion. God suffices as a witness [28]
(The Quran, al-Fath: 28)

‘Guidance’ (al-Fath: 28) means directions along the path of goodness which leads to the destination that pleases the one who reaches it in this life and the next. The Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him was sent with guidance to all mankind, and he showed them all the way; and those who follow his guidance will be given aid and extra guidance by Allah: ‘And those who are guided - He increases them in guidance and gives them their righteousness,’ (Muhammad: 17). And those who decline to follow his guidance and choose error instead will be increased in error by Allah Glorified is He who will set a seal on their hearts.

We gave the example to illustrate this before of the traffic policeman who gives you directions: if you listen to him and follow his directions, he might do even more for you and accompany you until you get to your destination; but if you reject his advice, he will leave you to the difficulties of the road, and he might even see you go the wrong way but not tell you so because you would not listen to him if he did.

And when The Noble Quran speaks about guidance; it says: ‘Those are upon [right] guidance from their Lord’ (al-Baqara: 5). This concept corrects the mistaken understanding which some have, thinking that guidance is a burden for the one who follows it to bear, giving him difficult responsibilities and restraining his freedom.

But this is not what guidance is, as it is a vehicle which transports you to your goal. Although the religion appears to restrict your movement, it restricts it for your own good, and it stands in the way of your passions for your own good.

The religion might hold your hand back from stealing, but it holds back everyone else’s hands from stealing from you and when it commands you to lower your gaze from people’s womenfolk, He commands everyone else to lower their gazes from your womenfolk. So, you are the one who wins. The religion restricts your motions towards a fleeting passion in this life so that it can give you lasting bliss in the Hereafter.

His words ‘and the religion of truth,’ (al-Fath: 28) means Islam, and the truth is the constant thing which never changes. ‘To prevail it over all religion,’ (al-Fath: 28) means to make His religion and His word ascendant over all the religions which came before it because the Noble Quran came to encompass and determine the truth of all other scriptures, as Allah Glorified is He says: ‘And We have revealed to you, [O Muhammad], the Book in truth, confirming that which preceded it of the Scripture and as a criterion over it’ (al-Ma‘ida: 48).

The prevailing here is one of proofs, arguments and the perfect teachings of the religion. This does not prevent the existence of other religions which still exist even today, fourteen centuries after the coming of Islam.

We were asked this question on one of our travels, and we said that it does not mean that everyone will be Muslim because this prevailing will be a prevailing of teachings; and this has indeed happened by your own admission, for the issues of life have driven you to adopt Islam’s teachings whenever your problems could not be solved in any other way.

We see that they adopted, for example, the Islamic attitude towards divorce; and this was a victory for the religion because they adopted its teachings even without believing in it; and likewise in the matter of polygamy; they used to attack it and criticise it, but now they are adopting it. What is strange is that they accept for a man to have several girlfriends, but not several wives; and this is a corruption of nature and behaviour which no sound law tolerates.

Likewise when it comes to economic matters, their great economist Keynes stated that money cannot perform its proper social function unless interest rates are at zero, and this is just what Islam says which is why it prohibits usury; for usury is a transaction between rich and poor. A rich person who has enough excess wealth to lend it, and a poor person who has nothing at all and so has to borrow – so how could we ask the poor person, who does not even possess the basic amount loaned, to give the rich person this amount and then even more?

Suppose that the poor person takes the money to invest it in a business venture, but this venture fails. He will then be required to pay back the capital, plus the interest, in addition to all the effort he put into this venture which has all gone to waste.

So how many misfortunes have beset him? Forbidding usury, therefore, firstly considers what is best for the poor person. It also does what is best for the rich person when all things are considered because while he is wealthy and able to loan, he is only giving consideration to his present state of wealth – but things might change, and the rich man might become poor and in need of a loan himself. So, it is not in his interest to deal in usury.

And His words '…and none can bear witness [to the truth] as Allah does' (al-Fath: 28) mean that His testimony is sufficient, for when a witness testifies, he only testifies as to what he has seen, and his vision is limited; but when Allah testifies, this is a testimony of complete and all-encompassing knowledge which cannot be changed by anyone. But what is it that He 'bears witness' to? They say that He bears witness that the one who follows His guidance will go to paradise, the abode of constant bliss without end, and favour without cease.

مُّحَمَّدٞ رَّسُولُ ٱللَّهِۚ وَٱلَّذِينَ مَعَهُۥٓ أَشِدَّآءُ عَلَى ٱلۡكُفَّارِ رُحَمَآءُ بَيۡنَهُمۡۖ تَرَىٰهُمۡ رُكَّعٗا سُجَّدٗا يَبۡتَغُونَ فَضۡلٗا
مِّنَ ٱللَّهِ وَرِضۡوَٰنٗاۖ سِيمَاهُمۡ فِي وُجُوهِهِم مِّنۡ أَثَرِ ٱلسُّجُودِۚ ذَٰلِكَ مَثَلُهُمۡ فِي ٱلتَّوۡرَىٰةِۚ وَمَثَلُهُمۡ فِي
ٱلۡإِنجِيلِ كَزَرۡعٍ أَخۡرَجَ شَطۡـَٔهُۥ فَـَٔازَرَهُۥ فَٱسۡتَغۡلَظَ فَٱسۡتَوَىٰ عَلَىٰ سُوقِهِۦ يُعۡجِبُ ٱلزُّرَّاعَ لِيَغِيظَ بِهِمُ
ٱلۡكُفَّارَۗ وَعَدَ ٱللَّهُ ٱلَّذِينَ ءَامَنُواْ وَعَمِلُواْ ٱلصَّٰلِحَٰتِ مِنۡهُم مَّغۡفِرَةٗ وَأَجۡرًا عَظِيمَۢا ﴿٢٩﴾

Muhammad is the Messenger of God. Those who follow him are harsh towards the disbelievers and compassionate towards each other. You see them kneeling and prostrating, seeking God's bounty and His good pleasure: on their faces they bear the marks of their prostrations. This is how they are pictured in the Torah and the Gospel: like a seed that puts forth its shoot, becomes strong, grows thick, and rises on its stem to the delight of its sowers. So God infuriates the disbelievers through them; God promises forgiveness and a great reward to those who believe and do righteous deeds [29] (The Quran, al-Fath: 29)

'Muhammad' peace be upon him is his name, and 'Allah's Apostle' is his new title, for we knew Muhammad before he was the Messenger of Allah. And the name Muhammad is derived from the word hamd, which means 'praise' meaning that people praise him, and his people praised him right from his childhood, and called him 'The Truthful, Honest One' because his life story and past amongst them had shown these to be his attributes, and shown that he was a special person amongst his peers, and no ordinary man.

And they all agreed on this even before the Message came to him, and in his childhood, they saw that he was never tainted by any of the weakness and foolishness of infancy. They saw that he tended sheep, and whilst other young shepherds like him would walk down from the hills into Mecca by night to attend late-night parties, he did not; and he once thought about going with them, but as he was going, sleep overcame him, and he did not wake up until the entertainment had finished.(1) It is as though Allah protected him and preserved his hearing and sight from being exposed to any of these things. And his friends were amazed because they saw that he did not join them in these activities, so they began to consider him as honest; and when they found that he never lied, it made sense for them to name him 'The Truthful, Honest One.'

(1) Narrated in Al-Kamil fi At-Tarikh

And one day, all the boys gathered to carry a heavy stone to play with it, and when it proved too heavy for them, they lifted up their garments to use them to carry it. The Prophet peace and blessings be upon him was with them, and he began to lift up his garment as they had, but he heard a voice say, 'Your privacy, Muhammad!' So, he was the only one of them not to expose his private parts. (1)

And they noticed this before he reached adulthood, and they inferred from this that he was being prepared for something. And they then came to know his sound intellect and wise opinion, which was revealed when the Black Stone was moved, and the tribes of Quraysh argued about which of them would have the honour of putting the Stone back in its place, and fighting almost broke out, so they said: 'We shall follow the judgement of the very next person who comes in.'

And it happened that the next person to come in was Muhammad, the Trustworthy, and Honest One, whose honesty no one doubted. He took off his cloak and placed the Stone on top of it, and told the representative of each tribe to take hold of a part of it and carry it, and when they reached the place in the Ka'ba meant for it, he picked it up himself and put it in its place. In this way, the dispute which had so riled the people was settled. (2)

So, when Allah says 'Muhammad…', He means: 'This man you know, and whose honesty, trustworthiness and good character are known to you; this man who lived openly amongst you for forty years, is the Messenger of Allah whom He has chosen for His Message. So, you attested to him before I sent him to you, and as long as you attested to his good character and wise opinion before, you must believe him now.'

And The True Lord Glorified is He did not only purify Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him in his person, He also purified his roots and kept them unblemished by any idol-worship, despite its prevalence at that time; and the scholars are agreed that none of His ancestors ever worshipped idols.

(1) Ibn Kathir, Sira

(2) Ibn Kathir, Sira

Therefore, a Qudsi Hadith states: {I continued to be passed from the loins of pure men to the wombs of pure women.}(1) That is, he peace be upon him came from a pure lineage uncontaminated by any of the wickedness of pagan ignorance.

And the story(2) of what happened between his Father ʿAbdullah and Zaynab Al-Khath ʿamiyya was known all over Arabia, especially in Mecca. She saw in him beauty and radiance, and desired him to the point that she offered herself to him, whereupon he said the famous lines:

I would rather die than commit sin,
And it is clear enough what is allowed;
The honourable man preserves his dignity and religion,
And how could I do this if I yielded to your desire?

And when ʿAbdullah married Amina bint-Wahb and The Prophet peace and blessings be upon him was conceived, the light which had been in his Father's face passed on to him, and when Zaynab Al-Khath ʿamiyya saw him after that, she said: 'What would I want with him now, when the light which was in his face has departed?'(3) This means that The True Lord Glorified is He looked after Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him personally, and protected him from the depravity of pagan ignorance, and guarded him through every stage of his life.

And then after that his Father died and he was sent to be nursed with the tribe of Banu Sa'd, and his wet-nurse witnessed the many wonders and miracles which would come to him. When she said to his fellow nurselings, 'Protect Muhammad from the sun's heat', they said: 'By Allah, mother, we never see him in its heat, for wherever he goes a cloud comes to shade him.'(4) So, He attested to his person, and to his forbears, and everyone knew that he was being aided from on high.

So, His words 'Muhammad is Allah's Apostle' mean that His choice of Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him as His Messenger was in accord with your opinions, so do not then give the lie to him. And ‘Muhammad’ here is the subject of the sentence, and the predicate is ‘is Allah’s Apostle’; that is, the Muhammad who is known to you all is Allah’s Apostle, and Allah knows best where to send His Message; and so, when he was sent to you, you should have believed in him and trusted him.

(1) This is narrated by many exegetes such as Al-Alusi, Ar-Razi and An-Nisapuri, without any chain of narration. It is ascribed to Ibn 'Abbas in Fatawi Al-Azhar.

(2) The story of ʿAbdullah ibn 'Abd Al-Muttalib with Zaynab Al-Khath'amiyya

(3) The like of it is narrated by As-Suhayli in Ar-Rawd Al-Anaf.

(4) Ibn Kathir, Sira

And when The True Lord Glorified is He aided Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him with miracles, He aided him with a rational miracle, and made a distinction between a rational miracle and a cosmological miracle; for the cosmological miracle only occurs once, as we saw in the story of Prophet ‘Isa (Jesus) peace be upon him and how he spoke to the people when still in the cradle, and no one saw this miracle except for those who present when it occurred and witnessed it first-hand.

As for our case, it is information which we trust and believe because The Quran informed us of it.

But when it comes to Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him his message was universal, and set a seal on all revealed messages until the Last Hour, and therefore his miracle had to befit the universality of his message, and had to be an eternal, lasting miracle which did not end in the instant it came.

Therefore, The Quran came as a miracle which would last as long as The Message lasted even until the Last Hour and since The Message was sent down, we have recited ‘Muhammad is Allah’s Apostle’, and it will continue to be recited until the Last Hour; Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him is Allah’s Apostle, by the proof of this miraculous Quran.

And therefore, Allah says: ‘Behold, it is We Ourselves who have bestowed from on high, step by step, this reminder: and, behold, it is We Who shall truly guard it [from all corruption].’ (al-Hijr: 9) The True Lord Glorified is He took it upon Himself to guard The Quran, unlike the scriptures which came before it, where He assigned the role of guarding them to their followers and those who believed in them, as He says: ‘…and so did the [early] men of Allah and the rabbis, inasmuch as some of Allah’s book had been entrusted to their care…’ (al-Ma‘ida: 44). The meaning of ‘entrusted to their care’ is that they were asked to guard them as a religious responsibility from Allah, and responsibilities can be obeyed or disobeyed, and we have seen that they did not guard them, but rather, they altered them, changed them, and forgot much of them.

As for The Quran, it is still the same now as it was when Allah revealed it to the heart of His Messenger peace be upon him because Allah guarded it Himself, and did not trust mankind to guard it.

And a clear example of how Allah guarded the Quran is that He subdued men to guard it who do not even believe in it, for many of those who print the Quran and decorate it nowadays are not Muslims; we saw how a German man printed the whole Quran on a single page, and did not even do this with the Gospel, his own scripture.

So, we say that The Messenger's past history showed his people how worthy he was to bear a divine message, and therefore many of those who heard that he peace be upon him had been sent as a prophet were quick to believe in him even before they heard a single verse of the Quran. Why? Because they took their past experiences of him as proof that he was telling the truth for they had never known him to lie even once, and the one who does not lie about other people will certainly not lie about Allah, the Lord of all people.

And we saw Abu Bakr As-Siddiq may Allah be pleased with him take this same stance after the events of the Night Journey and Ascension, for when he heard that The Prophet peace and blessings be upon him claimed he had been taken to Jerusalem, he said, ‘If he said it, he spoke the truth.’(1)

As for the miracle, it came for those who denied his message, to those who did not believe, and to those who accused the Quran of being a lie and an invention. So the Quran said to them: ‘…Produce, then, a chapter of similar merit…’ (Yunus: 38), that is, invent it yourself.

‘…And those who are [truly] with him…’ (al-Fath: 29), that is, those who believe in him and are truly with him both personally and religiously, and He says that those people are ‘…firm and unyielding towards all deniers of the truth, [yet] full of mercy towards one another…’ (al-Fath: 29); so they combine one thing and its opposite: firmness and mercy.

(1) Narrated by Al-Hakim (4381) on the authority of ‘A’isha may Allah be pleased with her

This is proof that the believer does not have a single nature which rules him, but rather, he changes in conformity with the responsibilities that come to him from his Lord the Most High: with enemies, you find that he is strong and firm towards them, showing him that the believer never yields, and with his fellow believers, he is merciful and compassionate towards them. And the Quran expresses this differently elsewhere, saying: '…humble towards the believers, proud towards all who deny the truth…' (al-Ma'ida: 54). The way of faith is what determines the believer's conduct and directs it; and this is what we saw in fact in the actions of both Abu Bakr and 'Umar may Allah be pleased with them.

Despite the kindness and mildness for which Abu Bakr may Allah be pleased with him was known, when the Apostasy occurred after The Prophet peace and blessings be upon him passed away, we saw that he cast off this mild disposition and was as firm as can be. And he said to 'Umar may Allah be pleased with him: 'By Allah, if they deny me a single penny (of poor-due) which they used to give to The Prophet peace and blessings be upon him I shall fight them for it.' And he chided 'Umar, saying: 'After being a tyrant in the pagan days, have you become a weakling in Islam?'(1)

And the one who reflects on the story of the Apostasy will see that the situation demanded harshness and firm resolve, for otherwise it would have spread, especially among those whose faith was weak and those who were new to Islam; and this is why Abu-Bakr may Allah be pleased with him changed from his usual mild disposition to a firm one.

Allah then says: '…You can see them bowing down, prostrating themselves [in prayer], seeking favour with Allah and [His] goodly acceptance…' (al-Fath: 29). So despite this firmness they show to the disbelievers, you can see them bowing down and prostrating themselves. Bowing and prostrating are successive stages by which total servitude to Allah is proclaimed, for when you bow you move from a standing position to one in which you incline towards Allah, and then prostrating is greater than bowing because you fall right down to the ground and press your forehead against it, placing the most noble feature of your body against the floor in humility, submission and subservience to Allah Glorified is He.

(1) Narrated by As-Suyuti, A-Bayhaqi, Al-Hindi and Adh-Dhahabi

Therefore, we said that bowing and prostration express total servitude to Allah and this is what we can infer from Iblis's words, of which The Quran tells us: 'And shall most certainly fall upon them openly as well as in a manner beyond their ken, and from their right and from their left…' (al-A'raf: 17). He did not mention the other two directions here, i.e. from above and from below. Why not? Because 'above' implies the loftiness of divinity and we raise our hands when we supplicate Allah; and 'below' implies the humility of servitude when we prostrate on our foreheads, and humble ourselves before Allah; therefore, Satan cannot come from these two directions.

And when He says, '…seeking favour with Allah and [His] goodly acceptance…' (al-Fath: 29), this is the reason why they are firm and unyielding towards the disbelievers and merciful towards one another, and why they are keen to bow down and prostrate themselves; that is, they do all of this out of desire for Allah's favour, and hope for His goodly acceptance.

And this is the peak of sincerity in action, for they act solely for Allah's sake, and they seek nothing else. Why? Because they always bear in the mind the Day when they will stand before Allah, and when no one but Allah will judge them and requite them.

Therefore, we said that the scientists and inventors who served mankind with their good deeds will receive no share of the good of the Hereafter because they did not work for Allah, but only for humanity and civilisation.

Therefore, Allah said about them: 'But as for those who are bent on denying the truth, their [good] deeds are like a mirage in the desert which the thirsty supposes to be water – until when he approaches it, he finds that it was nothing: instead, he finds [that] Allah [has always been present] with him, and [that] He will pay him his account in full – for Allah is swift in reckoning!' (an-Nur: 39) He will be shocked to find The True God, who was never on his mind, will be The One Who judges him, and who requites him.

And another of the signs of these believers is that '…their marks are on their faces, traced by prostration…' (al-Fath: 29). Their distinctive sign is the mark which prostration leaves on a man's face, which we call in Arabic zabibat as-salat, (the prayer's raisin).

The Creator Glorified is He did not create all mankind in a single mould, but rather, every person has his own mould, which is not identical to any other mould, despite how many people there are. This shows His omnipotent power of creation. People all have different heights, breadths, colours, features, and so on.

But the distinctive feature of all the believers Allah describes here is that '…their marks are on their faces, traced by prostration…' (al-Fath: 29), and this sign is accompanied by light and perceptible radiance in the face of the believer – and {the nearest a servant ever is to his Lord is when he prostrates.}(1)

And many of us experience pleasure when we prostrate, and feel the warmth of Allah's company, and become used to it so that the mark appears on their foreheads in addition to the light and illumination which shows on their faces.

And you can observe this if you compare a man who spends the night engaged in drinking, depravity, and wantonness, and another who spends the night worshipping Allah and praising Him.

And these faces will come forth like this: 'Some faces will on that Day be bright with happiness, [38] laughing, rejoicing at glad tidings. [39] And some faces will on that Day with dust be covered, [40] with darkness overspread: [41] these, these will be the ones who denied the truth and were immersed in iniquity! [42]' ('Abasa: 38-42)

And we can observe this image, and see it beginning in this worldly life even before the Hereafter. Allah then says: '…This', i.e. the attributes of those who believe alongside Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him which have just been mentioned, namely: '…firm and unyielding towards all deniers of the truth, [yet] full of mercy towards one another. You can see them bowing down, prostrating themselves [in prayer], seeking favour with Allah and [His] goodly acceptance: their marks are on their faces, traced by prostration…' (al-Fath: 29) these attributes are 'their parable in the Torah.' (al-Fath: 29) This is how the Torah describes them, as though the Torah contained a mention and a parable of those believers who would believe in Muhammad, The Final Messenger peace be upon him because the Torah gave the glad tidings of his coming.

(1) Narrated by Muslim (744), Abu -Dawud (741), An-Nasa'i (1125) and Ahmad (9083), on the authority of Abu-Hurayra may Allah be pleased with him

As for The Gospel, it described them with other attributes as well as these: '…as well as their parable in the Gospel: [they are] like a seed that brings forth its shoot, and then He strengthens it so that it grows stout, and [in the end] stands firm upon its stem, delighting the sowers…' (al-Fath: 29).

So, The Gospel described these believers with a parable of the seed which brings forth 'its shoot', i.e. its branches, and the shoot is the highest part of the stem or the ear; 'so that it grows stout', i.e. the stem becomes strong and full, 'and [in the end] stands firm upon its stem' meaning that it becomes full-grown, 'delighting the sowers' with its firmness and straightness, '…so that through them He might confound the deniers of the truth…' (al-Fath: 29).

And if you compare these two parables, you will see that the first parable in the Torah is concerned with the spiritual element, mentioning attributes which are all connected with moral and spiritual values; the followers of Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him are firm and unyielding towards the disbelievers and merciful towards one other, and they bow down and prostrate themselves seeking their Lord's favour and goodly acceptance, and their marks are on their faces, traced by prostration. These are all moral and spiritual values, with no connection to any material concepts at all.

As for their parable in The Gospel, it is material in form, and contains no spiritual or moral concepts at all. Why is this? They say it is because the Jews were a people of extreme materialism, and could not be convinced by anything besides it.

And whilst they were wandering in the wilderness and Allah ordained that their food would be manna and quails, a sweet and delicious food which came to them without any effort on their part, descending upon them without the need for them to work, yet they were not satisfied with it because it was mysterious and they did not know where it came from, so they asked Allah to provide them with the things which grow from the earth, such as its herbs, its cucumbers, its garlic, its lentils and its onions; that is, things they could plant with their own hands and produce themselves.

And they even wanted their relationship to Allah Glorified is He to be material in nature, for they said to Musa (Moses) peace be upon him: '…O Musa, indeed we shall not believe thee until we see Allah face to face…' (al-Baqara: 55) yet, The True Lord Glorified is He is Unseen: 'No human vision can encompass Him, whereas He encompasses all human vision…' (al-An'am: 103).

And we will see Him Glorified is He in the Hereafter because we shall be created in a different way there which will allow us to experience this honour so that we will be able to see Him. In this world, however, we cannot do so; for Allah has not refused to manifest Himself before His creation, but in this worldly life we do not have the power to bear this manifestation.

This concept is clearly shown in the story of Prophet Musa peace be upon him when he said to his Lord the Most High: 'O my Lord! Show [Yourself] unto me so that I might behold You!' (al-A'raf: 143) And the reply was: '…Said [Allah]: 'Never can you see Me. However, behold this mountain: if it remains firm in its place, then – only then – will you see Me…' (al-A'raf: 143). And this means that another being could possibly have seen Him. '…And as soon as his Lord revealed His glory to the mountain, He caused it to crumble to dust; and Moses fell down in a swoon…' (al-A'raf: 143). So, when our Lord showed Himself to the mountain, the mountain crumbled; so how would it be if He showed Himself to man? And Musa peace be upon him saw the mountain crumbling, so he fell down and swooned in dread at what he saw happen to the object of the manifestation.

We say that because of how materialistic they were, Allah gave them a parable which was concerned solely with moral and spiritual values, as though the Torah mentioned the attributes that Muhammad's followers would have which the followers of the Torah lacked, saying to them: 'You are too materialistic, and I will send forth a prophet whose community shall establish the spiritual and moral values which you lack.'

As for the Christians, they were overly spiritual, and the Gospel is entirely composed of spiritual and moral concepts; and therefore, when Prophet 'Isa (Jesus) peace be upon him was asked about the issue of inheritance, he said, 'I was not sent to distribute inheritance.'

And this difference between the Torah and the Gospel made the Jews and Christians agree on one book, a mixture of the Torah and The Gospel so that they would have both the material and the spiritual side, and they call this

‘The Bible’, agreeing on it despite the enmity and difference which exist between them.

And because The Gospel is this way, the parable of the believers there was given in an entirely materialistic form, for this is something which The Gospel lacks, and it does not contain any discourse about social interactions and the motions of life. So, each of these parables came to compensate for something which was missing: the Jews lacked spirituality, and the Christians lacked the material values required by the motions of life.

Let us now stop to consider Allah’s words ‘…so that through them He might confound the deniers of the truth…’ (al-Fath: 29). This indicates that our material advances, and our attaining to firmness and self-sufficiency, are something which confounds the disbelievers; so, do not let them get ahead of you in this regard. If they get ahead of you in this regard, they will humiliate you, and hold sway over you, and use the advantage they have over you to dominate you.

And unfortunately, this is just what happened, for we have come to need them for most of the products we use, even the food we live on, and they have done all kinds of things to us; there is no strength nor power except with Allah. It is as though The True Lord Glorified is He were saying to us: ‘O you who believe in Muhammad and have accepted Allah as your Lord, Islam as your religion, and Muhammad as your prophet, you must take both sides into consideration: the material side that which gives you prominence and aids you in life’s motions, and the spiritual side that which protects you from error and rectifies your religious and worldly life; for your parable in the Torah was based on spiritual and moral values, and your parable in The Gospel was based on material values.’

Therefore, Islam came to compliment material science, not to oppose it, and The Quran is full of discourse about natural phenomena. If you like, read these verses and reflect on them: ‘Are you not aware that Allah sends down water from the skies whereby We bring forth fruits of many hues – just as in the mountains there are streaks of white and red of various shades, as well as [others] raven-black, [27] and [as] there are in men, and in crawling beasts, and in cattle, too, many hues? Of all His servants, only such as are endowed with [innate] knowledge stand [truly] in awe of Allah: [for they alone comprehend that,] verily, Allah is Almighty, Most Forgiving. [28]' (Fatir: 27-28).

All the genera of existence are mentioned here: man, animals, plants, and minerals. And the words 'such as are endowed with [innate] knowledge' do not mean religious scholars only; they mean all those people who have knowledge, whether religious or worldly.

It is as though The True Lord wanted to give us a religion which combined the interests of this worldly life and the Hereafter, and combined worship and the motions of life; so, do not take the religion and leave this worldly life to your enemies, lest they use it to humiliate you.

And as we said before, if a man wants his words to be heard, he must work for his own living. So, do not let your enemies outdo you in this field, for Allah's lordly bestowal is given to both the believer and the disbeliever alike, so do not leave it aside and rely only on His divine bestowal. You cannot worship Allah properly unless you partake of His lordly bestowal, and work to develop the motions of life, benefit from them, and participate in them.

We illustrated this before by giving the example of covering one's nakedness, which is obligatory and essential for worship: look at how many actions we must perform to cover our nakedness with clothes. Follow the piece of cotton from the point where the earth gives it forth to the point where it becomes clothes. So, the motions of life are what allow you to perform the motions of religion.

Allah then says: '…[But] unto such of them as may [yet] attain to faith and do righteous deeds, Allah has promised forgiveness and a reward supreme.' (al-Fath: 29) The words 'attain to faith' refer to the side of religion, and then 'and do righteous deeds' refer to the side of this world and the motions of life it requires.

So, beware of neglecting one side for the sake of the other; for your religion is a religion which combines spirit and material; and those who attain to faith are those who combine all these attributes, and those to whom Allah has made this promise.

Faith means belief which is firmly rooted in the soul, and which accepts no discussion because the heart is at peace with this belief and is certain that it will bring happiness in this life and the next. The basis of faith is that you believe that Allah is Lord and Creator of the universe, and that you believe in His Names and Attributes.

And if you believe in these Attributes, your heart will be at peace with the fate and decree He sends to you, for He tests you with good things that you might give thanks, and tests you with bad things that you might have patience. Therefore you are rewarded either way.

The Arabic word for faith is iman which is derived from the root amn which means ‘security’ and ‘peace of mind.’ You say, ‘I have faith in such-and-such’ meaning that you believe in it with certainty that leaves no room for doubt. And when the verb is used with the proposition li, it means ‘to trust’ or ‘to believe.’ And the verb ammana means ‘to give an assurance’ to someone about the future of his life. So, the meaning of this root word revolves around the notions of stability, firmness, and unshakeable constancy.

And the fruit of faith is ‘righteous deeds’ which means here the things He spoke of when He said: ‘…firm and unyielding towards all deniers of the truth, [yet] full of mercy towards one another. You can see them bowing down, prostrating themselves [in prayer], seeking favour with Allah, and [His] goodly acceptance: their marks are on their faces, traced by prostration…’ (al-Fath: 29). And in material matters and the motions of life, they are like the plant which stands up straight on its stem, pleasing the sowers so that through them He might confound the disbelievers.

And what was promised to the believers? ‘Forgiveness and a reward supreme’ were promised to them. (al-Fath: 29) We said before that this is a cleansing before an adorning: He first forgives, and then rewards; and the legal principle says that preventing harm comes before seeking benefit.

Therefore Allah Glorified is He says: ‘…he that shall be drawn away from the fire and brought into paradise will indeed have gained a triumph…’ (Al-‘Imran: 185). And to be drawn away from the fire is itself a blessing which is why the bridge to paradise crosses over the pit of hell, and everyone who crosses over it must see hell with his own eyes: ‘In the end you will indeed, most surely, behold it with the eye of certainty.’ (at-Takathur: 7)

This makes you aware of the magnificence of faith, and what a great blessing it is because it saves us from this hellfire and causes us to enter paradise; and your righteous deeds take you by the hand and guide you past this peril.

And read what Allah Glorified is He says: ‘Consider the flight of time! [1] Verily, man is bound to lose himself [2] unless he be of those who attain to faith, and do good works, and enjoin upon one another the keeping to truth, and enjoin upon one another patience in adversity. [3]’ (al-’Asr: 1-3) So, all mankind is in a state of loss, and not one of them is exempt from this, and none of them will be saved except those who have faith and do righteous deeds.

And the mutual enjoining of the truth mentioned here indicates the obligation of commanding what is right and forbidding what is wrong, whilst the mutual enjoining of patience indicates that this road is fraught with perils, and requires you to patiently bear the harm of those who oppose it; and advice is a heavy burden to bear.

The words ‘enjoin upon one another’ mean that every individual enjoins, and this implies the notion of constancy, determination and the lack of despair; for the opponent whom you advise might also have patience as he persists in his denial, and therefore you must have even more patience than him; and this is the meaning of Allah’s words: ‘O you who have attained to faith! Be patient in adversity, and vie in patience with one another…’ (Al-‘Imran: 200).

And Allah’s promise is the promise which is truly constant and unchanging. Why? Because it is a promise from One Who possesses all the means of fulfilment, and nothing can prevent Him from fulfilling His promise, or get in His way, and because He Glorified is He is The Truth which never changes or alters – so who could come between Him and the fulfilment of His promise?

He Glorified is He is The One Unique God who has no partner in His dominion, and no competitor in His authority, and He is The All-Powerful, and there is no other power which can restrain him. As for the promises which human beings make, they might not be kept because no man possesses all the means to fulfil his promise, and he is subject to vicissitudes and changes.

Therefore Allah Glorified is He says: ‘…Verily, Allah does not change men’s condition unless they change their inner selves…’ (ar-Ra‘d: 11). So we say that The True Lord Glorified is He is constant and does not change for us, but we must change ourselves for Him.

And the word '…forgiveness…' (al-Fath: 29) means that The Creator Glorified is He who knows His creatures best, knows that we are sinners, guilty of much forgetfulness and much ignorance, but this is all to be expected from us, and it should not make us despair of Allah's mercy because He is The One Who created us this way, and He has pledged to forgive us, and all we have to do is ask for His forgiveness: 'Yet withal, behold, I forgive all sins unto any who repents and attains to faith and does righteous deeds, and thereafter keeps to the right path.' (Ta Ha: 82)

the chapter of

al-Hujurat

In the Name of God, the Most Merciful, the Dispenser of Mercy

The chapter of al-Hujurat (1) :

The True Lord Glorified is He says:(2)

يَٰٓأَيُّهَا ٱلَّذِينَ ءَامَنُوا۟ لَا تُقَدِّمُوا۟ بَيْنَ يَدَىِ ٱللَّهِ
وَرَسُولِهِۦ ۖ وَٱتَّقُوا۟ ٱللَّهَ ۚ إِنَّ ٱللَّهَ سَمِيعٌ عَلِيمٌ ١

Believers, do not push yourselves forward in the presence of God and His Messenger — be mindful of God: He hears and knows all [1]
(The Quran, al-Hujurat: 1)

You can notice the relation between these verses in the opening of the chapter of al-Hujurat and those at the end of the chapter of al-Fath. In the final verses of the chapter of al-Fath, The True Lord Glorified is He spoke to us about what took place at Hudaybiyya: how the Muslims concluded a treaty with their enemies and how the conclusion of this treaty caused a difference of opinion between The Prophet peace and blessings be upon him and those who believed in him.

---

(1) The chapter of al-Hujurat is chapter 49 in the arrangement of the Noble Quran. It is a chapter revealed in Medina by consensus of the scholars of Islam, as related by Al-Qurtubi in his Quranic commentary (9/6351). It was revealed after the chapter of al-Mujadala and before the chapter of at-Tahrim. Thus, chronologically, it is the 102nd to be revealed. See "Al-Itqan fi ʿUlum Al-Quran" of As-Suyuti (1/27).

(2) The occasion for the revelation of this verse: it is related from ʿAbdullah ibn Az- Zubayr may Allah be pleased with them that a group of riders from the tribe of Banu-Tamim advanced forward to The Prophet peace and blessings be upon him upon which Abu Bakr may Allah be pleased with him stated, "Appoint Al-Qaʿqaʿ ibn-Maʿbad their leader." To this, ʿUmar may Allah be pleased with him stated, "No, appoint Al-Aqraʿ ibn-Habis their leader." Abu Bakr may Allah be pleased with him responded, "You wished merely to oppose what I said," to which ʿUmar may Allah be pleased with him replied, "I had no wish to oppose you." They continued to dispute with each other until their voices started rising, at which point the following statement of Allah was revealed the Exalted beginning the verse: "O you who have attained to faith! Do not put yourselves forward in the presence of [what] Allah and His Apostle [may have ordained],…" (al-Hujurat: 1) to the verse: "for if they had the patience [to wait] until you come forth to them [of your own accord]…." (al-Hujurat: 5) This is related by Al-Bukhari (See "Asbab An-Nuzul" of Al-Wahidi, p. 218).

In this situation, The Prophet peace and blessings be upon him alone accepted to conclude a treaty with the enemy, and accept all of their conditions, so much so that he even waived many conditions which indicated his great wisdom in handling worldly affairs demonstrating the depth of his long-term vision; whereas the believers opposed him and protested the conclusion of this treaty, as we have seen.

At the time, this opposition on the part of the believers was so acute that even ʿUmar may Allah be pleased with him was saying to The Prophet peace and blessings be upon him: ‘O Messenger of Allah, are we not upon the Truth?’ ‘Yes,’ he replied. He then asked, ‘Are they not upon falsehood?’ ‘Yes,’ he replied. He then asked, ‘Then why are we yielding in such a lowly manner against the honour of our religion?’ (1)

We have stated previously that before they reached Medina on their way back, The True Lord Glorified is He informed them of the wisdom behind their returning without having performed the Lesser Pilgrimage that year. Thus, the believers were of an opinion, but The Prophet peace and blessings be upon him was of another view; this is because the believers were zealously interested in following their own wishes; as for The Prophet peace and blessings be upon him he was fervent first and foremost in considering the interests of Islam.

(1) This Hadith is agreed upon (related by both Imam Al-Bukhari and Imam Muslim). It is related by Al-Bukhari in his “Sahih” (Hadith 2529, 2945, and 4466), and also by Muslim in his “Sahih” (Hadith 3338) and Ahmad in his “Musnad” (Hadith 15408, 18166) from the Hadith of Al-Miswar ibn Makhrama and Marwan ibn Al-Hakam, where each narration confirms the other. Within the Hadith, it is related that ʿUmar ibn Al-Khattab may Allah be pleased with him stated, “[So] I came to The Prophet of Allah peace be upon him and said, “Are you not The Prophet of Allah, in truth?” He said, “Yes, I am.” Then I said, “Are we not upon the truth, and our enemies upon falsehood?” to which he replied, “Yes, it is so.” I said, “Then why are we concluding an agreement with them on terms that humiliate us in our faith?” In the Hadith, it is also related that Abu Bakr may Allah be pleased with him said to him, “O You addressing The Prophet, Verily he is The Prophet peace and blessings be upon him and he is not one to disobey his Lord, Who helps and aids him to victory. So hold on to your stirrup, for by Allah, he is upon the Truth. This is the entirety of the Hadith.

So, when this opposition to The Prophet peace and blessings be upon him took place, the chapter of al-Hujurat was revealed in order to deal with the matter, and the first verse that was revealed from it was: ‘O you who have attained to faith! Do not put yourselves forward in the presence of [what] Allah and His Apostle [may have ordained]…’ (al-Hujurat: 1).

The vocative is used here specifically for those who have believed in Allah as their Lord and have taken Islam as their religion and Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him as their Prophet and Messenger.

‘…Do not put yourselves forward in the presence of [what] Allah and His Apostle [may have ordained]…’ (al-Hujurat: 1) In other words, ‘Beware of putting forward an opinion or deciding upon a matter before having the permission of Allah, and before gaining the permission of His Messenger peace be upon him and before he decides in favour of it, for The Prophet peace and blessings be upon him does not issue an order except that it is based upon Revelation from Allah.’

Thus, when you stand in opposition to a command from The Prophet peace and blessings be upon him you are, in actual fact, opposing the command of Allah, Whom you have accepted to take as your Lord and Allah, and believed in His Attributes; thus, what is required from such faith is not to advance your opinion over and above his opinion, nor your judgement over his. If Allah or The Prophet peace and blessings be upon him commands something, do not advance a point of view in lieu of it that is from your own selves.

Furthermore, in the phrase: ‘…in the presence of [what] Allah and His Apostle [may have ordained]…’ (al-Hujurat: 1) the expression ‘in your presence’ means ‘in front of you.’ In other words, do not precede him in deciding upon an affair without his assent, and remember that you are in the presence of Allah, standing in front of Him. He does not oblige you with an action in order for you to swerve away from it in some other direction.

In His statement ‘…but remain conscious of Allah…’ (al-Hujurat: 1), He means, ‘If you wish not to put yourselves forward in the presence of what Allah and His Messenger peace be upon him may have ordained, have consciousness of Allah regarding this matter.' In other words, do not be deniers of what has been commanded, and do not revert to such action again in opposition to what has been commanded, for such action is inappropriate and incorrect.

'…for, verily, Allah is All Hearing, All Knowing!' (al-Hujurat: 1) In other words, He means: 'Have God-Consciousness of The One to Whom these attributes belong; for He is All-Hearing, and hears everything that is said, and All Knowing, and knows of everything that stirs in your souls. Thus, nothing about any of your affairs is hidden from Him, and so long as you have believed in Him, it is incumbent upon you to obey Him and His Messenger peace be upon him.

The True Lord states:[1]

يَـٰٓأَيُّهَا ٱلَّذِينَ ءَامَنُوا۟ لَا تَرْفَعُوٓا۟ أَصْوَٰتَكُمْ فَوْقَ صَوْتِ ٱلنَّبِىِّ وَلَا تَجْهَرُوا۟ لَهُۥ بِٱلْقَوْلِ
كَجَهْرِ بَعْضِكُمْ لِبَعْضٍ أَن تَحْبَطَ أَعْمَـٰلُكُمْ وَأَنتُمْ لَا تَشْعُرُونَ ﴿٢﴾

Believers, do not raise your voices above the Prophet's, do not raise your voice when speaking to him as you do to one another, or your [good] deeds may be cancelled out without you knowing [2] (The Quran, al-Hujurat: 2)

Here as well, the summon is directed towards those who have attained to faith, that they should not raise their voices above The Prophet's voice when in his presence, nor should they advance their opinions before his. Furthermore, from the proper manners of speech in general is that one should not raise one's voice at all, for there is something of a sense of superiority betrayed by the one who raises his voice in speech, or at least there is a sense of equal standing; what, then, do you think of such a situation if the person who is speaking to you is The Prophet peace and blessings be upon him?

(1) An-Naysaburi has stated (p. 218) that this verse was revealed concerning Thabit ibn-Qays ibn-Shammas, who suffered from a hearing deficiency, and was overly loud in speech: when he would speak to anybody, he would raise his voice. Thus, perhaps he used to address The Prophet peace and blessings be upon him with his raised voice, thereby harming him, and thereafter, Allah the Exalted revealed this verse.

Thus, it is incumbent upon you not to raise your voice above his, but rather, to keep your voice below his and lower than it, and to address him with decorum and humility, just as you would if you truly believed in him as the Prophet and Messenger of Allah, bearing the message of truth, and advanced his opinion before your own point of view.

Likewise, when you address The Prophet peace and blessings be upon him do not raise your voice over his, for it is more proper that his voice and opinion be the most prominent, for he is more deserving of being heard, and worthier of concern. Nowadays, we live in an age in our history when the popular saying 'There is no voice to be raised above the call of war' has become widespread, for in our times, battle and dispute is considered to be the solution to all of our problems. The meaning, then, is: no voice should be raised over his. '…and neither speak loudly to him, as you would speak loudly to one another…' (al-Hujurat: 2). Furthermore, do not call out to The Prophet peace and blessings be upon him in the same manner that you call out to each other. Thus, we do not say, 'Come here, O Ahmad,' or 'Come here, O Muhammad.' Rather, we say, 'O Prophet', 'O Messenger' or 'O Messenger of Allah'. For your Lord, who created you and created him and sent him to you as a messenger, addressed him in this manner

This is in contrast with the manner in which He the Exalted addressed all of the other messengers by their individual names: 'O Adam', 'O Noah (Nuh)', 'O Abraham (Ibrahim)', 'O Moses (Musa)' and 'O Jesus ('Isa)' However, He made an exception of Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him and did not address him by his individual name, but rather, by his titles: 'O Prophet' and 'O Messenger.' Thus, if his Creator did not address him by his individual name, it is an obligation upon you to address him by these titles, unless you consider yourself to be occupying a higher station than The One Who Created you, May Allah save us from that!

Thereafter, in His statement '…lest all your [good] deeds come to nought…' (al-Hujurat: 2), He means: for fear that your good deeds come to nothing, or in other words, become worthless and corrupted. Why? Because calling out to him in this manner, or raising your voice in his presence, is something that must be considered as opposing the prophetic mandate with which he came.

For The Prophet peace and blessings be upon him did not come with a method or a way that was of his own; rather, he is a bearer of a message from Allah. Thus, whoever opposes him in this message has opposed the mandate that Allah has set out for humanity, and such a person deserves to have his deeds come to nothing. Furthermore, by affronting The Prophet peace and blessings be upon him in this manner, one affront The One Who sent him as well.

In His statement '…without your perceiving it' (al-Hujurat: 2), He means: your deeds may well come to nothing and become worthless without you realizing it. This is a matter that is amongst the subtle points of faith which one must be mindful of, for despite his being The Prophet peace and blessings be upon him with respect to the believers and benevolent and merciful towards them, when it comes to your manner of addressing him, you should never be deluded by these attributes of his such that you place him on an equal footing with anyone else; rather, you must preserve his standing, his dignity, and his esteem, and not make him out to be like yourself by addressing him in such a manner. This is like the man who spoils his servant, who thereby becomes deluded and misled by such behaviour and does not maintain the dignity and standing of his master until the matter reaches such a critical point that the master calls out to him, but he neglects to respond.

It is for this reason that we hear of the story of the Arab man who entered the area of a people whom he did not know, nor did they know him, and said, 'Peace be upon you, O People of good manners!' They responded, 'And how is it that you came to know of our good manners?' He replied, 'I learned of your good manners from observing the bad manners of your slaves.' In other words, they spoiled their slaves and did not punish them for their misbehaviour.

It is related by Companion Anas ibn-Malik may Allah be pleased with him that he said: 'I served The Prophet peace and blessings be upon him and he never said about anything I had done, 'Why did you do it?' nor did he ever say about anything I had not done, 'Why did you not do it?''(1)

---

(1) This Hadith is agreed upon by Al-Bukhari and Muslim. Al-Bukhari relates it in his "Sahih" (Hadith 5578). Muslim also relates it in his "Sahih" (Hadith 4269, 4271), as does Abu-Dawud in his "Sunnan" (Hadith 4144) and At-Tirmidhi in his "Sunnan" (Hadith 1938) where he states: "It is a Hadith that is good and sound." It was narrated by Anas ibn-Malik may Allah be pleased with him.

Then The True Lord Glorified is He states :[1]

إِنَّ ٱلَّذِينَ يَغُضُّونَ أَصۡوَٰتَهُمۡ عِندَ رَسُولِ ٱللَّهِ أُوْلَٰٓئِكَ ٱلَّذِينَ ٱمۡتَحَنَ
ٱللَّهُ قُلُوبَهُمۡ لِلتَّقۡوَىٰۚ لَهُم مَّغۡفِرَةٞ وَأَجۡرٌ عَظِيمٌ ٣

It is those who lower their voices in the presence of God's Messenger whose hearts God has proved to be aware — they will have forgiveness, and a great reward [3]
(The Quran, al-Hujurat: 3)

In the verse: '…lower their voices in the presence of Allah's Apostle…' (al-Hujurat: 3), the meaning is that they lower their voices in his presence peace and blessings be upon him out of reverence and esteem for him, and to honour him.

It '…is they whose hearts Allah has tested [and opened] to consciousness of Himself…' (al-Hujurat: 3). In other words, He has purified their hearts and made them clear in order for them to serve as abodes of piety and obedience and carry the burden of the Prophetic way of The Prophet peace and blessings be upon him and take it to all of humanity; for they have been made fit and suitable for bearing this message after having their hearts cleansed and purified by Allah of all extraneous impure character traits, and cleansed from the diseases of ostentation, hypocrisy, and weakness of faith.

For the events, they have faced have smelt their hearts in the crucible of calamitous hardships such that nothing has remained in the ranks of faith except those who are strong of faith, capable of bearing the trust of this mission. For this reason, He the Most High has stated: '…Thus We have appointed you a middle nation, that you may be witnesses against mankind, and that the messenger may be a witness against you...' (al-Baqara: 143).

Thus, The Prophet peace and blessings be upon him bears witness that he has conveyed the message to us, and we bear witness that we have conveyed the message to humanity.

---

(1) Ibn-ʿAbbas may Allah be pleased with them narrated that when His statement was revealed: "Behold, they who lower their voices in the presence of Allah's Apostle…" (al-Hujurat: 3) Abu Bakr may Allah be pleased with him took an oath never to speak to The Prophet peace and blessings be upon him except in the manner of someone telling a secret, in an extremely low voice. (See "Asbab An-Nuzul" of Al-Wahidi, p. 219).

إِنَّ ٱلَّذِينَ يُنَادُونَكَ مِن وَرَآءِ ٱلۡحُجُرَٰتِ أَكۡثَرُهُمۡ لَا يَعۡقِلُونَ ٤
وَلَوۡ أَنَّهُمۡ صَبَرُواْ حَتَّىٰ تَخۡرُجَ إِلَيۡهِمۡ لَكَانَ خَيۡرٗا لَّهُمۡۚ وَٱللَّهُ غَفُورٞ رَّحِيمٞ ٥

But most of those who shout to you [Prophet] from outside your private rooms lack understanding [4] It would have been better for them if they had waited patiently for you to come out to them but God is all forgiving and merciful [5]
(The Quran, al-Hujurat: 4 - 5)

This verse was revealed concerning a group of people(1) that had had some prisoners taken; they came to consult The Prophet peace and blessings be upon him about the matter, in order to have him set free those who had been taken prisoners, but they acted mistakenly in many ways.

Firstly, they came to the house of The Prophet peace and blessings be upon him from behind, and did not approach it from the front doors. This is because they did not know which of the private apartments The Prophet peace and blessings be upon him was residing in: was he at ʿA'isha's place? Or was he at Hafsa's place? Or was he at Umm Salama's place? They knew that the Messenger of Allah had many varied important duties to fulfil: he had a duty towards the people at large, a duty towards his family, and a duty, before everything else, towards his Lord.

Thus, if the Prophet peace and blessings be upon him had not appeared before them in the mosque, they should have waited until he had come out, and they should not have disturbed him, for he was most certainly fulfilling one of his many duties, and perhaps he was busy in spiritual retreat with his Lord Glorified is He or otherwise occupied with his family.

Secondly, they called out to the Prophet peace and blessings be upon him just as they would call out to each other, and they did not respect the sanctity of the person of The Prophet peace and blessings be upon him nor his standing and rank. For this reason, most of them were described as ‘those who do not use their reason,’ for utilizing one’s intellect requires behaving in a manner that is different from such conduct.

(1) Zayd ibn Arqam may Allah be pleased with him related: "Some people came to The Prophet peace and blessings be upon him and started to call out to him while he was residing in his residence, 'O Muhammad! O Muhammad!' So Allah the Exalted revealed the verse: "Verily, [O Prophet,] as for those who call you from without thy private apartments – most of them do not use their reason: (al-Hujurat: 4). Muhammad ibn-Ishaq and others have stated: "The verse was revealed concerning some brutish men of Banu Tamim…and amongst them was Al-Aqraʿ ibn-Habis and ʿUyayna ibn-Hasan and Az-Zabraqan ibn-Badr and Qays ibn-ʿAsim (See "Asbab An-Nuzul" of Al-Wahidi, p. 219).

‘For if they had the patience [to wait] until you come forth to them [of your own accord], it would be for their own good…’ (al-Hujurat: 5). Yes, it would be for their own good, for after they had called out to him in such a disrespectful manner, and compelled him to come out, The Prophet peace and blessings be upon him released half of the prisoners, and stated: ‘By Allah, had they been patient until I had come out to meet them, I would have released all of the captives.’(1) He did this as a means of disciplining them for their transgressing the bounds of propriety and decorum and proper manners in their treatment of Him. ‘…Still, Allah is Most-Forgiving, Most-Merciful.’ (al-Hujurat: 5)

Allah did not take them to task and punish them, and The Prophet peace and blessings be upon him punished them in a manner that was commensurate with what they had done, as his anger would never be strictly for himself.

Then The True Lord Glorified is He says :(2)

(1) This is related by Al-Qurtubi in his Quranic commentary (9/6361) where he states: “They had come as intercessors on behalf of the captives of Banu ʿAnbar, and The Prophet peace and blessings be upon him set free half of the captives and ransomed the other half.”

(2) Al-Wahidi an-Naysaburi states in “Asbab An-Nuzul” (p. 222): “This verse was revealed concerning Al-Walid ibn-ʿUqba ibn-Abumuʿit, whom The Prophet peace and blessings be upon him had sent to the people of Banu Al-Mustaliq, and had considered reliable and trustworthy, but previously, there had been enmity between Al-Walid and Banu Mustaliq in the pre-Islamic Age of Ignorance. Thus, when the people of Banu Al-Mustaliq heard of his coming, and then went out to receive him, glorifying Allah and His Messenger peace be upon him Satan then insinuated to him that they wished to kill him, and he became afraid of them and returned upon the path that he came by, back to The Prophet peace and blessings be upon him and said to him: ‘The people of Banu Al-Mustaliq refused to pay the poor-due and wished to kill me.’ The Prophet peace and blessings be upon him became angry and made preparations to go to war with them. The news of Al-Walid’s return reached the people of Banu Al-Mustaliq, who then came to The Prophet peace and blessings be upon him and said: ‘We heard of your envoy, and thereupon we went out to receive him, honour him and to grant him our portion of the right of Allah the Exalted over us. However, he decided to return, and we feared that his turning back upon the path was due to a message that had come from you expressing your anger against us, and we seek refuge in Allah from His anger and from the anger of His messenger.’ Thereupon Allah revealed this verse.”

يَٰٓأَيُّهَا ٱلَّذِينَ ءَامَنُوٓاْ إِن جَآءَكُمۡ فَاسِقُۢ بِنَبَإٖ فَتَبَيَّنُوٓاْ أَن تُصِيبُواْ قَوۡمَۢا
بِجَهَٰلَةٖ فَتُصۡبِحُواْ عَلَىٰ مَا فَعَلۡتُمۡ نَٰدِمِينَ ٦

Believers, if a troublemaker brings you news, check it first, in case you wrong others unwittingly and later regret what you have done [6] (The Quran, al-Hujurat: 6)

Again, the summons is directed towards those who have attained to faith. This is the third summons after: ‘O you who have attained to faith! Do not put yourselves forward in the presence of [what] Allah and His Apostle [may have ordained]…’ (al-Hujurat: 1) and after: ‘O you who have attained to faith! Do not raise your voices above the voice of The Prophet…’ (al-Hujurat: 2).

In this instance, the verse is as follows: ‘O You who have attained to faith! If any iniquitous person comes to you with a [slanderous] tale, use your discernment…’ (al-Hujurat: 6).

We note that the arrangement of these verses in the Quran is such that it did not join all these three matters together in one summons, nor did it employ particles of conjunction to link them together; rather, it specified each matter with a separate, special summons in order to express an exceeding degree of emphasis and importance.

Thus, in the counsel of Luqman to his son, he stated: ‘…“O my dear son! Do not ascribe divine powers to aught beside Allah: for, behold, such [a false] ascribing of divinity is indeed an awesome wrong!”’ (Luqman: 13)

He also stated: ‘“O my dear son! Be constant in prayer, and enjoin the doing of what is right and forbid the doing of what is wrong, and bear in patience whatever [ill] may befall you: this, behold, is something to set one’s heart upon! [17] “And turn not your cheek away from people in [false] pride, and walk not haughtily on earth: for, behold, Allah does not love anyone who, out of self-conceit, acts in a boastful manner.” [18] “Hence, be modest in your bearing, and lower thy voice: for, behold, the ugliest of all voices is the [loud] voice of donkeys...’[19]’ (Luqman: 17-19).

Thus, he specified each matter that was related to an aspect of faith with a distinct summons in order to emphasize its importance, and he joined the acts of the limbs together in one summons, for they all occupy the same level of importance in the Islamic religion.

Therefore, we are able to understand from the repetition of the vocative expression ‘O you who have attained faith’ that He is giving special importance to each summons. Furthermore, in the verse: ‘…If any iniquitous person (fasiq) comes to you with a [slanderous] tale…’ (al-Hujurat: 6), the term ‘iniquitous person’ (fasiq) is taken from our saying, ‘the dates have gone bad (fasaqat)’: in other words, the flesh of the fruit has protruded from its skin. Now when the flesh of fresh dates comes out from its protective skin, this exposes them to harmful insects and diseases.

Similarly, faith envelops the believer and shields him from being harmed by diseases of the heart. For if he becomes corrupt, or in other words, if he violates the bounds of belief and separates himself from it, he is attacked by devastating diseases of the heart. For this reason, it is said about the iniquitous person that he is a perpetrator of a grave sin or unaware of the seriousness of what he is doing.

Thus, if any news such as this reaches you from such an iniquitous person, do not trust it and consider what he has said to be sound; rather: ‘…use your discernment…’ (al-Hujurat: 6). In other words, ascertain the veracity and credibility of both the news and those who have believed in it.

Stop and wait until the truth of the matter that you have heard has been distinguished and made clear to you in its full aspect in order that your judgement of matters be in line with the true state of affairs, and do not be taken by haste or fervour such that you fall into the ambit of what is forbidden: ‘…use your discernment, lest you hurt people unwittingly and afterwards be filled with remorse for what you have done.’ (al-Hujurat: 6)

Here, The True Lord Glorified is He commands us to ascertain the veracity of what we hear because man is of a constantly changing temperament: it may be that he is known to be truthful, yet he lies in this one instance, or conversely, that he is known to be a liar, but tells the truth in this one instance. Thus, ascertaining the credibility of what we hear is a cautionary measure that must be taken, so that the judgement we make about a particular situation, and the manner in which we deal with it afterwards, is objective, and thus, we do not fall into the compass of committing oppression and transgression against others.

Use your discernment to check the veracity of the report of the iniquitous person, for it may be that it is an instance of a matter in which he has disobeyed Allah, for disobedience and defiance of Allah's Commandments is something that comes easily to him. Thus, if you were to affirm what he reports, you may hurt people who have committed no offense or sin'…unwittingly…' (al-Hujurat: 6). You may well be ignorant of the reality of the affair concerned, and thus, the one wronged may in fact be in the right, and you may be the one who is committing wrongful aggression, and thereafter, you will be the one who regrets your transgression and your passing by that which is right. You will regret your actions, for by means of them, you have made the one you have harmed and injured someone who has a right to take recourse against you.

Now there is a difference between someone who commits a sin unwittingly, out of ignorance, and someone who does so intentionally, and in accordance with the state of the human soul, committing a sinful offense is an occasion for the possibility of the acceptance of true repentance. I recall one time, when we were in France, that one of our colleagues was nominated to be the envoy to France; he went on to proceed there for the purposes of gaining knowledge alone, and there was no hint of thought in his mind of any other objectives. Along the way there, he stayed over at the house of one of the families, in the manner of strangers and visitors to the land.

At night, the daughter of the family whom he was staying with entered his room. Now perhaps he would have perpetrated a grievous sin with her in such a situation, but this occurred to him without his being aware that such a thing might happen, and nor had he planned for anything like this to take place.

This is in contrast with some other ill-intentioned person who decides to travel to this country: he may go with these evil intentions in mind, and he may even get in touch with someone who can give him the contact information of those who regularly commit such grievous sins.

It is for this reason that The True Lord Glorified is He delimits the conditions of a repentance that is accepted by Him, and thus, He states: 'Forgiveness is only incumbent on Allah toward those who do evil in ignorance (and) then turn quickly (in repentance) to Allah. These are they toward whom Allah relents.

Allah is ever Knower, Wise. [17] The forgiveness is not for those who do ill deeds until, when death attends upon one of them, he says: Lo! I repent now; and nor yet for those who die while they are disbelievers. For such We have prepared a painful doom [18] (an-Nisa': 17-18)

Now remorse over the sin committed is the first of the phases of true repentance. However, there is another matter here: is the command of ascertaining the truthfulness of the report of an iniquitous person an admonition first and foremost without a preceding cause, or was there an event that occasioned the revelation of the Quran for it in particular? Numerous scholars have said: 'No, there was an occasion for its revelation, and it was the episode of Al-Walid(1) ibn-ʿUqba ibn Abu Muʿit(2), when The Prophet peace and blessings be upon him placed him in charge of raising the funds of the poor-due from the people of Banu Mustaliq.'

Thus when he went to them, they came out altogether in order to meet him and welcome him upon learning that he was the envoy of The Prophet peace and blessings be upon him. However, he became afraid when they gathered together in this manner, and feared that they would harm him, as he had previously owed them blood money in the pre-Islamic era of Ignorance. So, he fled, returning to The Prophet peace and blessings be upon him and said: 'O Messenger of Allah, they refused to pay the poor-due.' So, The Messenger of Allah looked into the matter to ascertain its veracity, and asked them about it, to which they replied: 'Nay, we came out to meet him rejoicing over his presence, O Messenger of Allah.' If The Prophet peace and blessings be upon him had believed the news that he had heard, he would have considered them apostates for their refusal to pay the poor-due, and it is possible that something could have happened whose end result would have been regrettable.

(1) Al-Walid ibn ʿUqba ibn Abu Muʿit Abu-Wahb Al-Umawi Al-Qurashi was a governor from amongst the young men of Quraysh, and one of their poets and men renowned for their generosity. He was known for his elegance and his propensity for joking and merriment. He is the brother of ʿUthman ibn-ʿAffan may Allah be pleased with him through his mother. He became Muslim on the day of the Conquest of Mecca. The Prophet peace and blessings be upon him sent him as his envoy to collect the poor-due from the people of Banu Mustaliq. ʿUthman may Allah be pleased with him made him governor of Kufa after Saʿd ibn-Abu Waqqas may Allah be pleased with him (in the year 25 of the Hijri calendar), so he left for Kufa and resided there until the year 29 of the Hijri Calendar. He stayed away from the sedition that took place between ʿAli and Muʿawiya may Allah be pleased with them, but he bewailed the murder of ʿUthman may Allah be pleased with him and eulogized him, and spurred Muʿawiya may Allah be pleased with him on to take his revenge. He died in Ar-Raqqa in the year 61 Hijri/280 AD (See "Al-Aʿlam" of Az-Zirikli, (8/122)).

(2) The story of Al-Walid ibn ʿUqba Ibn-Abumuʿit with the people of Banu Mustaliq

It is also related that The Prophet peace and blessings be upon him received word that Maria, mother of the Prophet's son Ibrahim may Allah be pleased with her(1) had a paternal cousin that was in the habit of visiting her and entering her residence. This angered him, and so he told ʿAli may Allah honour him: 'Take this sword and go to him, and if you find him, kill him.' ʿAli may Allah honour him responded: 'O Messenger of Allah, I am at your service. But do you really want me to kill him? Or is it possible that what is actually the case is not like what has been reported?' Look at ʿAli's cautiousness and circumspection concerning the matter. So, when ʿAli may Allah be pleased with him went to him, he found him with Maria may Allah be pleased with her and was about to kill him with his sword, but the man dashed towards a date palm tree and climbed up so that ʿAli's sword could not reach him. Then, he threw himself on to the ground and opened his legs wide so that ʿAli may Allah honour him could witness that there was nothing at all where his private parts should have been. Thus, he desisted from doing anything to him.

When he went to Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him and informed him of the news, he responded, 'You have spoken the truth, 'Ali: The absent cannot see what the witness sees.' Thus, we understand from this story that the one who had initially informed Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him of the matter was a troublemaker who wanted to make a scandalous incident out of it and defame Umm Ibrahim.(2)

(1) The story of the cousin of Lady Maria, mother of the Prophet's son Ibrahim may Allah be pleased with her

(2) This is narrated by Al-Hakim in his Mustadrak (6922). Al-Haythami mentions it in Majmaʿ Az-Zawa'id, chapter on jealousy and honour (2/225), ascribing it to Al-Bazzar, saying, 'In the chain of narrators of this Hadith is Ibn Ishaq, who is known as mudallis (apt to leave out the direct narrator from whom he heard the Hadith), but he is trustworthy, and so are the other transmitters of this Hadith.' Ad-Diya narrated it too in his Al-Ahadith Al-Mukhtara. Al-Albani graded the chain of narrators of the Hadith, narrated on the authority of 'Ali ibn Abu Taleb Allah be pleased him as good and maintain its origin to be sound (See: As-Silsilat As-Sahiha [1904]).

Then, Allah Glorified is He says:

وَٱعۡلَمُوٓاْ أَنَّ فِيكُمۡ رَسُولَ ٱللَّهِۚ لَوۡ يُطِيعُكُمۡ فِي كَثِيرٖ مِّنَ ٱلۡأَمۡرِ لَعَنِتُّمۡ
وَلَٰكِنَّ ٱللَّهَ حَبَّبَ إِلَيۡكُمُ ٱلۡإِيمَٰنَ وَزَيَّنَهُۥ فِي قُلُوبِكُمۡ وَكَرَّهَ إِلَيۡكُمُ
ٱلۡكُفۡرَ وَٱلۡفُسُوقَ وَٱلۡعِصۡيَانَۚ أُوْلَٰٓئِكَ هُمُ ٱلرَّٰشِدُونَ ٧

And be aware that it is God's Messenger who is among you: in many matters you would certainly suffer if he were to follow your wishes. God has endeared faith to you and made it beautiful to your hearts; He has made disbelief, mischief, and disobedience hateful to you. It is people like this who are rightly guided [7] (The Quran, al-Hujurat: 7)

The discourse here is related to the opposition of the Muslims to the position of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him at Hudaybiyya. Thus, Allah Glorified is He says to them: 'And be aware that it is Allah's Messenger who is among you…' (al-Hujurat: 7). This is as if Allah Glorified is He were telling them to revere and honour the presence of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him among them. This is because he is the Messenger of Allah and nothing is hidden from him, being aided directly by Allah Glorified is He Himself, Who informs him of the reality of matters, and thus, his knowledge of affairs is not like the knowledge of others.

In the phrase: '…is among you (fikum)…' (al-Hujurat: 7) the word (fikum) indicates adverbial qualification of place, as one says, 'the water is in the glass,' or 'the money is in the vault.' Now it is known that what is contained inside is more expensive and valuable than the thing containing it. Furthermore, the word 'you,' stated in the verse, represents a receptacle or a vessel for the Messenger of Allah and his Prophetic Guidance. For this reason, some Quran reciters read the following verse differently:(1) 'Indeed, there has come to you

(1) Quran reciters that read (anfusikum) with a fatha vowel marking on the letter 'faa' (anfasikum) include: Ibn Abbas Allah be pleased with him Abu Al-Aliya, Ad-Dahhak, Ibn Muhaysin, and Mahbub on the authority of Abu 'Amr, as related by Ibn Al-Jawzi in his Zad Al-Masir, in commenting on verse 128 of the chapter of at-Tawba. He, then, states regarding this particular mode of recitation, that there are three opinions regarding the meaning of the verse: first, Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him is=

[O mankind] a Messenger from among yourselves' (at-Tawba: 128). They recite (anfusikum) with a fatha vowel marking on the Arabic letter 'faa', thus pronouncing it (anfasikum) which could be translated literally as 'the most precious of you' or 'the most valuable of you.'

Thus, the presence of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him amongst Muslims is a distinguishing mark for them and a means of safeguarding and protecting them, for he is connected and bound to his Lord. This was known to the disbelievers of Mecca, their leaders and notables, but they were overcome by obduracy and haughtiness, which prevented them from accepting faith.

For this reason, one day, when Abu Sufyan, Al-Harith ibn Hisham, and Thabit Ibn Qays had gathered together at a time when Bilal Allah be pleased with him was giving the call to prayer, Thabit said, 'Allah is indeed pleased with my father, for He took his life before he ever had to see such a sight.' In other words, he would have been very upset at seeing Bilal, the black Ethiopian, being the one to give the call to prayer for Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him. To this, Al-Harith said, 'could not the Messenger of Allah find anyone other than this black crow to give the call to prayer?!' Abu Sufyan replied, 'By Allah, I would very much like to say what you have in mind, just as you have stated, but I fear that Allah will inform His Prophet of what I say.'(1)

Therefore, those people were aware of the truthfulness of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him but their propensity for violent disputation, obdurate opposition, and ostentation prevented them from accepting the truth.

It is also known that Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him gave his two daughters Ruqayya and Umm Kulthum Allah be pleased with them in marriage to two of Abu Lahab's sons before his mission. Thus, when hostilities between Abu Lahab and Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him intensified, Abu Lahab forced his two sons to divorce them.

= the best of you in character and manners; second, he is the most noble of you in lineage; third, he is the most obedient to Allah Glorified is He.

(1) This is narrated by Al-Qurtubi in his tafsir, on the authority of Ibn Abbas, and a similar narration from Muqatil is narrated in tafsir of Al-Baghawi (7/347), in Zad Al-Masir (5/405) by Ibn Al-Jawzi, and in Tafsir of Al-Khazin (5/467).

Then, one day, one of the two sons encountered Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him on the road, and seeing him, spat at him. Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him realized what he had done and prayed against him and said, ‘May one of the dogs of Allah devour you!’(1) News of this prayer reached Abu Lahab, who then began to fear for his son. Thus, when he departed with his trade caravan for Syria, he gathered together its men and said to them, ‘If you strike camp late at night’. In other words, retire for the night – ‘then place my son so-and-so between you, for I fear for him concerning Muhammad’s prayer against him.’

Thus, he was aware that Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him was truthful and that his prayers would surely be answered. As a matter of fact, that is exactly what happened: his men placed Abu Lahab’s son amongst them when they went to sleep, but Allah Glorified is He set upon him a lion that actually seized him from amongst them.

Thus, the truthfulness of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him was known to these people and their very tongues would slip and articulate their belief in his truthfulness, even against their will. From amongst such slips of the tongue is the following inadvertent reference to him, where they are mentioned saying: '…"Do not spend anything on those who are with Allah's Messenger…' (al-Munafiqun: 7).

(1) This is related to an incident where, when Allah Glorified is He revealed: ‘Doomed are the hands of Abu Lahab, and doomed is he!’ (al-Masad: 1)
Abu Lahab said to his two sons ‘Utba and ‘Utayba, ‘My life and your two lives are forfeit unless you divorce Muhammad’s two daughters.’ So ‘Utayba divorced Umm Kulthum Allah be pleased with her and came to Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him when he separated from her and said, ‘I have disbelieved in your religion and left your daughter; you do not love me, nor do I love you.’ Then he violently grabbed hold of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him and tore his robe. To this, Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him said, ‘As for myself, I will ask Allah to set one of His dogs upon you.’ [See: Dalai’l An-Nubuwwa of Al-Bayhaqi (3/338-339)]. Al-Haythami relates this as well in his Majm’a Az-Zawa’id (6/19) and ascribes it to At-Tabarani classifying it as ‘mursal’ (literally: “hurried” – a classification that is assigned to Hadith where the narrator is from the generation after the first generation of Companions of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him but narrates the Hadith without any intermediary, directly from Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him omitting to mention the specific Companion from whom he heard the Hadith) and states, ‘Within the chain of trasmitters of this Hadith is Zuhayr ibn Al-‘Ala, who is considered a weak narrator.’ Al-Hakim also narrated this narration in his Mustadrak (2/539) on the authority of Abu ‘Aqrab and graded it as authentic. However, Ibn Hajar graded it as good in his Fath Al-Bari (4/39).

Furthermore, Allah Glorified is He describes them saying: 'and in their wickedness and self-exaltation they rejected them, although their minds were convinced of their truth…' (an-Naml: 14). There is also His statement Glorified is He: '…in many matters you would certainly suffer if he were to follow your wishes…' (al-Hujurat: 7).

An example of this is what happened amongst you at Hudaybiyya, for had he followed you in not concluding a treaty with the disbelievers, '…you would certainly suffer…' (al-Hujurat: 7). You would have been stricken by affliction, hardship, and errant misdeeds. Likewise is His statement Glorified is He: '…heavily weighs upon him [the thought] that you might suffer [in the life to come]…' (at-Tawba: 128). It weighs upon him heavily to see you in hardship for he is full of compassion and mercy towards the believers. If he sees you committing sin, he prays for your forgiveness, and if he sees you upon obedience to Allah, he praises Him. This is so even after he passes away from this earthly life. '…Allah has endeared faith to you and made it beautiful to your hearts; He has made disbelief, mischief, and disobedience hateful to you…' (al-Hujurat: 7).

The word laken (but) in the verse is a disjunctive expressing emendation to what has preceded; in other words, Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him did not follow you concerning the position you had taken in planning to enter Mecca and perform the Lesser Pilgrimage. However, Allah Glorified is He endeared faith to you, and made it beautiful in your hearts, so you turned back from your position and went along with the opinion of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him and did not make a decision that was different from his command, but rather accepted what he had decided.

This is the result of Allah's guidance to you, endearing faith to you, and making it beautiful in your hearts. For if it were not the case, you would have been insubordinate and left aside what he had commanded, and you would have been destroyed because of your disobedience to him. Furthermore, at the same time: '…He has made disbelief, mischief, and disobedience hateful to you…' (al-Hujurat: 7). This is from the greatest gifts Allah has bestowed upon you.

'…It is people like this…' (al-Hujurat: 7). In other words, those who have been described by these attributes and thus have come to love faith and detest disbelief, mischief, and disobedience, it is those people: '…who are rightly guided (rashidun)' (al-Hujurat: 7). The word rashidun (rightly guided), the plural of rashid refers to someone that holds fast to the way of truth and guidance and does not swerve from it at all. It is from this idea that we use theword (tarshid) which is making something follow the right course, in the expression in Arabic, 'sagacious management (tarshid) of expenses and consumption': in other words, we allot just the right amount of funds for each purpose in the right manner.

Then, Allah Glorified is He says:

فَضۡلٗا مِّنَ ٱللَّهِ وَنِعۡمَةٗۚ وَٱللَّهُ عَلِيمٌ حَكِيمٞ ﴿٨﴾

Through God's favour and blessing: God is all knowing and all wise [8] (The Quran, al-Hujurat: 8)

'Favour and blessing' here means superfluous Abundance. What is intended here is that Allah Glorified is He granted them super Abundance of His blessings and His munificence.

Some people once said to one of the pious (concerning a dispute they were having): 'Judge between us.' The man responded, 'With justice or what is better than justice?' They replied, 'Is there anything better than justice?' He responded, 'What is better than justice is favour; justice is that you take back what is rightfully due to you, but favour is that you forgot what is due to you out of complaisance and favour for the other.'

Similarly, the blessings of Allah Glorified is He bestowed upon us are from the realm of his bounty and favour. This is because the responsibilities with which Allah Glorified is He has entrusted us are all for our benefit and work in our favour, and do not benefit Allah Glorified is He one iota, being the One Free of all needs from His creation. Acts of obedience do not benefit Him, nor do acts of disobedience harm Him in any way. He Glorified is He by His Attributes of Perfection, created us. Thus, blessings are not equivalent recompense for obedience: rather, they are purely bounteous grace from Allah Glorified is He.

However, in the Quranic verse: '…verily, they who are patient in adversity will be given their reward in full, beyond all reckoning' (az-Zumar: 10), Allah Glorified is He calls it 'reward' in order that they may know their acts of worship to have been accepted, and that they will be rewarded with a full and the best reward.

Allah Glorified is He states: '…Allah is All Knowing and All-Wise.' (al-Hujurat: 8) He is All Knowing, and His Knowledge is all-encompassing: nothing at all of one's affairs is hidden from Him, and what is secret is open and public for Him: '[for] He is aware of the [most] stealthy glance, and of all that the hearts would conceal.' (Ghafir: 19) Thus, beware of any hypocrisy, ostentation, vanity, or haughtiness polluting your actions. Allah Glorified is He as previously stated, wants hearts that are sincere, not merely actions of the limbs. Then, furthermore, He Glorified is He is: '…All-Wise.' (al-Hujurat: 8) He Glorified is He manages the affairs of His dominion in accordance with His wisdom. Furthermore, wisdom entails placing everything in its proper place.

Then, Allah Glorified is He says:

وَإِن طَآئِفَتَانِ مِنَ ٱلۡمُؤۡمِنِينَ ٱقۡتَتَلُواْ فَأَصۡلِحُواْ بَيۡنَهُمَاۖ فَإِنۢ بَغَتۡ
إِحۡدَىٰهُمَا عَلَى ٱلۡأُخۡرَىٰ فَقَٰتِلُواْ ٱلَّتِي تَبۡغِي حَتَّىٰ تَفِيٓءَ إِلَىٰٓ أَمۡرِ ٱللَّهِۚ فَإِن
فَآءَتۡ فَأَصۡلِحُواْ بَيۡنَهُمَا بِٱلۡعَدۡلِ وَأَقۡسِطُوٓاْۖ إِنَّ ٱللَّهَ يُحِبُّ ٱلۡمُقۡسِطِينَ ٩

If two groups of the believers fight, you [believers] should try to reconcile them; if one of them is [clearly] oppressing the other, fight the oppressors until they submit to God's command, then make a just and even-handed reconciliation between the two of them: God loves those who are even-handed [9] (The Quran, al-Hujurat: 9)

The word ta'ifatan 'two groups of the believers' is the dual form of ta'ifa 'group' or 'party' which is a singular noun even if it indicates a plural meaning in reality such as the word qawm 'nation.' The plural of ta'ifa (party) is tawa'if (parties). Now this verse provides rulings related to warfare and the need for reconciliation and truce between the hostile parties of the believers until there is no more warfare.

It can be observed in the verse: '…two groups of the believers (ta'ifatan)…' (al-Hujurat: 9) that the word ta'ifatan is in the dual. By analogy, however, it would seem more appropriate to say, therefore, '(the two parties) fight' (iqtatalata), thereby using the dual form of the verb as well; however, the Quran employs the plural, stating: '…fight (iqtatalu)…' (al-Hujurat: 9). Why is this so? Some of the Quranic commentators stated that this is because a party, as an organized group, can be represented by a single person; i.e. the leader of that party. Nonetheless, if fighting takes place, the various individuals of both groups all face each other in battle, and thus the fighting takes place amongst all of the individuals involved.

This is proven by the fact that when Allah Glorified is He speaks of the need for a treaty and reconciliation, He returns to the usage of the dual in reference to the belligerent groups and states: '…you [believers] should try to reconcile them (baynahuma)…' (al-Hujurat: 9). This is because the council that concludes the peace treaty need not have all the individuals of the two parties attend; rather, each party can have one person to represent it in order to conclude the treaty.

If '…one of them is [clearly] oppressing the other…' (al-Hujurat: 9)! The meaning here is, 'after you have concluded the treaty and one of the sides goes on acting wrongfully against the other,' or in other words, has violated and crossed the limits in an open show of hostility, showing no respect to the treaty: '…fight the oppressors until they submit to Allah's command…' (al-Hujurat: 9). That is to say, fight them in order to prevent and deter them from transgression: '…until they submit to Allah's Command…' (al-Hujurat: 9), i.e. return to what is true and just.

In this manner, there are three parties: two parties that are at war with each other and a third party seeking to bring about reconciliation. This is so because the community of believers in its totality is entrusted with carrying out the duty of judging between two antagonistic groups, has been qualified for this purpose with the qualities of justice, non-partisanship, and the absence of desires in the process of negotiating a settlement. However, if these conditions are not present in such judgement, then no viable treaty will be concluded; rather, matters will become further and further complicated and aggravated.

It is enough of an indication of low standing that the party that is driven by its own interests and partisanship in judging between two sides drops in the awrongly and in falsehood loathes the adjudicating party. It is for this reason that the saying goes of such adjudicating groups, with respect to the party in whose favour judgement is passed in falsehood, ‘the heads are held high in their dispute by its testimony, yet the feet trample down upon its honour.’

The Quranic verse: ‘…then make a just and even-handed reconciliation between the two of them…’ (al-Hujurat: 9) indicates that after the fighting has taken place and the transgressing party has returned upon what is right, and then all of you should return to conciliation. The intended meaning is: do not leave the party that returns upon the truth without settling the affairs between the two sides. It is true that the transgressing party has returned to what is right, but that does not mean lack of dispute and dissension, and so there must be reconciliation until there is no chance of another war sprouting, in order to uproot dispute that burns inside in the hearts of the two parties inciting them into war once again.

In this way, war is first of all prevented from taking place; rights taken unduly from the oppressed party are turned to the rightful owner; and the tension and sources of dispute leading to war are defused.

Furthermore, in the verse ‘…make a just and even-handed reconciliation…’ (al-Hujurat: 9), the word aqsatu (be just and equitable) is derived from the verb aqsata (to deal equitably), whose derivatives indicates dealing equitably with others.

Allah Glorified is He states: ‘…Allah loves those who are even-handed’ (al-Hujurat: 9), i.e. He loves those who deal justly with each other.

Another word is qasata which means ‘to commit an outrage, to wrong, or to oppress.’ Derivatives of the verb qasata include yaqsitu– he wrongs someone, and thus, he is qasit (a wrongdoer and oppressor). Related to this is the Quranic verse: ‘but as for those who abandon themselves to wrongdoing (al-qasitun) – they are indeed but fuel for [the fires of] hell!’ (al-Jinn: 15)

Thus, the additional letter hamza in the beginning of the term aqsata ‘to deal equitably,’ when added to the trilateral root of qasata ‘to wrong or oppress,’ is called hamzat al-izala ‘the hamza that divests the term of its original meaning,’ i.e., it divests the word of the denotation of wrongdoing and oppression.

Then, Allah Glorified is He says:

إِنَّمَا ٱلۡمُؤۡمِنُونَ إِخۡوَةٞ فَأَصۡلِحُواْ بَيۡنَ أَخَوَيۡكُمۡۚ وَٱتَّقُواْ ٱللَّهَ لَعَلَّكُمۡ تُرۡحَمُونَ ١٠

The believers are brothers, so make peace between your two brothers and be mindful of God, so that you may be given mercy [10]
(The Quran, al-Hujurat: 10)

Now, this verse has a specific occasion for its revelation. In the battle of Hunayn, the believers disagreed with each other upon a matter, and it went too far such that a minor quarrel took place amongst the fools of the group, and started using light objects as weapons in their dispute, such as sticks, date-palm leaves, and stripped palm branches. Before it reached a true state of civil war, the matter reached Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him who said, ‘Make reconciliation between your two brothers.’(1)

---

(1) Anas ibn Malik Allah be pleased with him narrated, ‘I said to Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him “Shall you go to’ Abdullah ibn Ubayy?” So, Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him set off towards him, and rode upon a donkey, whereas the Muslims set off on foot, upon some marshy ground. Approaching him, he said to Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him “Get away from me, for by Allah, the stench of your donkey offends me.” One of the men from the Ansar responded, “The donkey of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him certainly has a better smell than you do.” To this, one of the ‘Abdullah’s people got angry and all people in support of both sides became angry at each other as well. Thereupon, some of them started striking each other with stripped palm branches, with their hands, and with their sandals. It was then narrated that Allah Glorified is He revealed concerning them: ‘If two groups of the believers fight, you [believers] should try to reconcile them…’ (al-Hujurat: 9)”. This was narrated by Al-Wahidi; An-Naysaburi in his Asbab An-Nuzul (p. 223), who ascribed it to Al-Bukhari and Muslim, both on the authority of Al-Mutamir ibn Sulaiman.

This is because the believers are brothers in terms of their lineage back to Adam peace be upon him and brothers in terms of faith, while the kinship of lineage is antecedent to the kinship of faith, the latter being established after the former. Thus, this means that the disbeliever has the right of brotherhood by lineage, even if he has no rights in terms of brotherhood by faith. For this reason, kinship by lineage is called 'brotherhood,' and with regards to faith, it is stated: '…[and they shall rest] as brethren, facing one another [in love] upon thrones of happiness.' (al-Hijr: 47)

Accordingly, true kinship bonds of brotherhood are made complete and integrally whole when people become brothers in faith. It is related (1) that the chamberlain of Mu'awiya entered his presence and said, 'O Commander of the Faithful, there is a man at the door asking for permission to enter, claiming that he is your brother.' To this, Mu'awiya laughed and said, you have served me for so many years, and you do not even know who my brothers are!' The chamberlain responded, saying, 'That is how he introduced himself to me.' Mu'awiya said, 'Bring him inside.' So when the man entered, Mu'awiya asked him, 'Which of my brothers are you?' The man responded, 'I am your brother by Adam.' Mu'awiya laughed and replied, 'If kinship bonds were ever to be broken, by Allah, I would most certainly be the first to restore them.' He then fulfilled the request of the man.(2)

The term 'brethren' here brings the hearts closer together, and removes any sense of class pride or zealous partisanship that might exist in the hearts of believers. For this reason, we note the Quranic mode of expression, even when it comes to the issue of retribution for murder, Allah Glorified is He states: '…And for him who is payment to him in kindness forgiven somewhat by his (injured) brother, prosecution according to usage and …' (al-Baqara: 178). This is to remind us that the criminal is still his brother despite whatever enmity and hatred existing between them. Allah softens the hearts of believers, in the desire to maintain the welfare of the Muslim polity. Regarding the status of brotherhood in human relations, some of the wise have noted in their aphorisms: 'It may be that your brother is one that your mother did not give birth to.'

(1) The story of the man who claimed to be Muawiya's brother

(2) Al-Yusi narrates in his Al-Muhadarat fi Al-Adab wa Al-Lugha that someone came to Mu'awiya and said to him, 'I ask you by the shared bonds of kinship between you and me, to grant me my request.' He said, 'Are you of the line of 'Abd Manaf?' to which he replied, 'No.' He said, 'Are you one of the Arabs?' to which he replied, 'No.' He said, 'Then which bonds of kinship exist between us?' to which he replied, 'The bonds of kinship from Adam.' Thereupon, Mu'awiya said, 'If there were to be any bonds of kinship that were uprooted, I would most certainly be the first to restore them.' He then granted the man his request. A similar narration is related by Al-Abshihi in his Al-Mustatraf fi Kulli Fann Mustazhraf.

Some have even noted that when someone stumbles in the street and some mishap befalls him, in asking for assistance, he calls out, 'My brother!' – as if he were appealing for help from his own brother, or in other words, a brother that is close to him, who can assist him in such circumstances.

The Quranic verse: '…and be mindful of God so that you may be given mercy' (al-Hujurat: 10) means, 'Fear Allah in executing your duties of making peace between the two sides.' Further, what is it from which mercy is given, as stated in the Quranic verse: '…so that you may be given mercy' (al-Hujurat: 10)?

The meaning here is, 'that you may be given mercy from the continuance of hostilities between the believers.' This indicates the importance of putting an end to all differences before they get out of control and go on the rampage through the Muslim community. Should it happen, then great harm would afflict all of the believers: starting with the two disputing parties, and then it extends to the entire community until you see every single group outside of the two taking sides as well and exacerbating the conflict. Therefore, it is in the best interests of the society as a whole to put an end to all hostilities and to avoid bloodshed between the believers.

Then, Allah Glorified is He says:

يَٰٓأَيُّهَا ٱلَّذِينَ ءَامَنُوا۟ لَا يَسْخَرْ قَوْمٌ مِّن قَوْمٍ عَسَىٰٓ أَن يَكُونُوا۟ خَيْرًا مِّنْهُمْ وَلَا نِسَآءٌ
مِّن نِّسَآءٍ عَسَىٰٓ أَن يَكُنَّ خَيْرًا مِّنْهُنَّ ۖ وَلَا تَلْمِزُوٓا۟ أَنفُسَكُمْ وَلَا تَنَابَزُوا۟ بِٱلْأَلْقَٰبِ ۖ
بِئْسَ ٱلِٱسْمُ ٱلْفُسُوقُ بَعْدَ ٱلْإِيمَٰنِ ۚ وَمَن لَّمْ يَتُبْ فَأُو۟لَٰٓئِكَ هُمُ ٱلظَّٰلِمُونَ ﴿١١﴾

Believers, no one group of men should jeer at another, who may after all be better than them; no one group of women should jeer at another, who may after all be better than them; do not speak ill of one another; do not use offensive nicknames for one another. How bad it is to be called a mischief-maker after accepting faith! Those who do not repent of this behaviour are evildoers [11] (The Quran, al-Hujurat: 11)

In this verse, it can be noted that prohibition is directed towards men as a whole firstly, then towards women as a whole, and specifies an order of prohibition for each. This is because the word qawm ‘group of men’ in Arabic is not employed except in reference to men, being the ones responsible for maintaining their families. As for women, they are not responsible for anything except the maintenance of the house, as the poet puts it:

I know not, nor could I possibly know,
Is the people of Hisn, qawm (men) or women?

Therefore, the tword qawm ‘group of men’ is not used for women. Furthermore, in another verse, Allah Glorified is He states: ‘Men are in charge of women…’ (an-Nisa’: 34).

Some people incorrectly assume that the word qawwamun ‘in charge of’ denotes forcible coercion and beating – never; rather, men are the protectors and maintainers of women – in other words, they attend to their care and carry out what is necessary to serve their needs.

For this reason, we term the woman, ‘lady of the house,’ as if to say that the man is the servant and caretaker for her. Furthermore, we say, ‘so-and-so is qaaim [(undertaking) which is derived from the same stem word as qawwamun] this affair;’ in other words, he is taking upon himself work that involves difficulty and hardship.

In the story of Adam peace be upon him when Allah Glorified is He placed him in paradise to reside therein with his wife, there took place the incident where Adam peace be upon him disobeyed the command of Allah, and thus Allah Glorified is He says: ‘and thereupon We said: “O Adam! Indeed, this is a foe to you and your wife: so let him not drive the two of you out of this garden and render you unhappy.”’ (Ta Ha: 117)

This is an address to Adam peace be upon him and Eve. However, following the general rule of grammatical consistency, it would seem proper to state, ‘the two of you shall fall into distress’ (fatashqiya), in the dual form of the verb. However, Allah Glorified is He employs the singular (fatashqa) stating, ‘…and render you unhappy (fatashqa).’ (Ta Ha: 117)

In other words, Adam peace be upon him alone will fall into distress because the duty of exertion, undergoing hardship and bearing the responsibility of maintaining the family lies upon the man alone. As for the woman, her responsibility is the management of the home in which she plays an important role indeed, one that fills up every moment of her life; but what are we to do today when women wish to suffer distress with the men?

Moreover, the prohibition against mockery in this verse has two causal incidents behind it, one related to men and another related to women. It is narrated(1) that Thabit ibn Qays(2) entered upon the gathering of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him and found that the first row was full. Hard of hearing, Thabit wanted to sit in that first row. Hence, he approached one of the weaker members in the gathering and told him to move over, but the man did not move aside. Thereupon, he said to him, ‘Who are you?’ The man replied, 'So-and-so.' He said, 'Son of that woman so-and-so?' This woman was known to have a bad reputation amongst people. Upon hearing that, Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him asked, 'Who said, 'Son of that woman so-and-so?' He replied, 'I did.' At that point, Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him said to him, 'Look around our gathering,' which the man did. Then, Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him said to him, 'What have you seen?' He replied, 'I have seen some black people, some white people, and some red people.' Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him responded, 'The best of you are the ones who are most deeply mindful of Allah.'(1)

(1) The story of Thabit ibn Qays with the assembly of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him.

(2) Thabit ibn Qays ibn Shammas Al-Khazraji Al-Ansari Allah be pleased with him was a Companion and preacher of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him. He took part in Uhud and many of the other campaigns thereafter. It was narrated that Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him said, ‘What an excellent man Thabit is!’ Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him visited him, once, in an ailing state, and said, ‘Remove his ailment, Sustainer of men, from Thabit ibn Qays.’ He was killed in the battle of Al-Yamama during the caliphate of Abu Bakr Allah be pleased with him in the year 12 AH/ 633 C.E. See Al-‘Alam by Az-Zirikli (2/98).

Furthermore, Allah Glorified is He did not forget about the man who did not move aside to make more space when asked to do so. In this regard, the following verse was revealed: '…When you are told to make room for one another in assemblies, do make room: [and in return,] Allah will make room for you [in His grace]…' (al-Mujadala: 11).

It is also narrated (2) that Umm Salama Allah be pleased with her was short in stature, and at one point was stricken with pain in her leg. To treat it, she bound it with a piece of cloth, the remainder of which dangled and reached the ground, and was dragged along behind her. 'Aisha and Hafsa Allah be pleased with them saw her in this condition, and one of them said to the other, 'She walks with a tail like the tail of a dog.' This reached Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him and then the verse was revealed.(1)

(1) Al-Qurtubi mentions this incident in his commentary of the verse and states, 'The verse was revealed concerning Thabit ibn Qays and his statement to the man who did not move aside for him when he said, "the son of that woman So-and-so," upon which the Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him said, "Who was the one mentioning that woman So-and-so?" Thabit replied, "I was, O Messenger of Allah." Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him said, "Take a look upon the faces of the people in our gathering," which he did. Then he said, "What did you see?" to which he replied, "I saw some white people, some black people, and some red people." He responded, "You are not to give preference to anyone except in respect of their level of piety." Then this verse was revealed concerning Thabit ibn Qays.' Al-Baghawi mentions this narration in his tafsir (7/343), in which he states that Thabit ibn Qays said, 'Who is this?' to which a man replied, 'I am So-and-so.' So Thabit said, 'The son of So-and-so?' mentioning a mother whom he used to be reproached and censured for her behaviour during the Pre-Islamic Period of Ignorance.

(2) The story of 'Aisha and Hafsa Allah be pleased with them with Umm Salama Allah be pleased with her while she was bandaging her wound

For this reason, Allah Glorified is He will declare on the Day of Judgement: 'I established lineage, and you established lineage; I established that 'The noblest of you in the sight of Allah is the one who is most deeply mindful of Him,' but you refused and said, 'The most noble of us is so-and-so, the son of so-and-so.' So today – (i.e. the Day of Judgement) – I uphold my establishment of lineage and put aside the lines of kinship that you established for yourselves.'(2)

A lame man once entered the presence of one of the others, who began looking at him scornfully due to his lameness. The lame man understood his intent, and said to him, 'Do you take offence at what is created, or at the Fashioner of creation?' The other man was rendered speechless and dumbfounded, until he repented of the behaviour towards the lame man, and stated, 'By Allah, I would have loved to have been in his place, and for him to have been in mine.'

Allah Glorified is He forbids us from mocking each other only because He wishes for equality amongst all of His creation. All creation belongs to Allah, and is His specially fashioned work. All people are His slaves, none of whom is a son of Him, and nor is there any relationship of kin with Him; so why, then, do we mock each other? Beware of mocking people, whatever their particular lack may be compared to yourself. If you see a fault in someone's religion or behaviour, it is incumbent upon you to try to rectify him and set right his affair as best as possible.

(1) This is narrated by Al-Wahidi An-Naysaburi in his Asbab An-Nuzul (p. 224), where he states, 'The verse was revealed concerning two women from amongst the wives of The Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him who were ridiculing Umm Salama Allah be pleased with her. They did this because she had bound her waist with a white garment, letting the end of it hang down and dragging it along behind her. So 'Aisha Allah be pleased with her said to Hafsa Allah be pleased with her "Look at what she drags behind her, as if it were the tongue of a dog." This was mockery of Umm Salama Allah be pleased with her.'

(2) This is narrated by Al-Hakim in his Mustadrak (3684, 3685), and by At-Tabarani in Al-Mu'jam As-Saghir (643), and a similar narration is narrated by Al-Bayhaqi in Shu'ab Al-Iman (4922), on the authority of Abu Hurayra Allah be pleased with him who narrated that Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him said, 'Surely, Allah Glorified is He will say on the Day of Judgment, "I commanded you, but you neglected what I had covenanted with you, and exalted your own lineages above those of others. So today, I raise My lineage, and put aside the lines of lineage you established for yourselves. Where are the pious? Where are the pious? Indeed, the noblest of you in the sight of Allah is the one who is most deeply conscious of Him."' Al-Hakim states, 'This Hadith has some questionable issues in its chain of narrators and in its text, and the two authorities of Hadith (Al-Bukhari and Muslim) did not relate it.'

If the fault is one of bodily form, which human beings have no say in whatsoever, you must show respect and proper manners with The Creator. By Allah, if you were to know what He has prepared of reward for the physically stricken – that is to say, the handicapped – you would all wish to be similarly stricken with such defects. Indeed, Allah Glorified is He has no son, but rather, has distributed the causes of His favour upon all of His servants. If He takes a favour away from one of them, He replaces it with something else much better.

Thus, mockery and ridicule only appear in a person who prides himself in some quality lacked in the mocked one, just as a rich person mocks a poor, or a strong person mocks a weak, or a person of sound body or intellect mocks a physically or mentally handicapped. Furthermore, this mode of behaviour is the result of heedlessness of the criteria of superiority between all of creation which is piety and fear of Allah.

As previously stated, if you contemplate the entirety of the cosmos, you will find a principle of just balance at work within it. That is to say, for every human being, the entirety of the favours placed in him or in her is equal to the entirety of favours bestowed upon anyone else. This is because the Creator Glorified is He has distributed His bounty upon His slaves so that everyone gets his share in full but in a particular facility; for instance, one is endowed with intelligence, whereas another is gifted with health; but in the end, all people are granted favours equally.

This is so because Allah Glorified is He does not want human beings to be identical; rather, they should be dissimilar to each other in terms of the gifts bestowed upon them. In this way, the activity of everyday life runs smoothly and becomes complete and integral, in addition to establishing relations between people of different classes to serve their mutual needs; thus even those of the highest ranks cannot do without the services of the sewage worker.

Thus is His statement Glorified is He: '…and has raised some of you by degrees above others…' (al-An'am: 165). This means that everyone one of us is above someone else in some human quality or attribute and is superseded in something else. You are aware that Beethoven, the famous musician, was deaf, and that Tamerlane, the man who laid waste to the world with his conquests, was lame.

Accordingly, one should not mock others whatsoever, nor should one bear any malice towards anyone, deeming him inferior in some respects. All people are equal in the balance of Allah Glorified is He; thereby giving us a lesson and a reminder that He Glorified is He has no son, and neither does He have any partner.

Hence, the Jinn showed better understanding where they are mentioned saying: 'for [we know] that sublimely exalted is our Sustainer's majesty: no consort has He ever taken to Himself, nor a son!' (al-Jinn: 3)

For all of us are dependants on Allah. Further, this equal standing is of such importance that Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him commands us to treat our children equally, even in the simplest matters such as giving a kiss to a child.

Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him instructs us in how we should behave when experiencing any incident of mockery or derision, and how to respond to it. It is narrated that the occasion of revelation of this verse was the incident of Safiyya Allah be pleased with her the daughter of Huyayy ibn Akhtab, the leader of the tribe of Banu Mustaliq. When Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him fought them, she was among the prisoners taken captive. To honour her, being the daughter of their king, Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him married her. As a result, the wives of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him became jealous of her, and jealousy, as they say, is the outbursts of one's love. Furthermore, 'Aisha Allah be pleased with her was the most jealous of all the wives of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him and so she addressed Safiyya Allah be pleased with her as 'O Jewess, daughter of the Jews!' So Safiyya went to Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him weeping and told him what 'Aisha Allah be pleased with her had said, upon which Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him laughed, for he knew of 'Aisha's jealousy.

For this reason, he did not censure ‘Aisha Allah be pleased with her, but rendered Safiyya Allah be pleased with her happy and put her mind at ease saying to her ‘If she ever says it again, then say to her, ‘But my father is Harun (Aaron), my uncle is Musa (Moses), and my husband is Muhammad.’(1)

Notice how Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him handled this situation, enhancing the prestige of Safiyya Allah be pleased with her the offspring of Messengers and Prophets, and above all the wife of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him. He peace and blessings be upon him responded in a manner that would leave anybody dumbfounded which would never have occurred to anyone. It is no surprise, however, since Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him was given the faculty of articulating the most eloquent of expressions.(2)

A similar incident occurred between ‘Aisha and Fatima Az-Zahra’, the daughter of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him. ‘Aisha Allah be pleased with her used to be jealous of Khadija Allah be pleased with her especially that Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him used to praise her in various situations. Once, she said to him, ‘What is it that impresses you about an old woman with grey-streaked hair and red-tinted lips, when Allah has replaced her with a better wife?’ How did Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him respond? He said to her, ‘No, by Allah, I was not replaced with a better wife, for she believed in me when all others disbelieved; confirmed the truth of my Message when others denied it; supported me with her wealth when others prevented me; Allah Glorified is He granted me children by her while depriving me of children from other women.'(1)

(1) It is narrated by Al-Qurtubi in his commentary on the verse, on the authority of Ibn Abbas Allah be pleased with him that Safiyya Bint Huyayy ibn Akhtab came to Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him and said, ‘O Messenger of Allah, the women censure me, saying scornfully, “O Jewess, daughter of the Jews!”’ Thereupon, Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him responded, ‘Why did you not reply by saying, “Surely, my father is Aaron, my uncle is Moses, and my husband is Muhammad?”’ Afterwards, Allah Glorified is He revealed this verse. A similar narration is narrated in Tafsir Al-Bahr Al-Muhit (10/111) and in Zad Al-Masir (5/401) by Ibn Al-Jawzi.

(2) This is narrated by Al-Bukhari in his Sahih (6496) on the authority of Abu Hurayra, who said, ‘I heard Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him saying, “I was sent with the concise, yet comprehensive word.’ A similar narration is narrated by Muslim in his Sahih (812, 814) and by At-Tirmidhi in his Sunan (1474), who graded the Hadith as good and sound.

Afterwards, she met Fatima Allah be pleased with her and said to her, 'Do not be deluded by the praise of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him for your mother; for she had been previously married before he married her unlike me who was a virgin.' Upon hearing it, Fatima Allah be pleased with her complained to Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him who responded, 'If she ever says it again, then say to her, 'But my mother married Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him while he was a virgin, and you married him as a man married previously.'(2)

It may be wondered as to how could such incidents occur in the house of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him? In response, we maintain that this jealousy, in addition to being a sign of love for Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him indicates that 'Aisha Allah be pleased with her who married Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him at the age of nine, felt jealous of him, despite his much older age. This signifies that Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him was not someone who did not have active marital relations with his wives.

In the Quranic verse: '…do not speak ill of one another; do not use offensive nicknames for one another…' (al-Hujurat: 11). This verse conveys another prohibition of a different blameworthy character trait that does not befit the people of faith, which is the trait of defaming others and speaking ill of them.

(1) This is narrated by Ahmad in his Musnad (23719) and At-Tabarani in his Al-Mua'jam Al-Kabir (18556) on the authority of 'Aisha Allah be pleased with her who related that Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him used to praise Khadija Allah be pleased with her in the best manner whenever he mentioned her. 'Aisha said, 'So one day, I became jealous and said, "Why do you keep mentioning her, the woman of red-tinted lips, when Allah Glorified is He has replaced you with a better wife?"'

(2) This is indicated by Al-Alusi in his Ruh Al-Ma'ani, in his commentary on the verse: '[O wives of The Prophet!] Were he to divorce [any of] you, his Sustainer might well give him in your place spouses better than you – women who surrender themselves to Allah, who truly believe, devoutly obey His will, turn [toHim] in repentance [whenever they have sinned], worship [Him alone], and go on and on [seeking His goodly acceptance] – be they women previously married or virgins.' (at-Tahrim: 5)

Contemplate here the subtlety of the Quranic expression in the verse: '…do not speak ill of one another (talmizu anfusakum)…' (al-Hujurat: 11).

The expression (talmizu anfusakum) literally means 'speak ill of yourselves.' Now a human being does not speak ill of oneself, but rather, he speaks ill of others. However, The Quran regards others as oneself and since one avoids speaking ill of oneself, such should be the case with others. Furthermore, speaking ill of others encourages them to do the same, just as the poet puts it:

Your tongue – do not let it recall the faults of others
For you are replete with faults, and others have tongues as well;
And your eye – should an evil trait be revealed to it
Then guard it well and say, 'O eye, others have eyes as well;

In the same way, the word anfusakum (yourselves) is used in the following verse when others are intended: '…But whenever you enter [any of these] houses, greet one another (anfusakum) with a blessed, goodly greeting…' (an-Nur: 61).

Literally, (anfusakum) means to send greetings of peace 'upon yourselves.' This is because when you give greetings of peace upon other people, they respond with the same greetings, and thus it is as if you have given greetings of peace to oneself.

In the Quranic verse: '…do not use offensive nicknames for one another…' (al-Hujurat: 11), there is another prohibition, against insulting one another using offensive nicknames. In other words, none of the believers should call his brother by a name that he detests. The word (tanabudh) is derived from the verb nabadha 'to find fault with something', which means to remove something and leave it aside. Likewise, when you call somebody by a nickname that he detests, it is as if to remove him from your presence, widening the breach between him and you.

Names in Arabic fall under three categories: Alam (a proper name), Laqab (a nickname), and kunya (surname). Alam (proper name) refers to the name designating the specifically meant or named such that it becomes known with it, such as the name 'Muhammad.' Laqab (nickname), on the other hand, is a description used to indicate praise or blame, such as As-Siddiq 'The Truly Honest,' or when calling a weak person 'So-and-so Al-Batta (the Duck).' As for kunya (surname), it is the word introduced with 'Father of' (Abu) or 'Mother of' (Umm), such as 'Abu Bakr' or 'Umm al-Muminin' 'Mother of the Believers.'

It is not permissible to call out to a person by a detestable word that he does not like to be called by. An example of this is 'Aisha's calling to Safiyya*,* 'O Jewess.'(1) Furthermore, using offensive nicknames sows the seeds of hatred and malice and stirs up one's natural impulses of anger against others. Why not call one by the names he loves instead, so as to bring him closer to you?

Some jurists argue that if someone commits a sin and then repents, one should not remind or censure him for it, otherwise it would be considered a slanderous act, apart from the fact that one would thereby be assisting Satan against him. For instance, when someone repents of drinking wine, we should not then call him, 'winebibber,' or someone else repenting of gambling; we should not call him 'ludomaniac' and so on. For this reason, Allah Glorified is He states thereafter: '…How bad it is to be called a mischief-maker after accepting faith…' (al-Hujurat: 11).

In other words, 'What an evil thing it is to remind your brother of a past that he wishes to forget, and how ugly it is to censure him after he has repented, it is utterly ugly to commit such bad actions after attaining to faith.' '…Those who do not repent of this behaviour…' (al-Hujurat: 11), i.e., those who do not repent from insulting others with offensive nicknames: '…are evildoers.' (al-Hujurat: 11).

Surely, they are evildoers who wrong their own souls, as a result of neglecting this prohibition, and transgress the rights of others when they call them by such detested epithets. After all, it is the right of the one who has repented not to be reminded of his fault, and not to be censured and blamed for it.

Then, Allah Glorified is He says:

---

(1) Translator's note: Clearly, using offensive nicknames should be seen in the wider context of the situation, whereby 'Aisha was effectively giving voice to her jealousy – for which she was reprimanded - and love for Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him and the honour that Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him accorded to both Safiyya Allah be pleased with her and her ancestors, the Jews, as a whole, as noted by the Sheikh previously.

يَـٰٓأَيُّهَا ٱلَّذِينَ ءَامَنُوا۟ ٱجْتَنِبُوا۟ كَثِيرًا مِّنَ ٱلظَّنِّ إِنَّ بَعْضَ ٱلظَّنِّ إِثْمٌ ۖ وَلَا
تَجَسَّسُوا۟ وَلَا يَغْتَب بَّعْضُكُم بَعْضًا ۚ أَيُحِبُّ أَحَدُكُمْ أَن يَأْكُلَ لَحْمَ
أَخِيهِ مَيْتًا فَكَرِهْتُمُوهُ ۚ وَٱتَّقُوا۟ ٱللَّهَ ۚ إِنَّ ٱللَّهَ تَوَّابٌ رَّحِيمٌ ﴿١٢﴾

Believers, avoid making too many assumptions – some assumptions are sinful – and do not spy on one another or speak ill of people behind their backs: would any of you like to eat the flesh of your dead brother? No, you would hate it. So be mindful of God: God is ever relenting, most merciful [12]
(The Quran, al-Hujurat: 12)

Allah Glorified is He commands us here to avoid most suspicions that we harbour of one another. Suspicion is a notion that occurs to the mind, and is of two types: having a reasonable suspicion of something plausible and worth taking precautions against, and an unwarranted suspicion of something evil or wrong. As for a reasonable suspicion that leads to avoiding harm, there is nothing wrong or sinful with it; in fact, it is required by the Divine Law, as we shall see. What is forbidden, however, is the unwarranted suspicion of evil that leads to corruption in human relations, which in turn results in a punishment.

For this reason, Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him instructs us to avoid any kind of suspicion of evil. Once He peace and blessings be upon him was in a state of 'itikaf (staying in the mosque), and Safiyya Allah be pleased with her who was fully veiled, came to him asking for something, so he came out to see her. Abu Bakr and 'Umar Allah be pleased with them, saw the two of them, and they went away, fearing that Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him would see them while he was in this situation. However, he called out to them and said, ‘Take it easy!’ In other words, he meant, ‘Stop, for it is Safiyya.’ They knew what Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him intended, and said to him, ‘You are far away from any suspicion, O Messenger of Allah!’ He replied, ‘Indeed, Satan flows through the son of Adam as does his blood.’(1)

(1) Narrated by Al-Bukhari and Muslim... Al-Bukhari narrates it in his Sahih (1897, 1898, 3039, 6636), and Muslim in his Sahih (4040, 4041) on the authority of Safiyya Allah be pleased with her daughter of Huyayy ibn Akhtab, and one of the Mothers of the Believers.

Thus, Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him directs us to close the door on any type of evil suspicions, to cut off its very roots and to keep ourselves free of falling into such perilous situations.

Further, through the story of the slander levelled against 'Aisha Allah be pleased with her referred to in the chapter of an-Nur, Allah Glorified is He teaches and urges us to think well of the believers, and to avoid harbouring evil suspicion about them. Thus, concerning their false statements against 'Aisha Allah be pleased with her Allah Glorified is He states: 'Why do the believing men and women, whenever such [a rumour] is heard, not think the best of one another and say, "This is an obvious falsehood"?' (an-Nur: 12)

A reasonable suspicion signifies being on one's guard against harmful situations, without leaving a negative impression in your heart. For example, if someone tells you that some gangsters are lying in ambush, intending to harm you, then it is necessary to take the utmost precautionary measures. In such occasion, one ought to consider what he says to be true, and be cautious and wary of his warning, for it is most likely that he wishes for you safety and security, rather than harm or loss. In case such a suspicion involves an affair that relates to a ruling of the Divine Law, it is obligatory to verify the truthfulness of the matter.

Contemplate the subtlety and prudence of the Quranic style of rendering in the verse: '…too many assumptions…' (al-Hujurat: 12). In other words, many harboured assumptions are in fact unwarranted and evil, and should be completely avoided. Nonetheless, it is reasonable and permissible to have suspicions in some cases. Thus, Allah Glorified is He states thereafter: '…some assumptions are sinful…' (al-Hujurat: 12).In other words, not all suspicion is sinful, yet be wary of falling into sin when you harbour evil suspicion of the believers without clear proof or evidence.

Allah Glorified is He states: '…and do not spy on one another…' (al-Hujurat: 12). This indicates the prohibition of following up, tracking the faults of people, or snooping into their private affairs, as Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him stated, 'Whoever searches for the faults of other Muslims, Allah will search for his faults and disgrace him in his very own home.'(1)

(1) 'Abd Ar-Razzaq relates in his Musannaf (20251) on the authority of 'Abban and others, that Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him stood up after 'Asr Prayer and=

It is worth mentioning here one of the subtleties of the Divine Names of Allah. It can be noticed that many Divine Names have opposite meanings, as is the case with His Honourable Names: Al-Muhyi ‘The One Who Grants life’ and Al-Mumit ‘The One Who Causes Death;’ Al-Mu’izz ‘The Exalter’ and Al-Mudhill ‘The Humiliator;’ and Al-Qabid ‘The Restrainer’ and Al-Basit ‘The Outspreader.’

However, the Divine Name As-Sattar ‘The Veiler,’ does not have a name with opposite meaning, such as Al-Faddah ‘The Exposer.’ Glorified and Exalted is Allah above having such an attribute! For His veil that covers the faults of his servants is left suspended. Whatever they may have committed in secret, He does not expose them. Furthermore, the name (As-Sattar) takes a morphological form that indicates hyperbole, from the base verb of satara ‘to veil.’

In a Qudsi Hadith, Allah Glorified is He says, ‘I loathe the sinner, but I detest the one who searches for his faults.’ This is because searching for the faults and errors of others results in circulating immorality in the Muslim community.

Thus, Allah Glorified is He protects the community of believers from such an act, and it is enough of an indication that the one who commits sins in secrecy still has within him the modesty that is the natural outcome of true faith. Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him stated, ‘If you are tried – that is, with committing some sins – then conceal them.’(1)

= raised his voice that he could be heard by women in seclusion in their private rooms, saying, ‘O you who have professed Islam with their tongues, but in whose hearts faith has yet to enter! Do not harm the believers, and do not search for their faults, for indeed, whoever searches for the faults of believers, Allah will search for his faults, and if Allah searches for the fault of anyone, He will disgrace him in his own home.’ This is also narrated in the Musnad of Abu Yaala Al-Mawsili (7257), on the authority of Abu Barza Al-Aslami, with the wording ‘in his very own home,’ not ‘in the middle of his house,’ which is narrated by At-Tabarani in his Al-Mu’jam Al-kabir (11281), on the authority of Ibn Abbas Allah be pleased with him and by Al-Bayhaqi in his Shu’ab Al-Iman (9331, 10748), on the authority of Al-Bara ibn Azib Allah be pleased with him.

(1) Narrated by Malik in his Muwatta (1299) with the following wording, ‘whoever is stricken by any of these moral defilements should veil them with the veil of Allah, Whoever reveals to us his wrong action, we inflict upon him [the punishment according to] what is in the Book of Allah.’ It is similarly narrated by Al-Bayhaqi in his As-Sunnan As-Sughra (2747).

This is similar to the case where one is unable to fast in the month of Ramadan, for example, and has a legitimate excuse, and thus is allowed to eat during the day. Despite his excuse, he is not allowed to eat publicly in front of people such that he serves as an immoral example to the young, who may not be aware of these excuses.

For when they see him, it allows an idea to ferment in their subconscious that it is permissible for them to break their fast and eat during the daytime in Ramadan. Thus, it is incumbent upon him to conceal himself whenever he eats during such days, in order not to serve as an example for others to follow.

Explaining the gravity of spying, the jurists have stated(1): 'If a man were to live in a hut made of reed and sticks, and another person came and stole a look into his house through an eyehole, thereby getting his eye gouged out with a stick by the owner of the hut, he would not be subject to retaliatory punishment by the law, nor would he have to pay any compensatory indemnity, for the other man effectively invaded the privacy of his house and stole a glance at what was going on inside without his permission.'

A similar incident occurred to Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him(2) as he was informed that a man was looking at him through one of the eyeholes of his door. It was also narrated(3) that 'Umar Allah be pleased with him used to investigate the state of affairs of his people by carrying out night patrols, and he received word of a man that was drinking wine with his companions in his house. Hence, he scaled the walls of the man's house and found him sitting with one of his companions, with no alcohol present in their midst, or anything similar to it whatsoever. When the man saw him, he said, 'You suspected me of such-and-such a deed; yet you neglected several religious aspects that are more important to pay heed to. Firstly, you entered the house by way of scaling the walls, whereas Allah Glorified is He says: '…So go to houses by the gates thereof…' (al-Baqara: 189). Secondly, you entered my house without my permission.' Thereupon, 'Umar Allah be pleased with him went away, without saying anything to him.(1)

(1) This is based on the Hadith narrated on the authority of Abu Hurayra Allah be pleased with him that Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him said 'If someone snoops into your house, without your permission, and you then throw a pebble at him, and thereby gouge his eye out, there is no sin upon you.' This is narrated by Ibn Hibban in his Sahih (6109).

(2) Abu Dharr Allah be pleased with him narrated that Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him said, 'If anyone uncovers a veil placed to protect one's privacy, and then steals a glance without permission to do so, he has transgressed a boundary that he is not permitted, and if a man were to gouge out his eye, it would be shed with impunity (without compensation). However, if a man were to pass by a door without a covering, and see the people inside, there would be no fault upon him; rather, the fault would be upon the people of the house.' This is narrated by Ahmad in his Musnad (20591).

(3) The story of 'Umar ibn Al-Khattab Allah be pleased with him entering on a man narrated to have been drinking liquor.

Now there is a difference between tajassus 'spying' and tahassus 'making inquiries.' Tahassus is to follow up and look into the matters of other people without the intention of following up on their faults. This is clear in the Quranic verse: '[Hence,] O my sons go forth and try to obtain some tidings of Joseph and his brother…' (Yusuf: 87), i.e., look for him until you find him, just as detectives might do.

In the Quranic verse: '…or speak ill of people behind their backs…' (al-Hujurat: 12), there is a prohibition from backbiting in general, for the Quran does not specify the one who backbites, or the one who is backbitten. When Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him was asked about backbiting, he responded, 'It is to mention something of your brother in his absence which he would dislike.' It was asked, 'What if what I say is actually true of my brother?' He responded, 'If it is actually true of him, then you have backbitten him. If he has nothing of what you claim to be in him, then you have calumniated him.'(1) In other words, you have fabricated a lie and have spoken falsely against him.

(1) Al-Askari relates in Al-Awa'il (1/43) that 'Umar Allah be pleased with him used to make night patrols in Midyan, and once he heard the sound of a man singing in his house, so he entered it from the back and found a woman with him and some wine. He said, 'What is this, enemy of Allah?' He responded, 'Do not mark this against me, Commander of the Faithful! For if I have disobeyed Allah in one matter, you have indeed disobeyed Him in three: Allah Glorified is He says: '…and do not spy upon one another…' (al-Hujurat: 12) yet, you have spied on me. He Glorified is He says: '…So go to houses by the gates thereof…' (al-Baqara: 189), but you scaled the walls of my house. He Glorified is He says: '…But whenever you enter [any of these] houses, greet one another…' (an-Nur: 61), but you entered my house without any greetings of peace.' At that point, 'Umar Allah be pleased with him said, 'So do you have something of goodness in you such that you will turn towards what is good and right if I forgive you?' 'Yes, Commander of the Faithful! By Allah, I make it incumbent on myself that if you forgive me, I will not return to such deeds.' Thus, 'Umar Allah be pleased with him forgave him.

Then, the Quran gives a physical example of the nature of backbiting; as stated in the verse: '…Would any of you like to eat the flesh of your dead brother? No, you would hate it...' (al-Hujurat: 12).

Ponder over how many repulsive characteristics there are in this portrayal that expresses the hideousness of such a deed. The one that speaks ill of his brother behind his back in his absence is like the one who eats his flesh when he is dead; in other words, when he is absent from life and is unable to defend himself. Thus, Allah Glorified is He has likened backbiting with a repugnant portrayal of the deed, from which any sound human being would flee.

Commentators of the Quran stated that the occasion for the revelation of this verse is related to Al-Walid ibn 'Uqba ibn Abu Mu'it(2). Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him sent him as an envoy to collect the alms that were due from the tribe of Banu Mustaliq to whom he owed an indemnity for killing one of them during the pre-Islamic Age of Ignorance. When he encountered them and saw them coming out to meet him, he feared that they would exact revenge, and returned to Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him and said, 'They have withheld payment of the alms that are due.'

It was also narrated(3) that Usama ibn Zayd Allah be pleased with him was managing the supply and distribution of food in the house of Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him. Two men wished him to provide them with food, so they sent Salman Al-Farisi Allah be pleased with him to request food from him, and when he asked him, Usama Allah be pleased with him replied, 'We have no more food.' Thereupon, Salman Allah be pleased with him returned to them and said, 'Usama said that they have no more food.' They responded,

(1) Narrated by Muslim in his Sahih (4690), Abu Dawud in his Sunnan (4231), At-Tirmidhi in his Sunnan (1857), and Ahmad in his Musnad (6849, 8625, 8648, 9522). All of them narrated it on the authority of Ibn Abbas Allah be pleased with him.

(2) The story of Al-Walid ibn 'Uqba ibn Abu Mu'it with the people of Banu Mustaliq

(3) The story of the two men who accused Usama ibn Zayd of being a miser

'No, he has food, but he was being stingy with you.' Then they said to Salman, 'You have a face that portends misfortune, and if you were to go to a well of generous provision – i.e., an ebullient, bubbling well – all of its water would disappear.'

In this manner, they spoke ill of Usama and Salman Allah be pleased with them behind their backs. Upon seeing those two men, Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him said, 'Indeed, I can smell the odour of stinking meat from your mouths.' They replied, 'O Messenger of Allah! By Allah, we have not eaten any meat!' He responded, 'You have indeed backbitten Usama and Salman: go to them and conciliate them,'(1) for if you do not conciliate the person you have backbitten, you will be viler and fouler than the adulterer in the sight of Allah.

Moreover, when a man once spoke ill of Ibn Sirin(2) behind his back, the man thereafter came to him and said, 'O Imam! I came to free myself of sin from what I have done to you.' He responded, 'Why is that?' The man said, 'Because I have backbitten you.' He replied, 'I do not make lawful what Allah has forbidden.'

(1) Ibn Abu Hatim renarrated from As-Suddi that Salman Al-Farisi Allah be pleased with him was with two men on a trip serving them and and taking a share of their food. Salman Allah be pleased with him fell asleep one day, and his companion called out for him, but did not find him, and so they pitched their tent saying: 'Salman wishes for nothing other than coming across limited food and a pitched tent.' Then, when Salman came, they sent him to Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him to request for food for them. He set off and came to Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him saying, 'O Messenger of Allah! My friends have sent me to have you provision them with food, if you have any.' He replied, 'Do your companions not have food? They have already consumed food.' Accordingly, Salman returned and apprised them of the situation. They set off and came to Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him and said, 'By the One Who Sent you with The Truth, we have not encountered any food since we arrived.' He responded, 'Indeed, the two of you have supplied yourselves with food by partaking of the consumption of Salman's flesh with what you have said,' and then the verse was revealed: '...Would any of you like to eat the flesh of your dead brother...' (al-Hujurat: 12). This is mentioned by As-Suyuti in Ad-Durr Al-Manthur (while commenting on the verse 12 of al-Hujurat).

(2) Muhammad ibn Sirin Al-Basri, of the Ansar by clientage, whose agnomen is Abu Bakr, was the prominent scholar of his age in Basra in the religious sciences, one of the Followers, the generation that came right after the time of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him and from amongst the elite writers. He was born, and passed way, in Basra (33-111 AH). He was raised as a trader of cloth, and suffered from deafness. He was famous for his scrupulousness in matters of religion and for his knowledge of the interpretation of dreams [See: Al-Alam by Az-Zirikli (6/154)].

Al-Hasan Al-Basri once found out that a man had spoken ill of him behind his back. Consequently, he sent his servant to the man with a dish of fresh dates, and told him to say to the man, 'This is a gift from my master, for he found out that you gave him a gift of your good deeds yesterday.'(1)

This indicates that you must pay for violating the right of the one whom you have backbitten from your store of good deeds. In case you have no good deeds, the wronged man's evil deeds are taken from him and thrown upon you. This was already indicated in the Noble Hadith of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him in this regard.(2)

Allah Glorified is He states: '…So be mindful of Allah: Allah is ever Relenting, Most Merciful' (al-Hujurat: 12). This verse means that one should be conscious of Allah in His ordinances with respect to what He has forbidden, and stay away from those matters that bring about His punishment.

'…Allah is ever Relenting, Most Merciful' (al-Hujurat: 12). In other words, Allah Glorified is He is ever Relenting to the one who repents, and full of Mercy to the one who turns to Him in penitence.

The conclusion of the verse inspires the sinner with hope in the Mercy of Allah. The one who backbites should not despair of the His Mercy Glorified is He. If someone's tongue runs away with him and slips in error, falling into backbiting, he should rush to repent without delay. Furthermore, knowing that His Sustainer is Oft Returning and Merciful, one should return to Him as soon as possible, and not savour his evil deed, nor persist in them.

(1) Imam Al-Ghazali writes in his Ihya' 'Ulum Ad-Din (2/347) that a man said to Al-Hasan Al-Basri, 'So-and-so has spoken ill of you behind your back.' Subsequently, he sent this person fresh dates in a dish and said, 'It has reached me that you granted me a gift of your good deeds. Thus I wished to recompense you with something equivalent; so please forgive me, for I really cannot recompense you to quite the same degree.'

(2) This is the case with any misdeed committed against one's Muslim brother. Anas ibn Malik Allah be pleased with him narrated that Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him said, 'May Allah have mercy upon the slave who has oppressed his brother, then comes to him begging for his forgiveness before the Day of Judgment when no dirham or dinar will compensate him for wrong deeds, but rather, only his own good deeds will serve as compensation.' It was asked, 'O Messenger of Allah, what if he has no good deeds?' He responded, 'The sins of the oppressed person will be loaded upon his own sins.' This is narrated by At-Tabarani in his Al-Mu'jam Al-Awsat (5312).

One of the greatest blessings Allah Glorified is He bestowed upon us as previously mentioned is that He has allowed for repentance, and opened the doors of its acceptance for us. For if it were not the case, sinners would persist in their deeds, and all life would be corrupted and destroyed.

Afterwards, Allah Glorified is He states: (1)

يَـٰٓأَيُّهَا ٱلنَّاسُ إِنَّا خَلَقْنَـٰكُم مِّن ذَكَرٍ وَأُنثَىٰ وَجَعَلْنَـٰكُمْ شُعُوبًا وَقَبَآئِلَ
لِتَعَارَفُوٓا۟ ۚ إِنَّ أَكْرَمَكُمْ عِندَ ٱللَّهِ أَتْقَىٰكُمْ ۚ إِنَّ ٱللَّهَ عَلِيمٌ خَبِيرٌ ﴿١٣﴾

People, We created you all from a single man and a single woman, and made you into races and tribes so that you should recognize one another. In God's eyes, the most honoured of you are the ones most mindful of Him: God is all knowing, all aware [13] (The Quran, al-Hujurat: 13)

It can be noticed that the previous uses of the vocative were directed at the believers because the verses with such calling convey directives and legislative rules pertaining to the believers particularly. This is because Allah Glorified is He does not impose legal responsibility except upon those who believe in Him.

In the verse under discussion, the vocative addresses the generality of humankind – all of humanity – drawing our attention to the Miracle of creation, and to the Sublimity of the Creator Glorified is He. This verse encompasses one and all since the Creator Glorified is He created the believer and the disbeliever, the male and the female which are the source of all creation, for the male does not procreate by himself, neither does the female.

(1) Regarding the occasion for the revelation of the verse, Ibn 'Abbas Allah be pleased with him stated, 'This verse was revealed concerning Thabit ibn Qays, and his calling the man who did not move aside to make space for him "son of So-and-so." Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him responded, "Who was the one mentioning 'So-and-so'?" Thabit stood up and said, "It was me, O Messenger of Allah." So he said, "Take a look upon the faces of the people in our gathering," which he did. Then he peace and blessings be upon him said, "What did you see?" to which he replied, "I saw some white people, some black people, and some red people." He responded, "You are not to give preference to anyone except with respect to their level of religious practice and piety.' Then, Allah Glorified is He revealed this verse.' This is narrated by Al-Wahidi An-Naysaburi in his Asbab An-Nuzul (p. 224).

However, the verse in the chapter of as-Sajda in which Allah the Almighty says: ‘Who made good everything that He has created and He began the creation of man from dust. [8] Then He made his progeny of an extract, of water held in light estimation.’ (as-Sajda: 7-8) refers to the first creature of mankind, Adam peace be upon him. Allah created and fashioned him with His Hands. Here, we should know that He the Almighty made everything in the universe subject to His Command, ‘Be!’ and it is.’

Hence, Allah says to the Satan: ‘He said: O Iblis! What prevented you that you should do obeisance to him whom I created with My Two Hands?’ (Sad: 75) He the Almighty wonders how it is that the Satan refuses to prostrate to something that He has created with His Hands. Thus, Iblis was not actually prostrating to Adam peace be upon him but rather bowing down in obedience to the One Who commanded him to prostrate.

After creating Adam, Allah brought forth his offspring to come after him; He the Almighty says: ‘Of an extract, of water held in light estimation.’ (as-Sajda: 8) This requires matrimony between the male and the female. In the chapter of an-Nisa’, Allah says: ‘O people! Be careful of [your duty to] your Lord, Who created you from a single being.’ (an-Nisa’: 1) That single being is Adam peace be upon him. He the Almighty then says: ‘And from it created its mate.’ (an-Nisa’: 1) This part of the verse refers to Eve.

Thus, when Allah says in the verse we are studying that He created us all from a single man and a single woman, He does not mean the beginning of human creation, but rather, He means the offspring that have been brought forth after the first of human creation. That is why He the Almighty says in the last verse of the chapter of an-Nisa’: ‘And spread from these two, many men and women.’ (an-Nisa’: 1) These men and women dispersed across the earth and became: ‘tribes and families.’ (al-Hujurat: 13) The Arabs constitute a nation, so are the Romans and so are the Persians. Thereafter, the peoples were divided into tribes which consequently divided into clans and the clans into family lines and so forth.

Furthermore, the members of a single family have different names, for we do not leave individuals without names to refer to, in order that we get to know one another. Thus, this one is named Mohamed, that one is named

Ahmad, while another is Fatima and so on. The wisdom behind this is: 'that you may know each other…' (al-Hujurat: 13). This is with regards to individuals and with regards to peoples and nations.

Becoming mutually acquainted and familiar with one another is something that is necessary for human beings, for their interests are maintained by getting to know one another. Furthermore, the vagaries of life will compel them to become so acquainted. They will need one another because, as we have previously stated, Allah Glorified is He has distributed the sources of His bounty amongst all of His creation. What might be available with you may not be present in another person. Thus, we see Europe, which has attained such a high level of civilization and progress, in need of the residents of the deserts- the shepherds of sheep, goats, and camels-due to the petroleum and the valuable natural resources that are present in their lands.

This difference that exists between the bounties that have been bestowed upon various peoples leads human beings to assist and rely on one another. They complete what is lacking in each other. Therefore, this difference leads to integration and not to mutual opposition and stubborn resistance.

We observe this process of integration in the matter of the creation of the man and the woman. The man and the woman are not contrary and opposed to each other, but rather, they are two complementary elements that make each other integral and whole. Each one of them has a function to carry out and this function cannot be fulfilled by the other.

Allah Glorified is He has clarified this matter to us with His statement 'I swear by the night when it draws a veil and the day when it shines in brightness.' (al-Layl: 1-2) Does any sane person claim that the night is contrary and opposed to the day? Just like the day and the night are the man and the woman. Thus, Allah swears by creating them, i.e. the male and the female afterwards: 'And the creating of the male and the female.' (al-Layl: 3) Thus, the man was created for taking upon the burdens of the hardships of life, toil and work, whilst the woman was created for manifesting her affection and compassion. Everyone is assisted to carry out what they were created for.

This is why we are amazed at those who call out for equality between the man and the woman. How is this possible when each of them has a special role and duty for which they were created? Furthermore, some oppress women and say, ‘They are weak and lacking in intelligence and in religion.’ In spite of the fact that the role of the intellect is to arrange and evaluate various options and choose one of these alternatives from amongst the others, this is not the duty of the woman, but rather, the duty of the man, who lead the family through the voyage of life.

As for the woman, her duty is one of showing and manifesting compassion. She feels compassion for the young and the old; she opens her heart to embrace everyone and gives comfort to the tired and the sick of her family. In addition, we witness that when she becomes a widow, she takes on both the duties of the man and the woman, that is, she takes over the role of her husband as well, and it may well be that she is even more successful in raising her children and protecting them.

Allah Glorified is He created Adam peace be upon him from clay; He the Almighty then fashioned him and breathed into him of His Spirit. However, He did not create Eve in the same manner. Rather, He took part of one of the ribs of Adam and created Eve from that. Why did He not create her in the manner of His creation of Adam peace be upon him? Some of the Quranic commentators have said that He created her from the man in order that he may have guardianship over her.

Similarly, in the case of childbearing, she takes a seed, i.e. the sperm from a man and she herself completes the entire process of producing forth the offspring. Allah Glorified is He says: ‘…and created its mate of the same [kind].’ (an-Nisa’: 1) Further, Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him says: ‘Women have been created from a rib and the most curved portion of the rib is the upper portion.’(1) Furthermore, just as Adam is distinguished and noble due to his being created by Allah and fashioned by His Hands, similarly, Eve is distinguished and noble due to her being created from something that Allah created with His Hands.

Now the world today is preoccupied with the matter of cloning or the biological replication, which is to make an exact copy of a plant or animal by taking a cell from it and replicate it, exactly just as when we copy a book and come with a copy of it. However, we observe this process with rocks, for instance. We see some of different sizes, but do we observe any individual rock, for example, growing in size? We never do! Why is this so? Some experts said that is so because they have deep deposits within the earth, in which the process of replication takes place. Once they arise out of the earth and are exposed to the atmospheric conditions, they solidify into the forms that they have assumed at that particular instant in time.

(1) Narrated by Al-Bukhari and Muslim

Likewise, we observe this process with plants. Have you seen, for example, the seeds of sugar cane or figs? No, they do not have seeds. Rather, we merely take a small shoot of cane and plant it in the ground or we take one of the twigs of the fig tree and plant it in the ground, and thereafter it gives us a new fig tree. Is this not a replication? It is also conceivable that we find something similar with animate life. Indeed, they have cloned animals as happened with the sheep Dolly.

As for the human beings, no one can possibly genetically clone him, for he is distinct from the rest of the species that exist in the universe. Humans are the vicegerent of Allah upon the earth. They are honoured creatures that the rest of the species of the universe are at their service. Thus, if the replication of solids and plants and animals is conceivable, it is impossible to ever conceive of such a process of cloning with human beings, for their propagation requires certain conditions to be in place and general rules to be followed. In addition, it should not result merely from deriving an exact copy through some process of replication of the original.

Therefore, the propagation of the human species does not take place except through the meeting of the two sexes, the male and the female, a matter which only takes place within a family that embraces the child, gives it love and affection, raises it up and takes care of it and looks after it. It is not seemly for the human being to be born from an incubator like young chicks.

It is for this reason that the childhood of a human being is the longest of all created species. Some children amongst us remain in a state of childhood until the age of fourteen, while birds and animals take care of and attend to their young until they are able to move and eat on their own. Then they leave them to their own devices, as if they never even knew them. It may well happen that an animal is killed in front of its mother and she is wholly unaware of it.

So how is it possible for us to conceive of cloning a human being when the human is the ennobled vicegerent of Allah on earth? Indeed, all religions reject fornication, refuse to accept that a child be born illegally and reject the idea of throwing a new-born out in the street or even being raised in an orphanage. So what would be the case if genetic replication were actually to take place?

It is from this point of departure that we say that the process of genetic replication will never take place with respect to the human being, and that no-one is capable of it except Allah, the Creator of the human being, Who wishes goodness for him and wants that he be raised in the arms of the father who will guard and protect it and the mother who will show love and affection to it. Furthermore, from the two of them, it will imbibe virtues of moral excellence and learn its system of values.

Nevertheless, their success in cloning an animal does not impugn in any way the Divine Power of Allah. Rather, it is a novel proof from amongst the various signs that prove one's faith in His Power. For those that carried out the genetic replication of the sheep did not produce it from nothing. Rather, they produced it from another sheep which was the creation of Allah. Furthermore, the intellect which enabled them to make this in the first place is also one of Allah's creations.

Next in the verse we are discussing, Allah Glorified is He lays down a general principle by which some of these peoples and tribes are preferred above others; He the Almighty says: '…surely the most honorable of you with Allah is the one among you most careful [of his duty].' (al-Hujurat: 13) This means that the real measure of preference of individuals is their level of fearing Allah. Thus, Allah says in a Qudsi Hadith that He established lineage for us and we established lineage for ourselves. He established that 'The noblest of you in the sight of Allah is the One Who is most deeply conscious of Him', but we refused and said, 'The most noble of us is so-and-so a person who is the son of so-and-so a person.' Thus, Allah says that today, i.e. the Day of Judgement, He will uphold His Establishment of lineage and put aside the lines of kinship that we established for ourselves.(1)

(1) Narrated by Al-Hakim

Then He the Almighty concludes the verse, saying that He is All Knowing, All-Aware. He is All Knowing of His creation; He gives to everything from amongst them what is appropriate for them in terms of their duties and roles for life, just as He says elsewhere: ‘Does He not know, Who created, and He is the Knower of the subtleties, the All-Aware?’ (al-Mulk: 14)

Allah is the Most Knowledgeable of His creation and the Most Knowledge of their various capacities and their measures. For every one of them, He facilitates the activities that are most appropriate. Thus, we see various classes amongst humanity: a university professor; a blacksmith, a smelter, a carpenter, a shoe-shiner, craftsman, a farmer, etc. If it were not the case and if all of humankind were university professors, how could life operate and move forward?!

Then Allah Glorified is He says:

قَالَتِ ٱلۡأَعۡرَابُ ءَامَنَّاۖ قُل لَّمۡ تُؤۡمِنُواْ وَلَٰكِن قُولُوٓاْ أَسۡلَمۡنَا وَلَمَّا يَدۡخُلِ ٱلۡإِيمَٰنُ فِي قُلُوبِكُمۡۖ
وَإِن تُطِيعُواْ ٱللَّهَ وَرَسُولَهُۥ لَا يَلِتۡكُم مِّنۡ أَعۡمَٰلِكُمۡ شَيۡـًٔاۚ إِنَّ ٱللَّهَ غَفُورٞ رَّحِيمٌ ﴿١٤﴾

The desert Arabs say, ‘We have faith.’ [Prophet], tell them, ‘You do not have faith. What you should say instead is, “We have submitted,” for faith has not yet entered your hearts.’ If you obey God and His Messenger, He will not diminish any of your deeds: He is most forgiving and most merciful [14]
(The Quran, al-Hujurat: 14)

The desert Arabs are the Bedouins. They are the dwellers of the desert who have not settled in civilised regions of towns and cities. Therefore, their personality has become dominated with the characteristics of roughness and harshness. Allah Glorified is He informs us about them, noting that they have said that they have faith. But He is More Knowledgeable of their true state and that they have not truly attained to the rank of those who have faith, for faith is not merely words that are proclaimed, but rather, it is something firmly embedded within the heart.

However, Islam is something of outward appearance including the actions of the limbs such as fasting, praying, and other similar acts of worship. That is why Allah corrected their statement and said: ‘…Tell them, ‘You do not have faith. What you should say instead is, “We have submitted”’ (al-Hujurat: 14). This means that they carry out the obligations of Islam with the limbs, but their hearts are devoid of faith. Furthermore, the moment Allah tells them that they do not have faith is an indication of something they determined in their hearts and there is no secret of His servants that is hidden from Him, something of which they are well aware.

Thus, Allah informs them of the reality of what is in their hearts and tells them to be honest with their own selves and to submit outwardly, for He the Almighty knows what is hidden and concealed in their hearts. In this situation, they actually resemble hypocrites as they were eager to perform the prayers in the very first row and to listen to the Quran being recited. All of these are outward indications of faith, yet Allah is fully aware of what is in their hearts and minds, that is, He the Almighty knows best that their utterance is not in accordance with what they uttered by their tongues.

Allah Glorified is He says that faith has not yet entered their hearts. He uses a particle of negation that negates the occurrence of an event in the past, but gives an additional meaning of the possibility of the occurrence of this action afterwards, just as when, upon entering a garden, for example, you say, ‘The garden has not produced any fruit as of yet.’ In other words, there is a possibility that it might produce fruit sometime in the future.

That is why scholars have said regarding this verse that it does mean that the door of faith has not been closed to them. Rather, it brings glad tidings of the fact that they will attain to faith sometime in the future. Furthermore, the Quran unveils that which is hidden in their hearts, meanwhile notifying Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him of their actual state that will make them think over the matter, thus become convinced, and enter the realm of true faith.

Further, Allah Glorified is He says that if they obey Him and His Messenger, He will not diminish any of their deeds. He reassures them that fruits of their deeds performed sincerely for His sake are preserved and accounted. Such deeds will not disappear, nor will He diminish any of them from their account.

Allah concludes the verse saying that He is the Most Forgiving and the Most Merciful; He says elsewhere that ‘He is Most Forgiving and Most Merciful.’ (Saba’: 2) Thus, He the Almighty sometimes mentions the attribute of mercy before that of forgiveness and vice versa; He the Almighty does so according to the circumstances and conditions of that event. For example, when a criminal stands in front of the judge confessing his crime, but the judge notices that he is poor and needy with shabby clothes and has a pale face, he takes pity on him, thus orders that he be given food and clothing, and thereafter forgives him. In this case, he has preceded forgiveness with mercy or it can be the other way round where the judge forgives him first and then before the man leaves his assembly, the judge orders his men to give him such-and-such favours.

The root of the verb Yalitu (to diminish) has been mentioned in another place wherein Allah says: ‘And [as for] those who believe and their offspring follow them in faith, We will unite with them their offspring and We will not diminish to them aught of their work.’ (at-Tur: 21) We notice that the discourse here is about the assembly of believers and their offspring. The offspring that come after the believers are also believers, so why will Allah unite and make them follow each other thereafter?

Some of the Quranic commentators have said that they have been mentioned afterwards due to their respective levels of reward, for each of the two groups has good deeds in their favour, but the deeds of the fathers are more and their station is higher, and thus their standing is followed by that of their descendants and they are placed together in one general realm. Thus those of a lower rank follow upon those of the higher rank.

Allah stipulates that they have to obey Him and His Messenger. Someone might ask, ‘In what aspects should they obey Him and His Messenger?’ It is to obey them in terms of attaining to faith, as they were already Muslims but Allah wished to urge and encourage them to attain true faith and remove any hint of lying or false allegations from them.

Then Allah Glorified is He says:

إِنَّمَا ٱلْمُؤْمِنُونَ ٱلَّذِينَ ءَامَنُوا۟ بِٱللَّهِ وَرَسُولِهِۦ ثُمَّ لَمْ يَرْتَابُوا۟ وَجَٰهَدُوا۟
بِأَمْوَٰلِهِمْ وَأَنفُسِهِمْ فِى سَبِيلِ ٱللَّهِ ۚ أُو۟لَٰٓئِكَ هُمُ ٱلصَّٰدِقُونَ ﴿١٥﴾

The true believers are the ones who have faith in God and His Messenger and leave all doubt behind, the ones who have struggled with their possessions and their persons in God's way: they are the ones who are true [15]
(The Quran, al-Hujurat: 15)

Allah Glorified is He wishes to clarify to them what true faith is. It is not merely a matter of words that are professed by the tongue. Rather, it is a firm belief that is not seized by any doubt or misgiving. The true believers are the ones who have faith in Allah and His Messenger and leave all doubt behind. They believed in Allah and His Oneness, and that He Alone is the Creator, the Provider, and the Governor of all of the affairs in this universe. They believed in His Divine Names and Attributes. Likewise, they believed in Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him and that he was trustworthy and truthful in conveying the Message of faith from Allah to them. They had no misgivings, nor did they have any doubt in any of these matters whatsoever.

Furthermore, among the attributes of those who believe is that they struggled with their possessions and their persons in Allah's Way. Is there any greater proof of the reality of faith and sincerity therein than your sacrificing yourself for the sake of this faith? Thus, Allah says that those are actually the true believers. They are only the believers who really and truly believe and have faith. They have these distinguishing attributes. In addition, at the end of the verse, He describes them with truthfulness in their faith, saying: 'they are the ones who are true.' (al-Hujurat: 15)

Yes, they are those who are truthful in their faith, for they sacrificed with the most precious and noble objects any human being possesses including wealth and soul. The martyr does not sacrifice himself nor give out his wealth unless he is certain that what he will find is better than what he left behind in this worldly life with Allah. That is why Allah will grant him everlasting life such that he will not experience any death afterwards. In this regard, He Glorified is He says: 'And reckon not those who are killed in Allah’s Way as dead; nay, they are alive [and] are provided sustenance from their Lord.’ (Al-‘Imran: 169)

Allah says that He will deal with them in the manner of the people of paradise. They will eat, drink, and enjoy themselves. Note here that He Glorified is He describes this life and even attributes it to Himself. In other words, they are not alive with respect to humans, but rather, they are alive in the presence and knowledge of their Lord. This means that if you were to go to the gravesite of a martyr and open his tomb, you would not find him alive, for he is not alive in a way that you can perceive; rather, he is alive in a way that Allah perceives.

When Allah says that such people with such characters are the true believers, there is an intimation of those who have lied against Him and falsely alleged faith. It is as if He were saying to them, ‘Indeed, these people have attained to faith and were truthful and sincere in their profession of faith, while you denied the true faith and overstepped the boundaries of the truth.

He says:

قُلْ أَتُعَلِّمُونَ ٱللَّهَ بِدِينِكُمْ وَٱللَّهُ يَعْلَمُ مَا فِى ٱلسَّمَٰوَٰتِ
وَمَا فِى ٱلْأَرْضِ ۚ وَٱللَّهُ بِكُلِّ شَىْءٍ عَلِيمٌ ﴿١٦﴾

Say, ‘Do you presume to teach God about your religion, when God knows every- thing in the heavens and earth, and He has full knowledge of all things?’ [16]
(The Quran, al-Hujurat: 16)

Allah Glorified is He tells them, i.e. the (Bedouin) Arabs to pay attention to this point of truth: for He is their Creator and He knows well what is within their hearts, for no secret is hidden from Him. So beware of saying, ‘We have faith!’ thinking that you can mask the truth and cover for your lies, for He the Almighty knows which of you is a believer and which of you is not. In addition, He knows which of you is truthful in his belief and which of you is hypocrite.

He the Almighty wonders that they, i.e. the (Bedouin Arabs) presume to teach Him about their religion. In other words, do you think that you are informing Him of your real level of faith? How is this so while He Glorified is He knows all that is in the heavens and all that is in earth?! Nothing from either of these two realms is hidden from Him, but rather, He has full knowledge of all things. His Knowledge Glorified is He does not only encompass the Heavens and the earth, but rather crosses those bounds into the very depths of all of creation.

This is because the Heavens and the earth are part of the vast universe of Allah. That is why He the Almighty describes them both and all what is contained within 'like a ring that you have cast upon wide open space of desert.'(1) Thus, what we know of the Heavens and the earth is very little in comparison to all the vastness of the universe.

He the Almighty then says:

يَمُنُّونَ عَلَيۡكَ أَنۡ أَسۡلَمُواْۖ قُل لَّا تَمُنُّواْ عَلَيَّ إِسۡلَٰمَكُمۖ بَلِ ٱللَّهُ يَمُنُّ
عَلَيۡكُمۡ أَنۡ هَدَىٰكُمۡ لِلۡإِيمَٰنِ إِن كُنتُمۡ صَٰدِقِينَ ﴿١٧﴾

They think they have done you [Prophet] a favour by submitting. Say, 'Do not consider your submission a favour to me; it is God who has done you a favour, by guiding you to faith, if you are truly sincere' [17] (The Quran, al-Hujurat: 17)

It is related that this verse was revealed when a group of the desert Arabs, likely from the tribe of Banu Asad, came to Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him while he was in the mosque and said, 'We came to you in order to profess that there is no deity worthy of worship besides Allah and that you are the Messenger of Allah; we do so despite that you did not send us any envoy, nor did we ever fight you as did the tribe of so-and-so.' Thus, Allah revealed this verse in question.

Therefore, who is bestowing a favour upon whom, for real? It is not necessary for you to make an outward show of your Islam to Messenger Muhammad because your Islam is for your own good and you are the ones who benefit from it. It is Islam that has safeguarded you from fighting and from being taken captive. You have assumed those aspects and duties that distinguish a

---

(1) Narrated by Ibn Battal and Ibn Hibban

Muslim from others, such as almsgiving and protection. Further, no act of obedience benefits Allah Glorified is He nor does any act of disobedience harm Him in any way.

Therefore, do not think that you are bestowing a favour upon anyone with your outward show of submission. Rather, it is Allah Who bestows a favour upon you. It is He Who guided you upon the path of rightness and guidance. If there were any grace of favour to be acknowledged, it would be the grace that Allah has bestowed upon you, for obedience to Allah and travelling along His Way is what safeguards the activities of your lives and organises them for you, not to contradict or go against what is actually in your own interests.

That is all if you are truly sincere. This conclusion means if you are truly sincere in your claims to having attained faith. That is because the particle 'if' here indicates doubt. Thus, it is as if they are showing off Islam which they actually deny in their own hearts; despite all of this, even if they were truly sincere in what they claim for themselves, it was not for them to consider their Islam to be a favour upon anyone in any case.

Then Allah Glorified is He says:

إِنَّ ٱللَّهَ يَعۡلَمُ غَيۡبَ ٱلسَّمَٰوَٰتِ وَٱلۡأَرۡضِۚ وَٱللَّهُ بَصِيرُۢ بِمَا تَعۡمَلُونَ ١٨

God knows the secrets of the heavens and earth: He sees everything you do [18]
(The Quran, al-Hujurat: 18)

We have already previously mentioned that the Heavens and the earth serve as a coffer within which are wonders and marvels from the creation of Allah that are much greater than the coffer itself. The general case is that whatever is contained within the coffer is higher in value and greater than that in which the contents are contained.

Thus, Allah says: 'And Allah's is the kingdom of the heavens and the earth.' (Al-'Imran: 189) In addition, He the Almighty says in another verse: 'And Allah's is what is in the heavens and what is in the earth.' (an-Najm: 31) The Heavens and the earth despite whatever they contain of wonders of creation, originality, and fine-tuned engineering, actually encompass what is even more wondrous than all of this.

Here, Allah Glorified is He speaks to us of what is in the heavens and the earth from the realm of the unseen world. Now the unseen realm of existence refers to everything that is absent from your awareness and consciousness. It may also be something that you are not aware of today but may yet manifest itself for you tomorrow. For example, electricity, before it was discovered, was absent from our awareness and we had no knowledge of it at all. But today, it has become a phenomenon that is witnessed every day, and we all experience and work with it.

If you were to consider the electromagnetic waves that carry voice and video through the atmosphere, you would find something that is truly astonishing. If you were to come with 100 radios and 100 television sets, place them altogether in one place and tuned each one to a different frequency, you would find different programs for each one, be they radio or TV programs. How did all of these waves cross paths in the same space of air and arrive with such precision and clarity, even if they were transmitted from the furthest countries of the earth?

All of these are secrets of the unseen realm of the Heavens and the earth that call us towards belief. Allah Glorified is He says: 'We will soon show them Our signs in the universe and in their own souls, until it will become quite clear to them that it is the truth.' (Fussilat: 53)

Despite the exaltedness of creation of the Heavens and the earth, the unseen realm of the Heavens and the earth is even greater. This unseen realm will continue to serve as a means of unexhausted support and assistance and an endless gift. It discloses something new to us from time to time, in order that the Quran continues to manifest its miraculous nature until the coming of the Last Hour.

It is out of the Wisdom of Allah Glorified is He that He has distributed the gifts of the Quran across all the various epochs of history in order that no age passes by the Quran, without it giving something of its gifts. Furthermore, these gifts come in accordance with the capacity of people's intelligence and ability to understand and in accordance with the degree to which people examine and ponder over the celestial Realm of Allah. It is from this that we understand the meaning of the statement of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him ‘Its wonders never cease and it does not become exhausted of its meanings with continued reflection’. (1)

You may read, for example, the greatest of odes. Eventually, you will certainly become weary of them after reading them over once or many times. However, whenever you read the Quran, you never become weary of it. In fact, your love for it increases every time you examine it closely and study carefully its meanings. This is because it is the Divine Speech of Allah that has a secret that is manifested with everyone who recites it; it is a gift to grant to everyone who ponders over it. Thus, the gifts of the Quran are copious and everyone who recites it takes something from them according to his capacity.

Allah concludes the chapter with this verse, indicating that the Dominion of Allah is vast and that its wonders do not come to an end, that is, they are unbounded and limitless. It indicates that whatever level of progress humanity attains to, the Quran will always have something new to give, as the verses of Allah contain what dazzles and overwhelms the intelligence.

In the past, we used to speak of the age of coal, then came the age of steam and after that came the age of electricity. Now, we speak of the age of nuclear and atomic power. So the question to be asked here is: ‘Where were these new forms of power in the past?’ The answer is that they were hidden within the Knowledge of Allah. He unveiled them to His servants until their thought progressed and advanced. All of these are in fact discoveries which no single person created or brought about on his own. Rather, all of it is from Allah and a bountiful inundation of His Gifts that had been stored up for a period of time up to our present day.

(1) Narrated by Al-Muttaqi Al-Hindi and Al-Hakim Al-Bayhaqi

the chapter of

Qaf

In the Name of God,(1) the Most Merciful, the Dispenser of Mercy

The chapter of Qaf. Allah the Almighty says:

قٓۚ وَٱلۡقُرۡءَانِ ٱلۡمَجِيدِ ١

Qaf,* by the glorious Quran! [1]
(The Quran, Qaf: 1)

We have spoken before about the discrete letters that occur at the beginning of certain chapters of the Quran. So it is enough to say that these letters, like the letter Qaf, represent the unseen aspect of the Quran and as we have said, ‘the unseen is the pillar of faith. The illiterate farmer, for example, uses the television and switches from one channel to another without having any idea of how it works and how it is possible to flip through channels. He benefits from it without knowing how it works. Likewise, he uses a pump to draw water without knowing the mechanics of how it works. Similarly, when it comes to our standpoint with the discrete letters, we believe in them and we consign their meaning to the One Who said them.

Religion is composed of three things, which are doctrines that fill the heart; acts of worship and responsibilities that busy the body; the speech that conveys all these things through the work of the tongue. All the doctrines, responsibilities, and expressions have mysterious and unseen elements. Allah is unseen, but the effects of His Power in the universe can be perceived. It is as though

---

(1) The Islamic conception of 'Allah' is not the same as the Christian and Jewish conception of 'God'. However, the word 'Allah' does not refer to a tribal god or God of only Muslims; it refers to the Creator of the whole world, the One God (who has no son). We prefer, however, to use 'Allah' rather than 'God' as it has a unique character: it cannot be used to refer to any false gods and does not have any derivatives like goddess, gods, etc. It is a unique word used solely to describe the One God of this universe.

Allah Glorified is He gives us a mysterious unseen element in these things in order to test our faith, for what you know is proof of the truthfulness of what you do not know.

The same is the case of the discrete letters in the Noble Quran. We generally understand the Quran and know what it means, but the discrete letters are unseen to the sense that we must believe in them even if we do not know their real meanings. These letters remain as an indication of the miraculous nature of the Quran.

Thus, the verse we are discussing combines the two things, i.e. the unseen in the letter Qaf and the plain and perceptible aspect in the rest of the verse. These are the two elements of the Quran. The letter Qaf indicates the miraculous nature of the Quran followed by the words of Allah, ‘By the glorious Quran’ (Qaf: 1); so the verse combines the proof and the object of the proof.

The letter Qaf bears the meaning of a vow. It is a vow made on a single letter just as Allah swore a vow by single things as in: ‘By the flight of time! Verily, man is bound to lose himself.’ (al-’Asr: 1-2) Allah also says: ‘I swear by the star when it goes down. Your companion does not err, nor does he go astray.’ (an-Najm: 1-2)

Further, He the Almighty also swears vows by two letters, such as Ya Sin, Ta Ha and Ha Mim, just as He the Almighty swears by two of His creations as in the verses: ‘I swear by the early hours of the day and the night when it covers with darkness.’ (ad-Duha: 1-2) In addition, He the Almighty swears by three letters like Alif Lam Mim, as He the Almighty swears by three things in His saying, ‘I swear by those who draw themselves out in ranks. Then those who drive away with reproof. Then those who recite, being mindful.’ (as-Saffat: 1-3)

Moreover, Allah swears by four letters, a matter which is clear in His saying, ‘Alif Lam Mim Sad’ (al-A‘raf: 1); just as He swears by four things; Allah says: ‘I swear by the fig and the olive and mount Sinai and this city made secure, Certainly We created man in the best make.’ (at-Tin: 1-3) He also swears by five letters when He says: ‘Kaf Ha Ya ‘Ayn Sad’ (Maryam: 1) and swears by five things when He says: ‘I swear by the Mountain, And the Book written. In an outstretched fine parchment, And the House [Ka'ba] that is visited, And the elevated canopy, And the swollen sea.' (*at-Tur:*1-6)

Therefore, there were five kinds of vow, starting from those with one letter to those with five letters. However, no vow in the Quran goes any further than this, lest it be difficult to say. In addition, there is no root word in Arabic which has more than five letters. However, when Allah swears with His cosmological signs, He sometimes goes further than five objects such as when He says: 'I swear by the sun and its brilliance and the moon when it follows the sun and the day when it shows it and the night when it draws a veil over it and the heaven and Him Who made it and the earth and Him Who extended it and the soul and Him Who made it perfect.' (ash-Shams: 1-7) Had He the Almighty done the same with the vows He made with the discrete letters, He would have gone beyond the bounds of how a single Arabic word is constructed.

We may also observe that Allah only swears with the discrete letters at the beginnings of the chapters of the Quran, unlike vows by cosmological signs that can be made in the middle of them such as when Allah says: 'Nay; I swear by the moon and the night when it departs and the daybreak when it shines.' (al-Muddaththir: 32-34) Moreover, the vows which are made by the discrete letters are not preceded by the Arabic letter wa (by) but is used in those vows which we understand. Allah did not say 'Consider Qaf' because the Arabic letter wa is a particle or a letter like Qaf, so they would be confusing if placed together. This is one of the miracles of the Quran which we must take some time over which to ponder.

Believing in the unseen is what proves the sincerity of faith; otherwise, what distinction would there be if every verse of the Quran was plain and obvious in its meaning? What distinction would be there if everything about the religion was known to us and subject to logical reasoning and proof? We have explained before that belief in perceptible things is something normal which everyone does. What is important is that you believe in what you cannot see, out of trust for the one who tells you of them.

Suppose you go to the doctor and he, after examining you, prescribes medicine for you. Tell me, do you argue with him as to why he prescribes this particular medicine or that one? You do not argue with him because you went to him willingly and trusted him, and you are ready to follow his instructions and take the medicine he prescribes even though you do not know anything about it. Thus, if you trust the doctor, who is a man like you and me and who is subject to error, then what about Allah? Will you not trust His Word?

Therefore, due to the importance of faith in the unseen, Allah praises those who believe in it, saying: ‘Those who believe in the unseen.’ (al-Baqara: 3) Just as we believe in the verses whose meanings are clear, we also must believe in the discrete letters whose meanings may be unclear; the former is the perceptible Quran and while the latter is the unseen aspect of the Quran. Just as we believe in the perceptible cosmological signs, we also believe in Allah Who created and made them, though He cannot be seen.

Allah says: ‘By the glorious Quran.’ (Qaf: 1) The Quran is the name for what came down from Allah upon the heart of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him which proves that the Message he delivered was true. It was called ‘Quran’ to indicate that it is ‘recited’, and it is called ‘The Book’ to indicate that it is written, for it is written down on pages and memorised in hearts.

In addition, the Quran has a special distinction which no other Scripture before it had. It contains both the teachings of the religion and the miracle which proves it at the same time, while the other heavenly revealed Scriptures which came before the Quran, had the teachings in the book, whilst the miracle was separate. For example, the Scripture of Prophet ‘Isa (Jesus) was the Gospel and his miracles included curing the blind and the leprous and raising the dead by Allah’s Permission. The book of Prophet Musa (Moses) was the Torah, whilst his miracle was the staff. However, the miracle of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him was the Message itself. Why is that? That is because his Message was destined to remain until the end of time and to spread throughout all places and thereby gave it universality of time and place. Thus, we say, ‘That is Muhammad, the Messenger of Allah and that is his miracle.’ But we cannot say this about Musa or ‘Isa because their miracles ended when their time on earth ended.

The meaning of the word ‘glorious’ is great, noble, high and lofty. It is in a morphological form that indicates hyperbole and can sometimes have the meaning of an active participle, like Rahim/Raheem (one who gives mercy); other times it gives the meaning of a passive participle, like qateel (one who has been killed). Thus, the meaning of the Arabic word for ‘glorious’ indicates both that it is inherently sublime and that it has been made inherently sublime. It is both active and passive at the same time because it is the highest and loftiest of speech and the noblest and the most precious of books, that is, it is sublime in its very nature.

Moreover, it came from the Most High and Glorious Who is the True Lord; it was conveyed by a sublime angel to a sublime Messenger as well as it was entrusted to a sublime community.

Since the first verse in the chapter in question is a vow, what is the content of this vow? The scholars said that Allah is swearing here that the Resurrection is true. That is to say, ‘Qaf and By the Glorious Quran, you shall certainly be raised from the dead.’ But a more satisfying answer than this is that we simply take the content of the vow from the words which Allah Glorified is He says next:

بَلۡ عَجِبُوٓاْ أَن جَآءَهُم مُّنذِرٞ مِّنۡهُمۡ فَقَالَ ٱلۡكَٰفِرُونَ هَٰذَا شَيۡءٌ عَجِيبٌ ٢

But the disbelievers are amazed that a warner has come from among them and they say, ‘How strange! [2]
(The Quran, Qaf: 2)

People only deem something to be strange if it is unusual and the soul cannot explain it or rationalise it, such as magic, we find it strange because we do not understand how it is done. The discourse here is about the disbelievers who lived at the time of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him.

The Quran has clarified this matter and explained it elsewhere, when Allah the Almighty says: ‘And they say, too, ‘And they say: Why was not this Quran revealed to a man of importance in the two towns?’ (az-Zukhruf: 31) He also says: ‘And they say: Why has not an angel been sent down to him? And had We sent down an angel, the matter would have certainly been decided and then they would not have been respited. And if We had made him angel, We would certainly have made him a man and We would certainly have made confused to them what they make confused.' (al-An'am: 8-9)

Therefore, their objection was not directed at the Quran itself, but rather at Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him and how the Quran could have been revealed to him when he was one of the ordinary people and why it was not revealed unto a great man of the people of the two cities. They brought forth another objection which was to ask why it had not been revealed unto an angel.

However, the Quran answered them and refuted this objection. Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him is a Messenger and a role model, thus must be from the same species as those to whom he is sent. For otherwise, how could we follow the example of an angel when his nature is different from ours, and his powers are different from ours?! And if he commanded us something, we would have the right to say that we cannot do what you can do because you can do things we cannot do. Thus, he could not be our role model.

As a matter of fact, part of the greatness of Prophet Muhammad is that he is one of us and thereby Allah reminded us of this blessing when He says: 'Certainly a Messenger has come to you from among yourselves.' (at-Tawba: 128) That is from your species, your nation and from the closet people to you. He was known with his sincerity and his trustworthiness since before the Message came to him, and you have attested to these yourselves.

Thus, this means that the disbelievers are the ones who find it strange that Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him was chosen to convey the Message. Those who are not disbelievers do not find this strange. Since the Quran was revealed over twenty-three years, there were some people who believed in him peace and blessings be upon him from the moment the very first verse was revealed to him. Indeed, Abu Bakr may Allah be pleased with him believed in him from the very first moment he told him that, 'I am he Messenger of Allah' without even asking him any questions or doubting him. That is because his past history among his people made him worthy of such a position. Why would they not believe him when he was known as the honest one who had never been known to lie? If someone never lies about creatures, he will certainly never lie about the Creator. Likewise, Abu Bakr believed him about the Night Journey and Ascension and did not argue as others did. He said about that 'If he indeed did say it, then he spoke the truth.' He considered the matter rationally based on what he knew about the life of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him.

It is worth noting that the name Muhammad itself is a proof of his truthfulness. When Allah says: 'Muhammad is the Messenger of Allah' (al-Fath: 29), the word 'Muhammad' is the subject of this sentence and the predicate is that he is the Messenger of Allah. Muhammad means a person praised and lauded by the people. Thus, at his very beginnings and childhood he was being prepared for this mission and therefore they never experienced a single lie from him, nor any of those things which his contemporaries used to do in the time of the pre-Islamic period. It is as though He were saying to them, 'This is Muhammad whom you know and whose past history among you is known to you. This is the Messenger of Allah.' It is as though the very reason for believing in him is that he is Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him. We explained before how Allah protected him peace and blessings be upon him from errors and from having his private parts exposed. Therefore, He the Almighty instructed Him to say to those who debated with him: 'Indeed I have lived a lifetime among you before it; do you not then understand?' (Yunus: 16) This means, 'You know everything about me and you know that I do not lie and that I have never given a speech or recited poetry to you. So why would you give the lie to me now?'

The words 'how strange' at the end of the verse are not a repetition of the aforementioned words 'But the disbelievers are amazed.' Rather, it means that they find strange what has been claimed and they also find strange what the disbelievers themselves said. The Quran explained this when it says: 'And nothing prevented people from believing when the guidance came to them except that they said: What! Has Allah raised up a mortal to be a messenger?' (al-Isra': 94) He replied to them, 'what do you want?' They said, 'We want an angel.' He said to them, 'Even if he was an angel, he would come to you in the form of a man.' So, the doubt would still remain.

Then Allah Glorified is He says:

أَءِذَا مِتْنَا وَكُنَّا تُرَابًا ذَٰلِكَ رَجْعُۢ بَعِيدٌ ﴿٣﴾

To come back [to life] after we have died and become dust? That is too far-fetched' [3] (The Quran, Qaf: 3)

Here they move the objection away from the human nature of the Prophet Muhammad peace be upon him and turn to doubts the matter of resurrection. Thus, we have two distinct contents of the vow. The first content is that 'You indeed are a warner' and the second content is 'Indeed you shall all be resurrected.' We derive these two from the second and the third verse.

The meaning of their words that is too far-fetched refers to the return to life after death and becoming dust. This seems far-fetched to them. Why is that when you have the remnants of the teachings of our Prophets Ibrahim (Abraham) and Ismail (Ishmael) and the rest of the previous religions and you know about Allah and that He is your Creator and the Creator of the heavens and the earth?

The Quran tells us that Prophet Ibrahim said: 'and when Ibrahim said: My Lord! Show me how You give life to the dead, He said: What! And do you not believe? He said: Yes, but that my heart may be at ease.' (al-Baqara: 260) We said that this question was not asked out of any doubt on the part of Ibrahim in the power of Allah to raise the dead to life. Rather, his question was about the methodology of it.

Thus, Allah showed him the mode with a practical example so as to make him witness and participate in it. It is as though Allah was saying to him and to us: 'Raising the dead to life is not difficult or miraculous for Me and indeed if I will I can lend My power to an of My servants and he shall do it by My Leave.' 'He said: Then take four of the birds, then train them to follow you, then place on every mountain a part of them, then call them, they will come to you flying; and know that Allah is Mighty, Wise.' (al-Baqara: 260) This is how Allah may lend some of His Power to one of His servants.

Further, in the story of 'Isa (Jesus), Allah says: 'that I determine for you out of dust like the form of a bird.' (Al-'Imran: 49) Therefore, the Quran responds to those who deny the Resurrection and says:

قَدۡ عَلِمۡنَا مَا تَنقُصُ ٱلۡأَرۡضُ مِنۡهُمۡۖ وَعِندَنَا كِتَٰبٌ حَفِيظُۢ ﴿٤﴾

We know very well what the earth takes away from them: We keep a comprehensive record [4] (The Quran, Qaf: 4)

This means 'why do you deem Resurrection strange, when Allah is well aware of the constituents and the parts of the body and the quantities of each part?' He is well aware of what the earth takes away from you and well able to reassemble it exactly as it was when He created it in the first place even if the parts which belonged to it have been removed from it. So we differ in respect to the constituents of our makeup, not in the way in which these constituents are assembled.

Allah says that this process is based on knowledge and awareness, not on mere words as well as it has another attestation, i.e. the comprehensive record. So this knowledge is backed up by a written record wherein all things are documented. If you say, 'What is the purpose of the record since Allah already knows it?' We respond that Allah's knowledge is vast and is one of His Attributes and He does not forget; but He inscribes it in a record so that this record may be an argument against those who deny, just as is the case with good and bad deeds. Allah knows them well and knows their number. He does not need anything to remind Him of them, but He records them for the servant to be a proof against him on the Day when Allah will say to him: 'Read your book; your own self is sufficient as a reckoner against you this day.' (al-Isra': 14)

The Arabic for the word comprehensive is an intensive adjective and a hyperbole in the morphological form fa'il. It has the active meaning of protector or guardian. It means that it securely records all things great and small and it is also protected. No hand can remove anything from it and change anything in it. Therefore, Allah says: 'Most surely it is an honored Quran, in a book that is protected. None shall touch it save the purified ones.' (al-Waqi'a: 77-79) He also says: 'And with Him are the keys of the unseen treasures–none knows them but He, and He knows what is in the land and the sea and there falls not a leaf but He knows it, nor a grain in the darkness of the earth, nor anything green nor dry but [it is all] in a clear book.' (al-An'am: 59)

Those who seek to raise doubts about the Resurrection or deny it outright are those who mock religion and squander their own souls. If the Resurrection or the Reckoning were really true, this would be a disaster for them as they simply doubt the Resurrection and deny it and indeed all of religion is a lie in their view.

Reflect, for example, on the futility of their argument when they say, by way of denying the Resurrection, that if a man dies and then an apple-tree is planted on his grave, for example, that his elements will be absorbed by this tree and it will consume him, and then people will eat its fruits. Thereby, some elements from the first person will thus constitute the body of the second person, and when the second person dies, will this element be resurrected in the body of the first person, or the second?

Now this is a feeble objection, and we may respond to it by saying: ‘If a man’s weight is one hundred kilos and he becomes so ill that he loses half his weight and becomes emaciated, and then Allah the Almighty grants him a cure so that he regains his health and his previous weight, does this mean that the same matter has returned to him?

No, it has not, but rather, he has consumed other matter than that which left him; yet his form and its individual characteristics remain, and when they return, they are just the same as they were before.

So it is not the very same physical matter which is restored, but rather, the very same person is restored. As long as Allah the Almighty says: ‘Well do We know how the earth consumes their bodies…’ (Qaf: 4), this means that He the Almighty is fully able to gather them and remake them, simply by saying ‘Be!’ so that it comes into being.

Allah the Almighty then says:

بَلْ كَذَّبُوا۟ بِٱلْحَقِّ لَمَّا جَآءَهُمْ فَهُمْ فِىٓ أَمْرٍ مَّرِيجٍ ۝٥

But the disbelievers deny the truth when it comes to them; they are in a state of confusion [5] (The Quran, Qaf: 5)

We understand from their words ‘Why – [how could we be resurrected] after we have died and become mere dust? Such a return seems far-fetched indeed!’ (Qaf: 3) that they deny the Resurrection and do not believe that they will be resurrected after death. This denial does not change anything in reality, for the Resurrection is real and it will happen, yet they deny it because it will not be to their benefit.

Therefore, Allah says here: ‘But the disbelievers deny the truth when it comes to them’ (Qaf: 5); the ‘truth’ is that which is stable and never changes, no matter what happens; for all the events and incidents will pass by, and the truth will remain as it is.

Allah the Almighty gave us a tangible parable of truth and falsehood when He the Almighty says: ‘[Whenever] He sends down water from the sky, and [once-dry] river-beds are running high according to their measure, the stream carries scum on its surface; and, likewise, from that [metal] which they smelt in the fire in order to make ornaments or utensils, [there rises] scum. In this way does Allah set forth the parable of truth and falsehood: for, as far as the scum is concerned, it passes away as [does all] dross; but that which is of benefit to man abides on earth. In this way does Allah set forth the parables?’ (ar-Ra‘d: 17)

In the same way, their denial and disbelief will pass away, and the fact will remain, and the truth will remain stable and unchanged. In the same connection, there are many verses in the Quran which convey this notion, such as: ‘…and [He] brought utterly low the cause of those who were bent on denying the truth, whereas Allah’s Cause remained supreme…’ (at-Tawba: 40). Now the first instance of the word ‘cause’ here is the object of the verb, whilst the second is the subject of a new clause which is independent of the other.

So, the first is the object of another action, whilst the second is eternally stable beyond the count of time: He brought the cause of the disbelievers utterly low, whilst Allah’s Cause was supreme from the very beginning; it was not low and then He the Almighty brought it high. This means that the truth is something pre-eternally firm and unchangeable.

Allah the Almighty then says: ‘…and so they are in a state of confusion.’ (Qaf: 5) Now the word marij literally means ‘confusing’. So, they are confused and wavering: sometimes they are incredulous, thus say: ‘…A strange thing is this’ (Qaf: 2), while other times they deny it; so, their state is confusing.

The word marij is derived from the word maraja which describes how a ring slides onto a finger if it is wide and easy to move.

The proof that they are in a state of confusion is that they levelled a series of accusations against Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him and every time they failed to uphold one, they moved on to another because the Quran was ready to answer every plot they made against him peace and blessings be upon him. Therefore, we heard them accusing him peace and blessings be upon him of being a 'sorcerer', 'poet', 'madman' and 'soothsayer.' So '…they are in a state of confusion' (Qaf: 5), and they do not know what to say, for every time they make an accusation, the Quran refutes it; for the truth is one, and therefore we see it to be constant, whilst falsehood is multiple and therefore inconstant.

This matter is crystal clear when people testify before a judge: the truthful witness does not say one thing and then another because he is describing a factual event, whilst the deceitful witness changes his story and does not stand up to the judge's questioning, and his deceit is quickly discovered and exposed. This is because he is not describing a factual event, but is inventing his own story.

Allah the Almighty then turns His Discourse to the cosmological signs which prove His Omnipotent Power and support doctrinal matters; for once we correct the doctrine of these people and help them attain to faith in Allah the Almighty they will then think about having faith in the Message of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him thus allow themselves to be guided to the Truth.

Therefore, He the Almighty leaves the subject of their denial of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him and the Resurrection to speak about the cosmological signs of the heavens and the earth.

He the Almighty says:

أَفَلَمْ يَنظُرُوٓا۟ إِلَى ٱلسَّمَآءِ فَوْقَهُمْ كَيْفَ بَنَيْنَٰهَا وَزَيَّنَّٰهَا وَمَا لَهَا مِن فُرُوجٍ ﴿٦﴾
وَٱلْأَرْضَ مَدَدْنَٰهَا وَأَلْقَيْنَا فِيهَا رَوَٰسِىَ وَأَنۢبَتْنَا فِيهَا مِن كُلِّ زَوْجٍۭ بَهِيجٍ ﴿٧﴾
تَبْصِرَةً وَذِكْرَىٰ لِكُلِّ عَبْدٍ مُّنِيبٍ ﴿٨﴾

Do they not see the sky above them — how We have built and adorned it, with no rifts in it [6] how We spread out the earth and put solid mountains on it, and caused every kind of joyous plant to grow in it [7] as a lesson and reminder for every servant who turns to God [8] (The Quran, Qaf: 6 - 8)

The purpose of the question ‘Do they not see…’ (Qaf: 6) is to encourage them to look and reflect on the creation of the heavens, the signs and miracles they contain because these signs are proof of Allah’s Omnipotence. The saying of Allah, ‘…We have built…’ (Qaf: 7) indicates that despite its vastness, the sky has been built; and despite the hugeness of this building, we do not find any supports holding it up.

Therefore, He the Almighty says in another verse: ‘It is Allah Who has raised the heavens without any supports that you could see…’ (ar-Ra‘d: 2). So, as long as it has no support holding it up, this means it must be held up from above, and nothing holds up it, except the Infinite Power of Allah the Almighty a fact which is clear in the Quran: ‘Verily, it is Allah the Almighty [alone] Who upholds the celestial bodies and the earth, lest they deviate [from their orbits]…’ (Fatir: 41).

We see this concept clearly apparent in the building of long bridges which have no bases or supports holding them up, but are rather suspended from above, and hence named ‘suspension bridges.’

Allah the Almighty makes this easier for us to understand when He says: ‘Have they, then, never beheld the birds above them, spreading their wings and drawing them in? None but The Most Gracious upholds them: for, verily, He keeps all things in His sight.’ (al-Mulk: 19) So, just as He holds up the birds in the sky, He holds up the heavens, which only refrain from falling onto the earth by His Leave. He the Almighty did not only build the sky, but also ‘…adorned it…’ with all the stars and planets shining therein, and also made it 'with no rifts in it…', that is, there are no fissures or breaks in it, but we see that it is level and smooth. Behold it when it is clear, and you will see the most beautiful of colours.

After speaking to us about the signs of the sky, Allah the Almighty then speaks to us of the signs He has placed in the earth; if the signs of the heavens are far away from us, then the signs of the earth are close to us and easy for us to perceive.

He the Almighty says: 'How We spread out the earth…' (Qaf: 7) which means 'laying it out and making it level and easy to live upon'. When something is truly spread out and extended, it has no end – and this is true of the earth, for no matter where you go, you will always find it spread out before you, and it has no edge where it ends. So, this spreading out explains to us the spherical shape of the earth.

As for the saying of Allah, '…and put solid mountains on it…' (Qaf: 7), it tells that mountains keep the earth firm so that it does not constantly shake, as He Glorified is He says elsewhere: 'And [have We not made] the mountains [its] pegs?' (an-Naba': 7) That is, the mountains are for the earth like the pegs of a tent. He the Almighty also causes plants to grow in the land 'And caused…' the earth '...every kind of joyous plant to grow in it…' (Qaf: 7). The word for 'kind' here is zawj (literally 'pair') means a single type accompanied by another of its kind.

In order for plants to reproduce, there must be a pair of male and female, just as is the case with human beings and animals; and therefore Allah the Almighty says: 'And in everything have We created opposites…' (adh-Dhariyat: 49) because otherwise there can be no reproduction.

It is known that plant reproduction involves pollination which is facilitated by butterflies and flying insects which transfer pollen from the male to the female parts. When people use pesticides to kill them all the insects in a garden, they found that the trees in the garden neither flowered nor gave fruits. Why? It is because the butterflies and insects, which would have transferred the pollen, were all dead.

They noticed that insects often have the same colour as the flowers which they pollinate, so that their colours are remarkably alike, to the extent that you can hardly see the butterfly when it is on the flower; and the consonance of these colours is a clear example of Allah's Amazing Creation.

The word bahij 'joyous' means a thing is beautiful and pleasant to look at. Scholars understood from the saying of Allah, '…and put solid mountains on it…' (Qaf: 7) that the earth used to shake in the very beginning of its creation, and that it turns; for if it were stable from the very beginning, it would not need firm mountains to hold it in place, lest it stray out of place along with all those upon it.

These were all mysteries of the heavens and the earth which Allah the Almighty revealed to us by means of the advances of science and civilisation, and therefore we read, for example: 'And you will see the mountains, which [now] you deem so firm, pass away as clouds pass away…' (an-Naml: 88). Indeed, mountains move just as air does; but how could the mountains move when they are firmly fixed in place on the surface of the earth? So, the mountains only move as the earth moves; and because such a fact would astonish you, the True Lord says after it: '…a Work of Allah, who has ordered all things to perfection!' (an-Naml: 88) As long as it is the Work of Allah the Almighty then do not be astonished or find it far-fetched.

Then Allah the Almighty says: 'as a lesson and reminder for every servant who turns to Allah' Thus offering an insight and a reminder…' (Qaf: 8), that is, these cosmological signs in the heavens and the earth give insight to people, and remind them of the Omnipotence of the Creator the Almighty so that they reflect on how this universe and all within it were created with such precision and brilliance.

The word 'insight' means a constant sign, whilst a 'reminder' is used to refer to a phenomenon which is liable to change; for example, the earth can be dry and barren, and then when rain falls upon it, it springs into verdure.

As for the saying of Allah the Almighty '…for every servant who turns to Allah…' (Qaf: 8), it refers to the one who repents to Allah the Almighty much, and sees in Allah's signs in the cosmos a proof of His Omnipotence, and so yields to them and believes in them.

Allah the Almighty then says:

وَنَزَّلْنَا مِنَ ٱلسَّمَآءِ مَآءً مُّبَٰرَكًا فَأَنۢبَتْنَا بِهِۦ جَنَّٰتٍ وَحَبَّ ٱلْحَصِيدِ ﴿٩﴾
وَٱلنَّخْلَ بَاسِقَٰتٍ لَّهَا طَلْعٌ نَّضِيدٌ ﴿١٠﴾

And how We send blessed water down from the sky and grow with it gardens, the harvest grain [9] and tall palm trees laden with clusters of dates [10] (The Quran, Qaf: 9-10)

Allah the Almighty says: nazzalna 'And how We send…'; the root word n-z-l gives us the verbs anzala and nazzala: anzala means to send something down all at once, a meaning which is clear in the saying of Allah the Almighty 'Behold, from on high have We bestowed (anzalna) this [divine Book] on Night of Destiny.' (al-Qadr: 1) That is, We sent it all down at once on this Night, and then the Angel of Trusted Inspiration brought it down step by step according to different circumstances, as He Glorified is He says: 'Trustworthy divine inspiration has alighted with it from on high [193] Upon thy heart…[194]' (ash-Shu'ara': 193-194).

Likewise, water does not fall from the sky all at once, but rather, it falls down and again on different occasions, and therefore He the Almighty says: 'And We send down…' (Qaf: 9). His words 'from the skies' mean 'from the direction of the sky', for rain comes from clouds, and originates from the salt water found on earth, which then evaporates and rises to the sky where it clings together and forms clouds which Allah the Almighty then directs by the power of wind until it falls when it comes to cold climes. He the Almighty calls it '…blessed water…' (Qaf: 9) because He made it safe to drink and to water plants. In addition, He Glorified is He made it fresh and tasty for those who drink it.

When this blessed rain falls upon the earth, the earth breaks open and gives forth plants: '…and cause thereby gardens to grow…' (Qaf: 9). The word for 'gardens' here is jannat which is the plural of janna which means a place which is filled with trees which give shade (tajinnu) to those who walk among them, whence it is named Janna. Allah the Almighty uses the word in this sense when He says: 'Then, when the night overshadowed (janna) him with its darkness…' (al-An'am: 76). That is, it covered him with its darkness.

The meaning of 'fields of grain' is any grain which is harvested such as wheat, oats, maize and rice, which are annually sown and reaped. As for 'gardens', they contain trees which remain in place and live for many years in which they give forth fruit, and we only gather their fruit, leaving the trees themselves to remain until the following year.

As for His saying, 'And tall palm trees…', it refers to those palm trees which are very tall and lofty; the height of a palm-tree is a wonder of creation and an indication of the ultimate precision, for we see that storms uproot many huge trees, but we never see palm-trees falling by storms, as other trees fall; but if the palm-tree is weak, we see it bending little by little in stages until it reaches the ground. So it is tall and lofty. Allah the Almighty mentions the date palm after the trees of gardens and the fields of grain because the palm-tree combines attributes of both, that is, it gives its fruits every year like other trees, but if it is not pollinated, then the fruit it produces is dry and useless, and is simply cut and discarded.

When He the Almighty says '…laden with clusters of dates' (Qaf: 10), the word Tal' 'cluster' means a green cob which opens, and from which comes a bunch of panicles which contain date seeds. It is a wonder of creation that you see how thickly clustered these seeds are, and how they are precisely organised within the panicle, such that one does not sit in front of another, but they are spread out evenly in the panicle like 'crow's feet', as they say.

So Allah the Almighty mentions to us here some of His signs in the heavens and the earth. We said before that the heavens and the earth are containers for what is within them; and despite the remarkable creation of the heavens and the earth, what they contain is even more remarkable.

Within these contents, man has a special place because he is Allah's vicegerent on earth, and with respect to their status as contents, all men are equal and none of them has a higher status than any other has in this regard. For the purpose of the container is to protect its contents, and a fifty-pound note is equal to a one-pound note in how they are protected in the same container; and gold, silver and iron are equal in the way they are maintained, even though they differ in their natures.

In the same way, all men are looked-after equally even though they may have different values. This difference exists for a wise reason which Allah the Almighty willed for the good of all society: '…and [We] raise some of them by degrees above others, to the end that they might avail themselves of one another's help…' (az-Zukhruf: 32). So people are strong and weak, rich and poor, learned and ignorant, intelligent and stupid; in this way, they complement one another in the motions of life.

We said before: 'What if every single person went to university and graduated? Who then would do the manual labour? It is therefore necessary that some people are the elite, whilst others work to serve them, for life would not work properly otherwise.'

Despite the way in which the value of each man's work and effort differs from that of another, the fact remains that we are all Allah's dependents and slaves, and none of us is 'Allah's son'; therefore, each one of us should mind his manners and keep within his boundaries, for we are all superior in one way and inferior in another; in a sense, no one is better than anyone else.

Allah the Almighty then says:

رِّزْقًا لِّلْعِبَادِ ۖ وَأَحْيَيْنَا بِهِۦ بَلْدَةً مَّيْتًا ۚ كَذَٰلِكَ ٱلْخُرُوجُ ﴿١١﴾

As a provision for everyone; how with water We give [new] life to a land that is dead? This is how the dead will emerge [from their graves] [11] (The Quran, Qaf: 11)

Allah the Almighty caused gardens, orchards and farms to grow, some of which give forth grains which nourish people and are thus harvested, such as wheat; He also caused date palms to grow high into the sky, giving goodness to people for many generations.

Therefore, He then says: 'As a provision for everyone…' (Qaf: 11) It is sustenance for all Allah's slaves, believer and disbeliever, righteous and sinner because He created everyone and therefore undertook to provide for those whom He created the sustenance they need to live, even if they do not believe in Him.

Then He says: 'how with it', that is, by the water which He mentioned before when He said: 'And We send down from the sky blessed water…' (Qaf: 9); so, by this water, 'how with water We give [new] life to a land that is dead?' That is, We bring back to life the soil of a land which had died meaning the dry and dead soil which is bereft of vegetation. As a matter of fact, when rain falls onto it, life returns to it in the form of vegetation, as He the Almighty says elsewhere: '…And [if, O man, thou art still in doubt as to resurrection, consider this:] you cannot see the earth dry and lifeless – and [suddenly,] when We send down waters upon it, it stirs and swells and puts forth every kind of lovely plant!' (al-Hajj: 5)

Allah made the revival of dead earth a proof and a living example of the Resurrection of the dead, saying: '…This is how the dead will emerge [from their graves]…' (Qaf: 11). This is similar to what He the Almighty says elsewhere: 'and He it is who sends down, again and again, waters from the sky in due measure: and [as] We raise therewith dead land to life, even thus will you be brought forth [from the dead].' (az-Zukhruf: 11) It is also similar to His saying: 'He [it is who] brings forth the living out of that which is dead, and brings forth the dead out of that which is alive, and gives life to the earth after it had been lifeless: and even thus will you be brought forth [from death to life]…' (ar-Rum: 19). That is, you shall be brought forth and resurrected in the same way. So, anyone who denies the Resurrection should look at how the hard dead earth is brought back to life with vegetation after rain falls on it. The earth is dead and dry, bearing no signs of life, and then when rain falls upon it and waters it, it springs into motion and the dry cracks in the soil close up, and then it gives forth all manner of beauteous plants, which is a living example of creation and life for all to witness.

Allah the Almighty says:

كَذَّبَتۡ قَبۡلَهُمۡ قَوۡمُ نُوحٖ وَأَصۡحَٰبُ ٱلرَّسِّ وَثَمُودُ ﴿١٢﴾ وَعَادٞ وَفِرۡعَوۡنُ وَإِخۡوَٰنُ لُوطٖ ﴿١٣﴾
وَأَصۡحَٰبُ ٱلۡأَيۡكَةِ وَقَوۡمُ تُبَّعٖۚ كُلّٞ كَذَّبَ ٱلرُّسُلَ فَحَقَّ وَعِيدِ ﴿١٤﴾

The people of Noah disbelieved long before these disbelievers, as did the people of Rass, Thamud [12] 'Ad, Pharaoh, Lot [13] The Forest-Dwellers, Tubba': all of these people disbelieved their messengers, and so My warning was realized [14] (The Quran, Qaf: 12-14)

These words consoled Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him and made it easier for him to bear the stubborn disbelief of his people; the stance they took was shown in the previous verses, first of all in His saying: '…they deem it strange that a warner should have come unto them from their own midst…' (Qaf: 2). They then denied the Resurrection of which He says: 'Why – [how could we be resurrected] after we have died and become mere dust? Such a return seems far-fetched indeed!' (Qaf: 3) So, Allah the Almighty wanted to present to His Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him the stories of the previous Divine Messages, to show him how often his fellow Messengers were also denied.

It is as though He the Almighty were saying to him: O Prophet Muhammad, you are not the first to experience this, for '[Long] before those [who now deny resurrection] did Nuh's people give the lie to this truth…' (Qaf: 12) even though he peace be upon him lived among them for nine hundred and fifty years, yet they still gave him the lie, and none but a few of them believed in him.(1)

But did Allah simply leave them? No, He requited them by drowning them and utterly wiping them out to the last man; for He the Almighty would not leave the people of corruption, those who denied and opposed His Messengers, without punishing them, but rather, He would grant them respite for a while, and then take them to task without further delay.

The people of Nuh Allah be pleased with him used to mock at him while he was building the Ark, and so he used to say to them, 'A day will come when we shall mock at you as you now mock at us.' It is as though he was completely certain that Allah the Almighty would give succour and aid to his mission.

And just as Nuh people gave the lie to the truth, so did the people of Ar-Rass; Ar-Rass is the name of a righteous man; so was the case of '…[The tribes of] Thamud' (Qaf: 12) to whom Prophet Saleh (Shelah) Allah be pleased with him was sent; so was the case of the people of 'Ad', the tribe of Prophet Hud Allah be pleased with him; so was the case of the people of 'Pharaoh…' (Qaf: 13) The story of Pharaoh and Prophet Musa (Moses) Allah be pleased with him is well known; so was the case of the people of Prophet '…Lut' (Qaf: 13), and so was the case of '…the forest dwellers…' (Qaf: 14) who lived in a garden thick with trees and whose branches wind around each other. As a matter of fact, these are the people of Prophet Shu‘aib Allah be pleased with him, ‘...And the people of Tubba'…’ (Qaf: 14) Tubba‘ was a king of Yemen named Abu Kurb Al-Hamiri; those of his people who gave the lie to Allah’s Message were possessed of civilisation, comfort and luxury, but after they gave the lie to their Messenger and contravened Allah’s Way of Guidance, He the Almighty changed their condition and destroyed them for their sins.

(1) Allah the Almighty says: '…for only a few [of Noah's people] shared his faith.' (Hud: 40)

Therefore, He the Almighty says here: ‘…they all gave the lie to the apostles – and thereupon that whereof I had warned [them] came true.’ (Qaf: 14) That is, when they gave the lie to My Messengers, they called upon themselves the punishment of which I had warned them, and they had to be destroyed.

In another verse, He the Almighty gives the details of this requital, saying: ‘For every one of them did We take to task for his sin: and so, upon some of them We let loose a deadly storm wind; and some of them were overtaken by a [sudden] blast; and some of them We caused to be swallowed by the earth; and some of them We caused to drown. And it was not Allah who wronged them, but it was they who had wronged themselves.’ (al-’Ankabut: 40)

Allah Glorified is He subsequently says:

أَفَعَيِينَا بِٱلۡخَلۡقِ ٱلۡأَوَّلِۚ بَلۡ هُمۡ فِي لَبۡسٖ مِّنۡ خَلۡقٖ جَدِيدٖ ١٥

So were We incapable of the first creation? No indeed! Yet they doubt a second creation [15] (The Quran, Qaf: 15)

The discourse returns to refuting the allegations of those who deny the Resurrection; those who said before: ‘Why – [how could we be resurrected] after we have died and become mere dust? Such a return seems far-fetched indeed!’ (Qaf: 3) He returns to His subjects to say to them: Why do you deny the Resurrection? Do you not have before you the first creation? ‘So were We incapable of the first creation?’ (Qaf: 15) That is, were We unable to do it, or worn out by it? Of course not, but rather, We (Allah) were fully able to do it, and We brought it into being from nothing.

In the first creation, Allah created the heavens, the earth and the first man, Adam Allah be pleased with him and the One Who is able to create in the first place is all the more able to recreate.

As for the saying of Allah: ‘No indeed! Yet they doubt a second creation.’ (Qaf: 15), it means that they are confused and uncertain, just as He says about them earlier: ‘…and so they are in a rift confusion.’ (Qaf: 5)

Allah the Almighty then says:

وَلَقَدْ خَلَقْنَا ٱلْإِنسَٰنَ وَنَعْلَمُ مَا تُوَسْوِسُ بِهِۦ نَفْسُهُۥ ۖ
وَنَحْنُ أَقْرَبُ إِلَيْهِ مِنْ حَبْلِ ٱلْوَرِيدِ ﴿١٦﴾

We created man — We know what his soul whispers to him: We are closer to him than his jugular vein [16]
(The Quran, Qaf: 16)

After speaking about the signs of the heavens and the earth, Allah the Almighty now speaks to us about the signs He placed in the creation of man. He Glorified is He made it clear that the signs of the heavens and the earth are greater than the signs which reside in the creation of man: ‘Greater indeed than the creation of man is the creation of the heavens and the earth…’ (Qaf: 57).

He gives us the promise that ‘In time We shall make them fully understand Our Messages [through what they perceive] in the utmost horizons…’ (Fussilat: 53), i.e. the horizons of the heavens and the earth, ‘…and within themselves so that it will become clear unto them that this [revelation] is indeed the truth…’ (Fussilat: 53).

Allah the Almighty says: ‘Verily, We created man…’ (The Quran, 50) emphasising this statement with the word ‘verily’ because they deny this fact and give the lie to it, and this denial of theirs is purely a matter of obstinacy because Allah the Almighty says elsewhere in the Quran: ‘Now if you ask those [who worship any being other than Allah] as to who it is that has created them, they are sure to answer, Allah…’ (az-Zukhruf: 87).

As long as Allah the Almighty has said ‘Verily, We created man…’ (Qaf: 16), it would be far-fetched to say that it is possible to make a copy or ‘clone’ of man; for the man who forms a family composed of a mother and a father could never be copied, for only He Who created him could copy him.

This is proved by the fact that He the Almighty created Adam Allah be pleased with him and then created Eve from his rib. You shall never be able to do this. You might be able to clone plants or animals, for these beings are not required to form families.

The purpose of plants and animals is only to reproduce; man, on the other hand, is not required only to reproduce but also to adhere to the moral values. A man strives to form a family, and he thus looks for certain things in the woman he marries and the way he lives with her. Each one of them plays a role in raising the family in a way which is appropriate for them: he goes out and works, and she performs her role inside the home – and her role is higher and more important than his role.

Therefore, we find that the child, whom his father forsakes, undergoes a miserable life because he does not have a father with whom to connect. The child who has a father, on the other hand, is connected to his father who is in charge with him before the entire society. He provides for his living and his education. So, if we suppose that human beings indeed could be cloned, what kind of life do you suppose they would have?

Allah the Almighty is the man's Creator and Maker. The Creator knows best those whom He has created, and knows best their secrets and what is good for them: '…We know what his soul whispers to him…' (Qaf: 16). That is, We do not only know his open actions, but We also know his inner intentions, and We even know the thoughts and notions which come to his mind. 'How could it be that He who has created [all] should not know [all]? Yea, He alone is unfathomable [in His wisdom], all aware!' (al-Mulk: 14)

He the Almighty knows the intricate matters and the hidden details of things, just as the manufacturer knows the details of his product. When your clock runs slow, for example, you have no idea what is wrong with it, so you take it to the clockmaker, and as soon as he looks at it, he knows what is wrong with it, and mends it with a simple action.

Allah the Almighty created man, that is, man is His Glorified is He Make and Creation. Therefore He the Almighty knows the secrets of his soul, not just his outward actions; for outward actions are known to all people, and there is no special distinction to this knowledge. As for the innermost whisperings of the self, this is a matter of the unseen which no one can perceive or know but Allah the Almighty. This is one of the signs of Allah the Almighty in the human being: ‘In time We shall make them fully understand Our Messages [through what they perceive] in the utmost horizons and within themselves…’ (Fussilat: 53).

He calls the thoughts which come to the mind waswasa (whisperings), which literally means the quietest kind of speech; sometimes these whisperings come from the soul, whilst, at other times, they come from Satan, and therefore they convey nothing but evil. Imam ‘Ali Allah be pleased with him made the difference between the two clear when someone asked him, ‘How can I tell whether this whispering comes from my own soul or from Satan?’ He replied, ‘The soul insists on a particular sin and never relinquishes it, whilst Satan wants you to sin in any way so that if you disobey him in one sin, he will suggest to you another, and so on, until he gets you.’

The soul is the origin of all whisperings because if we consider the first sin of Iblis and ask, ‘Who whispered this to him?’ The answer is ‘his own soul’; that is why a poet once posed this question, saying: When Iblis sinned, who was his Iblis?

So, it all comes back to the soul and the self, and Iblis takes advantage of the soul’s desire and encourages it, and makes it seem alluring to the person. It is amazing how these whisperings assail a man and drown him in concerns and fantasies which are completely baseless so that he concerns himself with things that never happened, imagining that they did happen, or things from the past which he calls to mind again and again.

In this way, worries envelop him so that when you speak to him, you find that he is forgetful, or that he walks along talking to himself. The truly intelligent person is the one who does not allow himself to be caught by these whisperings, and who knows that he has a Lord Who is fully aware of the innermost self-whispers within him; a Kind Lord Who relives worries and alleviates woes. The intelligent person is the one who knows that the past is done with, and the future is a mystery, and what matters is the present moment.

The believer was created to have faith, to protect him so that if the means do not avail him, he can seek refuge with the Creator of all means. Therefore he never despairs or gives up.

We said before that if a man has a single pound, nothing more, and he loses it, he will certainly grieve, especially if he is on a journey to an unfamiliar place. But if he loses a pound and has ten pounds in the house, then his grief will be less. So, what if you have the Lord of the worlds to call on? Therefore, they say, 'There can be no woe as long as You are here, Lord!' We saw this true faith in the story of Prophet Musa (Moses) Allah be pleased with him who said, when the means had been straightened for him: '…Nay indeed! My Lord is with me, [and] He will guide me!' (ash-Shu'ara': 62)

Allah the Almighty says: '…We are closer to him than his jugular vein…' (Qaf: 16). The habl al-warid (neck-vein) means the two veins in the neck which convey nourishment to the whole body so that if they are cut, life ends. These words are meant to symbolise the nearness of Allah the Almighty to His servant, as though He were saying to him: 'I am close to you, and I know every detail about you, and I know the innermost whisperings of your soul.'

He the Almighty then says

إِذۡ يَتَلَقَّى ٱلۡمُتَلَقِّيَانِ عَنِ ٱلۡيَمِينِ وَعَنِ ٱلشِّمَالِ قَعِيدٞ ﴿١٧﴾
مَّا يَلۡفِظُ مِن قَوۡلٍ إِلَّا لَدَيۡهِ رَقِيبٌ عَتِيدٞ ﴿١٨﴾

With two receptors set to record, one on his right side and one on his left [17] He does not utter a single word without an ever-present watcher [18] (The Quran, Qaf: 17-18)

Allah the Almighty makes it clear that His Knowledge is all embracing so that He does not only know the outer actions of the body, but also knows what goes on in the soul, and all its notions and thoughts, even before they are translated into actions. So if He the Almighty knows the innermost whisperings of the soul, then He certainly knows the outermost actions of the body; and so if a man says to himself, 'I shall hide so that no one can see me', He the Almighty tells him that even if he hides from the people, he cannot hide from Allah the Almighty and his actions shall not escape the attention of the two angels who observe his deeds and record them: an angel on the right to record his good deeds and an angel on the left to record his bad deeds.

The meaning of ‘seated’ is that each of the two angels sits beside for him, watching him and never leaving him such that ‘Not even a word can he utter but there is a watcher with him, ever-present.’ (Qaf: 18) Now you might say, ‘Since Allah the Almighty knows all that a man does, and not the least thing escapes Him, then why does He record his actions for him?’ They answer this by saying that He records the actions so that there may be an argument against their doers on the Day of Resurrection, for just as Allah the Almighty will make the body parts speak and testify against their owners, this written record will also speak. He the Almighty says: ‘On the Day when their own tongues and hands and feet will bear witness against them by [recalling] all that they did!’ (an-Nur: 24)

He the Almighty also says: ‘And they will ask their skins, “Why did you bear witness against us?” – [and] these will reply: “Allah the Almighty who gives speech to all things, has given speech to us [as well]…’ (Fussilat: 21). He the Almighty further says: ‘this Our record speaks of you in all truth: for, verily, We have caused to be recorded all that you ever did!’ (al-Jathiya: 29)

Out of His Mercy with His servants in the recording of their deeds, Allah the Almighty makes the angels record each good deed tenfold, and each bad deed one fold. In addition, the good deed is recorded as soon as you think of it,(1) whilst the bad deed is not recorded unless you actually do it – and even then, He gives you the opportunity of repenting, and correcting yourself.

(1) Abu Hurayra narrated that Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him said: 'If a person intends to do a good deed but does not do it, one good deed is recorded for him; and if he intends to do a good deed and does it, it is recorded for him between tenfold and seven hundredfold. And if a person intends to do a bad deed and does not do it, it is not recorded; and if he does it, it is recorded.' See Muslim, Sahih, Hadith no. 186; see also Ahmad, Musnad. Hadith no. 6898.

وَجَآءَتْ سَكْرَةُ ٱلْمَوْتِ بِٱلْحَقِّ ذَٰلِكَ مَا كُنتَ مِنْهُ تَحِيدُ ١٩

The trance of death will bring the Truth with it: ‘This is what you tried to escape’ [19] (The Quran, Qaf: 19)

The meaning of ‘the trance of death’ is the darkness and unconscious state which overcomes a man as he is on the brink of death and the exit of his spirit; it is also called the ‘…the trance of death…’ (Qaf: 19) because it is the beginning of death, He the Almighty then says that it ‘…brings the truth with it’ (Qaf: 19) because death is the truth; it is the due of all creatures, and an arrow which is shot at every new born who only lives until the arrow reaches him.

Therefore, some people die while in their mothers’ womb, whilst others die in their childhood; yet others die in their youth, while others in their old age.

One of the signs which Allah the Almighty has placed in death is that He has made its time and place unpredictable. Here, we should know that its unpredictability makes it completely clear, for it makes you expect it at any moment, and makes you prepare for it by repenting and doing good deeds, and makes you feel timid before Allah the Almighty lest He causes you to die whilst you are committing sin.

He Glorified is He then says: ‘This is what you tried to escape.’ (Qaf: 19) That is, this is what you would always seek to avoid, and which you fear. Indeed, we all fear death and wish to avoid it, and we imagine that everyone will die except us. Therefore the saying goes: ‘There is no certitude more similar to doubt that the certitude people have of death.’(1)

We do not always think about death is something Allah the Almighty willed for a wise reason; for if every one of us carefully reflected on the reality of death, his life would never be peaceful, he would constantly be at unease and no one would ever benefit from his labour. So it is better to hope for life because this hope is what keeps life in motion. Love for life is what causes us to thrive in it; what is important is that this hope does not make you forget death. You must always be prepared for death by repenting and asking Allah for forgiveness whenever you sin.

(1) It is a saying of ‘Umar ibn ‘Abd Al-‘Aziz or of Hasan Al-Basri.

Allah the Almighty then says:

وَنُفِخَ فِي ٱلصُّورِۚ ذَٰلِكَ يَوۡمُ ٱلۡوَعِيدِ ٢٠
وَجَآءَتۡ كُلُّ نَفۡسٖ مَّعَهَا سَآئِقٞ وَشَهِيدٞ ٢١

The Trumpet will be sounded: 'This is the Day [you were] warned of' [20] Each person will arrive attended by an [angel] to drive him on and another to bear witness [21] (The Quran, Qaf: 20-21)

Allah the Almighty depicts for us here an image of the Day of Resurrection, the Day when the Trumpet shall be blown; saying that this refers to the second Trumpet, for which the people will rise from their graves. This Trumpet shall be blown by the angel Israfil peace be upon him on the Day of Resurrection.

His saying, '…This is the Day [you were] warned of...' (Qaf: 20) refers to the warning which He gave us and which causes us fear. A warning is the opposite of a promise, for it heralds something bad, whilst a promise heralds something good. Only those who have committed bad deeds fear death, exactly as the negligent pupil fears the final exam, whilst the hard-working pupil feels happy when it comes.

Likewise, the one who has done good deeds rejoices to meet Allah the Almighty because he knows that he is passing on to Allah's Ample Reward; and therefore when a righteous man dies, we say, 'O Allah the Almighty cause us to join him!'

He the Almighty says: 'Each person will arrive attended by an [angel] to drive him on and another to bear witness.' (Qaf: 21) He the Almighty will drive him on to the place of the Gathering, and his conscious mind will bear witness to all that he has done. Allah the Almighty then says:

لَّقَدۡ كُنتَ فِي غَفۡلَةٖ مِّنۡ هَٰذَا فَكَشَفۡنَا عَنكَ غِطَآءَكَ فَبَصَرُكَ ٱلۡيَوۡمَ حَدِيدٞ ٢٢

'You paid no attention to this [Day]; but today We have removed your veil and your sight is sharp'[22] (The Quran, Qaf: 22)

The saying of Allah, 'You paid no attention to this [Day]…' (Qaf: 22) means that people were, before death, heedless and forgetful of this Day, '…but today We have removed your veil’ (Qaf: 22), i.e. the veil of their heedlessness, ‘and your sight is sharp.’ (Qaf: 22) That is, man’s sight is piercing and sharp, and can well perceive things as they really are, i.e. the things of the Hereafter and what it contains of Resurrection, Reckoning, and Requital.

Allah the Almighty then says

وَقَالَ قَرِينُهُۥ هَٰذَا مَا لَدَىَّ عَتِيدٌ ﴿٢٣﴾ أَلْقِيَا فِى جَهَنَّمَ كُلَّ كَفَّارٍ عَنِيدٍ ﴿٢٤﴾ مَّنَّاعٍ لِّلْخَيْرِ
مُعْتَدٍ مُّرِيبٍ ﴿٢٥﴾ ٱلَّذِى جَعَلَ مَعَ ٱللَّهِ إِلَٰهًا ءَاخَرَ فَأَلْقِيَاهُ فِى ٱلْعَذَابِ ٱلشَّدِيدِ ﴿٢٦﴾

The person’s attendant will say, Here is what I have prepared [23] Hurl every obstinate disbeliever into Hell [24] Everyone who hindered good, was aggressive, caused others to doubt [25] And set up other gods alongside God. Hurl him into severe punishment! [26] (The Quran, Qaf: 23-26)

The meaning of’’ The person’s attendant…’ is the angel who always remained with him on his right and his left, recording all his deeds and all his breaths which will come forth; this angel will say: ‘…Here is what I have prepared’ (Qaf: 23). ‘This is what I have recorded for this man, and all that I set down in writing of his deeds is ready and prepared.’ It is like when we see a policeman giving his report to the district attorney, presenting all his evidence, and saying, ‘This is what I have, and that is the end of my role; the DA must now decide what to do about it.’

He the Almighty then says: ‘Hurl every stubborn disbeliever into Hell [24]’ (Qaf: 23). This is a commandment from Allah the Almighty to the two angels to cast into the hell ‘…Everyone who hindered good, was aggressive, caused others to doubt [25]’ (Qaf: 25). Kaffar means every wilful and defiant disbeliever. The word kufr can mean either ‘ingratitude’ or ‘unbelief’; and the former meaning can be found in the story of the people of Sheba, of whom Allah the Almighty says: ‘Thus We requited them for their having denied the truth (kafaru)…’ (Saba’: 17), that is, they denied Allah’s Blessings by showing ingratitude for them. When kufr means ‘unbelief’, it means to deny the Giver of all Blessings, i.e. to deny the Existence of Allah the Almighty. The word kaffar is an intensive form of the word kafir (disbeliever) which implies repetition, i.e. the kaffar is one who frequently commits the act of disbelief, that is, not just once, which is why He describes this sort of person as ‘stubborn’, i.e. stubborn, persistent and wilfully determined in his unbelief (Kufr).

The root meaning of kufr is ‘to cover’ and express ‘ingratitude’ (kufr an-Ni‘ma, literally ‘covering the blessing’); it is of two kinds: to cover the blessing in its place meaning that they do not go to it by working and striving to attain it; or that they attained unto it and placed it in their possession, and then were too miserly to share it with the needy. Likewise is the word ‘anid (stubborn); it has an element of intensiveness in its morphological form. The ‘anid is the one who stubbornly refuses every time you call him to the Truth, and insists on keeping to his current position. There is no doubt that the Heaven-sent Messenger always invites the people to embrace faith many times, but the stubborn man refuses to accept the invitation and to follow guidance, and persists in holding to his view, accepting no argument or discussion. So kufr can mean ‘ingratitude’, or ‘to cover blessings’; it can also mean ‘unbelief’, or ‘to deny the existence of the Giver of Blessings.’

The saying of Allah, ‘Everyone who hindered good, was aggressive, caused others to doubt [25]’ (Qaf: 25) is a third description of the stubborn disbeliever; in addition to his firm unbelief and his stubbornness, he is also manna‘ lil-khayr (hindering of good). The word manna‘ is also the intensive morphological form of the noun mani‘, that is, ‘one who withholds’; this means that he frequently withholds what is good, withholding it even from himself after withholding it from others by standing in the way of the call to faith, and by withholding his wealth and not giving any of it to the needy.

In addition to all this, he is also ‘…aggressive…’ (Qaf: 25); so, he does not content himself with withholding the good, but also assaults the good which others possess and takes it unrightfully. Sometimes he steals it; sometimes he gets it through bribery; sometimes he plunders and seizes it; sometimes he embezzles it; sometimes he cheats his way to it, and so on.

So, he is an aggressor in every way, and he also ‘…caused others to doubt [25]’ (Qaf: 25), that is, he doubts and does not believe in this Day; for if he believed in it and believed in the Reckoning and the Requital, he would not do any of these things, and if he believed in the Divine Justice, he would give instead of withholding.

Another attribute of that person is that he '…set up other gods alongside Allah. Hurl him into severe punishment!' (Qaf: 25) It is the ultimate sin against faith in Allah the Almighty; Allah says: 'Verily, Allah the Almighty does not forgive the ascribing of divinity to aught beside Him, although He forgives any lesser sin unto whomever He wills…' (an-Nisa': 116) And therefore the requital for all this is: '…Hurl him into severe punishment!'– So we have two kinds of suffering: a general suffering which He the Almighty does not describe as 'severe' when He says: '…Hurl him into severe punishment!' (Qaf: 24), and this is for those who disobey Allah the Almighty and commit grave sins without going so far as to ascribe divinity to aught besides Him.

There is then a suffering which He the Almighty calls 'severe'; it is for those who ascribe divinity to aught besides Allah the Almighty. This is because the one who commits grave sins whilst still believing in the Oneness of Allah the Almighty might repent because monotheism has a protective effect on the soul, even in the case of the sinner.

As for the idolater, he does not believe in the Oneness of Allah the Almighty and therefore it has no effect on his soul. So, if both of these people went to the same place in the Hereafter, then this would mean that the conviction of Allah's Oneness had no meaning or effect.

When He says: '…although He forgives any lesser sin unto whomever He wills…' (an-Nisa': 116), this mercy might be given immediately, whilst the person is still alive, and this is the case for those who repent and turn back to Allah the Almighty and who replace their evil deeds with righteous ones, in which case Allah's saying will apply to them: 'Excepted, however, shall be they who repent and attain to faith and do righteous deeds: for it is they whose [erstwhile] bad deeds Allah the Almighty will transform into good ones…' (al-Furqan: 70).

Or it may be that the forgiveness is delayed for him so that he has to suffer in hell for a time, after which Allah's Mercy comes to him; the grace of 'There is no deity but Allah the Almighty' envelops him; and the honour of the testimony of faith brings him out of hell.

Allah the Almighty then says:

قَالَ قَرِينُهُۥ رَبَّنَا مَآ أَطۡغَيۡتُهُۥ وَلَٰكِن كَانَ فِي ضَلَٰلِۭ بَعِيدٖ ٢٧

And his [evil] companion will say, ‘Lord, I did not make him transgress; he had already gone far astray himself’ [27]
(The Quran, Qaf: 27)

His ‘evil companion’ here means his constant companion who made misguidance seem alluring to him, whether from jinn or mankind; this being will say, by way of excusing and defending himself: ‘…Lord, I did not make him transgress; he had already gone far astray himself.’ (Qaf: 27) He will seek to absolve himself from his errant companion, and leave him in the pit he dug for himself.

The Noble Quran tells us more than once of this dialogue which will take place between the follower and the followed among those who followed the way of error, and how each one of them will seek to blame the other.

Allah the Almighty says: ‘But [since it will be too late,] they will turn upon one another, demanding of each other [to relieve them of the burden of their past sins] [27] some [of them] will say: “Behold; you were wont to approach us [deceptively] from the right!” [28] [To which] the others will reply: “Nay, you yourselves were bereft of all faith! [29] Moreover, we had no power at all over you: nay, you were people filled with overweening arrogance! [30] But now our Lord’s word has come true against us [as well]: verily, we are bound to taste [the fruit of our sins]. [31] So then, [if it be true that] we have caused you to err grievously – behold, we ourselves had been lost in grievous error!” [32] And, verily, on that Day they all will share in their common suffering. [33] Verily, thus shall We deal with all who were lost in sin. [34]’ (as-Saffat: 27-34)

Even Satan will absolve himself of his followers: ‘and when everything will have been decided, Satan will say: “Behold, Allah promised you something that was bound to come true! I, too, held out [all manner of] promises to you – but I deceived you. Yet I had no power at all over you: I but called you – and you responded unto me. Hence, blame not me, but blame yourselves. It is not for me to respond to your cries, nor for you to respond to mine…' (Ibrahim: 22). That is, neither one of us can defend the other.

Allah the Almighty then says:

قَالَ لَا تَخۡتَصِمُواْ لَدَيَّ وَقَدۡ قَدَّمۡتُ إِلَيۡكُم بِٱلۡوَعِيدِ (٢٨)
مَا يُبَدَّلُ ٱلۡقَوۡلُ لَدَيَّ وَمَآ أَنَا۠ بِظَلَّٰمٖ لِّلۡعَبِيدِ (٢٩)

God will say, 'Do not argue in My presence. I sent you a warning [28] And My word cannot be changed: I am not unjust to any creature [29] (The Quran, Qaf: 28 - 29)

Allah the Almighty brings an end to this dialogue and this argument between those who were astray and those who led them astray, and ends this battle by saying to them: '…"Do not argue in My Presence.' (Qaf: 28) because this contending will not avail you aught now, and none of you can cast the blame on any other, for I know you best, and I know best who sinned, who was astray, and who led others astray; so, there is no benefit in contending, '…I sent you a warning.' (Qaf: 28) That is, I gave you a warning in your earthly life, and I showed you My Way of Guidance and told you what is lawful and unlawful, and how such would be requited in paradise or in hell.

As for the saying of Allah, 'And My Word cannot be changed…' (Qaf: 29), it means, 'Your contending now will not change My Judgement of you in the least, and I will not go back on My Word', this is in reference to His Order 'Cast, cast into hell every [such] stubborn enemy of the truth.' (Qaf: 24) This will bring an end to their hope and cause them to despair of Allah's Mercy; '…I am not unjust to any creature…' (Qaf: 29). That is, My Judgement is right and fair, and based on wisdom, not tyranny, and injustice. So, these defences and contentions you offer will not avail any of you aught.

When He the Almighty says '…I am not unjust to any creature…' (Qaf: 29) [Literally, 'I am not zhallam to any of My creatures' (Qaf: 29)], the word zhallam is an intensive form of the word zhalim, which means 'wrongdoer'; so, when we call a person zhallam (a great wrongdoer), this means that he is certainly a zhalim, a 'wrongdoer' in the general sense; but in the reverse, when the word zhallam is negated, this does not mean that the word zhalim is also negated. That is, a person might not be a ‘doer of great wrong’, but he could still be a ‘wrongdoer’ in a lesser sense. So, when He says: ‘…I am not unjust to any creature' (Qaf: 29), He negates that He is zhallam, but not necessarily that He is zhalim – so does this mean that Allah the Almighty could be called zhalim (a wrongdoer)?

We say that an intensive morphological form in Arabic could imply that the action is repeated. For example, when you say that someone is akul (the intensive form of akil, ‘one who eats’), this does not necessarily mean that he eats large meals; it could mean that he eats a single piece of bread for a meal, but does so several times a day.

Moreover, Allah the Almighty is not speaking about one person here, but rather about everyone in the world, and all His creatures and servants. Because of this, when zhallam is negated, zhalim is also negated. [So He is not a ‘great wrongdoer’, nor is He a ‘wrongdoer’ in any sense.]

The meaning might also be to negate the action in itself because wrongdoing is commensurate with the power of the wrongdoer over the one whom he wrongs; that is, wrongdoing is only as strong or as weak as the wrongdoer himself is. Therefore, if Allah the Almighty could be described as doing wrong – and of course He is completely and transcendently absolved above this – then His wrongdoing would be severely powerful, so we would say zhallam not zhalim.

Allah the Almighty then says:

يَوْمَ نَقُولُ لِجَهَنَّمَ هَلِ ٱمْتَلَأْتِ وَتَقُولُ هَلْ مِن مَّزِيدٍ ﴿٣٠﴾

We shall say to Hell on that day, ‘Are you full?’
and it will reply, ‘Are there no more?’ [30]
(The Quran, Qaf: 30)

In the previous verses, He the Almighty says: ‘Cast, cast into hell every [such] stubborn enemy of the truth.’ (Qaf: 24), and here He the Almighty asks hell: ‘Are you full?’ Allah the Almighty also gave His Promise to fill the hell; He says: ‘…Most certainly will I fill hell with invisible beings as well as with humans, all together!’ (as-Sajda: 13) So He will certainly fulfil this promise, and the question here is ‘Are you full?’ which is a rhetorical question, to which the answer comes: ‘…and it will reply, “Are there no more”’ (Qaf: 30)? This means that it is full, but it wants more; so where will it put them?

We said before that the Creator destined paradise from pre-eternity to have room for all of humanity, were they all to believe, and created hell to have space for all humanity, were they all to disbelieve. Therefore there are empty spaces in the hell which the believers would have taken, and empty spaces in paradise which the disbelievers would have taken; and the hell will say: ‘…and it will reply, “Are there no more”’ (Qaf: 30) in order that the empty spaces within it would be filled.

He Glorified is He says:

وَأُزْلِفَتِ ٱلْجَنَّةُ لِلْمُتَّقِينَ غَيْرَ بَعِيدٍ (٣١)

But Paradise will be brought close to the righteous and will no longer be distant [31]
(The Quran, Qaf: 31)

After speaking about the hell in several verses, we now have the contrasting view of paradise: ‘be brought close’ (Qaf: 31), that is, it will be brought near to those people who were conscious of Allah, for they were given glad tidings of it in this worldly life, and Allah the Almighty never breaks His promise.

Allah the Almighty says:

هَٰذَا مَا تُوعَدُونَ لِكُلِّ أَوَّابٍ حَفِيظٍ (٣٢)
مَّنْ خَشِيَ ٱلرَّحْمَٰنَ بِٱلْغَيْبِ وَجَآءَ بِقَلْبٍ مُّنِيبٍ (٣٣)

This is what you were promised — this is for everyone who turned often to God and kept Him in mind [32] who held the Most Gracious in awe, though He is unseen, who comes before Him with a heart turned to Him in devotion [33] (The Quran, Qaf: 32-33)

Allah’s saying: ‘This…’ (Qaf: 32) refers to what was just said about how pious people will enter paradise. Allah’s saying: ‘…is what you were promised…’ (Qaf: 32) refers to what Allah the Almighty has promised. As for Allah’s saying: ‘…this is for everyone who turned often to Allah…’ (Qaf: 32), the Arabic word awwab is an intensive form which means to turn back often to Allah such that when one sins he quickly regrets it and repents. The True Lord the Almighty explained this concept to us in His saying: ‘Repentance with Allah is only for those who do evil in ignorance…’ (an-Nisa’: 17), that is, they do not relish it or grow accustomed to it. Allah the Almighty then says: ‘…then turn (to Allah) soon, so these it is to whom Allah turns (mercifully), and Allah is ever Knowing, Wise [17] And repentance is not for those who go on doing evil deeds until when death comes to one of them, he says: Surely now I repent [18]…’ (an-Nisa’: 17-18).

Awwab is the one who regrets and repents when he commits a sin. This does not mean that he commits a lot of sins; rather, if he, out of heedlessness, ever misses out on a righteous deed, he quickly repents. For the one who repents of his sin and then returns to it, and keeps on doing this, this person is described by Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him as being like one who mocks his Lord. This is not the case with respect to the awwab. The word Hafizh in Allah’s saying: ‘…kept Him in mind (hafizh)…’ (Qaf: 32) is also the emphatic morphological form of the word hafizh (keeper). The hafizh is the one who always guards Allah’s Boundaries and keeps away from the things which He prohibits; he guards himself against falling into sin and from even going near them. This is the meaning of the Noble Hadith, ‘Watch over Allah, and He will watch over you.’(1) The way to watch over Allah is to keep within His Boundaries, to obey His Commandments and to stay away from His Prohibitions. Another attribute of the pious people, to whom Allah has made this promise, is that they are those: ‘who held the Most Gracious in awe, though He is unseen…’ (Qaf: 33). The word ‘awe’ means fear, and it is of two kinds: you might fear someone whom you hate and revile because he is stronger then you, or because he debases and tyrannises you, so that you fear and despise him; and this is the fear which men have for each other. There is yet another kind of fear, which involves love, awe, and wonder, as the poet says:

(1) See At-Tirmidhi, Hadith, no; (2440) and Ahmad, Hadith, no; (537) on the authority of Ibn ‘Abbas Allah be pleased with him.

> I fear you in your majesty, though you have no power over me,
> Save that which the beloved has in the eye of the lover.

So you love the one you fear, and you know that he has done favours for you which you could never repay; and this is the Fear of Allah. The following saying of Allah makes this easier for us to understand: ‘Do you not see that Allah sends down water from the cloud, then We bring forth therewith fruits of various colours; and in the mountains are streaks, white and red, of various hues and (others) intensely black? [27] And of men and beasts and cattle are various species of it likewise; those of His servants only who are possessed of knowledge fear Allah [28]’ (Fatir: 27-28). The True Lord the Almighty does not issue a binding commandment of Sacred Law here, nor does He give us a cause to fear being remiss therein; rather, He speaks about the signs of His universe, wanting us to seek them out and reflect upon them and to delve into their secrets and behold their beauty. Every time we look upon the signs of the universe around us, our awe of Allah increases, and we feel more and more wonder and amazement at His Grandeur and the Blessings He gives us; those who are truly endowed with knowledge are the ones who behold this first and who are closest to giving Allah the awe and esteem He deserves. Let us reflect here on the precision of the Quranic discourse, Allah the Almighty says: ‘who held the Most Gracious in awe, though He is unseen…’ (Qaf: 33). He chose the attribute of Grace and Mercy (rahma) and did not say, ‘Those who stand in awe of the All-Compeller’ or ‘the All-Dominant’ because the awe here springs from love, mercy and magnification of Allah whom we fear and before whom we stand in awe. Then He specifies this awe by saying: ‘…though He is unseen…’ (Qaf: 33) meaning that this awe is not proclaimed before the people, and that the true believer stands in awe before Allah in private before he does so in public, and in seclusion before company; he fears Him when he is alone.

As for the one whose faith is weak, he fears Allah in front of other people; when he is among them, he speaks about the lawful and the unlawful; but once he is by himself, he violates Allah’s Boundaries. This means that his awe of Allah is tainted by ostentation and idolatry; therefore He describes the pious people and the denizens of paradise as being those who fear Allah when only He Almighty can see them. Another meaning of Allah's saying: '…though He is unseen…' (Qaf: 33) is that when the believer is reminded of the Terror of Allah's chastisement and of hell, while he is still in the comfort of this world, he fears it and believes in it even though he has not seen it. This is what it means to stand in awe of that which we cannot perceive; for in our present situation, hell is unseen and imperceptible, and we only believe that it exists because Allah has told us that it does. The believer accepts what Allah tells him as though he can see it with his own eyes and touch it with his own senses, and indeed Allah's saying is even truer than the vision of the eye. I clarified this point before while explaining Allah's saying: 'Have you not considered [alam tara, literally 'did you not see'] how your Lord dealt with the possessors of the elephant?' (al-Fil: 1) This is an address to Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him who did not see the incident of the Elephant, for he was born that very year; so why did He the Almighty not say to him 'Do you not know?', and say instead 'Did you not see'? Some scholars said that it is because Allah's saying is even truer than the vision of the eye, for indeed the eye might deceive you, but Allah's saying is absolutely true. Allah the Almighty then says: '…who comes before Him with a heart turned to Him in devotion.' (Qaf: 33) That is, a heart which is solely devoted to Allah and truly obedient. The heart is the seat of faith and as I said before; Allah wants our hearts, not our external forms. You might force the external form to believe, but the heart will only come out of love and obedience. This is why the True Lord the Almighty made faith a matter of free will, not compulsion; for had He the Almighty willed otherwise, He could have compelled all of His creatures to believe in Him the Almighty just as He compelled the heavens and the earth; but He wanted His servants to come to him in obedience and conviction.

Allah the Almighty then says:

ٱدْخُلُوهَا بِسَلَٰمٍ ۖ ذَٰلِكَ يَوْمُ ٱلْخُلُودِ ﴿٣٤﴾ لَهُم مَّا يَشَآءُونَ فِيهَا وَلَدَيْنَا مَزِيدٌ ﴿٣٥﴾

So enter it in peace. This is the Day of everlasting Life [34] They will have all that they wish for there, and We have more for them [35]
(The Quran, Qaf: 34 - 35)

This is an order from Allah the Almighty to the believers to enter the paradise in peace, safe and free of all discomforts; in other words, they shall never experience woe or distress again. As for Allah's saying: 'enter it in peace…' (Qaf: 34), it will be uttered by the angels when they greet them with the greeting of peace. Likewise, the True Lord the Almighty will say it to them, as He says: 'Peace: a word from a Merciful Lord.' (Ya Sin: 58) If a man receives greetings of peace from his Lord, he shall never suffer again. Another possible interpretation for Allah's saying: 'so enter it in peace…' (Qaf: 34) is 'enter it while giving greetings of peace to your fellow believers, saying to them, 'Peace be upon you', just as you used to greet them in this worldly life; likewise, in the Hereafter you will greet the angels at the doors of paradise with the same words. You will also greet your fellow believers. Allah's saying: 'This is the Day of everlasting Life…' (Qaf: 34) refers to the Day of Resurrection. As for the saying of Allah the Almighty: '…the Day of everlasting Life…' (Qaf: 34), it means that the Day of Judgment will be of permanence and endless uninterrupted bliss; and this is the difference between the bliss of this world and that of the Hereafter. However how great the bliss of this worldly life may be, two things cause the one who attains it to worry about it: either he will leave it by dying, or it will leave him through poverty or sickness. As for the bliss of the Hereafter, it is free of all obstacles and imperfections. Allah's saying: 'They will have all that they wish for there…' (Qaf: 35) means that this will take place in the paradise. The orientalists objected to this verse, saying: 'How could they have whatever they desire, when the Hadith states that paradise contains: '…What no eye has ever seen, nor any ear heard, nor any human heart imagined.'?(1) 'If they desire it,’ does this not mean they must know what it is?’ Some scholars said that the believer will desire the blissful things of this worldly life which he knows and which he used to enjoy, while the bliss of the Hereafter will be completely different from these things, sharing nothing in common with them but their names, while their true natures will differ. Therefore, He the Almighty goes on to say: ‘…and We have more for them.’ (Qaf: 35) The True Lord the Almighty explained this further when He says: ‘And convey good news to those who believe and do good deeds, that they shall have gardens in which rivers flow; whenever they shall be given a portion of the fruit thereof, they shall say: This is what was given to us before; and they shall be given the like of it…’ (al-Baqara: 25). That is, when the believer yearns to eat a mango, for example, he will find it to be different from what he knew in his worldly life; and when he asks for it the next day, he will find it to be different from the one he ate the day before, and so on. It will resemble it, but will not be the same. So He gives them the ability to desire what they know of the delights of this world, and what they enjoy of it, yet in the Hereafter they will be something different, which is what is meant by the Hadith: ‘…What no eye has ever seen, nor any ear heard, nor any human heart imagined.’ This is because if you desire something, you ask for it by name, and the name is part of the knowledge of the thing; and so long as they are things utterly new to us, we do not know their identity, or their names.

(1) See Al-Bukhari, Hadith, no. 3005; Muslim, Hadith, no. 5050 on the authority of Abu Hurayra Allah be pleased with him.

Allah the Almighty says:

وَكَمْ أَهْلَكْنَا قَبْلَهُم مِّن قَرْنٍ هُمْ أَشَدُّ مِنْهُم بَطْشًا
فَنَقَّبُوا۟ فِى ٱلْبِلَٰدِ هَلْ مِن مَّحِيصٍ ٣٦

We have destroyed even mightier generations before these disbelievers, who travelled through [many] lands – was there any escape? [36] (The Quran, Qaf: 36)

The Arabic word Kam (how) in this verse means ‘many’; the meaning thus is, ‘We destroyed a great many’; Allah’s saying: ‘…before these…’ (Qaf: 36) means ‘before your people, Quraysh’; regarding Allah’s saying: ‘…generation…’ (Qaf: 36), the word (qarn) means a group of people who live in a specific time. Qarn is one hundred years. It might mean something else if it is linked to a Prophet, such as Nuh (Noah) peace be upon him for they were all included in his spell of prophethood which lasted for nine hundred and fifty years. So qarn is derived from iqtiran (connection), whether that of the time of a king, a Prophet or an event. In another verse, the True Lord the Almighty explains how He destroyed the nations who gave the lie to their Prophets in the past, saying: 'So each We punished for his sin; of them was he on whom We sent down a violent storm, and of them was he whom the rumbling overtook, and of them was he whom We made to be swallowed up by the earth, and of them was he whom We drowned…' (al-'Ankabut: 40).

All of those people were stronger and more powerful than Quraysh; for what were they, compared to Iram- the many-pillared, the like of whom were never created in all the land? And what were they, compared to Pharaoh, he of the many tent-poles?

Allah the Almighty says: '…who travelled through [many] lands…' (Qaf: 36) They went out into the land and travelled therein, which shows that they had power and stability, and that they were not overly concerned with the affairs of their lives. The True Lord the Almighty made it clear that travel might be undertaken for the purpose of reflection, as He the Almighty says elsewhere: 'Say: Travel in the earth, then see…' (an-Naml: 69). Or it might be undertaken to seek provision or for tourism, as He the Almighty says: 'Say: Travel in the land, then see…' (al-An'am: 11). So His saying: '…who travelled through [many] lands…' (Qaf: 36) means that they travelled on earth to seek pleasure and benefit, for they were not content with what they possessed at home, but wanted to enter other lands too; and only the strong do this, while the weak do not leave their homes and are content with a little. And elsewhere in the Quran, He the Almighty says of them: '…and dug up the earth, and built on it in greater abundance than these have built on it…' (ar-Rum: 9). The Arabic word naqqaba (to dig) means 'to look for something concealed beneath the earth'. So they were not content with the easily obtained blessings, but they sought after those which were concealed underground. Allah's saying: '…was there any escape?' (Qaf: 36) means that they sought a place to hide in and to be safe from the torment. This means that although they possessed power and stability and were able to travel throughout the land, once the torment was sent down upon them, they could not find any refuge to protect them, or any place wherein they could be defended from Allah's chastisement. The Arabic word mahis is derived from the verb hasa which means 'to flee.' Even in our common speech, we say, 'He has nowhere to run and nowhere to hide.' In Allah's saying: '…was there any escape?' (Qaf: 36), the reason this saying is framed in the form of a question is so that you can answer it yourself. Did they find a refuge from the torment? No, they did not.

This verse was revealed to console Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him and to relieve his suffering on account of the adversity and stubborn resistance he met from his people. It is as though He the Almighty were saying to His Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him: 'Do not grieve, Muhammad, and take your example from your fellow Messengers who came before you; for in the end you shall be victorious.'

Allah the Almighty then says:

إِنَّ فِي ذَٰلِكَ لَذِكۡرَىٰ لِمَن كَانَ لَهُۥ قَلۡبٌ أَوۡ أَلۡقَى ٱلسَّمۡعَ وَهُوَ شَهِيدٞ ٣٧

There truly is a reminder in this for whoever has a heart, whoever listens attentively [37] (The Quran, Qaf: 37)

Allah's saying: 'There truly is…' (Qaf: 37) refers to the stories of the communities of the past who were taken to task by Allah. As for His saying: '…a reminder…' (Qaf: 37), it means that a reminder for you all and to which you must pay heed; for you have learned about what happened to them, i.e. the previous nations either by seeing the remains of their settlements; Allah the Almighty says: 'And most surely you pass by them in the morning, [137] And at night; do you not then understand? [138]' (as-Saffat: 137-138) Or else you have heard the accounts of what happened to them in the divinely-revealed scriptures; hearing and sight are indeed man's most important means of perception, which is why He the Almighty says here: '…whoever listens attentively' (Qaf: 37) that is, who hears and sees. As for Allah's saying: '…for whoever has a heart…' (Qaf: 37), it means a conscious heart which reflects and perceives, not a foolish or heedless heart – for what is the point in hearing if one does not have a conscious heart? The words would simply go in one ear and out the other, and the one who heard them would not learn anything from them.

Allah's saying: '…whoever listens attentively' (Qaf: 37) means 'to pay attention to what is heard' meaning that one gives his ear and listens with an attentive heart to take in what he hears and receive it with the proper rational inquiry.

The Arabic word shahid is the emphatic form of the word shahid (one who sees); it implies that he is especially attentive to what he sees, and that he benefits from it; he hears and sees with an attentive heart and a conscious mind, far from any heedlessness.

The True Lord the Almighty then says:

وَلَقَدۡ خَلَقۡنَا ٱلسَّمَٰوَٰتِ وَٱلۡأَرۡضَ وَمَا بَيۡنَهُمَا
فِي سِتَّةِ أَيَّامٖ وَمَا مَسَّنَا مِن لُّغُوبٖ ٣٨

We created the heavens, the earth, and everything between, in six Days without tiring [38]
(The Quran, Qaf: 38)

The True Lord the Almighty makes it clear here that He created the heavens and the earth and all the cosmological signs within them and between them in a total of six Days. He the Almighty then says: '…without tiring.' (Qaf: 38) That is, this action of creation did not tire Us or exert Us. There are other verses in the Noble Quran similar to this one indicating that the creation took place over eight Days. He the Almighty says: 'Say: What! Do you indeed disbelieve in Him Who created the earth in two Days, and do you set up equals with Him? That is the Lord of the Worlds.' (Fussilat: 9) So, we have here two (additional) Days. In addition, He the Almighty says: 'and He made in it mountains above its surface and He blessed therein and made therein its foods, in four Days: alike for the seekers.' (Fussilat: 10) So, the total now is six Days. He the Almighty furthermore says: 'then He directed Himself to the heaven and it is a vapour, so He said to it and to the earth: Come both, willingly or unwillingly. They both said: We come willingly [11] So He ordained them seven heavens in two Days [12]' (Fussilat: 11-12). So, this seems to give us a total of eight Days, a matter that caused some orientalists to claim that these verses in question are contradictory: is it six Days or eight Days? But this accusation of theirs is born of their lack of understanding of the Arabic language and its rhetorical styles. The True Lord the Almighty first spoke about the creation of the earth as a separate entity, and then spoke about the creation of what came after the earth, all of which took place in a total of four Days. So the two times states here are inclusive meaning that the two Days are included in the four because they both refer to the creation of one single thing: the earth. After the True Lord spoke about the creation of the earth, He the Almighty said: '…in four Days: alike for the seekers.' (Fussilat: 10) That is, it was completely finished in four Days. It is like if you say, 'We went from Cairo to Tanta in an hour, and to Alexandria in two hours.' So, there is no contradiction in the verses, but rather they are all in harmony with each other. Another misconception in this regard is that they said, 'If the True Lord the Almighty can do whatever He wills without any need for effort, then why did He not create this universe with the word 'Be' so that it would not have taken six Days?' I said before in answer to this that there is a difference between creating something and making the precursors to creation and then allowing the thing to develop on its own and become what it is destined to be. I explained this with the example of yoghurt: we take milk and yeast and mix them together, and then leave this mixture at a certain temperature, and after a while the ingredients react with each other and give us yoghurt. So the effort required to do this takes only a few minutes, but the process of reactions takes place over several hours, until it becomes what we want it to be after we first assembled the ingredients needed to make it. The same is true for the creation of the universe in six Days like the days we know. The meaning of weariness is the lethargy which comes after one works until he is tired. So tiredness and exertion accompany work, and then weariness is the lethargy and relaxation which come after the work is done; and if the lesser thing is negated, then of course the greater thing is negated all the more. So, the meaning is that He became neither weary nor tired, just as is the case when He the Almighty says: '…slumber does not overtake Him or sleep…' (al-Baqara: 255). Slumber means the drowsiness which comes before sleep; and thus negating slumber means that sleep is negated all the more.

Allah the Almighty then says:

فَٱصْبِرْ عَلَىٰ مَا يَقُولُونَ وَسَبِّحْ بِحَمْدِ رَبِّكَ قَبْلَ طُلُوعِ ٱلشَّمْسِ
وَقَبْلَ ٱلْغُرُوبِ ﴿٣٩﴾ وَمِنَ ٱلَّيْلِ فَسَبِّحْهُ وَأَدْبَٰرَ ٱلسُّجُودِ ﴿٤٠﴾

So [Prophet], bear everything they say with patience; celebrate the praise of your Lord before the rising and setting of the sun [39] proclaim His praise in the night and at the end of every prayer [40] (The Quran, Qaf: 39 - 40)

The True Lord the Almighty wants to console His Messenger after all the persecution he encountered from his people, so He says to him: 'Go on with your mission, and be not saddened by what they say, and do not despair of your ever triumphing over them'; for when the persecution directed at them became especially severe, Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him and his Companions felt that victory was far-off; Allah says of this: '…and they were shaken violently, so that the Messenger and those who believed with him said: When will the help of Allah come?..' (al-Baqara: 214) Here, He the Almighty says to him: 'So [Prophet], bear…' (Qaf: 39). This is because every time you bear persecution and trial patiently, you earn reward and a higher rank. So the more they persecute you, the more you must bear their persecution patiently, for they are only increasing their sin, while you are increasing your reward. Allah's saying: '…celebrate the praise of your Lord…' (Qaf: 39) means 'declare your Lord's Absolute Transcendence above any imperfection and any attribute which does not befit Him the Almighty by which His creatures might be characterised; for Allah has a Hand, but it is not like our hands; and He possesses Hearing, but it is not like ours. So, understand all these Divine Attributes in the light of Allah's saying: '…nothing like a likeness of Him; and He is the Hearing, the Seeing.' (ash-Shura: 11) Therefore the True Lord the Almighty began telling the story of the Night Journey and Ascension by saying: 'Glory be to Him Who made His servant to go…' (al-Isra': 1). That is, Allah is transcendently above all imperfections and above having any resemblance to His creatures because the story involved the breaking of the natural laws with which men are familiar. So, do not find this event far-fetched because it is attributed to Allah, not to a human being; Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him did not say, ‘I travelled’, but rather said, ‘I was taken’. Distances are traversed in a speed commensurate with the power of the doer: you can travel from Cairo to Alexandria by horse in ten hours and by car in three hours and by plane in half an hour and by rocket in a few minutes. In this way, speed is commensurate with the power of the doer, and as the power increases the time needed decreases. Because the speed in question here is that of the True Lord the Almighty no time was involved at all; and the reason why Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him made this journey over a whole night was that he was shown many things during it, which used up this time. The meaning of Allah’s saying: ‘celebrate the praise of your Lord…’ (Qaf: 39) is: Extol the glory your Lord and at the same time praise Him for His Blessings; and therefore, we find that expressions of glorification and praise are always linked with one of Allah’s Blessings and Signs which none but He could provide. Allah the Almighty says: ‘Glory be to Him Who made His servant to go…’ (al-Isra’: 1). He the Almighty also says: ‘Glory be to Him Who created pairs of all things, of what the earth grows, and of their kind and of what they do not know.’ (Ya Sin: 36) Therefore we have seen over the passing of history that the disbelievers, idolaters, and atheists worship their idols and sanctify them, but yet they never say to their idols, ‘Glory be to you’ because this can only be said to Allah. Also, the Divine Name ‘Allah’ has never been given to anyone despite the existence of atheists and those who deny the Existence of Allah; none of them has ever dared to give his son this name because he is afraid to call his son Allah. Therefore He the Almighty says: ‘…Do you know of anyone equal to Him?’ (Maryam: 65) So these are two things which no one has ever dared to do, because of Allah’s Grandeur, even though man has free will to do as he chooses.

We can also understand from Allah’s saying: ‘…celebrate the praise of your Lord…’ (Qaf: 39) that His Glory itself is a blessing which deserves our praise; for the fact that the True Lord the Almighty is transcendently above any likeness, equal or partner, is a great blessing for mankind. For if Allah had a likeness, equal or partner, our lives would be ruined, and we would suffer on account of this equality, and we would not be able to live in peace. Therefore He the Almighty says: ‘If there had been in them any gods except Allah, they would both have certainly been in a state of disorder…’ (al-Anbiya’: 22).

He Glorified is He also says: ‘Never did Allah take to Himself a son, and never was there with him any (other) god— in that case would each god have certainly taken away what he created, and some of them would certainly have overpowered others; glory be to Allah above what they describe!...’ (al-Mu’minun: 91) The meaning of Allah’s saying: ‘…before the rising and setting of the sun; [39] proclaim His praise in the night and at the end of every prayer[40]’ (Qaf: 39-40) is: Glorify Him always without ceasing, for these times summarise the entire day; for there are people who work during the day and sleep at night, and others who work at night and sleep during the day; the former take a break from their responsibilities during the night, whilst the latter do so during the day. There are similar verses to this one in the Quran, all of which have their own meaning. Elsewhere, Allah the Almighty says: ‘Bear then patiently what they say, and glorify your Lord by the praising of Him before the rising of the sun and before its setting…’ (Ta Ha: 130). He the Almighty says here the Arabic word ghurubiha and in chapter of Qaf the Arabic word Al-Gharub. Therefore they ask: ‘what is the difference between the two? Which of them is clearer?’ I say that each word is clear in its place; for when the sun sets, some of us see the sign of the setting, while others do not because of the clouds and such things, and thus deduce that the sun has set by using other means which indicate this to them. In Ramadan, for example, many of us do not see the sunset, but we can still break our fasting because we have other means of telling the time. So, Allah’s saying: ‘…and before its setting (ghurubiha)…’ (Ta Ha: 130) refers to those who can see the sun. As for Allah’s saying: ‘…before the setting (AL-Ghurub)’ (Qaf: 39), it refers to those who cannot see it. Likewise, He the Almighty says: ‘…proclaim His praise in the night and at the end of every prayer’ (Qaf: 40) while elsewhere He says: ‘…and during hours of the night do also glorify (Him)…’ (Ta Ha: 130). The former refers to those who wish to glorify Allah for a single part of the night and then sleep, whilst the latter refers to those who wish to glorify Allah and then sleep, and then glorify again and then sleep, several times in a single night. Allah’s saying: ‘…and at the end of every prayer’ (Qaf: 40) means ‘after the prescribed prayers’; Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him taught us how to glorify Allah after the prayer’s end.

Allah the Almighty then says:

وَٱسْتَمِعْ يَوْمَ يُنَادِ ٱلْمُنَادِ مِن مَّكَانٍ قَرِيبٍ ﴿٤١﴾
يَوْمَ يَسْمَعُونَ ٱلصَّيْحَةَ بِٱلْحَقِّ ۚ ذَٰلِكَ يَوْمُ ٱلْخُرُوجِ ﴿٤٢﴾

Listen out for the Day when the caller will call from a nearby place [41] They will come out [from their graves] on that Day, the Day when they hear the mighty blast in reality [42] (The Quran, Qaf: 41-42)

The caller here is Israfil, the angel charged with the task of blowing the Trumpet, and the ‘mighty blast’ is the second trumpet-peal which will bring the people forth from their graves for the Resurrection. The True Lord the Almighty says to His Messenger: ‘listen out for the Day when the caller will call…’ (Qaf: 41). These words were issued after Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him endured persecution through both words and deeds, and so it is as though his Lord the Almighty was consoling him and saying to him: If they have done all this, then wait for this Day, the Day when the caller will call them to stand and be reckoned and requited. And listen to what will happen to them then, and how they will regret it, and repudiate and curse one another. This is as the rustic saying goes: ‘Tomorrow we shall sit on the wall and listen to the clamour.’ That is, ‘Wait, Muhammad, and you shall hear all about them.’ And Allah’s saying: ‘…from a nearby place…’ (Qaf: 41) means that the one who gives the call will be close to everyone, as though he is keeping their company, and as though every one of us has his own caller. Allah’s saying: ‘the Day when they hear the mighty blast…’ (Qaf: 42) means the second trumpet-peal. Allah’s saying: ‘…in reality…’ (Qaf: 42) means the very truth which they used to deny and disbelieve in their worldly life, namely the truth of the Resurrection; and the Quran mentioned their saying: ‘…What! When we are dust, shall we then certainly be in a new creation?...’ (ar-Ra‘d: 5) And His saying: ‘…that Day of [their] coming-forth’ (Qaf: 42) means the Resurrection and the coming-forth from the graves; and the second blast will sound after all creatures have died upon the first blast. And therefore Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him would always recite the chapter of Qaf on the Days of the two Eid festivals because of how Allah says therein: ‘…that Day of [their] coming-forth’ (Qaf: 42).

Coming forth is a good thing on the days of Eid, and even the menstruating woman should attend the prayer, merely to witness the goodness and the gathering of Muslims on this day. And therefore Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him bequeathed to us the practice of holding the Eid pray outdoors because it is a prayer attended and observed by those who are in a state where they themselves do not pray. And likewise, reciting the chapter of Qaf on Eid also indicates that the day of celebration, going out, dressing nicely and rejoicing should not make us forget the greater Day of coming-forth, the Day of Resurrection.

Allah the Almighty then says:

إِنَّا نَحْنُ نُحْيِۦ وَنُمِيتُ وَإِلَيْنَا ٱلْمَصِيرُ ﴿٤٣﴾
يَوْمَ تَشَقَّقُ ٱلْأَرْضُ عَنْهُمْ سِرَاعًاۚ ذَٰلِكَ حَشْرٌ عَلَيْنَا يَسِيرٌ ﴿٤٤﴾

It is We who give life and death; the final return will be to Us [43] on the Day when the earth will be torn apart, letting them rush out – that gathering will be easy for Us [44]
(The Quran, Qaf: 43 - 44)

After saying: '…that Day of [their] coming-forth' (Qaf: 42) He the Almighty then affirms this truth and gives the conclusion of it, saying: 'It is We who give life and death…' (Qaf: 43), and because some people deny this fact, He emphasises it by stressing the pronoun: 'Verily, it is We…' (Qaf: 43), for He Alone the Almighty is able to do that. Allah's saying: '…the final return will be to Us' (Qaf: 43) means the final destination and the return; for the beginning is from Him, and the end is with Him. Allah's saying: 'on the Day when the earth will be torn apart, letting them rush out…' (Qaf: 44), that is, they will come forth from it rapidly because they will all respond to the blast at once, coming forth quickly without delay. And Allah's saying: '…that gathering…' (Qaf: 44) means, all of the things which happen of this Day, of the earth splitting and the people hastening forth from their graves and being gathered all together for the Gathering: '…will be easy for Us.' (Ghafir: 44)

Allah the Almighty then says:

نَّحۡنُ أَعۡلَمُ بِمَا يَقُولُونَۖ وَمَآ أَنتَ عَلَيۡهِم بِجَبَّارٖۖ
فَذَكِّرۡ بِٱلۡقُرۡءَانِ مَن يَخَافُ وَعِيدِ ٤٥

We know best what the disbelievers say. You [Prophet] are not there to force them, so remind, with this Quran, those who fear My warning [45] (The Quran, Qaf: 45)

As long as We are fully aware of them and of what they are saying, then leave their requital to Us, for if you requite them, you will only do so with your power, while if We requite them We shall do so with Our power, and We shall not have mercy on them, nor shall they evade punishment. So, leave the matter to Us, for We are most capable of punishing them. Allah's saying: '…You [Prophet] are not there to force them…' (Qaf: 45), for your mission is to convey the Message, So do not worry yourself about them, and do not make yourself responsible for more than you are able to do. It is just as the True Lord the Almighty corrected him when He says: 'Perhaps you will kill yourself with grief because they do not believe.' (ash-Shu'ara': 3) And the meaning of Allah's saying: '…You [Prophet] are not there to force them…' (Qaf: 45) is force them to have faith, for if Allah wanted this He would have forced them to have faith as He forced others; but He wants them to come to Him in obedience out of their own free choice. Allah's saying: '…so, remind with this Quran, those who fear My warning.' (Qaf: 45) This is because this is your mission, to remind the people by means of the Quran. And then He specifies who this reminder is for: '…those who fear My warning.' (Qaf: 45) That is, who fear My warning and My admonition, for only the believer fears this warning, since he is prepared to accept it and respond to it. I explained before the difference between the action and the one who receives it, for not all those who listen to the Quran are alike. Some listen to it, and this listening has an impression on them and they respond, others listen without any attentiveness or reflection so that it is as though they have not heard anything. Therefore He the Almighty says of them: 'And there are those of them who seek to listen to you until when they go forth from you, they say to those who have been given the knowledge: What was it that he said just now?...' (Muhammad: 16) This kind of listening is a bodily action only, without the presence of an open and attentive heart. Allah the Almighty says: '…Say: It is to those who believe a guidance and a healing; and (as for) those who do not believe, there is a heaviness in their ears and it is obscure to them…' (Fussilat: 44). So the Quran is one, but those who listen to it are different. Some listen to it with an attentive heart, a pure soul, and a mind empty of adversity and corrupted beliefs so that they are affected and respond. And others listen to it with stubborn hearts and minds which are occupied with errant beliefs which prevent them from responding. Therefore I said to those who wish to choose between two things: you must remove both of them from your heart, and then seclude yourself and think and reflect on both of them. Allah the Almighty says: 'Say: I exhort you only to one thing, that rise up for Allah's sake in twos and singly, then ponder: there is no madness in your fellow-citizen…' (Saba': 46). Group thinking is not organised, and usually does not come to the correct conclusion.

You will remember that I said, when explaining the different effects of a single action that you blow into your hands in winter to warm them, and you blow into hot tea to cool it down. So, the True Lord the Almighty specifies here that this reminder is for: '…those who fear My Warning.' (Qaf: 45) This is because they possess attentive hearts and minds free of opposition, delusion, and error; and this is the right way to receive the Quran.

adh-Dhariyat

In the Name of God,(1) the Most Merciful, the Dispenser of Mercy

The chapter of adh-Dhariyat (2). Allah the Almighty says:

وَٱلذَّٰرِيَٰتِ ذَرۡوٗا ١ فَٱلۡحَٰمِلَٰتِ وِقۡرٗا ٢
فَٱلۡجَٰرِيَٰتِ يُسۡرٗا ٣ فَٱلۡمُقَسِّمَٰتِ أَمۡرًا ٤

By those [winds] that scatter far and wide [1] and those that are heavily laden [2] that speed freely [3] that distribute [rain] as ordained! [4]
(The Quran, adh-Dhariyat: 1-4)

The Arabic word wa expresses a vow, and these are vows which the True Lord the Almighty is swearing. We only swear by Allah because the believer magnifies nothing more than he magnifies Allah. As for the True Lord the Almighty He may swear by whichever of His creations He wills, for He the Almighty knows best the aspects of magnificence they possess, and the wisdom behind every vow which is sworn by Him. For example, elsewhere He the Almighty says: ‘I swear by the early hours of the day, [1] And the night when it covers with darkness. [2]’ (ad-Duha: 1-2) So why does He the Almighty swear here by the bright morning hours and the dark still night in particular here, and not by anything else? This vow was a reply to the disbelievers of Mecca, when the Revelation stopped coming to Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him for a while, and they rejoiced and said, ‘Muhammad’s Lord has scorned him!’(1) So the vow here had a purpose and an occasion; for the morning hours are a time when movement and work take place, and the night is a time of rest and stillness, and neither of them can do without the other. So, there is an indication here of the wise reason for the Revelation’s temporary cease, as though He were saying to them: ‘Reflect on the time which encompasses you, and how it is composed of a night for rest and a day for work, each of which compliments the other.’ And the same is true of the Revelation which came to Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him: at first it was difficult and exhausting for him, and Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him described this difficulty, saying of the angel: ‘He whelmed me in his embrace until he reached the limits of my endurance.’(2) When he returned to his house, he said: ‘Cover me, cover me! Wrap me up, wrap me up!’ So, it is as though the temporary ceasing of the Revelation for Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him was a chance for him to have a rest from this hardship, and yearn to meet the angel again. So, He compared the first descent of the Revelation to the day, and its ceasing to the night. And here, the True Lord the Almighty swears by the winds which scatter dust; and wind is a power and energy essential for life in this world. When He says: ‘…that scatters far and wide.’ (adh-Dhariyat: 1), this means that these winds blow things and move them; and these are the winds which carry water vapour to the places where it forms clouds. And therefore, He then says: ‘and those that are heavily laden’ (adh-Dhariyat: 2) meaning the clouds which bear water and gather together so that they become heavy, as Allah the Almighty says: ‘Do you not see that Allah drives along the clouds, then gathers them together, then piles them up so that you see the rain coming forth from their midst…’ (an-Nur: 43). And the Arabic word ‘waqr’ means something heavy, as He the Almighty says elsewhere: ‘…and (Who) brings up the heavy cloud.’ (ar-Ra‘d: 12) And then once these clouds are formed, they do not remain in the same place, but the wind moves them. Allah's saying: 'that speed freely' (adh-Dhariyat: 3), that is, the clouds move along gently, floating in the air with subtlety and ease.

(1) The Islamic conception of 'Allah' is not the same as the Christian and Jewish conception of 'God'. However, the word 'Allah' does not refer to a tribal god or God of only Muslims, it refers to the Creator of the whole world, the One God (who has no son). We prefer, however, to use 'Allah' rather than 'God' as it has a unique character: it cannot be used to refer to any false gods and does not have any derivatives like goddess, gods, etc. It is a unique word used solely to describe the One God of this universe.

(2) In his Tafsir, Al-Qurtubi says: The chapter of adh-Dhariyat is number 51 in the written order of the Quran, and contains 60 verses. It was revealed before Hijra. In his Al-Itqan, As-Suyuti says: It was revealed between the chapter of al-Ahqaf and the chapter of A*l-Ghashiya*, and was thus the 66th chapter to be revealed.

(1) See At-Tabari, Tafsir.

(2) See Al-Bukhari, Hadith, no; (3) and Muslim, Hadith, no; (231) on the authority of ‘A’isha Allah be pleased with her.

He then says: 'that distribute [rain] as ordained' (adh-Dhariyat: 4), that is, the winds apportion these clouds and transport them to the lands where they are destined to fall, as He the Almighty says elsewhere: '…afflicting there with whom He pleases and turning it away from whom He pleases…' (an-Nur: 43). And then the subject of these four vows is given.

Allah the Almighty says:

إِنَّمَا تُوعَدُونَ لَصَادِقٌ (٥) وَإِنَّ ٱلدِّينَ لَوَٰقِعٌ (٦)

What you [people] are promised is true [5]
the Judgement will come [6]
(The Quran, adh-Dhariyat: 5 - 6)

That is, the Resurrection and Reckoning of which you have been promised '…is true.' (adh-Dhariyat: 5) It means a reality and a fact. Allah says: 'the Judgement will come.' (adh-Dhariyat: 6) The judgement meant here is the Day of Judgement, the Day when all deeds will be requited, which is as Allah the Almighty says: '…will come' (adh-Dhariyat: 6): it will definitely come, beyond all doubt. But what is the relationship between the four objects of the vow, and the Day of Judgement? Some scholars said that when you look at the universe in which we live, you find that The Creator the Almighty created everything within it, and all of these constituents are just as they were in Allah's universe the moment He created it, and they will remain until the Day of Resurrection, where nothing shall be recreated except man. Take, for example, water or air, by both of which Allah has sworn: you find that water is the same as it has ever been since Allah has created this universe, neither increasing nor decreasing because it goes around in a circle which always returns it back to the natural state of water in which Allah has created it. For example, in the course of your life you might drink several tons of water, but does it all remain inside you? Of course not, it comes out of you in the form of urine, sweat and so on, and returns once again to its source. Even the small amount of water which remains in a human being is absorbed by the earth when he dies, and returns to the ground water. So this is a sign of the fact that you are born, then die, then return once again; take from the material world around you proof of the possibility of your return, and take perceptible material things as proof of the truth of the imperceptible things of which Allah tells you. Do not find it far-fetched that something could disappear and then return once more.

He the Almighty then says:

وَٱلسَّمَآءِ ذَاتِ ٱلۡحُبُكِ ﴿٧﴾ إِنَّكُمۡ لَفِي قَوۡلٖ مُّخۡتَلِفٖ ﴿٨﴾ يُؤۡفَكُ عَنۡهُ مَنۡ أُفِكَ ﴿٩﴾

By the sky with its pathways [7] you differ in what you say [8] those who turn away from it are [truly] deceived [9] (The Quran, adh-Dhariyat: 7-9)

This is another vow, wherein the True Lord the Almighty swears by the sky. Allah the Almighty says: ‘by the sky with its pathways.’ (adh-Dhariyat: 7) The Arabic word hubuk is derived from the root habaka which means ‘to fashion something precisely’ neither doing too much nor too little; and this is true of the sky, which we see to be smooth and straight without any fissures or cracks because it was created with precision and skill. Some scholars also say that hubuk here means the paths which the celestial bodies follow as they move. And the main clause of this vow is: ‘you differ in what you say.’ (adh-Dhariyat: 8) This refers to the disbelievers of Mecca who opposed Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him and said different things about him; it is as though the True Lord the Almighty were alluding to them that their beliefs should be united without any inconsistency, just as the sky was created uniformly without any variance. He says elsewhere: ‘And the heaven, He raised it high, and He made the balance. [7] That you may not be inordinate in respect of the measure. [8] And keep up the balance with equity and do not make the measure deficient [9].’ (ar-Rahman: 7-9) So the sky is straight and level because it was created according to the True Lord’s measure; and if you want your affairs to be ordered, then you must order them in conformity with this measure; for otherwise, you will differ, and your affirmations will be at variance.

The meaning of Allah's saying: 'those who turn away from it are [truly] deceived' (adh-Dhariyat: 9) is that the only one who would reject Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him and faith in him: '…are [truly] deceived' (adh-Dhariyat: 9), for Satan has diverted him away from faith; one of Satan's concerns is to divert the people of truth away from truth, and to make falsehood seem alluring to them, Allah the Almighty says: '…and most surely the Satan suggest to their friends that they should contend with you; and if you obey them, you shall most surely be polytheists.' (al-An'am: 121)

Allah the Almighty then says:

قُتِلَ ٱلۡخَرَّٰصُونَ ١٠ ٱلَّذِينَ هُمۡ فِى غَمۡرَةٖ سَاهُونَ ١١ يَسۡـَٔلُونَ أَيَّانَ يَوۡمُ ٱلدِّينِ ١٢
يَوۡمَ هُمۡ عَلَى ٱلنَّارِ يُفۡتَنُونَ ١٣ ذُوقُواْ فِتۡنَتَكُمۡ هَٰذَا ٱلَّذِى كُنتُم بِهِۦ تَسۡتَعۡجِلُونَ ١٤

Perish the liars [10] those steeped in error and unaware! [11] They ask, 'When is this Judgement Day coming?' [12] On a Day when they will be punished by the Fire [13] Taste the punishment!
This is what you wished to hasten [14]
(The Quran, adh-Dhariyat: 10 - 14)

The meaning of: '…(AL-Kharrasun)…' (adh-Dhariyat: 10) is liars, as He said in another verse: '…they only lie.' (az-Zukhruf: 20) But how could He say: 'Perish the liars.' (adh-Dhariyat: 10) when they are still alive? Some scholars say that the meaning here is that they have been cursed by Allah and banished from His mercy; to be killed takes you out of the enjoyment of this world, while to be cursed takes you out of Allah's mercy in the Hereafter and puts you into His chastisement – we seek Allah's refuge! It is as though He the Almighty were saying to them: 'Who do you curse, and who do you slay? Nay, it is you who shall be slain, and resurrected, and reckoned; and it is you who shall be cursed and banished from Allah's mercy.'

He the Almighty then describes them by saying: 'Those steeped in error (ghamara) and unaware!' (adh-Dhariyat: 11) The Arabic word ghamara describes the action of water when it completely covers someone and drowns him; it is as though these people were immersed in ignorance until they drowned in it and it blinded them; and the meaning of Allah's saying: '…unaware!' (adh-Dhariyat: 11) is that they are heedless, foolish and astray from their proper purpose. And these people will find no salvation on the Day of Resurrection, the Day which they deny and which they ask about, with doubt and sarcasm: 'They ask, "When is this Judgement Day coming?"' (adh-Dhariyat: 12) So Allah makes it clear to them: 'On a Day when they will be punished by the Fire.' (adh-Dhariyat: 13) The Day of Judgement which you deny will be the Day when you shall be cast into hell wherein you shall taste all manner of torments, as requital for your mocking and your sarcasm. Allah the Almighty then says: 'Taste the punishment…' (adh-Dhariyat: 14), that is, taste the results of the trials you inflicted on others in your worldly life. The Arabic word fitna is also applied to fire when it smelts metals to clean them of their impurities. So the Day of Judgement, about which you so mockingly ask, is the Day when you shall be smelted in the fire of hell and burned by it just as gold and iron are smelted; and although Gold and Iron are smelted to remove their impurities so they become pure, you shall be smelted in the fire to be tormented by it and exposed to endless pain. Allah's saying: 'This is…' (adh-Dhariyat: 14) means, the Day of Resurrection: '…what you wished to hasten.' (adh-Dhariyat: 14) And their hastiness in asking for it was the result of their lack of faith in it; for had they believed that it was real, they would never have called for it to be hastened. And the Quran tells us that they said: '…then bring us what you threaten us with, if you are of the truthful ones.' (al-Ahqaf: 22)

So, their question about the Day of Judgement: 'When is this Judgement Day coming' (adh-Dhariyat: 12) was meant to mock it and deny it because they do not believe in any of the unseen things of which Allah has told us, although they were happy to accept the material blessings which Allah bestowed upon them, and the benefits He created for them. They took the blessings without considering the Blesser; indeed, they were deluded by the blessings, and that is why they mocked and denied as they did. Therefore we find that many verses debate them with arguments and proofs, and affirm to them that the Resurrection is real. And when they said: '…When we shall have become bones and decayed particles, shall we then certainly be raised up, being a new creation?' (al-Isra': 49) He responded: 'Say: Become stones or iron[50] Or some other creature of those which are too hard (to receive life) in your minds! But they will say: Who will return us? Say He: Who created you at first…' (al-Isra': 50-51) because they found it far-fetched that bones could be restored to life, He took them even further than bones, for bones have an origin in life; so He said to them: 'Even if you were inanimate objects like stones or iron, which are hard and lifeless, We could still bring you to life.' And after speaking about those who opposed Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him and denied the Resurrection, the True Lord the Almighty then speaks of their contrast; and as I said before, contrast helps to make the image clearer, and opposites show the beauty of their opposites. So He the Almighty says:

إِنَّ ٱلۡمُتَّقِينَ فِي جَنَّٰتٖ وَعُيُونٍ ﴿١٥﴾ ءَاخِذِينَ مَآ ءَاتَىٰهُمۡ رَبُّهُمۡۚ إِنَّهُمۡ كَانُواْ قَبۡلَ
ذَٰلِكَ مُحۡسِنِينَ ﴿١٦﴾ كَانُواْ قَلِيلٗا مِّنَ ٱلَّيۡلِ مَا يَهۡجَعُونَ ﴿١٧﴾ وَبِٱلۡأَسۡحَارِ هُمۡ
يَسۡتَغۡفِرُونَ ﴿١٨﴾ وَفِيٓ أَمۡوَٰلِهِمۡ حَقّٞ لِّلسَّآئِلِ وَٱلۡمَحۡرُومِ ﴿١٩﴾

The righteous will be in Gardens with [flowing] springs [15] They will receive their Lord's gifts because of the good they did before [16] sleeping only little at night [17] praying at dawn for God's forgiveness [18] giving a rightful share of their wealth to the beggar and the deprived [19]
(The Quran, adh-Dhariyat: 15 - 19)

In Allah's saying: 'Verily, the righteous…' (adh-Dhariyat: 15), the word 'verily' imparts emphasis to the saying; and righteousness (taqwa), as I said, means to place a barrier (wiqaya) between yourself and Allah's chastisement. This is why the Quran can say in one place: '…be careful of (your duty to) Allah…' (al-Hashr: 18), and in another place, say: '…And guard yourselves against the fire…' (Al-'Imran: 131). The meaning is: Continue to obey Allah, and avoid disobeying Him and all the means which incur His chastisement; for Allah has Attributes of Beauty and Attributes of Majesty, and pious means to place a protective barrier between yourself and the Attributes of Majesty which deter the sinner and turn him away from evil. And one manifestation of the Attributes of Beauty is that He created for us things which benefit us in this worldly life, and one of these is fire: 'Have you considered the fire which you strike? [71] Is it you that produce the trees for it, or are We the producers? [72]' (al-Waqi'a: 71-72) But although you benefit from this fire in this worldly life and consider it to be one of Allah's blessings upon you, you must beware it in the Hereafter because it will be an instrument of torment, and it will be one of the hosts by which Allah punishes the sinners; so be conscious of it. So the meaning is the same: Be conscious of Allah, and be conscious of the fire. And we may observe here that Allah's saying: 'The righteous…' (adh-Dhariyat: 15) refers to the time of moral responsibility, and it is a plural; and Allah's saying: '…gardens…' (adh-Dhariyat: 15) refers to the time of reward, and it is a plural, and the same is true of Allah's saying: '…springs…' (adh-Dhariyat: 15). It is as though the True Lord the Almighty were saying that every pious person shall have his own garden with a spring running through it. Indeed yes, he will have his own garden because the grammatical rule says that if one plural is associated with another, they may each be divided individually with the same association. For example, if the teacher says to the pupils, 'Take out your books', this means that each individual pupil must take out his book. But in the chapter of ar-Rahman, we find that Allah the Almighty says: 'And for him who fears to stand before his Lord are two gardens.' (ar-Rahman: 46) So how can we make an agreeable synthesis of these two verses? Some scholars say that the chapter of ar-Rahman came to address both man- and jinn-kind, so the meaning is: For those who fear their Sustainer's Presence, whether of man- or jinn-kind, there is a garden: one garden for mankind, and another for jinn-kind. Or, the meaning is that the individual really will have two gardens, and I explained before that when the True Lord the Almighty created paradise with room enough for all of mankind were they all to believe, and created hell with room enough for all of mankind were they to disbelieve? I said that there will be no 'overpopulation' in the Hereafter. This means, that when the people of hell enter hell, their places in paradise will be free, and pious people will inherit them. So it will be as though each one will claim both his garden and the garden of the disbeliever who left it and went to hell. A 'garden' is a verdant place filled with trees with tangled branches which give shade and cover to him who walks beneath them, or which contains all the needs of life so that he never has to leave it; and this is the meaning of qasr 'palace' or 'castle', namely' a place which relieves (qasara) you of the need to go anywhere else, such that you do not need to leave it to go anywhere else to obtain any of life's needs.

He the Almighty says: '…will find themselves amid gardens and springs…' (adh-Dhariyat: 15), that is, springs of water because the basis of gardens is verdure, growth and fruits, and all of these things are the result of the presence of water. So, the gardens contain springs to preserve them and keep them as gardens.

Therefore when the Quran speaks of the rivers of the paradise and the presence of the water its gardens require, it sometimes says: '…through which running waters flow…' (at-Tawba: 100) Tajri tahtaha, and other times says: '…through which running waters flow…' (as-Saff: 12) Tajri min tahtiha which literally means 'from under which running water flow'; this indicates that the water is an inherent part of the garden, so we do not imagine that the water which flows through them could ever be cut off. It is as if He the Almighty is saying to you: 'Rest assured that the waters of the garden are guaranteed for it because they flow right from it.'

His words, 'They will receive their Lord's gifts because of the good they did before' (adh-Dhariyat: 16) return the context here to the past, and tell us about the cause of this felicity. These divine-conscious people will receive this reward because they accepted Allah's Guidance willingly and freely.

The Arabic word akhidhin, here literally means 'takers' which is the plural of aakhidh 'taker' means someone who takes something with eagerness and desire, and with acceptance and pleasure. A man does not stretch out his hand to take something unless it will give him benefit, unlike something which is thrown at you so you take it unwillingly.

It is as though these people heard Allah's Way of Guidance and recognised that it would rectify their lives, repair their actions and give them salvation in the Hereafter; so, they took it with desire, love and eagerness; they took it with all their strength, as Allah says: '…Hold fast with [all your] strength unto what We have vouchsafed you…' (al-Baqara: 63).

A strong act of taking indicates that the one who takes appreciates the benefit which he is obtaining. Moreover, you took, whilst others left, and you did good, whilst they did evil, although you had free will and the ability to choose whether to take or leave.

You did good when you had the ability to do evil and accept evil; and you listened to Allah’s Revelation and obeyed it, and bore the burden of its responsibilities, gladly and willingly, so you are worthy of this reward.

The verses then made it clear that this taking is a limited one; we do not take everything and all that comes to us, but rather, we take that which comes to us from our Lord and Creator: ‘They will receive their Lord’s gifts…’ (adh-Dhariyat: 16). He chose to mention the Attribute of Lordly Sustenance here because it is connected with giving; for the ‘Lord’ is the One Who creates from nothing and sustains from nothing, and preserved the essential needs of life for you by His All-Sustaining Power (qayyumiyya); for if we say that a man is qa’im over something, this means that he is concerned with it, and does not leave it to anyone else.

So, by His wisdom and Omnipotence, Allah created; and by His All-Sustaining Power He preserved all good things; therefore when something good comes to you, remember the lordly sustenance which gave it to you. Allah’s Lordship is pre-eternally present in a person’s life; for He gave to you and provided for you before you were even created, yet He only made you religiously responsible when you reached the age of adulthood.

So as long as you took the bestowal of lordship and enjoyed it, you must also take the bestowal of godhood and just as you took the first bestowal with love, eagerness, and desire, you must also take the other bestowal in the same way. It is not right for you to take the first bestowal and leave the second and reject it; for if you reflect on the bestowal of godhood, you will find that it is better and more lasting for you than the bestowal of lordship.

The first bestowal of lordship gave you the essential needs of this worldly life, which is limited and ephemeral; it gave you the essentials of the impermanent outer shell. As for the bestowal of godhood, it guarantees for you eternal life in the Hereafter, and revives within you the eternal spirit which never comes to an end. So which of these does it make more sense to take? Therefore, when Allah the Almighty spoke to us about this matter, He the Almighty said: ‘O children of Adam! Indeed, We have bestowed upon you from on high [the knowledge of making] garments to cover your nakedness, and as a thing of beauty: but the garment of Allah-consciousness is the best of all…’ (al-A‘raf: 26) .

The garments which cover one's nakedness represent necessities, and the garments of beauty represent luxuries and comforts; and this is the most we can possibly take from this worldly life. He then draws our attention to what is more important: '…but the garment of Allah-consciousness is the best of all…' (al-A'raf: 26). They are better than the delights of this worldly life and its ornaments and trifles because all of this will come to an end, whilst the other will be eternal without end. The garment of this world covers you in this world, but the Garment of Allah-consciousness covers you in this world and the next.

Because of the bestowal of godhood has this importance, Allah only gives it to those who believe in Him willingly. Therefore, He only holds the believer religiously responsible, which is why whenever He issues responsibilities to us, He says: 'O you who have attained to faith!' (al-Baqara: 153)

The verses then mention another attribute of the divine-consciousness: '…because of the good they did before' (adh-Dhariyat: 16). That is, they only deserve this rank because they '…were doers of good [muhsinin, literally 'doers of ihsan']…before' (adh-Dhariyat: 16), and ihsan or 'spiritual excellence' is the highest rank of faith. Scholars have defined ihsan as being that of which Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him said: 'It is to worship Allah as though you see Him, for if you see Him not, He sees you.'(1) Ihsan means to do more righteous deeds than Allah commanded you to do; and therefore, since this verse was revealed in Mecca before the poor-due had been made obligatory, He said: 'Giving a rightful share of their wealth to the beggar and the deprived' (adh-Dhariyat: 19), and did not say 'a due share appointed', for this means the poor-due, which was only made obligatory in Medina, whilst during the Meccan period there was only charity.

So, the meaning of ihsan is that they rose to the ranks of spiritual excellence before they were commanded to do so, and this means that the ranks of spiritual excellence are natural and instinctive, and are within your ability and do not overburden you. Likewise, all aspects of obedience and righteousness are natural and not contrived, unlike sin.

(1) See Al-Bukhari, no. 48 and Muslim no. 10, on the authority of Abu Hurayra Allah be pleased with him.

Therefore, we say that the righteous man saves on the cost of sitting in cafes and smoking and drinking coffee, drugs and intoxicants; righteousness makes more economic sense.

Even in the physical sense, righteousness is more natural, whilst sin requires affectation, stealth, and wiliness. Therefore, on the linguistic level, The Quran speaks of the acquisition of good deeds using the verb kasaba, and of the committing of sins by using the verb iktasaba which is from the same root, but implies affectation.

To acquire (kasb) is something natural, whilst to commit (iktasaba) involves affectation; and you see this affectation in the one who stealthily attempts to look at something which Allah has forbidden him to see, and how he steals glances at people. You see the same difference between the man who walks to the mosque, and the man who walks to the bar, and so on.

The scholars have defined the level of spiritual excellence in worship, saying that spiritual excellence means to do all the worship which Allah has obliged you to do, and then to do more of the same acts which He has obliged. The ordinary believer offers the five daily prayers, and the doer of good (muhsin) offers as many extra supererogatory prayers as he can in addition to them. The ordinary believer pays the poor-due of one twentieth or one fortieth of his standing wealth, whilst the doer of good gives more than that; and so on. So 'a rightful share…' (adh-Dhariyat: 19) here has two meanings: It means that they did good before they were obliged to, and were eager to do good deeds even before they were obliged to do so; or it means that they did what they were obliged to do, and then did even more of the same kind of acts of worship which Allah obliged them to do.

Allah the Almighty then describes the doers of good by saying: 'Sleeping only little at night' (adh-Dhariyat: 17). The verb huju' means literally 'to be still', to neither do something good nor something evil; and therefore in Arabic we say to the naughty child, Ihja', that is, 'Be still!'

This is why they say, 'The tyrant's sleep is an act of worship' because it keeps him from his tyranny. These doers of good have the right to pray the evening prayer and then sleep until the dawn prayer, but their love for obedience made them refrain from sleep save for a small part of the night; and the negation of their lack of movement (huju') negates their lack of sleep.

Spiritual excellence is a result of the servant's love for his Lord. Allah was good to you when He gave these responsibilities to you, and greeted you by them, so you must return the greeting with a better one: if He obliges you to do five prayers, you make it ten; and if He obliges you to give a twentieth or a fortieth of your wealth as poor-due, you give many times more than this; and so on, for all other acts of worship and righteous deeds.

When our master Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him was asked about spiritual excellence, he said: 'It is to worship Allah as though you see Him, for if you see Him not, He sees you.' If you can see someone, this means he is present and not absent. Suppose you are hired by a man who sits behind you and watches you, and observes all your actions: will you be lax or remiss in your work whilst he is there?

The same is true of the doer of good when he worships; and it is related in a Qudsi Hadith: 'O My servants! If you think that I cannot see you, then the fault is in your faith; and if you think that I can see you, then why have you made Me the least important of all those who behold you?'(1)

And He then says: 'Praying at dawn for Allah's forgiveness' (adh-Dhariyat: 18). The word ashar (praying at dawn) is the plural of sahar which means the last part of the night before the dawn breaks, when a faint light can be seen which a man might imagine to be the light of the sun, although the sun has not yet risen; therefore, it is called 'imaginary light.'

From this is derived the word sihr which means 'sorcery' or 'magic', for sorcery means to alter reality by means of illusion which is not actually real; Allah says: '…they cast a spell (saharu) upon the people's eyes…' (al-A'raf: 116). The watches of the night are among the best times to pray for forgiveness but what are these people seeking forgiveness for, given that their Lord described them as Allah-conscious, took all that He gave to them, have attained the station of spiritual excellence, and only sleep for a little part of the night?

(1) Ibn Rajab Al-Hanbali narrated it as a saying of Abu Al-Jald.

So, they do not seem to have any sins for which they need to ask Allah for forgiveness. The scholars say that their prayers for forgiveness are appropriate to the rank of spiritual excellence; they do not ask Allah’s forgiveness for their sins, they ask His forgiveness for the shortcomings they think they have in their worship and their deeds, as though they see all they have done to be paltry, and to fall short of the appreciation and worship which Allah deserves. This is an example of the maxim: ‘The good deeds of the pious are the sins of those who are truly close to Allah.’

Allah then says: ‘Giving a rightful share of their wealth to the beggar and the deprived.’ (adh-Dhariyat: 19) He ascribes the possessions to them, saying 'their wealth' because they own it now even though in reality it belongs to Allah, and man has only been entrusted with it for a while. Therefore He the Almighty says: ‘…spend on others out of that of which He has made you trustees…’ (al-Hadid: 7).

Man is Allah’s vicegerent on earth, and in light of this vicegerency, he must obey The One Who made him His vicegerent by giving those who ask for help and those who suffer privation from the wealth which Allah has entrusted to him. He must give to the one who is unable to work and earn, giving it in thanks to Allah who gave him the strength to work, whilst others are unable to work and lack this strength.

When Allah the Almighty commands us to do this, He gives security to the life and future of both those who are able to work and those who are not because time changes people’s situations, and the events of life are in constant flux, and perhaps the able man will become disabled tomorrow, and then he will find someone to help him in turn.

Therefore, we said before that The Wise Lawgiver taught us to work as much as we are able to, not only as much as you need to; for when you work with all the power that Allah placed within you, you earn enough to meet your needs and also to give charity to those who are unable to work. If we have this assurance and this security, then a man will live without dreading the events of life, or fearing poverty for himself or for his children after him.

When He the Almighty says, ‘…to the beggar and the deprived’ (adh-Dhariyat: 19), this means the poor person who is forced by necessity to ask people for help; and 'the deprived.' (adh-Dhariyat: 19) means the one who is also poor, but feels ashamed to ask for help, and he might go hungry or even die because of this. In doing this, he sins against himself because Allah has given him the right to ask; he is first of all deprived of possessions, and then he has deprived himself of asking even though it is lawful for him to do so.

Because of this, Islam encourages us to be acquainted with one another, and to attend gatherings where people get to know one another, in the course of which we will come to know those who are needy so we can help them, and those who are sick so we can visit them, and so on.

A beggar came to one of the righteous, and he gave him what he needed, and then his wife came to him and found him weeping. She asked him, 'Why are you crying when you gave him what he needed?' He said, 'I am crying because I neglected him until he had to come and ask me.' So, people should be given their rights without even having to ask for them, and the rich person should spare the poor person the need to ask.

Allah the Almighty then says:

وَفِي ٱلْأَرْضِ ءَايَٰتٌ لِّلْمُوقِنِينَ ﴿٢٠﴾ وَفِيٓ أَنفُسِكُمْۚ أَفَلَا تُبْصِرُونَ ﴿٢١﴾

On earth there are signs for those with sure faith [20] and in yourselves too, do you not see? [21]
(The Quran, adh-Dhariyat: 20 - 21)

The earth is the earth upon which we live, and it is singular; yet the reality is that there are many earths, as Allah says: 'Allah is He who has created seven heavens, and, like them, of the earth…' (at-Talaq: 12). This means that there are seven earths.

The scholars say that this is because the earth contains several environments in terms of hot and cold weather, and in terms of the soil and the elements it contains, and the good things it produces; because of this, there are several lands; and this is why scientists speak of 'wheat belts', 'banana belts', and so on.

Allah the Almighty has given each land what it needs to produce specific plants which suit the populations there. The problem is that we transport the product of one land to another where it is not suitable, for, were it good for those people, they would already have it there. Therefore, we find that that when plants grow in lands where they are not native, they are afflicted by blights. If we look, for example, and the banana belt, we will find that the banana crops there are strong and never get blighted or ruined, whilst when we move these crops to lands where they are not native, they are constantly beset by blight and ruin. It is as though He the Almighty were saying to us: ‘This was not created for your environment, but it has its own environment where it excels and where it has all the constituents it needs to grow well.’

‘Signs’ are signals which point to the power of the Creator the Almighty. The first of the signs on earth we can observe is how the surface of the earth is divided between water and dry land; and some water is fresh, whilst some is salty and bitter. We drink the fresh water and water our crops and animals with it, and we get fish from the salty water: ‘…And yet, from either of them do you eat fresh meat, and [from either] you take gems which you may wear…’ (Fatir: 12).

Some dry land is fertile and good for farming, whilst other land is desert, or mountainous; and each kind of land has its own particular goodness. Another of the signs of the earth is that three-quarters of its surface is covered with water; and the wisdom of this is that the surface area of the water is vast to facilitate the evaporation which gives us rain enough for drinking and farming.

So, the salt water is the store of water on earth, and Allah made it salty to save it from becoming putrid and to keep it from changing; and He says: ‘And He it is who sends forth the winds as a glad tiding of His coming grace – so that, when they have brought heavy clouds, We may drive them towards dead land and cause thereby water to descend; and by this means do We cause all manner of fruit to come forth. Even thus shall We cause the dead to come forth: [and this] you ought to keep in mind.’ (al-A‘raf: 57)

Another of the sings of the earth is how fresh water runs on a higher level than salty water. If the salty water were higher, it would flow into the fresh water and spoil it and we would not be able to benefit from it. Allah says of this: ‘Between them is a barrier which they may not transgress.’ (ar-Rahman: 20)

One of the wonders of creation of plants is how the best kinds of date palms and fig trees are found on the salty shores, such as in Al-‘Arish and other places. This is an aspect of Allah’s omnipotent power which is not subject to material means, but rather does as it will; for from salt water, we eat the sweetest and most delicious of dates.

And another of the signs of the earth is the mountains: '…Just as in the mountains there are streaks of white and red of various shades, as well as [others] raven-black.' (Fatir: 27) As we said before the mountains are the storehouses of fertility and nourishment, and the storehouses of many treasures such as metals and precious stones.

We explained before that Allah the Almighty dispersed good things and spread them out over the whole earth so that if we consider any particular part of the earth, we will find good things therein equivalent to those of any other part: this one has metals, that one has oil; this one has crops, and so on.

And another of the signs on earth is that a single soil can be watered from a single water source, yet the crops which grow from it have different forms and tastes: 'And there are on earth [many] tracts of land close by one another [and yet widely differing from one another]; and [there are on it] vineyards, and fields of grain, and date-palms growing in clusters from one root or standing alone, [all] watered with the same water: and yet, some of them have We favoured above others by way of the food [which they provide for man and beast]. Verily, in all this there are messages indeed for people who use their reason!' (ar-Ra'd: 4)

Indeed, they use their reason and so understand Allah's power of creation, and that these sings were created by a Wise, All-Sustaining Power. And here, He says: '…signs for those with sure faith…' (adh-Dhariyat: 20). That is, those who are certain of this and believe in it; for the highest level of knowledge is the cosmological sciences which study the cosmos and find, in its signs, proof of Allah's power.

Read, for example: 'Are you not aware that Allah sends down water from the skies whereby We bring forth fruits of many hues – just as in the mountains there are streaks of white and red of various shades, as well as [others] raven-black, [27] and [as] there are in men, and in crawling beasts, and in cattle, too, many hues? Of all His servants, only such as are endowed with [innate] knowledge stand [truly] in awe of Allah… [28]' (Fatir: 27-28).

Notice that Allah does not mention here any ruling of Sacred Law such as fasting, praying, or giving the poor-due. So the meaning of; such as are endowed with knowledge' here is those people who have knowledge of nature and the cosmos, and who study plants, animals, man and minerals, deriving from this power evidence of Allah the Almighty and guiding mankind to faith in The Creator; and this is something which benefits them both in this life and the next.

And the one who reflects on Allah's words: 'On earth there are signs for those with sure faith' (adh-Dhariyat: 20) will understand that if man looks at the universe around him, he will see therein evidence of the existence of Allah the Almighty. Therefore, He trapped the disbelievers when He asked them: 'Now if thou ask those [who worship any being other than Allah] as to who it is that has created them, they are sure to answer "Allah"' (az-Zukhruf: 87). Also His saying: 'And thus it is [with most people]: if you ask them, "Who is it that has created the heavens and the earth?" –they will surely answer, Allah' (az-Zumar: 38).

Indeed, they could not say anything else, for this is as clear and plain as the light of the sun, and no one else has claimed it for himself; and how could anyone claim it, when he was created as a baby without the power to do anything at all? How could he say, 'I created myself', when he was brought into the world just as it is, and how could he claim to have created it?

And His words: 'And in yourselves too, do you not see?' mean that just as in the earth there are cosmological signs which point to Allah's power, there are also signs within your own selves; and if you cannot perceive the signs of the universe around you, then look for them within your own self. And He says '…do you not see?' (adh-Dhariyat: 21) because although the signs of the universe around you might be far from you, your own self is close to you, and therefore it is all the more essential that you behold it and contemplate it.

There are many signs in the human self. Take, for example, how the temperature of the body is 37°C for the one who lives at the frozen North Pole, and also for the one who lives on the equator, and the body parts and limbs only work properly at this temperature, and if it increases, the whole system of the body is thrown out of balance, and malfunctions.

As for within the body, each organ has a temperature which is appropriate for it so that there is not one single temperature for the whole body, as we know, although the overall body temperature is 37°C. The temperature of the eye, for example, goes no higher than 9°C; otherwise the eye would be damaged.

As for the liver, it can only function at 40°C; and it is amazing how this difference can exist inside a single body and within a single skin – glory be to Allah, the best of creators!

Likewise, if you reflect on the blood which flows in the veins, and breathing, and the heart, and the brain, and the bones, everything in your body is a sign, or rather each of them contains many signs such that when you contemplate them, you say: ‘Glory be to The Ingenious Creator! Glory be to Him who possesses omnipotent power!’ So, there is no argument left for the one who does not believe, once he has seen all the signs which exist in his own self and in the world around him.

Allah the Almighty then says:

وَفِى ٱلسَّمَآءِ رِزْقُكُمْ وَمَا تُوعَدُونَ ﴿٢٢﴾

In the sky is your sustenance and all that you are promised [22] (The Quran, adh-Dhariyat: 22)

This rhetorical form is called in Arabic al-qasr ‘restriction’, namely when the preposition and the noun it precedes come before the subject of the sentence. This implies that sustenance is in Heaven alone, not anywhere else; sustenance comes to you from on high, from Allah. The word ‘sustenance’ means everything which gives benefit: money is sustenance, and health is sustenance, and intelligence is sustenance, and security is sustenance.

The meaning of sustenance being in Heaven is that it is a command of destiny which was ordained before time began, and inscribed in the Preserved Tablet. If you understand it to mean the material life which we live, then the heavens are also the source of the water which falls as rain, and is the source of life and nourishment.

‘…And that you are promised’ (adh-Dhariyat: 22) comes from Heaven too, for everything is destined and inscribed in the Preserved Tablet, all things great and small, and all that ever was or will be, as He says: ‘…and not a leaf falls but He knows it; and neither is there a grain in the earth’s deep darkness, nor anything living or dead, but is recorded in [His] clear decree.’ (al-An‘am: 59)

So as long as sustenance has been apportioned by Allah, and as long as everything was predestined before time began, then be well-behaved when you seek it, and do not worry about the issue of sustenance except by going to it and working to get it; for you do not create it, but you only go to it, as He the Almighty says: ‘…go about, then, in all its regions, and partake of the sustenance which He provides…’ (al-Mulk: 15). So travelling and seeking provide the means of the provision which was apportioned to you before time began; and we learned this lesson from Hajar the mother of Ismail (Ishmael) Allah’s peace be upon them when Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon him left her and her child by the Ka‘ba and went away, and she said to him, ‘Did your Lord command you to do this?’ He said yes, so she said: ‘then He will not forsake us.’(1)

She was fully confident that all provision comes from Allah, and her running seven times between Safa and Marwa were only meant to give us a clear example of how we should seek provision; it is as though Allah the Almighty wanted to make her a witness of the truth of this verse. When Hajar had used up all the means at her disposal for seeking sustenance, she returned to her son with complete confidence in what she had said: ‘Allah will not forsake us.’ And then the boy struck the ground with his foot and out burst forth the well of Zamzam.

And after this, Allah made these events one of the rites of the pilgrimage for us, to remind us always of this truth, which is that all sustenance is from Allah, but we are still required to work for it, and to strive to attain it is one of its means. He says:

فَوَرَبِّ ٱلسَّمَآءِ وَٱلْأَرْضِ إِنَّهُۥ لَحَقٌّ مِّثْلَ مَآ أَنَّكُمْ تَنطِقُونَ ﴿٢٣﴾

By the Lord of the heavens and earth!
All this is as real as your speaking [23]
(The Quran, adh-Dhariyat: 23)

The scholar Al-Asma‘i(2) related that he met a Bedouin man one day, who asked him where he was from. He replied, ‘From (the tribe of) Al-Asma‘.’ The Bedouin said, ‘And where have you just come from?’ He said, ‘From the mosque.’ He asked, ‘What were you doing there?’ He replied, ‘Reading Allah’s Quran.’ So, the Bedouin said, ‘Read it to me.’

---

(1) See At-Tabari, Tafsir.

(2) The story of Al-Asma‘i with the Arab Bedouin

So, he recited adh-Dhariyat chapter until he got to the verse ‘In the sky is your sustenance and all that you are promised’ (adh-Dhariyat: 22), whereupon the Bedouin took out his hunting gear and broke it, saying, ‘My sustenance must come from heaven, for Allah does not lie. ’Al-Asma‘i said: ‘So I went on pilgrimage with Harun Ar-Rashid, and there I met that Bedouin man, save that this time he looked very pale and wan. I asked him if he was the man from before, and he asked me if I was Al-Asma‘i. I said: Yes I am – but what has put you in this condition?’ ‘He asked me to recite for him what I had recited before, so I read it to him until I got to the verse: ‘By the Lord of the heavens and earth! All this is as real as your speaking’ (adh-Dhariyat: 23) He was startled, and said: ‘Who incurred the wrath of the Almighty so that He had to swear an oath?’ He continued to repeat this, until after the third time of saying it he passed away.’

I remember once I made the pilgrimage with Sheikh Ahmad Abu Shaqra(1), and we wanted to climb up to the Cave of Hira’. He said to me, ‘We need a guide to show us the way,’ and I said to him, ‘We know the way.’ So, we went, but we found they had altered the road which leads to the Cave, so we got lost. Then my companion went to a secluded place to urinate, and suddenly he called me, ‘Come and see!’ I looked, and an insect had come forth to drink his urine. I said, ‘Glory be to Allah, it is as though we lost the way just so we could give water to this insect.’ And then a man passed us by and saw we had lost the way, and he guided us aright.

Allah the Almighty here swears by His Own Self the Almighty and His lordship over heaven and earth; for rainfalls from the heavens, and the earth receives this rain, and gives forth the plants which form the basis of nourishment and life.

When He says: ‘this is the very truth’, He is referring to what He said before: ‘In the sky is your sustenance and all that you are promised.’ (adh-Dhariyat: 22) These words are true and there is no doubt in them because it was all destined in the Preserved Tablet before time began.

(1) See the story of Sheikh Ash-Sha‘rawi may Allah rest his soul with Sheikh Ahmad Abu Shaqra during the pilgrimage and their climbing to the cave of Hira’.

He then gives us an example to illustrate this, saying: '…as true as that you are endowed with speech' (ar-Rahman: 23). So just as you know that you are capable of speech, and you are certain that this is true, and you have no doubt in it because you experience it yourself, you should equally have no doubt about the matter of your sustenance, and that it is from Allah; trust this report, for The One Who told you of it is truthful.

Allah the Almighty then says:

هَلۡ أَتَىٰكَ حَدِيثُ ضَيۡفِ إِبۡرَٰهِيمَ ٱلۡمُكۡرَمِينَ ﴿٢٤﴾
إِذۡ دَخَلُواْ عَلَيۡهِ فَقَالُواْ سَلَٰمٗاۖ قَالَ سَلَٰمٞ قَوۡمٞ مُّنكَرُونَ ﴿٢٥﴾

[Muhammad], have you heard the story of the honored guests of Abraham? [24] They went in to see him and said, 'Peace.' 'Peace,' he said, [adding to himself] 'These people are strangers' [25]
(The Quran, adh-Dhariyat: 24-25)

Allah tells us here about Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon him. Because this was an important event, He the Almighty begins it with a question: 'Muhammad], have you heard the story of the honored guests of Abraham?' (adh-Dhariyat: 24)

This kind of question is always used with amazing things to which we should pay attention. Allah the Almighty makes us eager to find out what this thing is. Another instance of this can be found when He says: 'O you who have attained to faith! Shall I point out to you a bargain that will save you from grievous suffering [in this world and in the life to come]?' (as-Saff: 10) In this way, He makes us eager to say, 'Yes, Lord, show us!'

Because this story of Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon him is an incredible one, Allah says of it: 'Muhammad], have you heard the story of the honored guests of Ibrahim?' (adh-Dhariyat: 24) And Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon him is the Father of the Prophets, and Allah honoured him by saying of him: 'Verily, Ibrahim was a man who combined within himself all virtues…' (an-Nahl: 120). Literally, 'he was a nation' as he possessed all the virtues which would usually only be found in an entire nation because Allah dispersed the virtues amongst all mankind: you have a certain virtue, someone else has another, and so on.

In this way, mankind compliment and support one another, for otherwise we would not need one another and society would be divided. Therefore, you find that the intelligent person does not despise anyone when he sees that he is better than him in some way because he knows that these virtues are spread out equally amongst mankind so he says to himself: ‘If I am better than him in one way, he must be better than me in another.’

And Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him said: 'Allah has hidden three in three He has hidden His goodly pleasure in His obedience, so do not belittle any act of obedience, no matter how small, for Allah once forgave a man because he gave water to a dog which was so thirsty it was eating moist soil. He has hidden His wrath in His disobedience, so do not belittle any act of disobedience, no matter how small, for Allah once sent a woman to hell for imprisoning a cat, and neither feeding or watering it, nor allowing it to eat the insects on the floor. He has hidden His secrets in His creatures, so do not belittle any human being.'(1)

Companion ‘Ali said: ‘When you see someone lower than you in something, then grieve, for you do not know in what way he is better than you.’ People must be aware of this fact, for they are all equal in front of Allah. Allah was not born and none were born of Him, and His creatures are all equal in His sight, and they only become better than one another by their Allah-consciousness and righteous deeds.

The word ‘story’ means a piece of information which has been passed around, and which contains truth or wisdom so that people pass it around and take interest in it. The word ‘guests’ here is dayf which literally means ‘guest’ in the singular. Although the guests were several angels, Allah did not use the plural here but rather chose to use the singular.

The scholars say this is because the word dayf can actually be used for both singular and plural when it means the person you invite to your house, or who comes to you and becomes your guest; for the host should treat all the guests in the same way and greet them all the same, without honouring one of them more than the others, or paying more attention to one of them than the others.

(1) Something similar was narrated by Al-Bayhaqi as a saying of Dhu An-Nun Al-Misri.

So, it is as though they are all one person with him, none of them is distinguished from the others, either in the place they are seated nor in the attention the host pays to them. Therefore, The Quran refers to them in the singular, as though they were all one man.

And our Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him taught us this lesson, for it is related that he would treat those with whom he sat equally even with regard to how much he looked at them(1) so that each one of them would feel like he was the most honoured guest.

There are many places in The Quran where the singular noun is used to refer to a plurality, and when this happens it means that their intention and aim is united, when they gather together for the sake of Allah's Command, which is always one single command without any disparity; and in this case, the group is like a single individual.

Read, for example, what Allah says about Musa (Moses) and Harun (Aaron) peace be upon them: 'And go, both of you, unto Pharaoh and say, 'Behold, we bear a message from The Lord of all the worlds.' (ash-Shu'ara': 16)

So the word dayf here means 'guests', and the meaning of 'honoured' is someone who is given honour by someone else so that the subject of the verb honours and the object of the verb is honoured; and if they were honoured, then who honoured them? Scholars say that this has two meanings: Allah honoured them, as He the Almighty says: 'And [yet,] some say, "The Most Gracious has taken unto Himself a son"! Limitless is He in His glory! Nay, [those whom they regard as Allah's "offspring" are but His] honoured servants: [26] they speak not until He has spoken unto them, and [whenever they act,] they act at His behest. [27]' (al-Anbiya': 26-27)

Or they were honoured in that Prophet Ibrahim peace be upon him honoured them when he prepared for them food and served them himself instead of having his servants do it, and had his wife help him to serve them even though women are usually secluded; and he also honoured them by greeting them first.

(1) See At-Tabarani, Al-Kabir, no. (17868).

Moreover, he did not simply offer them the food he had at the time, but honoured them by slaughtering a calf which Allah describes in one place as being fat, and in another says that it was roasted; and these descriptions show the perfection of this offering, for the calf was plump and not skinny, and roasting was the best way they had of cooking meat; so, it was plump and well-cooked which is the height of honour for a guest.

When He says, ‘They went in to see him and said, “Peace.” “Peace.” He said, [adding to himself] “These people are strangers”’ (adh-Dhariyat: 25), this means that he did not know who they were – and some say that he said these words to himself, not out loud.

And we may observe that there was a difference between the greeting of the angels and the greeting of our master Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon him for they said salaman, which is ‘peace’ with an accusative grammatical ending, whilst he said salamun, which has a nominative ending. They greeted him first because when you approach someone they might fear you, so they greeted him first to let him know they meant no harm.

Their greeting salaman is in the accusative case indicates that it is the subject of a verb, which we could understand to be ‘We wish you peace’; and the presence of this elided verb in the sentence indicates that an event was about to happen which was the reason why they came.

As for his returned greeting salamun in the nominative, is simply meant ‘Peace be upon you’ which is an Arabic nominal sentence that indicates stability, which would be the future state of Prophet Ibrahim peace be upon him.

Allah the Almighty then says:

فَرَاغَ إِلَىٰٓ أَهۡلِهِۦ فَجَآءَ بِعِجۡلٖ سَمِينٖ ﴿٢٦﴾ فَقَرَّبَهُۥٓ إِلَيۡهِمۡ قَالَ أَلَا تَأۡكُلُونَ ﴿٢٧﴾

He turned quickly to his household, brought out a fat calf [26] and placed it before them. ‘Will you not eat?’ he said [27] (The Quran, adh-Dhariyat: 26 - 27)

The meaning of ‘He turned quietly to his household…’ (adh-Dhariyat: 26) is that he went quietly from the guests to his wife; for usually when a guest comes in, the host gets up to go and bring him things to make him comfortable, and the guest says, ‘No no, sit down.’ So, Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon him slipped away from his guests to bring them food without their noting it, and without their saying to him, ‘Sit down, we do not want anything.’

When he brought them the fat roasted calf, he placed in it front of them for them to eat it, but he saw that they did not reach for the food as most people would do, so he said to them ‘…Will you not eat?’ (adh-Dhariyat: 27) to encourage them to eat, but they did not eat, and did not even stretch out their hands to the food, and so he felt afraid of them.

Allah Glorified is He subsequently says:

فَأَوۡجَسَ مِنۡهُمۡ خِيفَةٗۖ قَالُواْ لَا تَخَفۡۖ وَبَشَّرُوهُ بِغُلَٰمٍ عَلِيمٖ ﴿٢٨﴾
فَأَقۡبَلَتِ ٱمۡرَأَتُهُۥ فِي صَرَّةٖ فَصَكَّتۡ وَجۡهَهَا وَقَالَتۡ عَجُوزٌ عَقِيمٞ ﴿٢٩﴾
قَالُواْ كَذَٰلِكِ قَالَ رَبُّكِۖ إِنَّهُۥ هُوَ ٱلۡحَكِيمُ ٱلۡعَلِيمُ ﴿٣٠﴾

Beginning to be afraid of them, but they said, ‘Do not be afraid.’ They gave him good news of a son who would be gifted with knowledge [28] His wife then entered with a loud cry, struck her face, and said, ‘A barren old woman?’ [29] But they said, ‘It will be so. This is what your Lord said, and He is the Wise, the All Knowing’ [30] (The Quran, adh-Dhariyat: 28 - 30)

When the fear showed on Ibrahim peace be upon him the angels reassured him by saying, ‘Do not be afraid’; and then they gave him glad tidings of a son who would be endowed with deep knowledge – and this meant our master Ishaq (Isaac) peace be upon him; and He described him as being ‘…a son who would be gifted with knowledge’ (adh-Dhariyat: 28) meaning that he would have a great amount of knowledge. But how could this be, when Ibrahim peace be upon him was an elderly man, and his wife Sara was barren?

‘His wife then entered with a loud cry, struck her face…’ (adh-Dhariyat: 29) making a clamour and a noise, ‘and struck her face’ a blow in astonishment at these tidings, ‘…and said, “A barren old woman?”’ (adh-Dhariyat: 29) That is, how could I have a child when I am a barren old woman?

So, she judged the matter according to the standard of human causal means, which said that it was impossible for her to conceive a child but Allah has other standards, and His omnipotent power had something else to say on the subject which is what the angels had come to convey, 'but they said, "It will be so. This is what your Lord said، and He is the Wise, the All Knowing."' (adh-Dhariyat: 30) The words 'This is what your Lord said' mean: As long as He the Almighty has decreed this, it is a certainty in which there can be no doubt because Allah's power is beyond all material means.

The amazement of Sara peace be upon her is expressed when she was given tidings of Ishaq peace be upon him is similar to that which Maryam peace be upon her is expressed when she was given tidings of 'Isa (Jesus) peace be upon him: 'Said she: "O my Lord! How can I have a son when no man has ever touched me?" [The angel] answered: "Thus it is: Allah creates what He wills…"' (Al-'Imran: 47). He says: '…He is the Wise, the All Knowing' (adh-Dhariyat: 30). He is wise in how He puts all things in their proper places, and all knowing in how His knowledge encompasses all things, and He knows that when He commands something, it obeys Him and does not refuse Him.

He the Almighty then says:

قَالَ فَمَا خَطۡبُكُمۡ أَيُّهَا ٱلۡمُرۡسَلُونَ ﴿٣١﴾ قَالُوٓاْ إِنَّآ أُرۡسِلۡنَآ إِلَىٰ قَوۡمٖ مُّجۡرِمِينَ ﴿٣٢﴾
لِنُرۡسِلَ عَلَيۡهِمۡ حِجَارَةٗ مِّن طِينٖ ﴿٣٣﴾ مُّسَوَّمَةً عِندَ رَبِّكَ لِلۡمُسۡرِفِينَ ﴿٣٤﴾

Abraham said, 'What is your errand, messengers?' [31]
They said, 'We are sent to a people lost in sin [32] to bring down rocks of clay [33] marked by your Lord for those who exceed all bounds [34]
(The Quran, adh-Dhariyat: 31 - 34)

'Abraham Said' to those who had come to visit him: '…What is your errand, messengers?' (adh-Dhariyat: 31) Ma khatbukum, that is, what is your affair, and what is your story, and what vital thing is it for which you have come? The word khatb used here for '…What is your errand, messengers?' (adh-Dhariyat: 31) implies that the thing in question is an event of great importance, and he wanted to know what it was, and whether it concerned him or someone else.

This word khatb is also used in this way in the story of our master Joseph Allah's peace be upon him: '[Thereupon the King sent for those women; and when they came,] he asked: 'What was it that you hoped to achieve (ma khatbukunna) when you sought to make Joseph yield himself unto you?...' (Yusuf: 51) That is, what incredible matter was it that made you do such a thing?

And Prophet Musa (Moses) peace be upon him also said it when he saw the two daughters of Shu'aib peace be upon him who had come out to water their livestock: '…He asked [them]: "What is the matter with you (ma khatbukuma)?"' (al-Qasas: 23) That is, what has forced you to go out? It was as though this was an unusual thing. So, this word is used for vitally important things which inspire astonishment and amazement.

The angels replied: '…"We are sent to a people lost in sin…' (Qaf: 32). This reassured Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon him, and he realised that the matter was not directly concerned with him; and the people lost in sin at that time were the people of Lut (Lot). Then they revealed that their mission was: 'to bring down rocks of clay…' (Qaf: 33) The original Arabic here literally says 'Stones of clay' (Hijara min tin), and it is clear that stone is different from clay; stone possesses a hardness and firmness which differs according to the type of stone, starting with marble then granite, then limestone. So how could stones be made of clay when these two words describe completely different things? The scholars say that it means clay which has been baked in fire so that it has become hard and firm, as is done in the pottery craft.

The meaning of '…marked by your Lord for those who exceed all bounds.' (Qaf: 34) is that each stone bears the name and address of the one for whom it is intended, and is specially meant for him and no other, and it is directed at him and will not miss.

The words 'marked by your lord' indicate that these stones were sent down from Heaven, and were not made from the stone of the earth, and that they were marked by Allah and then came forth ready to be used; and the role of the angels was to cast them at those whose names were written upon them so that no stone was confused with any other.

The meaning of '…for those who exceed all bounds' (Qaf: 34) is those who go beyond the bounds in their sin; it is as though all things have boundaries, and the lawful and unlawful have boundaries, which Allah the Almighty has made clear to us and taught us how to keep within them. He said about the lawful: '…These are the bounds set by Allah; do not, then, transgress them…' (al-Baqara: 229).

Whilst about the unlawful, He said: '…These are the bounds set by Allah: do not, then, offend against them…' (al-Baqara: 187). [Literally, 'Do not go near them'] that is, stay within the bounds of the lawful and do not cross them for anything else; as for the unlawful, do not even go near it, and beware of even approaching it because if you approach it you might fall into it – so this is a protection for you.

Likewise, Allah said to Adam peace be upon him: '…but do not approach this one tree…' (al-Baqara: 35); and He said: 'And do not commit adultery…' (al-Isra': 32) [Literally meaning, 'Do not approach adultery']. So where forbidden things are concerned, He does not only forbid us from the action, but also forbids us from even approaching the means which lead to it.

So, in what way did those people who wasted their own selves transgress? They transgressed by committing an unlawful deed which contradicts the pure natural way which Allah created. When Allah wanted to place His vicegerent on earth, He created Adam peace be upon him and created with him his spouse so that there would be procreation, and the tribes would come forth to populate the earth, for it could not be populated by one or two people, but a great number of people were required.

He then also made procreation for all the other things He wanted to grow and continue to serve this vicegerent: 'And in everything have We created opposites…' (adh-Dhariyat: 49).

If man was to procreate, then the part of earth upon which he lived would also procreate, and the plants upon which he lived would also have to multiply. Allah said: '…And out of the two spread abroad a multitude of men and women…' (an-Nisa': 1). So we needed crops which suited this multiplication.

The one who reflects on the matter of procreation in these plants and in man, will find that it is commensurate with the importance of the thing and the degree to which it can be benefitted from. For example, when you plant radishes you can eat them after ten days, and cucumbers after forty days, and dates after four years.

So, before anything gives to you, it takes from you according to how important it is. If you want to produce a human being, this certainly will require a great deal of effort and exertion. Because of this, The Creator the Almighty linked procreation to a great pleasure superior to all other pleasures which a person feels in every part of his body, and which is superior to the pleasure of the eye when it sees, the nose when it smells, the tongue when it tastes, the nose when it smells, and the hand when it touches; for each part of the body has its purpose and its domain, whilst sexual pleasure involves every part of the body. Had The Creator the Almighty not linked procreation with this pleasure, no one would ever do it or assent to bear its difficulties.

You can compare the difference between the raising of a child and the raising of a lamb or a calf, for example: the lamb can stand and walk behind its mother only a few minutes after it is born, whilst the baby only walks after a year and a half.

Thus, we see that the childhood of a human being is longer than the childhood of any other creature. This is why The Creator the Almighty linked human procreation with this great pleasure which a person cannot resist, in order to encourage procreation; for otherwise, no one would be prepared to bear this responsibility and this difficulty.

Islam is also concerned with the makeup of the family, and has set regulations for it which ensure success for us; for this instinct cannot simply be discharged in any way as is the case with animals, but rather, Islam has set for it rules for the choosing of a good spouse, encouraging us to choose a religious person for our spouse. It has made a period of engagement so that each party can get to know the other. It allowed each of them to look at the other so that each can choose the spouse who is right for them, and satisfy their tastes and preferences for the other sex. It legislated the dowry and the marriage contract. All of this is so that the family is made strong and firm, prepared to deal with life and all of its difficulties and responsibilities.

The crime which these people committed and for which they deserved all the punishments which befell them was that they diverted this instinct which

Allah placed in man, from its proper lawful course and directed it towards another, unlawful, end which had no benefit or positive result, and which contradicted sound natural disposition and upright tastes. They preferred to have relations with men instead of women, as Allah allowed; and it is obvious that the only place where sexual relations should occur is the place where a seed may be planted and grow: '…Go, then, unto your tilth as you may desire…' (al-Baqara: 223).

So, by this act of theirs, they squandered their own souls, and went beyond the bounds which Allah established; and to engage in sexual relations in the wrong place is forbidden in the case of men and in the case of women as well, and it is all forbidden.

Since this action is tantamount to fornication, it deserved the punishment of stoning. Allah stoned them, not with the stones of this earth, but with stones from Heaven which fell upon each one of them by name, singling him out so that not one single one of them remained, and thus they were wiped from the face of the earth.

Allah the Almighty then says:

فَأَخۡرَجۡنَا مَن كَانَ فِيهَا مِنَ ٱلۡمُؤۡمِنِينَ ﴿٣٥﴾ فَمَا وَجَدۡنَا فِيهَا غَيۡرَ بَيۡتٖ مِّنَ ٱلۡمُسۡلِمِينَ ﴿٣٦﴾
وَتَرَكۡنَا فِيهَآ ءَايَةٗ لِّلَّذِينَ يَخَافُونَ ٱلۡعَذَابَ ٱلۡأَلِيمَ ﴿٣٧﴾

We brought out such believers as were there [35] We found only one household devoted to God [36] and left the town to be a sign for those who fear the painful punishment [37] (The Quran, adh-Dhariyat: 35 - 37)

That is, before the torment was unleashed upon them, We took all of the believers out of the town; this does not mean that He told them to get out, but rather, He facilitated their exit by casting thoughts into their minds, so they left and were untouched by the chastisement. 'We found only one household…' (adh-Dhariyat: 36), i.e. in the town, '…only one household devoted to Allah' (Qaf: 36). So He spoke first about the believers, and then about those who surrendered themselves to Him, and it is iman (clear that belief) is broader than Islam (surrender), for belief is a matter of doctrine, whilst surrender is a matter of behaviour; thus, every believer surrenders, but not everyone who surrenders believes.

Belief and surrender meet in that you only surrender yourself to the command of one in whose wisdom you believe; as for if the believer acts hypocritically or ostentatiously, this is another matter. Therefore Allah says: ‘The Bedouin say, “We have attained to faith…”’, so He replied to them: ‘Say [unto them, O Muhammad]: “You have not [yet] attained to faith”; you should [rather] say, “We have [outwardly] surrendered” – for [true] faith has not yet entered your hearts…' (al-Hujurat: 14)

So here He spoke of those who were rescued as being both believers and people who surrendered to Allah; and elsewhere, He the Almighty said: ‘…all but your wife: she will indeed be among those that stay behind.’ (al-’Ankabut: 33) For true kinship is not that of blood and lineage, but rather, it is the kinship of the call and the kinship of following, as The Prophet Muhammad said: 'Salman is one of us, from our own family.'(1)

When Nuh (Noah) peace be upon him said to his Lord, ‘O my Lord! Verily, my son was of my family…’ (Hud: 45), He replied to him: ‘…he was not of thy family, for, verily, he was unrighteous in his conduct…’ (Hud: 46).

Allah says here: ‘…and left the town to be a sign for those who fear the painful punishment.’ (Qaf: 37) That is, in the town and the place where this event occurred. They say that the sign which remained after their destruction is that the stones with which Allah destroyed them still exist, and those who see them say, ‘These are not the stones of this earth’; for they are another kind of stone which Allah sent to fall upon those sinners and destroy them. In this way, this sign remains to warn all those who think of doing what they did. Others say that the sign Allah left to bear witness to them was a stream with a disgusting smell which no one can bear.

Allah then says:

وَفِي مُوسَىٰٓ إِذۡ أَرۡسَلۡنَٰهُ إِلَىٰ فِرۡعَوۡنَ بِسُلۡطَٰنٖ مُّبِينٖ ﴿٣٨﴾ فَتَوَلَّىٰ بِرُكۡنِهِۦ وَقَالَ
سَٰحِرٌ أَوۡ مَجۡنُونٞ ﴿٣٩﴾ فَأَخَذۡنَٰهُ وَجُنُودَهُۥ فَنَبَذۡنَٰهُمۡ فِي ٱلۡيَمِّ وَهُوَ مُلِيمٞ ﴿٤٠﴾

There is another sign in Moses: We sent him to Pharaoh with clear authority [38] Pharaoh turned away with his supporters, saying, ‘This is a sorcerer, or maybe a madman’ [39] so we seized him and his forces and threw them into the sea: he was to blame [40]
(The Quran, adh-Dhariyat: 38 - 40)

After narrating part of the story of Prophet Ibrahim (Abraham), the verses tell us the story of Prophet Musa (Moses) peace be upon them as the Quran frequently mentions Prophet Ibrahim (Abraham) and Prophet Musa (Moses) in the same context because of the similarities that exist between their divine missions.

Allah says: ‘Indeed, this is in the former scriptures. The scriptures of Abraham and Moses’ (al-A‘la: 18-19), He also says: ‘Or has he not been informed of what was in the scriptures of Moses. And [of] Abraham, who fulfilled [his obligations].’ (an-Najm: 36-37)

The Quran links between them because Prophet Ibrahim (Abraham) was the first man who encountered, in the course of his call, a man who argued with him about his Lord. It appears that he claimed divinity for himself, as he said, ‘…I give life and cause death…’ (al-Baqara: 258).

There were many occasions when Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon him showed Allah’s signs to the people, as he was the first one to teach them to behold the signs of the cosmos. He had experiences with the idol-worshippers, particularly with his father Azar. Then, the Quran narrates that he was cast into fire, and then he was granted a son and was tested with the command to sacrifice him. The Quran also mentions the story of the building of the Ka’ba until the end of his story.

Therefore, Allah says about him: ‘and [mention, O Muhammad], when Ibrahim was tried by his Lord with commands and he fulfilled them…’ (al-Baqara: 124). This means that he fulfilled them completely and in an outstanding manner. Therefore, his Lord praised him saying: ‘Indeed, Ibrahim was a [comprehensive] leader, devoutly obedient to Allah, inclining toward truth, and he was not of those who associate others with Allah.' (an-Nahl: 120) This means that he combined all the good attributes which can only be found in an entire nation.

Likewise, Prophet Musa (Moses) underwent similar experiences and trials in the course of the call he made to Pharaoh, who claimed divinity for himself saying to his people: '…I have not known you to have a god other than me...' (al-Qasas: 38).

In Allah's saying: 'And there is another sign in Moses…' (adh-Dhariyat: 38), the word 'and' here implies that Musa (Moses) is one of Allah's signs since this sign is joined to Allah's previous saying: 'On earth there are signs for those with sure faith.' (adh-Dhariyat: 20) Likewise, there are signs to be found in the story of Prophet Musa (Moses): '…We sent him to Pharaoh with clear authority.' (adh-Dhariyat: 38) It means he was sent with a clear and plain proof.

As we explained before, authority may be based on power and compulsion which forces the other person to yield or may be based on arguments which convince him. The authority of compulsion compels a person physically, whilst the authority of argument convinces the mind and attracts the heart. Prophet Musa (Moses) peace be upon him had only the authority of argument, as he had no power to compel Pharaoh. Allah gave him a clear authority to convince Pharaoh, namely the miracles and signs which accompanied his Da'wah (calling to Allah).

A miracle becomes effective with people if it is based on something in which they excel; if it challenges them with something they do not know, the challenge will be meaningless. Therefore, the miracle of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him was the Quran, as the Arabs excelled in rhetoric and eloquence, so it challenged them with that which they excelled in. As for the people of Pharaoh, they excelled in sorcery, but they were forced to do sorcery, as this is proved by the fact that when Pharaoh called for all the sorcerers in the country to use their sorcery against Musa (Moses) peace be upon him they said: '…Is there indeed for us a reward if we are the predominant?' (ash-Shu'ara': 41) This is because they were forced to do the other types of work without receiving any remuneration such as the building of the pyramids.

The basis of the call of Prophet Musa (Moses) peace be upon him was that he came to call Pharaoh to Allah in order to save the children of Israel from his tyranny. However, he called Pharaoh to Allah was secondary to his main Da'wah (calling to Allah), which is proved by how he said: '…so send with us the Children of Israel and do not torment them…' (Ta Ha: 47).

Before Prophet Musa (Moses) could call the children of Israel to Allah, he had to rid them of Pharaoh and his clutches. It is well known that Pharaoh persecuted the children of Israel because they helped and cooperated with the Hyksos against Pharaoh when they invaded Egypt until Hyksos triumphed, abolished the Pharaonic dynasty, and replaced it with kingship.

This is how we know that the Hyksos entered Egypt at the time of Prophet Yusuf (Joseph) peace be upon him because when the Quran mentions Egypt, it speaks of Pharaoh, but when it tells the story of Prophet Yusuf (Joseph) it speaks of the King: 'And the King said…' (Yusuf: 50) and does not use the word 'Pharaoh.'

When Allah willed to free the children of Israel from the clutches of Pharaoh, He sent Prophet Musa (Moses) with this task. Allah Glorified is He says: 'Pharaoh turned away with his supporters, saying, "This is a sorcerer, or maybe a madman."' (adh-Dhariyat: 39) Pharaoh turned away from Musa (Moses) peace be upon him and his Da'wah because of his power, authority, tyranny and his oppression over the land.

When you turn away from anyone, you turn your side to him, then your back after you facing him. The Noble Quran depicts this when it says: '…And those who hoard gold and silver and spend it not in the way of Allah - give them tidings of a painful punishment. The Day when it will be heated in the fire of hell and seared therewith will be their foreheads, their flanks, and their backs.' (at-Tawba: 34-35)

This was the order in which they turned away from those who seek something, for they turned away first with their faces, then their sides, then their backs. The torment that people will face on the Day of Resurrection will be a fair requital according to how they acted while refusing to do good deeds.

Pharaoh said: ‘… “This is a sorcerer or maybe a madman”’ (adh-Dhariyat: 39). Reflect on the contradictions in this accusation; the sorcerer has the ability to arrange things, and is intelligent enough to make people imagine seeing things in a manner that differs from what they really are. However, the madman is completely different because he cannot arrange things and does not even have the power to control his own will and actions. This indicates the confusion caused by falsehood.

Then, Allah punished Pharaoh: ‘So We seized him and his forces and threw them into the sea: he was to blame.’ (adh-Dhariyat: 40) Allah seized them by casting into their hearts the desire to pursue Prophet Musa (Moses) peace be upon him so they followed him and plunged into the sea after him. Then, Allah unleashed the waters and drowned them, after saving Prophet Musa (Moses) and the children of Israel. ‘…and threw them into the sea.’ (adh-Dhariyat: 40) Allah threw Pharaoh and his followers into the sea; ‘…he was to blame.’ (adh-Dhariyat: 42) This is because of his arrogance, tyranny, and claims of divinity. The verse also means that Allah did not destroy him and his forces out of tyranny or injustice, but because they deserved to be punished.

وَفِي عَادٍ إِذْ أَرْسَلْنَا عَلَيْهِمُ ٱلرِّيحَ ٱلْعَقِيمَ ﴿٤١﴾
مَا تَذَرُ مِن شَيْءٍ أَتَتْ عَلَيْهِ إِلَّا جَعَلَتْهُ كَٱلرَّمِيمِ ﴿٤٢﴾

There is another sign in the 'Ad: We sent the life-destroying wind against them [41] And it reduced everything it came up against to shreds [42]
(The Quran, adh-Dhariyat: 41- 42)

The word ‘And’ is used in ‘And there is another sign in the ‘Ad…’ (adh-Dhariyat: 41) which is joined with the verse: ‘On earth there are signs for those with sure faith’ (adh-Dhariyat: 20) and the verse: ‘There is another sign in Musa…’ (adh-Dhariyat: 38). The verse under discussion means that there is another sign in ‘Ad. This implies that the Quran was consoling Messenger Muhammad and asking him not to grieve because of his people’s obstinacy and refusal of his Da’wah (calling to Allah), as the best outcome will be for him. They will have the fate of the other people who belied their messengers, and he could derive lessons from their stories.

Allah says: ‘There is another sign in the 'Ad…’ (adh-Dhariyat: 41) mentioning the tribe and not the prophet, but in another verse, He says: ‘And to ‘Ad (We sent) their brother Hud…’ (al-A‘raf: 65). In the verse under discussion, Allah mentions the name of the tribe only because He states their bad end because they belied their prophet.

‘Ad lived at the site of the sand dunes of Ahqaf. Allah says about them: ‘“Have you not considered how your Lord dealt with 'Ad, with Iram, possessors of lofty buildings, the like of which were not created in the (other) cities.’ (al-Fajr: 6-8) Then, Allah says: ‘…And [with] Pharaoh, owner of the stakes.’ (al-Fajr: 10)

This implies that the civilisation of ‘Ad was even greater than that of the Pharaohs, but it is now buried beneath the earth, for Allah destroyed them with a wind which buried them under the sand. This is not astonishing because they lived in a sandy area; when a violent storm blows up, and it can bury a whole caravan, so it disappears into the sand. Therefore, we can find remnants of these people by excavation.(1)

The meaning of ‘ar-rih al-‘aqim’ is a life-destroying wind; for the wind may blow softly and gently, then it is called a breeze, and it may blow fiercely and destructively, in which case then it is called a hurricane. It is one of Allah’s signs, which can be a blessing or a curse.

Wind consists of the same air that you breathe, and which is the most important constituent of life, as if a person is prevented from breathing, he will die. In addition, air is one of the basic components of water, and it makes the movement of clouds and rainfall. It also maintains the lives of animals and plants, and facilitates the pollination of fruits and crops.

We said previously that the Arabic word rih refers to evil and destructive wind, while the plural form of the word riyah refers to the wind which brings goodness. Allah says: (ar-rih al-‘aqim) which means life-destroying wind, and He also says (ar-riyah lawaqih) the fertilizing winds. In the verse under discussion, the wind is described as ’aqim (literally means barren), as it does not bring about any benefit, goodness, rain or pollen, but it only brings about evil and destruction.

(1) By use of radar and satellite technology, NASA discovered evidence of buried buildings in the desert of the Empty Quarter, including a fortress with huge pillars 9 meters high and 3 meters thick: ‘With Iram, possessors of lofty buildings, the like of which were not created in the (other) cities.’ (al-Fajr: 6-8) (Time Magazine, Feb 17 1992)

Allah says: ‘It left nothing of what it came upon but that it made it like disintegrated ruins.’ (adh-Dhariyat: 42) The word tadhar which is mentioned in the Arabic text of the verse means ‘left nothing’ like the Arabic verb tada’. Both of them are in the present tense and have no past form except in the form mentioned as follows: ‘By the morning brightness. And [by] the night when it covers with darkness, Your Lord has not taken leave of you, [O Muhammad], nor has He detested [you].’ (ad-Duha: 1-3) The word wadda’aka (has not taken leave of you) the word kar-rameem means that that the wind leaves everything like disintegrated ruins.

وَفِي ثَمُودَ إِذۡ قِيلَ لَهُمۡ تَمَتَّعُواْ حَتَّىٰ حِينٖ ﴿٤٣﴾ فَعَتَوۡاْ عَنۡ أَمۡرِ رَبِّهِمۡ فَأَخَذَتۡهُمُ ٱلصَّٰعِقَةُ
وَهُمۡ يَنظُرُونَ ﴿٤٤﴾ فَمَا ٱسۡتَطَٰعُواْ مِن قِيَامٖ وَمَا كَانُواْ مُنتَصِرِينَ ﴿٤٥﴾

And also in the Thamud: it was said to them, ‘Make the most of your lives for a while’ [43] but they rebelled against their Lord’s command, so the blast took them. They looked on helplessly [44] they could not even remain standing, let alone defend themselves [45]
(The Quran, adh-Dhariyat: 43 - 45)

There is also another sign in the story of Thamud, who are the people of Prophet Saleh Allah tells Messenger Muhammad to remember when ‘…it was said to them, “Make the most of your lives for a while.”’ (adh-Dhariyat: 43) This verse includes a threat and warning to them after what they did to Prophet Saleh (Shelah). Allah tells them to make most of their lives for a while, then the punishment will befall them, and Allah will overtake them after the manner of a Mighty, Powerful One.

Despite this threat and warning, they persisted in their stubbornness. ‘…but they rebelled against their Lord’s command…’ (adh-Dhariyat: 44). The threat did not have any effect on them. Allah says: ‘…but they rebelled against their Lord’s command…’ (adh-Dhariyat: 44). They disobeyed their Lord and deviated from His command.

The verb ’ata can be followed by the preposition ’ala, as in ashad ‘ala Allah ‘itiyya ‘…who were worst against the Most Merciful in insolence.’ (Maryam: 69) It is followed by the preposition ‘an as in the case ‘fa’ataw ‘an amr rabbihim’ ‘…but they rebelled against their Lord’s command…’ (adh-Dhariyat: 44). The word ‘blast’ means noise which accompanies either lightning or a destructive wind. ‘They could not even remain standing…’ (adh-Dhariyat: 45) because of the terror which overcame them and frightened them so much that they could not even stand or flee. ‘…let alone defend themselves.’ (adh-Dhariyat: 45) They could not help or defend themselves and no one defended themselves.

وَقَوْمَ نُوحٍ مِّن قَبْلُ إِنَّهُمْ كَانُوا۟ قَوْمًا فَٰسِقِينَ ﴿٤٦﴾

Before that We destroyed the people of Noah.
They were a truly sinful people! [46]
(The Quran, adh-Dhariyat: 46)

The people of Nuh (Noah) were also a sign and a cause for reflection before Pharaoh, ‘Ad and Thamud. ‘…They were a truly sinful people!’ (adh-Dhariyat: 46) They disobeyed Allah and belied Prophet Nuh (Noah).

Their story is mentioned in the Quran in detail. Although Nuh (Noah) spent nine hundred and fifty years preaching his people and calling them to Allah, only a few of them believed. They put their fingers in their ears, covered themselves with their garments, persisted, and were extremely arrogant, until Nuh (Noah) despaired of them and invoked Allah against them: ‘…And Nuh said, “My Lord, do not leave upon the earth from among the disbelievers an inhabitant. Indeed, if You leave them, they will mislead Your servants and not beget except [every] wicked one and [confirmed] disbeliever.”’ (Nuh: 26-27)

In the following verse, Allah summarises their status, saying: ‘…They were a truly sinful people!’ (adh-Dhariyat: 46) They were rebels and disobedient to Allah. from the Arabic verb fasaqa means ‘breaks away from’. The phrase fasaqat ar-ratibah ‘an qishratha means: the date breaks away from its peel.

Fresh dates are soft and full of water, so Allah provided Maryam (Mary) with them, as He says: ‘And shake toward you the trunk of the palm tree; it will drop upon you ripe, fresh dates. So eat, drink, and be contented.’ (Maryam: 25-26) Thus, the fresh dates served as food and drink at the same time.

In the verse under discussion, there is a metaphor which depicts Allah’s Shar’ (Law) as the peel which covers the fruit; the Shar’ (Law) protects the believer just as the peel protects the fruit. Thus, beware of breaking away from the Shar’ (Law) which protects shields and adorns you.

وَٱلسَّمَآءَ بَنَيۡنَٰهَا بِأَيۡيْدٖ وَإِنَّا لَمُوسِعُونَ ﴿٤٧﴾ وَٱلۡأَرۡضَ فَرَشۡنَٰهَا فَنِعۡمَ ٱلۡمَٰهِدُونَ ﴿٤٨﴾
وَمِن كُلِّ شَيۡءٍ خَلَقۡنَا زَوۡجَيۡنِ لَعَلَّكُمۡ تَذَكَّرُونَ ﴿٤٩﴾

We built the heavens with Our power and made them vast [47] We spread out the earth – how well We smoothed it out! [48] – and We created pairs of all things so that you [people] might take note [49] (The Quran, adh-Dhariyat: 47 - 49)

Allah built the *sama’ (*literally means everything which is above us) with power, and wisdom. The act of building requires skill. Then He says: ‘We spread out the earth…’ (adh-Dhariyat: 48). It means that the earth is extended and spread out.

The heavens have the attribute of stability, so Allah says: ‘We built the heavens…’ (adh-Dhariyat: 47). The earth is changeable, as highlands may become depressions, and its undulations always undergo change, so He says: ‘We spread out the earth.’ (adh-Dhariyat: 48) Allah prepared it in a manner that becomes comfortable to its inhabitants, just as we prepare a bed for a baby so that it has no wrinkle. How ‘…well We smoothed it out!’ (adh-Dhariyat: 48) The word al-mahidun (smoothed it out) which is used in the Arabic text of the verse, is derived from the word mahd (comfortable bed). Just as we always clean and we always change the baby’s mattress from time to time, the earth is in constant change.

Allah Glorified is He says: ‘And We created pairs of all things so that you [people] might take note.’ (adh-Dhariyat: 49) In another verse, He says:

'Exalted is He who created all pairs - from what the earth grows and from themselves and from that which they do not know.' (Ya Sin: 36) The words: '…and from that which they do not know' (Ya Sin: 36) encourage us to look for pairs which are not known.

With the progress of science, we have found pairs in the atom, and we have found that rain does not fall unless atomic conjugation takes place. In addition, we have found that electric currents as well as inanimate objects contain opposite pairs. Many scientists continue to research this matter although people's minds could not imagine or understand them in the past, as the Arab community to which the Quran was first revealed was an illiterate community, bereft of culture. If these things had been revealed to them, they might have been disturbed and abandoned the Da'wah (calling to Allah).

Allah the Glorified and Exalted gave them a concise glimpse of these things by saying: 'We will show them Our signs in the horizons and within themselves until it becomes clear to them that it is the truth…' (Fussilat: 53) so that there will always be a room for all future developments and new discoveries.

The letter 'sin' in the word sanurihim, which is mentioned in the Arabic text of the verse indicates the future, and the word nurihim (We will show them) is in the present tense which implies continuation, as these discoveries will continue until the Day of Resurrection.

As reproduction takes place by the mating of male and female, Allah the Glorified and Exalted has the power to create human beings in a manner that differs from this rule. Allah does not abide by these rules; He creates whatever He wishes, as He can create from two parents, from one single parent, and without any parents.

This means that Allah's Omnipotence covered all the possibilities of this matter. In addition, He says: '…and He renders whom He wills barren…' (ash-Shura: 50). Some people may marry, but they do not beget any children.

As the whole matter of pairs is amazing, Allah introduces it by saying: 'Exalted is He who created all pairs…' (Ya Sin: 36). It is Allah's Omnipotence that creates these pairs, and He is too exalted and beyond compare with anything else.

فَفِرُّوٓاْ إِلَى ٱللَّهِۖ إِنِّي لَكُم مِّنۡهُ نَذِيرٞ مُّبِينٞ ﴿٥٠﴾ وَلَا تَجۡعَلُواْ
مَعَ ٱللَّهِ إِلَٰهًا ءَاخَرَۖ إِنِّي لَكُم مِّنۡهُ نَذِيرٞ مُّبِينٞ ﴿٥١﴾

[So, say to them, Prophet], 'Quickly, turn to God
– I am sent by Him to give you clear warning [50]
and do not set up any other god alongside Him.
I am sent by Him to give you clear warning! [51]
(The Quran, adh-Dhariyat: 50 - 51)

This is a command to flee, which implies that there is a source of fear from which you want to escape, and you want to resort to someone who can keep you safe. This action involves three things: the one who flees, the thing from which he flees, and the thing to which he flees.

In this verse, Allah addresses His servants, saying: 'Flee to Allah…' (adh-Dhariyat: 50). From what should they flee? In case of fleeing to Allah, people must flee from all that which contradicts Allah's Law, from Iblis (Satan) who opposes Allah's Commandments, from their vain desires, illegal passion, caprice and from suffering to endless bliss.

Thus, the word 'flee' implies moving from something frightening to something safe; and you will never find a refuge safer for you than your Creator Who will provide you with security, peace, happiness, and bliss. He imposes punishment for violations of His Law, so that you return and flee to Him. He cares about you because you are His servants whom He has created, and every artisan is concerned with the safety of his products and keen to protect them from damages.

We must learn this lesson from our Lord the Glorified and Exalted and try to perfect our work, as Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him taught us: 'Allah loves that when any of you does any work, he does it perfectly.'(1) Doing one's work perfectly increases the spirit of faith and belief in the world. It suffices that your good work impresses everyone who sees it, causing him to remember Allah. Not only man remembers Allah, but also the whole universe does.

(1) Related by At-Tabarani in Al-Awsat (909) and Al-Bayhaqi in Shu'ab Al-Iman (5080), on the authority of 'A'isha Allah be pleased with her

Allah’s saying: ‘Flee to Allah…’ (adh-Dhariyat: 50) means clinging to His Rope, following His guidance, drawing close to Him and adhering to His Law. Country people say: ‘Cling to your Lord and go wherever you like.’ As long as you are on Allah’s side, nothing will harm you. Truthful is the one who said:

My Lord, Your love is mixed with my blood and my being,
Like a blazing light which melts in my soul?
I will not be wronged as long as you protect me,
I fear not as long as your good Pleasure makes me safe.

‘…I am sent by Him to give you clear warning!’ (adh-Dhariyat: 50) In this verse, Messenger Muhammad addresses people telling them that he gives them warning from Allah. Allah mentions: ‘give you clear warning!’ (adh-Dhariyat: 50) because warning encourage fleeing so that you flee from the source of threat to the source of protection. The word ‘clear’ indicates that this warning is clear and his arguments are manifest. ‘And do not set up any other god alongside Him. I am sent by Him to give you clear warning.’ (adh-Dhariyat: 51) The verse instructs us not to set up any other deity and obey its commands instead of Allah. It is obvious that those who worship idols or anything else besides Allah do so because these idols do not really enjoin any commandments or responsibilities or give any guidance. Therefore, their worship is false and useless.

Allah is the Deity who deserves to be worshipped and obeyed in all His commandments and prohibitions. The prohibition mentioned in Allah’s saying: ‘Do not set up any other god alongside Him…’ (adh-Dhariyat: 51) is linked to His command ‘…Flee to Allah…’ (adh-Dhariyat: 50). There is no deity and no refuge for you but Him.

This is the true religion accepted by man’s sound natural disposition when the souls were created but the bodies were not created yet. Allah made us testify: ‘…Am I not your Lord?...’ (al-A‘raf: 172)

Some people have deviated from this covenant because of heedlessness, Satan’s insinuations, and the soul’s caprice and vain desires. The disbelievers worshipped idols only to satisfy their natural inclination towards religion and to relieve themselves of any hardship, as the idols enjoin neither commandments nor prohibitions.

Before performing any action, the intelligent person should think of its consequences and requital. When he is about to sin, he should imagine the punishment which awaits him; when he is too lazy to perform a good deed, he should imagine the reward prepared for him. If people consider the consequences of any action, they will flee from sin to righteousness.

كَذَٰلِكَ مَآ أَتَى ٱلَّذِينَ مِن قَبۡلِهِم مِّن رَّسُولٍ إِلَّا قَالُواْ سَاحِرٌ أَوۡ مَجۡنُونٌ ﴿٥٢﴾
أَتَوَاصَوۡاْ بِهِۦۚ بَلۡ هُمۡ قَوۡمٞ طَاغُونَ ﴿٥٣﴾

Every previous people to whom a messenger was sent also said, 'A sorcerer, or maybe a madman!' [52] Did they tell one another to do this? No! They are a people who exceed all bounds [53] (The Quran, adh-Dhariyat: 52 - 53)

The word 'kadhalik' which is mentioned in the Arabic text of the verse refers to the punishments which befell the previous people, such as the blast, and life-destroying winds, as they wait for these people too. They are not so far away from punishment. Allah tells Messenger Muhammad not to grieve, as he is not the first messenger who was belied by his people: 'Every previous people to whom a messenger was sent also said, 'A sorcerer, or maybe a madman!' (adh-Dhariyat: 52)

Allah instructs Messenger Muhammad to show patience because other Messengers were accused by their people of sorcery and madness: '…So be patient, [O Muhammad]; indeed, the promise of Allah is truth. And whether We show you some of what We have promised them or We take you in death, it is to Us they will be returned.' (Ghafir: 77) If torment does not befall them in this worldly life, it awaits them in the Hereafter.

Allah was merciful to those who belied Messenger Muhammad - despite their disbelief and stubbornness - because His Messenger peace and blessings of Allah be upon him was amongst them. This is the meaning which the following verse refers to: 'But Allah would not punish them while you, [O Muhammad], are among them, and Allah would not punish them while they seek forgiveness...' (al-Anfal: 33). Messenger Muhammad was strongly concerned with guiding his people, no matter what they did, and he always called upon his Lord, saying, 'My community, my community!'(1)

We explained previously the falsehood of these accusations as Prophet Muhammad was never a sorcerer or a madman, as he was an example of good conduct, and they never saw on him any sign of sorcery or madness.

If he had been a sorcerer, he would have bewitched all the disbelievers in order for them to believe him. If he had been a madman, he would not have been able to arrange things in this way and would not have conveyed his Lord's Message to you. Moreover, the accusation of sorcery negates the accusation of madness, and they cannot be combined with each other.

Therefore, He says after this: 'Did they tell one another to do this?...' (adh-Dhariyat: 53) It seems that those people who belied Allah's messengers over the ages told one another or agreed to accuse their messengers of sorcery. This implies insistence on belying all the messengers and persistence in stubbornness.

Therefore, Allah disregards them and refutes their accusations, saying: '…No! They are a people who exceed all bounds.' (adh-Dhariyat: 53) Allah instructs Messenger Muhammad to forget about these people, as they exceeded all bounds.

فَتَوَلَّ عَنْهُمْ فَمَآ أَنتَ بِمَلُومٍ ﴿٥٤﴾ وَذَكِّرْ فَإِنَّ ٱلذِّكْرَىٰ تَنفَعُ ٱلْمُؤْمِنِينَ ﴿٥٥﴾

So ignore them [Prophet] – you are not to blame [54] and go on reminding [people], it is good for those who believe to be reminded [55]
(The Quran, adh-Dhariyat: 54 - 55)

Allah instructs Messenger Muhammad to turn away from these people and to forget about them, for he is not required to force them to believe; he only has to deliver the message to them. Allah Glorified is He addresses Prophet Muhammad with words which convey this same meaning: 'Then perhaps you would kill yourself through grief over them, [O Muhammad], if they do not believe in this message, [and] out of sorrow.' (ash-Shu'ara': 3)

---

(1) Related by Muslim (301), An-Nasa'i (11268) and At-Tabarani (1515) on the authority of 'Amr ibn Al'As Allah be pleased with him

Allah tells Messenger Muhammad not to destroy himself through grief over them and out of eagerness to guide them, as his mission is to deliver the message, Allah is the One Who guides people: 'If We willed, We could send down to them from the sky a sign for which their necks would remain humbled.' (ash-Shu'ara': 4) This means if Allah willed, He would force all people to have faith in the manner the heavens and the earth are compelled to believe in Allah. However, Allah wants people's hearts to believe in Him, not only apparently.

He says, '…you are not to blame.' (adh-Dhariyat: 54) This means that if people persisted in their disbelief; Messenger Muhammad is not to blame. When Allah blames him for something, it was for his own sake and out of mercy for him, such as when Allah blamed him for what happened with the blind man, ʿAbdullah ibn Um Maktum, concerning which Allah says: 'The Prophet frowned and turned away. Because there came to him the blind man, [interrupting], but what would make you perceive, [O Muhammad], that perhaps he might be purified.' ('Abasa: 1-3) Allah blamed him because he overburdened himself and turned away from this believer seeking to guide the chieftains of Quraysh.

Allah says: 'And go on reminding…' (adh-Dhariyat: 55). This means that Prophet Muhammad's mission is to remind the people who believed him and those who turned away from him of Allah and His guidance. '…it is good for those who believe to be reminded.' (adh-Dhariyat: 55) The believer is the one who benefits from this reminding and clings to faith.

وَمَا خَلَقْتُ ٱلْجِنَّ وَٱلْإِنسَ إِلَّا لِيَعْبُدُونِ ﴿٥٦﴾ مَآ أُرِيدُ مِنْهُم مِّن رِّزْقٍ
وَمَآ أُرِيدُ أَن يُطْعِمُونِ ﴿٥٧﴾ إِنَّ ٱللَّهَ هُوَ ٱلرَّزَّاقُ ذُو ٱلْقُوَّةِ ٱلْمَتِينُ ﴿٥٨﴾

I created jinn and mankind only to worship Me [56] I want no provision from them, nor do I want them to feed Me [57]
God is the Provider, the Lord of Power, the Ever Mighty [58]
(The Quran, adh-Dhariyat: 56 - 58)

Allah says: 'I created…' (adh-Dhariyat: 56). Creating means bringing something into existence from nothing, and forming it without recourse to a previous model, this kind of creation can only be done by Allah. However, He did not withhold this attribute from His creatures, as He allowed them to create in their own way. Allah Glorified is He says: '…So blessed is Allah, the best of creators.' (al-Mu'minun: 14) A person may be called a creator when he brings something into existence. For example, the one who made a glass from sand can be called a creator, because he brought it into being. He is a creator who is not denied the fruits of his efforts. Allah is the best of creators. It is obvious that human beings only create by using materials which already exist, but Allah creates from nothingness. Human beings create lifeless objects, but Allah Glorified is He creates living beings which can grow, develop, and reproduce. There are many other differences we can list which show that Allah is the best of creators.

In this verse, Allah has mentioned the jinn and mankind as being created in order to worship Allah, and has not mentioned the more sublime creatures, namely angels. Scholars said that He has not mentioned the angels in this verse because they were created for worship, and do not have any choice in the matter. They were created from the outset in order to worship Allah and were compelled to do so. '…they do not disobey Allah in what He commands them but do what they are commanded.' (at-Tahrim: 6) This verse tackles the creatures which possess free will and can either obey or disobey Allah.

Why does Allah mention the jinn before mankind in this verse? Some scholars said it is because worship can be either secretly or publicly, and the jinn worships Allah secretly because we cannot see them. Secret worship is better because it is not tainted by hypocrisy, whilst people's worship is usually in public and is sometimes tainted with hypocrisy.

There is another opinion stating that although the worship of the jinn is hidden from us because we cannot see him, it is public for the members of his kind. Therefore, it is also subject to hypocrisy, as the jinn can see each other.

This issue can be tackled in another way; if you read The Quran carefully, you will find that the jinn were created before mankind: 'And the jinn We created before from scorching fire.' (al-Hijr: 27) Thus, Allah mentions the jinn before mankind because they were created before mankind.

Moreover, the main reason behind some people's deviation from worshipping Allah is Satan who is a jinni: '…except for Satan. He was of the jinn and departed from the command of his Lord…' (al-Kahf: 50). Thus, the jinn were mentioned before mankind with regard to worship.

Allah's saying: 'I created jinn and mankind only to worship Me' (adh-Dhariyat: 56) includes a restrictive style, as He restricted the purpose for the creation of jinn and man to worship Him. This indicates that this is the only reason why they were created. Worship means obeying the one you worship with regard to all commands and prohibitions. This is the true meaning of worship which Allah wants of His servants. Therefore, Allah only accepts that which is devoted sincerely to Him.

Yet not all mankind worship Allah sincerely, but rather, each of them offers that which is commensurate with his ability and his view of the Deity he worships.

People are at different levels in this regard, at the top of which are the messengers and Messenger Muhammad, the Seal, is the best of Messengers, as he worshipped Allah truly as Allah intended.

Some people go to an extreme saying that the whole universe was created only for the sake of Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him. We say that it suffices that he is the best person who has ever worshipped Allah, for worship is a concept which can only be realised by means of a true worshipper who does exactly what Allah wants of him.

This type of true worshipper cannot be an ordinary human being, but he must be a prophet. The Master and seal of all prophets is our Messenger Muhammad, who is the best of all who realized true worship of Allah.

The purpose of creation is worship, yet Allah is too exalted to be asked about the reason for His actions, as He does what He wants to what He wants with regard to what He wants. The reason for actions which we should not ask Allah about is that which is relevant to Him.

However, we may find the reason for things which benefit people; worshipping Allah benefits all people because it gives them happiness in the worldly life and salvation in the Hereafter, However, Allah does not benefit from it in any way; He is free of any need for His created beings. Their obedience does not benefit Him and their disobedience does not harm Him.

He created all creation while possessing all Attributes of Perfection and this creation has not added to Him any attribute which He did not possess. He is The Creator before He created, the Provider before He provided, and was glorified before the existence of anyone to glorify Him.

As worship means obeying the commands and prohibitions of the one you worship, this concept encompasses all the motions of life, and is not restricted only to prayer, fasting, and obligatory charity, as is thought by some of those people who wish to separate religion from the motions of life. They say that religion has nothing to do with politics, yet this statement is false and incorrect. People who adopt this line want to gain temporal power which yields to their caprices so that they can do what pleases them.

They have deliberately separated Allah’s guidance from management of the people’s affairs because Allah’s guidance restricts their actions; yet they forgot that it also restricts the actions of the ruled people for their own good.

Therefore, Allah’s guidance encompasses all fields of life, from the testimony of faith: ‘There is no deity but Allah’ to the removal of obstacles from the street(1). We should execute the murderer, carry out the Hadd (ordained punishment for violating Allah’s Law) with the adulterer, punish the one who drinks intoxicants, prevent corrupt people from spreading corruption, and resist the people who do evil deeds. So what do they want to achieve by annulling Allah’s Law and separating it from our daily life? Allah has enjoined worship for the good of mankind, as it organises their lives and makes them happy.

When we speak of this matter, we always quote the following Qudsi Hadith (Revelation from Allah in the Prophet's words): ‘O My servants, if the first and last of you, humans and jinn, were as pious as the heart of the most pious man among you, it would not increase My dominion aught. O My servants if the first and last of you, humans and jinn, were as wicked as the heart of the most wicked man among you, it would not decrease My dominion ought.'(1)

(1) Abu Hurayra related that Messenger Muhammad said: ‘Faith is has over seventy branches - or over sixty branches - the uppermost of which is the testimony: 'None has the right to be worshipped but Allah'; and the least of which is the removal of harmful object from the road, and modesty is a branch of faith.’ Related by Muslim (51), At-Tirmidhi (2539), An-Nasa’i (4919) and Ibn Majah (56)

Thus, how can we keep Allah's religion away from our daily lives, when it applies to the simplest matters? A sinful man entered paradise because he gave water to a dog,(2) and a woman went to hell for locking up a cat;(3) so what do you think about the human being, whom Allah has honoured? Are we supposed to leave aside the politics of man?

Another Qudsi Hadith reads, 'O Son of Adam, I created you to worship Me, so do not play.'(4) This means that seriousness in life because play is an action with no benefit or purpose. Allah wants the actions of His servants to be beneficial and meaningful.

If you consider the side of worship, the most important of which is prayer, do you not need to cover your private parts with clothes in order to perform this act of worship? How will you get these clothes?

Reflect on the way cotton is taken from the field until you wear the clothes. It is a long course full of work, effort, and labour in which thousands of people are involved in your service.

Accordingly, life activities are not confined to prayer alone, but they include everything which helps one to pray, pay zakat (obligatory alms), fast, and make pilgrimage.

(2) Al-Bukhari (168) and Ahmad (10334) narrate on the authority of Abu Hurayra that Prophet Muhammad said: 'A man saw a dog so thirsty that it was eating moist soil, so he took off his leather sock, scooped up water in it and gave it to the dog to drink. Thus, Allah thanked him by sending him to paradise…'

(3) Al-Bukhari (2192) and Muslim (4160) related on the authority of 'Abdullah ibn 'Umar that Messenger Muhammad said, 'A woman was punished because of a cat which she locked up until it died, so she was admitted to hell. He said: 'You did not feed it or give it to drink when you confined it, nor did you let it free to eat the insects on the floor.'

(4) Narrated by Ibn Kathir in his exegesis as a saying of one of the earlier religions, not a Hadith

Worship is included in all aspects of life, so how can we separate religion from life activities including politics and the affairs of mankind?

Allah's saying: 'I want no provision from them, nor do I want them to feed Me.' (adh-Dhariyat: 57) This means that Allah does not want His creatures to provide for Him because He is the All-Provider who has undertaken to provide for all creatures. He provides for the believers as well as the disbelievers, and He has existed before them and has possessed all the Attributes of Perfection before He created them.

Under this divine provision, people serve as a means of provision for one another, and Allah encourages His servant to give and provide for others and likened giving people to giving Him.

This is because Allah is the One Who created mankind, brought them into existence, and has provided for them. Allah's Hand is stretched out to His creatures by means of His creatures, so He called the charity one gives to the poor man a loan, saying: 'Who is it that would loan Allah a goodly loan...' (al-Baqara: 245)?

In another Qudsi Hadith (Revelation from Allah in the Prophet's words), He says: 'Son of Adam, I was ill yet you visited Me not.' Man will say, 'Lord, how could I visit You when You are the Lord of the worlds?' He will say, 'Did you not know that My servant so-and-so was ill, yet you did not visit him? Did you not know that had you visited him, you would have found Me there?' Son of Adam, I asked you for food yet you fed Me not.' Man will say, 'Lord, how could I feed You when You are the Lord of the worlds?' He will say, 'My servant so-and-so asked you for food, yet you did not feed him. Did you not know that had you fed him, you would have found Me there?'(1)

The good deed is appreciated by Allah before being appreciated by Allah's servants. Had Allah wanted, He could have sent His provision directly to His servants, but He willed it to pass from the hands of some of His servants to others in order to create affection and love among them, to spread compassion and prevent pride. Allah wants society to be interdependent and cooperative.

(1) Narrated by Muslim (4661), Al-Bayhaqi in Shu'ab Al-Iman (8879) and Ibn Hibban (268) on the authority of Abu Hurayra

'…I want no provision from them, nor do I want them to feed Me.' (adh-Dhariyat: 57) Why does He join the idea of feeding to the idea of sustenance? We explained before that sustenance means everything that gives benefit. Thus, knowledge, forbearance, generosity, and good health are forms of sustenance. Sustenance, which is mentioned in this verse, refers to general sustenance after which Allah specifically mentions food because it is the most obvious kind of sustenance, and it preserves life. Scholars said that Allah does not mention drink in this verse because it is included with food.

'Verily Allah is the Provider, the Lord of Power, the Ever Mighty.' (adh-Dhariyat: 58) The context here emphasises this fact in order to firmly establish it in the mind, and to reassure each one that his provision is guaranteed: 'Allah is the Provider…' (adh-Dhariyat: 58). The word inna (verily) then Dhu Al-Quwwa (Lord of Power) to emphasise that Allah is the Possessor of Power. This means that His Entity is separated from His Power.

In another verse, Allah speaks about Power and Dominance, saying: 'Allah has written, "I will surely overcome, I and My messengers." Indeed, Allah is Powerful and Exalted in Might.' (al-Mujadala: 21) The power here is part of the Entity, for He does not say 'the Lord of power' because the purpose of these words is to proclaim how He prevails over the stubborn people.

The word 'powerful' entails prevailing over others, but other powerful people may join their efforts and powers against a powerful person and prevail over him. Thus, Allah says: '…Exalted in Might.' (al-Mujadala: 21) which means that He is invincible and cannot be defeated, In the verse under discussion, Allah says: '…the Ever Mighty.' (adh-Dhariyat: 58) This means that His Power is constant and neither weakens or lessens.

فَإِنَّ لِلَّذِينَ ظَلَمُوا۟ ذَنُوبًا مِّثْلَ ذَنُوبِ أَصْحَٰبِهِمْ فَلَا يَسْتَعْجِلُونِ ﴿٥٩﴾

The evildoers, like their predecessors, will have a share of punishment – they need not ask Me to hasten it [59] (The Quran, adh-Dhariyat: 59)

One of the rhetorical styles employed in the Quran is to mention opposites side by side. After mentioning the believers, Allah mentions the disbelievers of Mecca, for they are the ones meant by Allah's saying: 'The evildoers…' (adh-Dhariyat: 59) They committed evil by denying and opposing Messenger Muhammad and standing in the way of his call. Thus, they deserved to have '…like their predecessors, a share of punishment - they need not ask Me to hasten it.' (adh-Dhariyat: 59) This 'share of punishment' will be akin to that of former deniers belonging to 'Ad, Thamud and Pharaoh.

The word Dhanub literally means the pail we use to take out water from a well, and the rope to which the pail is attached is called the rasha'. If the pail contains much water, the bucket comes out heavily and slowly. Thus, it is said:

Pails come up slowly because they are full,
And the slowest clouds to come are the fullest.

An Arab poet expressed this meaning, saying:

When a man praises another for gaining benefits,
His critique will also be beyond limits,
If he did not think that the well was distant,
He would not make his rope so long.

If the water is a long way down the well, you need a long rope; if it is difficult to gain benefits from the one praised, it will take a long time to praise him.

The Arabs were accustomed to take out water from wells by pails. These aggressors used a pail to pour water to drink in this worldly life, they will use it in the Hereafter in order to inflict suffering, and punishment upon them, as Allah says in another verse: '…boiling water shall be poured over their heads.' (al-Hajj: 19) It will be poured over the people of Quraysh who belied Messenger Muhammad, just as it was poured over the people of Nuh, 'Ad, Thamud, and Pharaoh, as disbelief is the same over time.

Therefore, when Allah spoke about the punishment of the people of Lot, He said: '…rained down upon them stones, of what had been decreed, one after another. Marked (for punishment) with your Lord and it is not far off from the unjust.' (Hud: 82-83) The punishment which afflicted the predecessors is not so far away from those who lived after them.

Allah emphasises this meaning, saying: ‘…they need not ask Me to hasten it.’ (adh-Dhariyat: 59) The punishment will inevitably afflict them, and it is not far away from them; it is only a matter of time.

فَوَيْلٌ لِّلَّذِينَ كَفَرُوا۟ مِن يَوْمِهِمُ ٱلَّذِى يُوعَدُونَ ﴿٦٠﴾

And woe betide those who deny the truth on the Day they have been promised [60]
(The Quran, adh-Dhariyat: 60)

Some scholars said that the word wayl which is the name of a valley in hell,(1) and others said that it means destruction suffering and curse from Allah upon those who refused to obey Him, and did not fulfil the purpose for which they were created: worshipping Him alone.

When they got along without Allah, He left them, casting them out of His Mercy and damning them to eternal suffering which will not come to an end by death and will not be mitigated.

Therefore, Allah says about them: ‘and they shall call out: O Malik! Let your Lord make an end of us. He shall say: Surely you shall remain.’ (az-Zukhruf: 77) He also says about them: ‘…Every time their skins are roasted through We will replace them with other skins, so they may taste the punishment….’ (an-Nisa’: 56)

Allah’s saying: ‘…on the Day they have been promised’ (adh-Dhariyat: 60) refers to the Day of which Allah warned them. Allah did not take them unawares, nor did He leave them in their heedlessness, but He told them about the consequences of their actions, saying: ‘whoever does righteousness - it is for his [own] soul; and whoever does evil [does so] against it. And your Lord is not ever unjust to [His] servants…’ (Fussilat: 46).

(1) Abu Sa’id Al-Khudri narrated that Messenger Muhammad said, ‘Wayl is a valley in hell in which the disbelievers will fall for forty autumns.’ (Lisan Al-‘Arab)

the chapter of

at-Tur

In the Name of God,(1) the Most Merciful, the Dispenser of Mercy

The chapter of at-Tur (2) :

وَٱلطُّورِ ١ وَكِتَٰبٖ مَّسۡطُورٖ ٢ فِي رَقّٖ مَّنشُورٖ ٣

By the mountain [1] by a Scripture inscribed [2] in unrolled parchment [3] (The Quran, at-Tur: 1 - 3)

We notice that the beginning of the chapter of at-Tur is similar to the beginning of the chapter of adh-Dhariyat which precedes it. At the beginning of the chapter of adh-Dhariyat, Allah Glorified is He swears an oath saying: ‘By those [winds] that scatter far and wide, and those that are heavily laden, that speed freely, that distribute [rain] as ordained!’ (adh-Dhariyat: 1-4) The oath is about: ‘what you [people] are promised is true: the Judgement will come.’ (adh-Dhariyat: 5-6)

In the chapter of at-Tur, Allah Glorified is He swears an oath saying: ‘By the mountain, by a Scripture inscribed in unrolled parchment, by the much-visited House, by the raised canopy, by the ocean ever filled’ (at-Tur: 1-8). The oath is about: ‘[Prophet], your Lord’s punishment is coming – it cannot be put off.’ (adh-Dhariyat: 7-8) Both chapters testify to the truthfulness of facts about the Day of Judgment and the unavoidable suffering it includes.

(1) The Islamic conception of 'Allah' is not the same as the Christian and Jewish conception of 'God'. However, the word 'Allah' does not refer to a tribal god or God of only Muslims, it refers to the Creator of the whole world, the One God (who has no son). We prefer, however, to use 'Allah' rather than 'God' as it has a unique character: it cannot be used to refer to any false gods and does not have any derivatives like goddess, gods, etc. It is a unique word used solely to describe the One God of this universe.

(2) The chapter of at-Tur is the 52nd chapter of the Quran. It consists of 49 verses and is a Meccan chapter by consensus. It was revealed after the chapter of as-Sajda and before the chapter of al-Mulk. It is the 75th chapter to be revealed according to the order of the revelation of the Quranic chapters. [See: Al-Itqan fi ‘Ulum Al-Quran, 1/27]

When we reflect upon that which Allah swears by in the two chapters, we see that in the chapter of adh-Dhariyat, Allah swears by material things such as the wind and the clouds that carry the water that brings life to the earth. In the chapter of at-Tur, He swears by spiritual matters. Material things please one in the worldly life, but spiritual things please one in the worldly life and the Hereafter. No matter how long the worldly life lasts, it will end with the Hereafter whose bounties never come to an end.

Thus, Allah Glorified is He addresses us, saying: ‘O you who have believed, respond to Allah and to the Messenger when he calls you to that which gives you life...’ (al-Anfal: 24). He says this, while they are already alive. Thus, the other life is intended by this verse; it refers to the spiritual life and ever-lasting bliss.

This meaning is referred to by Allah’s saying: ‘...And indeed, the home of the Hereafter – that is the [eternal] life, if only they knew.’ (al-’Ankabut: 64) The word al-hayawan, which is mentioned in the Arabic text of the verse, means the real life that will not end.

Why does Allah swear in the verses under discussion by Mount at-Tur? Scholars said that all the other Messengers were addressed via the Revelation, whereas Allah spoke to Prophet Musa (Moses) directly, while he was at the top of this mountain. Therefore, Mount At-Tur has a special status.

The children of Israel were stubborn and persistent in their enmity, and were inclined to materialism in everything, even religion. Thus they said to Musa (Moses): ‘O Musa! We will not believe in you until we see Allah manifestly...’ (al-Baqara: 55). Had he told them that the Revelation came to him in secret, they would not have believed him.

In Allah’s saying wa-Tur, the letter waw at the beginning refers to taking an oath. In this verse, Allah takes an oath by Mount At-Tur. We said previously that Allah swears by whatsoever He wills of His creatures. The word At-Tur is mentioned ten times in the Quran because Allah gives it a high status, as He spoke to Prophet Musa (Moses).

‘By a Scripture inscribed’ (at-Tur: 2); the verse refers to the Torah and the Tablets. The word mastur, which is mentioned in the Arabic text of the verse, means that the writing was inscribed and arranged in lines.

Allah says: ‘In unrolled parchment.’ (at-Tur: 3) The word raq refers to any type of skin that can be written on, and was the first thing people wrote on. In ancient times, people also used bones and other things to write on. The word manshur they mean spread out and not rolled or closed. For example, when a cloth merchant spreads out his textiles to show them to you, this reveals that they are good and free from flaws. Were they faulty, he would not spread them out and give you the opportunity to inspect them.

Allah has opened His Book and presented it for all the created beings to read, a fact that indicates that it is a precise and perfect Book, free from flaws or shortcomings.

وَٱلْبَيْتِ ٱلْمَعْمُورِ ﴿٤﴾ وَٱلسَّقْفِ ٱلْمَرْفُوعِ ﴿٥﴾ وَٱلْبَحْرِ ٱلْمَسْجُورِ ﴿٦﴾

By the much-visited House [4] By the raised canopy [5] By the ocean ever filled [6]
(The Quran, at-Tur: 4 - 6)

Allah’s saying, ‘By the oft-frequented house [of worship]’ is an oath sworn by the House, i.e., the Ka'ba. This is a proof that there were people in this time who answered the call to Allah’s way and went to the House and lived there. The scholars said that this also refers to a celestial house which is frequented and circumambulated by angels.

It is as though Allah is saying to them, beware of thinking that I need you to believe in Me to come and visit My House, for I have a House in the seventh heaven. Every day 70,000 angels enter it, and whoever enters it once never goes out again (1). These are His slaves who have been ennobled; they do not speak before He does and they carry out His commandments.

(1) This Hadith is agreed upon... Al-Bukhari narrates it in his Sahih [2968] and Muslim in his Ṣahih [234] on the authority of Abu Hurayra. Its wording is, ‘The Oft-frequented House (Al-bayt Al-Ma`mur) was placed before me so I asked Jibril (Gabriel) who said, ‘This is the Oft-frequented House, every day 70,000 angels pray in it. Once they leave it they do not return to it. It is the first and last time they enter it.’ The full Hadith is much longer than this.

His saying, ‘By the vault [of heaven] raised high’, refers to the sky, a roof raised without supports. ‘By the surf-swollen sea’: the word masjur (surf-swollen) has two meanings: It can mean full of water, and in this vein the sea can be of two types, either freshwater or saltwater. It is remarkable that Allah said of these two, ‘...and yet, from either of them do you eat fresh meat...’ (Fatir: 12). We do not get salty fish from saltwater seas; we only get fish like those we get from fresh water. The saltiness of the water does not affect the taste of the fish.

Masjur can also mean ‘ignited’; the Arabs say sajjarahu meaning ‘he lit it on fire’. It is well known that water and fire are incompatible. Thus this refers to the seas that were full of water, yet on the Day of Judgment they will burn after all their water has evaporated.

Then Allah speaks of the thing He is swearing to:

إِنَّ عَذَابَ رَبِّكَ لَوَٰقِعٞ ٧ مَّا لَهُۥ مِن دَافِعٖ ٨

[Prophet], your Lord’s punishment is coming [7]
It cannot be put off [8] (The Quran, at-Tur: 7 - 8)

That is, the punishment of the afterlife will certainly happen, there is no doubt about it, for The One Who has promised it is The Strong, The fully-Capable, Whose command none can refuse and Whose Will cannot be opposed by anyone. Allah has neither partner nor peer, neither equal nor opposite, and so long as the matter is thus then, ‘there is none who could avert it’. That is, no-one can turn it back when it comes. When is it going to come?(1)

He says:

(1) Jubayr ibn Mut`im said, ‘I came to Medina to ask The Messenger of Allah about the captives from the Battle of Badr. I showed up as he was reading the chapter of at-Tur in the sunset prayer until when he reached Allah’s saying, “Verily, [O man,] the suffering decreed by your Lord [for the sinners] will indeed come to pass: [7] there is none who could avert it. [8]” (at-Tur: 7-8) I felt as if my heart had been rent asunder and I entered Islam out of fear of the punishment descending upon me. I thought that I would not move from the place where I was before the punishment befell me.’ [Tafsir Al-Qurtubi 9/6463]

يَوْمَ تَمُورُ ٱلسَّمَآءُ مَوْرًا ﴿٩﴾ وَتَسِيرُ ٱلْجِبَالُ سَيْرًا ﴿١٠﴾
فَوَيْلٌ يَوْمَئِذٍ لِّلْمُكَذِّبِينَ ﴿١١﴾ ٱلَّذِينَ هُمْ فِى خَوْضٍ يَلْعَبُونَ ﴿١٢﴾

On the Day when the sky sways back and forth [9] And the mountains float away [10] Woe on that Day to those who deny the Truth [11] Who amuse themselves with idle chatter [12] (The Quran, at-Tur: 9 - 12)

Allah speaks here of the Day of Judgement when the skies will be most severely perturbed. i.e., this sky, this secured roof raised high, this perfect construction of which Allah said, ‘And it is We who have built the heavens with [Our creative] power...’ (adh-Dhariyat: 47), i.e. with power and precision, and of which He also said, ‘And We have built above you seven firmaments’ (an-Naba': 12). This sky will be convulsed, i.e., it will become disturbed, start to move and break up, in a similar way to an old, shredded piece of cloth.

In another place Allah described this matter saying, ‘[It will take place] on a Day when the sky will be like molten lead’ (al-Ma'arij: 8). This means that the structure of the sky will be destroyed and it will come to pieces, just as everything else in creation will because they will have no role left to play. In this world the sky plays a role in the sustenance of life, but in the next world there will be no need for these intermediaries, for there we will live by the Owner of causes Glorified is He and we will have no need of the means we require to live in this world. It is for the same reason that Allah says of that Day, ‘And the earth will shine bright with her Lord’s light...’ (az-Zumar: 69), i.e. we will have no need of the sun because we will be illuminated by the Lord of the sun and its Creator.

Allah Glorified is He then says, ‘and the mountains will move with [an awesome] movement’ (at-Tur: 10), as He said elsewhere, ‘and when the mountains are made to vanish’ (at-Takwir: 3). These solid mountains are like stakes driven into the ground, yet despite their hugeness they will be made to move, and then they will disintegrate and disperse. He also says, ‘and the mountains will be like tufts of wool’ (al-Ma'arij: 9), i.e. like scattered carded wool, for there will be nothing left for them to do; they were there to stabilise the earth, but now the old order has come to an end and been destroyed.

'Woe, then, on that Day to all who give the lie to the truth' (at-Tur: 11) Woe to them because they took the means (al-asbab) and sufficed themselves with them forgetting the One Who provided them with these means, Now the means have perished and nothing remains except the Lord of these means, Allah, in whom they disbelieved and whose Messengers they denied. Now the only ones who will get good from Him are those who believed and confirmed the Messengers when the means were in place.

This is why we say, beware of becoming deceived by the means, no matter how much they serve you or give you, rather know that behind them is their Creator.

Do you remember some time ago when Pakistan came up with a plan to cultivate huge areas of wheat. Their evaluations promised that Pakistan could become self-sufficient and would then be able to export wheat, even to America. They did indeed cultivate the wheat until the time to break even drew near, but a harmful blight came and ruined the crop, and in that year they had to import wheat, all because they had relied upon the means and forgotten the Lord of the means.

Similarly in the story of Qarun (Korah): 'Answered he: "This [wealth] has been given to me only by virtue of the knowledge that I have!"...' (al-Qasas: 78). So when he became deluded by his knowledge and understanding, Allah abandoned him and said to him as it were, 'preserve then your wealth by means of your knowledge'. Then a catastrophe that he was unable to repel befell him, 'And thereupon We caused the earth to swallow him and his dwelling...' (al-Qasas: 81). So where are your skills now?

Indeed, 'Woe, then, on that Day to all who give the lie to the truth' (at-Tur: 11); those that deny Allah, The Creator Most High, and deny His Messengers; those who thought that the life of this world was an end in itself and the final chapter, for this is what they who deny Allah and put their faith in nature claim.

This is why Allah goes on to define them saying, 'all those who [throughout their lives] but idly played with things vain', and in another verse, 'Hence, leave them to indulge in idle talk and play...’ (al-Ma’arij: 42). Al-Khawd (idle things) refers literally to walking through water. It signifies clumsiness and a lack of guidance, for when one goes walking on the ground, he can see where one’s feet are going, one is aware of the dangerous places in his path because one can see where he is going. When however one walks through water, he does not know where he is putting his feet and he is not safe from injury. When we study the Gracious Quran, we find that it does not use the word khawd except in relation to falsehood. Allah says, ‘...and then leave them to play at their vain talk (khawd)’ (al-An‘am: 91), and, ‘Now, whenever you meet such as indulge in [blasphemous] talk about (yakhudun fi) Our messages, turn your back upon them...’ (al-An‘am: 68). The Quran also expresses this meaning when it says, ‘they who blunder along, in ignorance lost (fi ghamra sahun)’ (adh-Dhariyat: 11), as though they are submerged in water stumbling through it.

يَوْمَ يُدَعُّونَ إِلَىٰ نَارِ جَهَنَّمَ دَعًّا ﴿١٣﴾
هَٰذِهِ ٱلنَّارُ ٱلَّتِي كُنتُم بِهَا تُكَذِّبُونَ ﴿١٤﴾

On that Day they will be thrust into the Fire of Hell [13] This is the Fire you used to deny [14]
(The Quran, at-Tur: 13-14)

The word yuda'un (they will be thrust) is declined from the verb da'a meaning to push somebody violently so that he falls on his face. Another example of it is found in Allah’s saying, ‘have you ever considered [the kind of man] who gives the lie to all moral law? [1] Behold, it is this [kind of man] that thrusts the orphan away [2]’ (al-Ma'un: 1-2). That is, he pushes him away forcefully. It is an orphan who has come to him seeking help regarding some need relating to his sustenance. The man could give to him, or he could ignore and refuse him without harming him, instead however he shoves him away and hurts him, and this is why he deserves the recompense he will get.

Such is the case here with these disbelievers: ‘on the Day when they shall be thrust into the fire with [an irresistible] thrust...’, they will be driven into it, vehemently forced in total humiliation. Who will be casting them to the fire? The angels will. By Allah it would have been sufficient humiliation for them had it been men casting them in – just as in this world a criminal is pushed through the door of the prison for instance – so what then when it is the angels of punishment who are thrusting them into the fire?

When they enter it, they are met by other angels who have a different role to play: ‘On the Day when they shall be dragged into the fire on their faces, [they will be told:] ‘Taste now the touch of hell-fire!’ (al-Qamar: 48)

So the thrusting here will be in proportion to the strength of the angels, and what will that be like? To further their humiliation the angels confront them with the reality they now face: ‘This is the fire which you were wont to call a lie!’ (at-Tur: 14) Now it is visible, you see it with your own eyes and you can feel its true heat.

أَفَسِحْرٌ هَٰذَآ أَمْ أَنتُمْ لَا تُبْصِرُونَ ﴿١٥﴾
ٱصْلَوْهَا فَٱصْبِرُوٓا۟ أَوْ لَا تَصْبِرُوا۟ سَوَآءٌ عَلَيْكُمْ ۖ إِنَّمَا تُجْزَوْنَ مَا كُنتُمْ تَعْمَلُونَ ﴿١٦﴾

So is this sorcery? Do you still not see it? [15] Burn in it –it makes no difference whether you bear it patiently or not — you are only being repaid for what you have done [16] (The Quran, at-Tur: 15 - 16)

Ponder this rebuke. They used to hurl accusations at The Messenger peace be upon him saying he was a sorcerer and that the Quran was sorcery, but now they are being addressed with their own words. They say to them, ‘Was it, then, a delusion…’, i.e. this punishment that you are now experiencing, is it magic? Magic is illusion, it does not inflict pain upon you, yet you are in pain. Thus, it cannot be magic, indeed it is real; ‘…or is it that you failed to see [its truth]?’ It must be one or the other.

‘Endure it…’, i.e., enter hell. Experience its heat and its suffering. ‘…But [whether you] bear yourselves with patience or without patience…’, this is the first time we see patience which has no benefit nor reward – the patience of these people dealing with the heat of hell. ‘…It will be the same to you…’: Whether you are patient or not, it makes no difference to Us; both are evil states, and you will never escape it. This is not oppression though, it is their just desserts.

‘…You are but being requited for what you were wont to do’; none of this is a form of injustice, and rather, it is merely the consequences of your deeds which we bring you. It is you who put yourselves in this position.

إِنَّ ٱلْمُتَّقِينَ فِى جَنَّٰتٍ وَنَعِيمٍ ﴿١٧﴾ فَٰكِهِينَ بِمَآ ءَاتَىٰهُمْ رَبُّهُمْ وَوَقَىٰهُمْ
رَبُّهُمْ عَذَابَ ٱلْجَحِيمِ ﴿١٨﴾ كُلُوا۟ وَٱشْرَبُوا۟ هَنِيٓـًٔۢا بِمَا كُنتُمْ تَعْمَلُونَ ﴿١٩﴾

Those who were mindful of God are in Gardens and in bliss [17] rejoicing in their Lord’s gifts: He has saved them from the torment of the Blaze [18] ‘Eat and drink with healthy enjoyment as a reward for what you have done’[19] (The Quran, at-Tur: 17-19)

Mentioning opposites together is one of the pinnacles of the Quranic rhetoric and one of the manifestations of its excellence. As we mentioned previously, one thing manifests the good in its opposite, and it is for this reason that we so often find these pairs of opposites in the Quran. Allah Glorified is He says for example, ‘Behold, [in the life to come] the truly virtuous will indeed be in bliss, [13] whereas, behold, the wicked will indeed be in a blazing fire [14]’ (al-Infitar: 13-14).

Having spoken here of the disbelievers and their recompense in hell, (we seek Allah’s refuge from it), He then speaks to us of the pious and the blessings that await them.

Thus when the believer reads these verses and visualises the two opposite outcomes, he says, ‘Praise be to Allah for the faith which will save me from this ignominious ending,’ while the disbeliever says, ‘Woe to me! My disbelief will prevent me from attaining these blessings’.

This comparison makes the believer cheerful while making the disbeliever feel miserable. It lifts the believer up and it puts the disbeliever down. Allah also says, ‘...he that shall be drawn away from the fire and brought into Paradise will indeed have gained a triumph...’ (Al-‘Imran: 185).

Allah Glorified is He then says, '[But] verily, the God-conscious. (al-muttaqin)…' Taqwa (God-consciousness) is that one places a barrier of obedience between oneself and Allah's punishment. We have said previously that The True Lord says, '...Remain conscious of Allah...' (al-Baqara: 278), and '...then be conscious of the Fire...' (al-Baqara: 24), yet the meaning is effectively the same: that one place a barrier of obedience between oneself and Allah's attributes of majesty. When you protect yourself from the fire, you protect yourself from Allah because it is but part of Allah's army.

We note here that in Allah's saying, '[But] verily, the Allah-conscious will find themselves [on that Day] in Gardens and in bliss', the word Muttaqin (God-conscious) is in the plural, as is the word 'Gardens'. This means that every believer will have a garden specific to him. It is just as if we said to some students, 'Get your books out,' i.e., let each and every student get his book out. When two plurals are put together like this, it means that the distribution is on individual basis.

For the same reason when we explained the verse in the chapter of ar-Rahman: 'But for those who of their Lord's Presence stand in fear, two gardens [of paradise are readied]' (ar-Rahman: 46), we asked how we could join between them. The scholars say that it says, 'two gardens' because the speech here relates to men and jinn, the two 'sin-laden' groups (ath-thaqalayn): '[One day] We shall take you to task, O you sin-laden two!' (ar-Rahman: 31) Thus it means that he from among the jinn who fears his Lord will have a Garden, and he from among men who fears his Lord will have a Garden.(1)

---

(1) Al-Mawardi said in his exegesis of this verse, 'There are four interpretations of these two gardens:
The first is that there is one garden for men and one garden for the jinn. This was the opinion of Mujahid.
The second is that one is the Garden of 'Adn while the other is the Garden of an-Na'im, and this was the opinion of Muqatil.
The third is that they are two of the gardens of Paradise, and this was related with an unconnected chain of narrators (marfu`).
The fourth is that one of the gardens is that of his own residence, while the other is the garden of his wives and servants' residence, as is the practise of the rich in this world.
There is also a fifth possibility, and that is that one of the gardens will be the place where he lives, while the other will be its garden.
A sixth possibility is that one of the gardens is beneath his palaces, while the other is above them.

The preposition in Allah's saying, '…in Gardens…' means that the Gardens are a place and the God-conscious will be inside them. The garden will encompass the believer. He then says, '…and in bliss' because someone's being in a garden does not necessitate his being in comfort. Imagine for instance the Pasha sitting in the garden of his residence, with flowers, trees, and fruits. He has a worker with him who cares for the trees, pruning and watering them. The garden is comfortable only for its owner; it is not comfortable for he who works in it.

As for these believers, they are in Gardens and in comfort; they are enjoying themselves. This is why The True Lord Glorified is He emphasises this saying afterwards, 'rejoicing in all that their Lord will have granted them…' (at-Tur: 17-19). That is, rejoicing in the comforts that they have. The word fakihun (rejoicing) means they are joyful, and this is another addition because one may be in a garden and be in comfort, yet not happy with it.

We saw this in Egypt after the revolution of 1952. We saw such-and-such a Pasha with estates and gardens, filled with all different types of fruits to eat, yet he was not happy because the state was confiscating land and nationalising it, and the fear of this spoiled his enjoyment of them for him. Thus, he was in a garden and in comfort, but he was not happy with it.

'…In all that their Lord will have granted them...', i.e. directly from Himself with no intermediaries. So, the God-conscious are in gardens, in comfort, enjoying themselves rejoicing in what Allah has granted them, and on top of and prior to all of that: '…their Lord will have warded off from them all suffering through the blazing fire' (at-Tur: 17-19). This is from the fulfilment of Allah's blessing, for it is possible that after having entered paradise, one would be afraid of being taken out of it and put into the fire. Thus this verse tells us this will not happen, for he who enters it will never leave it.

It could also refer to the fact that Allah has already protected them from entering the fire in the first place, i.e. before they entered paradise, as Allah says, '...he that shall be drawn away from the fire and brought into paradise will indeed have gained a triumph...' (Al-'Imran: 185).

Allah Glorified is He then says, '[And they will be told:] 'Eat and drink with good cheer as an outcome of what you were wont to do,' and in another verse He says, '...then 'eat it, tasty and wholesome' (hani'a mari'a)' (an-Nisa': 4). That is, in paradise, eat and drink from it, tasty and wholesome (hani'a mari'a). Al-Hani' refers to food or drink which one eats and finds to have a delicious taste at first but which afterwards is followed by unwanted side effects such as causing indigestion, wind, etc. It is tasty, but it is not wholesome (mari'). Allah describes the food and drink of paradise as being tasty and wholesome; it is good for you and it does not produce any ill effects.

The food and drink of paradise of course has none of that because people there do not eat out of hunger, rather, they eat out of luxury; even if one does not eat – it is all the same.

Allah Glorified is He then goes on to mention some of the other comforts of paradise.

مُتَّكِـِٔينَ عَلَىٰ سُرُرٖ مَّصۡفُوفَةٖۖ وَزَوَّجۡنَٰهُم بِحُورٍ عِينٖ ﴿٢٠﴾

They are comfortably seated on couches arranged in rows; We pair them with beautiful-eyed maidens[20]
(The Quran, at-Tur: 20)

Reclining (al-ittika') is a type of sitting. One does not sit on one's posterior rather, he leans on his side. This is indicative of rest and tranquillity and that nothing is disturbing him. The concerned person on the other hand is anxious in his sitting; he can hardly rest his back against anything. Why? Because his heart is busied by things that prevent him from resting even when sitting

Thus, Allah's saying, 'reclining…' indicates that their hearts are tranquil, free from concerns or disturbances. '…On couches [of happiness]…' The word surur (couches) is the plural of sarir. It refers to something that one may sit on, and it has connotations of happiness. '…Ranged in rows...', i.e., arranged and attached one to other. When we went to France we saw hotels at the acme of luxury, beauty, and comfort. The people were astonished by it, so I said to them, 'Are you astonished by what man has prepared for man? What then do you imagine The Lord of man has prepared for man?'

'…We shall mate them with companions pure, most beautiful of eye' (at-Tur: 20), i.e., Allah will partner them with beautiful-eyed, pure companions (al-hur al-`in). The Arabic verb zawwaj (to marry/mate) is transitive in and of itself. One says zawwajtu fulanan fulana, meaning 'I married so-and-so to so-and-so' because marriage is a mutual benefit, the husband and the wife both derive benefit from each other.

As for being married to the hur al-`in, the benefit is one-way. In paradise the believer will derive pleasure from his associations with the hur al-`in, but they will not do so. Allah says, '…We shall mate them with companions pure, most beautiful of eye (zawwajnahum bi hur `in)' making the verb transitive with the preposition ba' (with).The word hur is the plural of hawra' and it refers to a woman, the whites of whose eyes are extremely white, and whose pupils are extremely dark. Al-`In is the plural of `ayna' and it refers to a woman whose eyes are wide, a sign of elegance and beauty.

وَٱلَّذِينَ ءَامَنُوا۟ وَٱتَّبَعَتْهُمْ ذُرِّيَّتُهُم بِإِيمَٰنٍ أَلْحَقْنَا بِهِمْ ذُرِّيَّتَهُمْ وَمَآ
أَلَتْنَٰهُم مِّنْ عَمَلِهِم مِّن شَىْءٍ كُلُّ ٱمْرِئٍ بِمَا كَسَبَ رَهِينٌ ﴿٢١﴾

We unite the believers with their offspring who followed them in faith — We do not deny them any of the rewards for their deeds: each person is in pledge for his own deeds [21] (The Quran, at-Tur: 21)

'And as for those who have attained to faith…', i.e., faith in Allah alone, believing that He is One, Singular and has no associates. His being One (Wahid) means that there is no one else with Him, and His being Singular (Ahad) means that He is One in Himself, i.e., that He has no parts: 'Say: 'He is The One Allah' (al-Ikhlas: 1).

Faith is not complete until it is accompanied by the actions which such faith dictates, i.e., action according to the path The One you have believed in has decreed. This is why Allah has mentioned faith and righteous deeds together in so many places, an example of which being: '...those who have attained to faith and do righteous deeds...' (at-Talaq: 11).

Allah then says here, '…and whose offspring will have followed them in faith...' (at-Tur: 21). Such a man believed and did righteous deeds and his offspring followed him in that. They had faith as he did, yet their works were less than those of their father. The True Lord through His mercy and generosity for the offspring, and honour to the father, raises his children up to the higher level at which he is.

'…We shall unite them with their offspring; and We shall not let aught of their deeds go to waste…' (at-Tur: 21). We will take nothing from them. We will grant increase to the offspring, yet not lessen the lot of the fathers, for the condition of faith is present in both. As for deeds, if they are few, then Allah will fix that out of His generosity and bounty.

The Arabic word dhurriyya (offspring) refers to one's chain of descendants. Thus the dhurriyya of a man includes his children and his grandchildren. A father can be from the dhurriyya, as can a son – it refers to relations through descent. It is split into two sorts: before carrying legal responsibility, and after carrying it. What is referred to in this verse is the offspring which is legally responsible and from which faith and action are sought.

When Allah says, '…and We shall not let aught of their deeds go to waste…', it means none of them, no matter how small.

He Glorified is He then says, '...every human being will be held in pledge for whatever he has earned' (at-Tur: 21). The word raheen (held in pledge) is in an emphatic form on the morphological pattern fa`il. This pattern can have the meaning of an active participle, such as Raheem, meaning 'merciful', and it can have the meaning of a passive participle, such as qatil, meaning 'killed'.

Here raheen has a passive meaning derived from the word rahn. The word rahn refers to something of value that the one who needs money leaves as a guarantee with the one granting him a loan until he repays his debt. The rahn stands in place of the money until it is returned to its owner. Similarly on the Day of Judgement, the slave of Allah is subject to his works, captive to them.

We could also say that the word rahin has an active meaning in this verse, i.e. he is the mortgagor of his work. If it is good, he will get good, and if it is bad, he will get bad.

وَأَمْدَدْنَٰهُم بِفَٰكِهَةٍ وَلَحْمٍ مِّمَّا يَشْتَهُونَ ﴿٢٢﴾
يَتَنَٰزَعُونَ فِيهَا كَأْسًا لَّا لَغْوٌ فِيهَا وَلَا تَأْثِيمٌ ﴿٢٣﴾

We provide them with any fruit or meat they desire [22] They pass around a cup which does not lead to any idle talk or sin [23] (The Quran, at-Tur: 22-23)

Allah's saying, 'And We shall bestow on them...' means that this is another gift on top of and in addition to what has preceded it 'and in that ... they shall pass on to one another a cup...', i.e. they will pass a cup around in paradise. This passing will not spring from any type of difference or dislike; rather, it will be out of kindness and intimacy. Thus it seems they will be drinking in pleasure, harmony, and mutual care. 'And in that [paradise] they shall pass on to one another a cup...' (at-Tur: 22-23): The word ka`s (cup) refers to the vessel from which wine would be drunk, and such a cup is not called a ka`s unless it is full. If it is empty it is called a koob.

Allah then says, '...which will not give rise to empty talk....' al-Laghw (empty talk) refers to action in which there is no benefit and frivolous talk that is devoid of meaning, while yet also being devoid of sin. '...And neither incite to sin'; it comprises no sin, nor does it lead to forbidden things. This is the distinguishing characteristic of the wine of the next life.

The difference between it and the wine of this world is that the latter veils the intellect and takes its drinker into an irrational state, and what ensues is frivolous talk and sin. The wine of the next world is above such traits; this is why The True Lord Glorified is He says, '...and rivers of wine delightful to those who drink it...' (Muhammad: 15). The True Lord describes wine in terms of its shortcomings. The wine of the afterlife shares only its name with the wine of this world. If you see someone drinking alcohol you see him swig it back quickly in one go, why? This is because it smells and tastes nasty.

In the next life however, they will savour its flavour and take pleasure in it. So why do people drink alcohol in this world if its characteristics are such? If you ask one of them, he will tell you it is so he can forget his sorrows, worries, and troubles. This is strange because Allah does not want us to forget our sorrows and concerns and flee from them. He wants us to live with them, know their causes, and try to overcome them. There is no benefit it trying to cover them up and forget them.

وَيَطُوفُ عَلَيۡهِمۡ غِلۡمَانٞ لَّهُمۡ كَأَنَّهُمۡ لُؤۡلُؤٞ مَّكۡنُونٞ (٢٤)

Devoted youths like hidden pearls wait on them [24]
(The Quran, at-Tur: 24)

In paradise, they will be served drinks by youths. The word ghilman (youths) is the plural of ghulam and it refers to a handsome young boy. In another place Allah Glorified is He says describing them, ‘and immortal youths...’ (al-Insan: 19), i.e., they are perpetually young, never getting older. If a youth ages, he will eventually become an old man; these youths, however, stay at the same age and do not grow old.

Allah’s saying, ‘...of their own...’ means they are assigned to serve them. The preposition lam (of/for) can denote ownership and it can also denote assignment. If we say ‘the money is for (li) Zayd’, it means it is his property. If we say however, ‘the reins are for (li) the horse,’ it means they have been assigned to the horse – not that the horse owns them. The words lahum in this verse indicate that this cupbearer serves them without wages or other benefit. Allah Glorified is He then says, ‘...as if they were pearls hidden in their shells’ (at-Tur: 24), i.e., these youths are pure and white like pearls. Pearls are famed for their purity, whiteness, and glow. What then if it is still hidden in its shell, for when a pearl comes out of the oyster it becomes subject to dust and impurities that may blemish its purity.

وَأَقۡبَلَ بَعۡضُهُمۡ عَلَىٰ بَعۡضٖ يَتَسَآءَلُونَ (٢٥) قَالُوٓاْ إِنَّا كُنَّا قَبۡلُ فِيٓ أَهۡلِنَا مُشۡفِقِينَ (٢٦)
فَمَنَّ ٱللَّهُ عَلَيۡنَا وَوَقَىٰنَا عَذَابَ ٱلسَّمُومِ (٢٧)

They turn to one another and say [25] When we were still with our families [on earth] we used to live in fear [26] God has been gracious to us and saved us from the torment of intense heat [27] (The Quran, at-Tur: 25 - 27)

Allah’s speech here still relates to the people of paradise: ‘And they [who are thus blest] will turn to one another, asking each other [about their past lives]'. 'They will say: 'Behold, a foretime...', i.e. in the world, '...when we were [still living] in the midst of our kith and kin – we were full of fear (mushfiqin)...' (at-Tur: 25-27). The word ishfaq refers to fear, and this can be either fear with a hatred for the source of fear, or it can be out of awe and respect for the source of one's fear. What is intended here is the fear of awe and respect because it is Allah whom they fear, but why? The scholars say it is because they are afraid of falling short it their worship of Allah. Although they obeyed Him and fulfilled their obligations, yet they did not worship Allah as He deserves to be worshipped, for He deserves more than that. Their fear thus contains hope that Allah will make up for this shortcoming on their part. Allah Glorified is He says of the angels, '...Nay, [... they ... are but His] honoured servants' (al-Anbiya': 26), and '...who do not disobey Allah in whatever He has commanded them, but [always] do what they are bidden to do' (at-Tahrim: 6), and yet despite that Allah says of them, 'they fear their Lord high above them...' (an-Nahl: 50).

Alternatively, '...when we were [still living] in the midst of our kith and kin – we were full of fear...' (at-Tur: 25-27) could mean that they were afraid that death would separate them after having once been together, but now that they are in the next world they are in a better state than they were before. It could also mean they were afraid of Allah's punishment in the hereafter. They then say, 'and so Allah has graced us with His favour...' (at-Tur: 25-27), i.e. out of His bounty, and given us more than we deserve out of His generosity and grace. He gave us gifts unaccompanied by harm or punishment: '...and has warded off from us all suffering through the scorching winds [of frustration]'. The Arabic word as-sumum (in Allah we seek refuge from it), refers to pure fire. It is called sumum because it penetrates through the pores of the skin.

إِنَّا كُنَّا مِن قَبۡلُ نَدۡعُوهُۖ إِنَّهُۥ هُوَ ٱلۡبَرُّ ٱلرَّحِيمُ ﴿٢٨﴾

We used to pray to Him: He is the Good, the Merciful One [28] (The Quran, at-Tur: 28)

Allah Glorified is He mentions here the reasons for their entering paradise and being saved from fire: it is because they frequently supplicated to Him.

They did not attribute it to their deeds, but to their supplication, humility, and hope in Allah. They called on Him as a merciful Lord, good and generous, hoping for the mercy which outstrips His anger. '...He alone is truly benign, a true dispenser of grace' (at-Tur: 28). The manifestation of His response was that He entered us into paradise. We moved on to better things without tiredness, worry, or sorrow. We moved on to bliss the likes of which had never occurred to us.

He is the '...truly benign...', i.e. the extremely generous and beneficent. The, '...true dispenser of grace' (at-Tur: 28), i.e. extremely merciful with His creation, for He is their Lord, Creator and guarantor. He created them from nothing and provided for them. He only made them legally responsible after puberty and the stabilisation of their intellects, along with other blessings

فَذَكِّرْ فَمَآ أَنتَ بِنِعْمَتِ رَبِّكَ بِكَاهِنٍ وَلَا مَجْنُونٍ ٢٩

So [Prophet] remind [people]. By the grace of your Lord [Prophet], you are neither oracle nor madman [29]
(The Quran, at-Tur: 29)

This is a commandment to The Messenger of Allah to remind his people. Reminding is to repeat what you have already informed somebody of, and to do it again and again. Reminding does not take place except after forgetfulness, and this is the nature upon which Allah has created man.

Reminding is beneficial in numerous ways. First it benefits the one who is reminding because when he does it he is rewarded for it. Then it benefits the believer whom he is reminding: 'yet go on reminding [all who would listen]: for, verily, such a reminder will profit the believers' (adh-Dhariyat: 55).

As the events of life pass by the believer, the purity of his belief may become clouded. Reminding him removes these clouds and wipes away the dust of heedlessness and forgetfulness. This is why Mu`adh may Allah be pleased with him would often ask The Messenger of Allah about matters that escaped him.

The Messenger of Allah said, 'Temptations will be presented to men's hearts as a reed mat is woven stick by stick. Any heart which rejects them will have a white mark put on it, while any heart which is permeated by them will have a black mark put on it. This will continue until there are two types of hearts: one white like a white stone which will not be harmed by any temptation as long as the heavens and the earth endure; and the other like a vessel on its side, not accepting what is good or rejecting what is detestable'.(1) One's reminders may benefit the disbelievers as well, the proof of which is that the leaders of disbelief in Mecca eventually came to faith through constant reminders. What is important is that the reminder encounters a pure heart so that it may extinguish the fervour of pre-Islamic ignorance.

We can see this in the story of `Umar's(2) acceptance to Islam; before Islam he was a tyrant, yet, when he heard the Quran, his heart softened and he was affected by it. This was because when he struck his sister and the blood flowed from her face, his feelings for her were stirred and along with them his compassion and thus his heart was softened. So when his heart opened up, the light of guidance entered and he submitted to Allah. Thus he benefited from being reminded.

(1) Narrated be Muslim in his Sahih (307), Ahmad in his Musnad (22343), Abu 'Uwanah in his Mustakhraj (112), Hadith of Hudhayfa ibn Al-Yaman

(2) Ibn Kathir mentions in As-Sira An-Nabawiyya [2/32] that `Umar ibn Al-Khattab went out bearing his sword searching for The Messenger of Allah and a group of his Companions, of whom he had been told that there were nearly 40 gathered in a house near As-Safa... [On his way] he met Na`im ibn `Abdullah who asked him, 'Where are you going `Umar?'

'I want Muhammad, this heretic who has divided Quraysh, muddled their minds, found fault with their religion and insulted their gods, so I may kill him,' he replied.

'By Allah `Umar you are deluded. Do you think the tribe of Bani `Abd Manaf will leave you to walk on earth after you have killed Muhammad? Why do you not return to your own family and set them straight?'

'And which of my family might that be?' 'Your son-in-law and paternal cousin Sa`id ibn Zayd and your sister Fatima; they have both entered Islam and followed Muhammad in his religion. It is them you should go after.' So 'Umar went back to his sister Fatima who was with Khubab ibn Al-'Aratt who was reading to her from a parchment on which was the chapter of Taha. When he entered he said, 'What was that murmuring I heard?' and he struck his son-in-law Sa`id ibn Zayd. His sister stood up to him to restrain him from her husband, so he struck her, breaking her skin. When `Umar saw what he had done to his sister he felt remorseful and said to her, 'Give me that parchment that you were reading just now. I want to see what this thing that Muhammad has brought is,' but his sister would not let him touch it until he had washed. When he read some of it he said, 'How good and noble this speech is!' So he went to where The Messenger of Allah and his Companions were and entered Islam.

‘...For, by your Lord’s grace, you are neither a soothsayer nor a madman’ (at-Tur: 29). The True Lord Glorified is He negates these accusations they have made against His Messenger peace be upon him and emphasises this negation by addressing his prophet. He says, ‘...you are neither...’. Then He uses the preposition ba’ when He says, ‘...a soothsayer (bi kahin)...’ meaning that there is not a trace of this attribute in you at all. A soothsayer is a diviner who claims knowledge of the unseen, and there were many of them at the time. They tended to have bodies different from those of normal men. There was, for example, a man named Shiqq Anmar who had one eye, half a nose, half a mouth, one hand and one foot. Our Lord chose to bestow upon the likes of these an element of acceptance. The devils would come and reveal things to them that they had overheard in the heavens before The Prophet was sent and before heavens being closed before them. They would mislead people with things that contained a little truth and a lot of falsehood, which they themselves would add so as to lead them astray. When these soothsayers spoke, people would listen to them. They would consult them and accept their opinions in both secular and religious matters.

Yet The Messenger of Allah peace be upon him was as far as it could be from their attributes. Similarly Allah negated his being mad. The madman has no intellect. He cannot put things into order, nor take care of his daily affairs. Was anything like this visible in the life of The Messenger of Allah? He was well known among them for the maturity of his intellect, his excellent character, his truthfulness and his trustworthiness. How could they say this when Allah praised him saying, ‘for, behold, you keep indeed to a sublime way of life’ (al-Qalam: 4).

When Allah says, ‘...For, by your Lord’s grace...’, it means that Allah’s blessings upon you are many, and among them is that, as He says, you are neither a soothsayer nor a madman. Alternatively it could mean, ‘remind by the grace of your Lord, not by the grace of a soothsayer or of a madman’.

Allah then negates another accusation against him saying:

أَمۡ يَقُولُونَ شَاعِرٞ نَّتَرَبَّصُ بِهِۦ رَيۡبَ ٱلۡمَنُونِ ٣٠
قُلۡ تَرَبَّصُواْ فَإِنِّي مَعَكُم مِّنَ ٱلۡمُتَرَبِّصِينَ ٣١

If they say, 'He is only a poet: we shall await his fate' [30]
Say, 'Wait if you wish; I too am waiting' [31]
(The Quran, at-Tur: 30 - 31)

After their schemes came to nothing and their accusations of soothsaying and madness did not stick, they called Him a poet, and in this too they failed because The Messenger of Allah came to a people who were as eloquent as could be. They knew rhetoric and they knew how to speak with precision. They knew poetry all too well, and they knew that what Muhammad peace be upon him was reciting to them was not poetry and neither had they seen him to be a poet before his election to Prophethood. This is why Allah Glorified is He said in refutation of their claims, 'Say: 'Had Allah willed it [otherwise], I would not have conveyed this [divine writ] to you, nor would He have brought it to your knowledge. Indeed, a whole lifetime have I dwelt among you before this [revelation came unto me]: will you not, then, use your reason?'' (Yunus: 16) Where are your intellects? I have lived amongst you for forty years and you have never seen me recite poetry. Has it suddenly come forth after forty years when it is well known that genius manifests in the second decade of life?

Then how could I guarantee that I would have this gift to bring such speech before I died? Furthermore I do not tell you that this is my speech. Rather this is from Allah, through revelation from Him, such is not granted to soothsayers, for soothsayers take their inspiration from the devils, '...And, verily, the evil impulses [within men's hearts] whisper unto those who have made them their own...' (al-An'am: 121) nor is it granted to madmen, sorcerers, or poets.

When these claims also failed, they said, '...Fables of ancient times' (al-Qalam: 15). They said that Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him would steal away(1) to a man from the people of the Book who would teach him this speech, but yet again the Quran exposed their falsehoods and self-contradiction. Allah has said, ‘And, indeed, full well do We know that they say, “It is but a human being that imparts [all] this to him!” – [not withstanding that] the tongue of him to whom they so maliciously point is wholly outlandish, whereas this is Arabic speech, clear [in itself] and clearly showing the truth [of its source].’ (an-Nahl: 103) Thus all these claims spring from obstinacy and enmity and none of them hold water with the intelligent person who reflects upon them.

(1) Yakhtalif ila fulan means, 'to visit and sit with him from time to time'.

They then say, ‘...let us await what time will do unto him’, i.e. we will wait and see what happens to him in life and wait for the death that will free us from him. So Allah replied, ‘Say: “Wait, [then,] hopefully; behold, I, too, shall hopefully wait with you!”’. The command here, ‘Say: “Wait...”’ (at-Tur: 30-31) is a threat, just as one may say to one’s enemy, ‘Do your worst!’ That is, do what you will, for whatever you do, you will get nothing from me.

So Allah tells them to wait as they wish, for they will not damage the believers, and their plots against them will come to nothing because they are in Allah’s care and under His watchful gaze. They already had experience of this. They harmed the believers through speech but they did not damage them. They harmed them physically but they did not renounce the Message. They harmed them through plots and schemes to kill them, but Allah turned their plans against them. When their outward schemes failed, they turned to secret plots using sorcerers and jinns, but still they did not achieve their goals and Allah thwarted their efforts.

So, wait as you like, and be sure that we are also waiting with you. Allah has illustrated this matter in another verse when He said, ‘Say: “Are you, perchance, hopefully waiting for something [bad] to happen to us – [the while nothing can happen to us] save one of the two best things? But as far as you are concerned, we are hopefully waiting for Allah to inflict chastisement upon you, [either] from Himself or by our hands! Wait, then, hopefully; behold, we shall hopefully wait with you!”’ (at-Tawba: 52) So, what are you waiting for? Either we gain victory over you or we are killed and achieve martyrdom. Both ways are good. We are waiting with you. Either Allah will punish you in the afterlife for your disbelief or He will punish you on our hands when we are victorious over you. So wait with us; your schemes will achieve nothing because we are in Allah's care and under His watchful gaze.

أَمۡ تَأۡمُرُهُمۡ أَحۡلَٰمُهُم بِهَٰذَآۚ أَمۡ هُمۡ قَوۡمٞ طَاغُونَ ﴿٣٢﴾

Does their reason really tell them to do this, or are they simply insolent people? [32]
(The Quran, at-Tur: 32)

The word ahlam (minds) refers to intellects. When their intellects, '...bid them [to take] this [attitude]...', i.e. of obstinacy and opposition to the call to Allah, it indicates the corruption of their thought and intellects. Had their intellects been left in the natural state in which they were created, and had they been liberated from passion, they would have come to faith in Allah and His Messenger, and not taken the stance they did.

'...Or are they [simply] people filled with overweening arrogance'? The True Lord repeats the word am (or) a number of times here to present all the possibilities that they had. The word taaghun (people filled with overweening arrogance) refers to people who have crossed the boundaries in disbelief, obstinacy, and opposition to the summons to Allah.

أَمۡ يَقُولُونَ تَقَوَّلَهُۥۚ بَل لَّا يُؤۡمِنُونَ ﴿٣٣﴾
فَلۡيَأۡتُواْ بِحَدِيثٖ مِّثۡلِهِۦٓ إِن كَانُواْ صَٰدِقِينَ ﴿٣٤﴾

If they say, 'He has made it up himself '– they certainly do not believe [33] let them produce one like it, if what they say is true [34] (The Quran, at-Tur: 33 - 34)

'...He himself has composed this [message]...', i.e. he fabricated it of his own accord. When this calumny failed to deceive, they said, '...It is but a human being that imparts [all] this to him...' (an-Nahl: 103), to which Allah replied, '...the tongue of him to whom they so maliciously point is wholly outlandish, whereas this is Arabic speech, clear [in itself] and clearly showing the truth [of its source].' (an-Nahl: 103) Here, The True Lord replies to them saying, '...Nay, but they are not willing to believe' (at-Tur: 33-34). Thus this is not an issue of the Quran being from Muhammad; rather, it is that they do not want to enter the realm of faith. This is it, out of obstinacy, oppression, and arrogance; they refuse to accept the truth, without thought or reflection. They know that all of these accusations that they try to affix to The Messenger of Allah or the Book of Allah are falsities invented by themselves to try to prevent Him from his mission. They know he is truthful, that the Quran is true and that it is from Allah, but they do not want to have faith.

For this reason, The True Lord teaches them sound ways to reflect that will bring them to the truth. He says to them, 'Say: "I counsel you one thing only: Be [ever-conscious of] standing before Allah, whether you are in pairs or alone (1); and then bethink yourselves [that] there is no madness in [this prophet,] your fellow-man..."' (Saba': 46). That is, leave your groupthink and your public speech because it will not bring you to the truth. If you use your intellects and think in a sound manner, you will necessarily arrive at the fact that Muhammad is truthful in that which he has brought.

The Quran invites them to reflect only so that this reflection might bring them to this reality. This is why we read so often, '...will they not, then, use their reason?' (Ya Sin: 68), and, '...will you not, then, keep this in mind?' (Yunus: 3), and, '...Will you not, then, take thought?' (al-An'am: 50)

Allah Glorified is He then says, 'But then, [if they deem it the work of a mere mortal,] let them produce another discourse like it – if what they say be true!' (at-Tur: 34) That is, if this Quran is fabricated as they claim, and then let them produce a fabricated recital like it. These were the most capable people in terms of speech, eloquence, and rhetoric; so much so that they even had market places for making speeches and reciting poetry. '...If they are truthful', i.e. in their claims!

---

(1) Ash-Shawkani said in "Fayd Al-Qadir" (Saba' 43): 'This refers to one's efforts to reach the truth with serious thought while in pairs or alone because larger groups distort thought'. Al-Alusi said in "Ruh Al-Ma`ani": 'Because usually in crowds one's thoughts become distorted and one is unable to reflect. Speech gets mixed up and there is little justice.'

أَمۡ خُلِقُواْ مِنۡ غَيۡرِ شَيۡءٍ أَمۡ هُمُ ٱلۡخَٰلِقُونَ ٣٥
أَمۡ خَلَقُواْ ٱلسَّمَٰوَٰتِ وَٱلۡأَرۡضَۚ بَل لَّا يُوقِنُونَ ٣٦

Were they created without any agent? Were they the creators? [35] Did they create the heavens and the earth? No! They do not have faith [36] (The Quran, at-Tur: 35 - 36)

The True Lord Glorified and Exalted is He presents them with the intellectual proofs that establish the truthfulness of His Messenger in conveying the Message from Allah. He expresses surprise at their deeds and how they deny Allah and oppose the mission of His Messenger peace be upon him.

So he asks them, '...Have they themselves been created without anything [that might have caused their creation]...' (at-Tur: 35-36)? How could such be when creation means to bring something out of nothing? Did they come into the universe just like that, without a creator? The intellect tells us that nothing can come into being without a creator even the smallest of things. Could we believe that this clear crystal glass that I am now drinking out of, after having drunk from mugs made from tin or pottery, came into being without a maker? Similarly this universe must have a creator.

Allah then moves to deal with another issue regarding creation: '...or were they, perchance, their own creators' (at-Tur: 35-36) i.e., the creators of this creation? In another place He says, 'Now if you ask those [who worship any being other than Allah] as to whom it is that has created them, they are sure to answer, "Allah."...' (az-Zukhruf: 87) Indeed they could say nothing else. Man came into this marvellous universe with its sun, moon, stars, earth, water, wind, sky and mountains, so how can he say, 'I created this,' when it is older than him? He cannot claim to have created himself, and even if he did, who was it who created his father and his descendants all the way back to Adam?

This sequence of logic brings us to a creator who himself was not created, and this is The True Lord. This is why Allah says afterwards, '[And] have they created the heavens and the earth? Nay, but they have no certainty of anything' (at-Tur: 35-36). If they are not able to create themselves, then how could they possibly have created the heavens and the earth? We have mentioned previously that no one has claimed this creation to be his own; a matter is given to the one who claims it if no opponent manifests himself, and no one has claimed to have created heavens and earth except Allah.

أَمۡ عِندَهُمۡ خَزَآئِنُ رَبِّكَ أَمۡ هُمُ ٱلۡمُصَۜيۡطِرُونَ ﴿٣٧﴾

Do they possess your Lord's treasures or have control over them? [37] (The Quran, at-Tur: 37)

That is, do they possess the storehouses of providence such they provide for whom they will and deprive whom they will? Do they possess the storehouses of mercy such that they can grant mercy to whom they will. '...Or are they in charge...' (at-Tur: 37), i.e. the possessors of ultimate power, to allow, forbid or vanquish whom they will? The answer of course is that they are neither this nor that. Allah only deprived them of rain, and they were starving until they ate the leaves of the trees and `alhaz (1), i.e. blood mixed with fur. Then they went to the uncle of The Prophet to seek rain through him (2).

They admitted that the storehouses were Allah's and that they had no hand in the matter. The proof of this is that one time they were rich and another poor, one time strong and another weak. So they had no control; rather, the storehouses are in the hands of one they hate and deny. Similarly they had no power over the keys of the universe or the outcome of matters. The proof of this is that, despite their great numbers on the day of the battle of Badr, the faithful minority defeated them; their leaders were captured and they had to come and negotiate with The Messenger of Allah for their ransom.

(1) Al-Jawhari said in "As-Sihah" under `Ala that 'al-`alhaz is a type of food they would make from blood and camel fur in years of famine'. An-Nawawi said in "Tahdhib Al-Lugha" under `Alhaz that, 'Abu Al-Haytham said, 'Al-`Alhaz is dried blood pounded with camel fur in times of hunger to be eaten'.'

(2) It is related on the authority of Anas who said, 'If there was a drought in the time of The Messenger of Allah, the people would ask him to pray for rain. He would pray and the rain would come. During the time of `Umar, there was a drought, so he brought out Al-`Abbas to seek rain through him saying, 'O Allah, if we had a drought in the time of Your Prophet, we would ask him to pray for rain and it would come. Now we turn to You through the uncle of our Prophet, so grant us rain.' And the rain came.' It was related by Ibn Abu ʿAsim in Al-Ahad wa Al-Mathani and Ibn Habban in his Sahih.

أَمۡ لَهُمۡ سُلَّمٞ يَسۡتَمِعُونَ فِيهِۖ فَلۡيَأۡتِ مُسۡتَمِعُهُم بِسُلۡطَٰنٖ مُّبِينٍ (٣٨)
أَمۡ لَهُ ٱلۡبَنَٰتُ وَلَكُمُ ٱلۡبَنُونَ (٣٩)

Do they have a ladder to climb, in order to eavesdrop [on Heaven's secrets]? Let their eavesdropper produce clear proof [38] Does God have daughters while you have sons? [39] (The Quran, at-Tur: 38 - 39)

Allah asks them if they have a ladder (sullam), i.e. a means to rise up into the heavens so that they might bring something like what The Prophet Muhammad has brought. So, this is an admission from them that there is something in heavens, but you do not have the means to reach it. Muhammad who has no ladder, revelation came to him from heavens.

'...Let, then, any of them who has listened [to it] produce a manifest proof [of his knowledge]' (at-Tur: 38-39). That is, if they do have somebody who has listened, then let him come forth with clear proof and disprove Prophet Muhammad's words.

Allah then goes on to say, 'Or, [if you believe in Allah, how can you believe that] He has [chosen to have] daughters, whereas you yourselves would have [only] sons'? This verse exposes their foolishness regarding the issue of daughters, in that they would prefer males and despise females.

The Quran mentioned them in this matter in Allah's saying, 'for whenever any of them is given the glad tiding of [the birth of] a girl, his face darkens, and he is filled with suppressed anger, [58] avoiding all people because of the [alleged] evil of the glad tiding which he has received, [and debating within himself:] Shall he keep this [child] despite the contempt [which he feels for it] – or shall he bury it in the dust... [59]' (an-Nahl: 58-59).

It mentions their burying of their daughters, saying, 'and when the girl-child that was buried alive is made to ask [8] for what crime she had been slain [9]' (at-Takwir: 8-9). Yet then they attribute the weaker sex to Allah and the stronger sex to themselves. Allah says, 'and [yet] they claim that the angels – who in themselves are but slaves to The Most Gracious – are females: [but] did they witness their creation? This false claim of theirs will be recorded, and they will be called to account [for it on Judgment Day]!' (az-Zukhruf: 19)

In another verse The True Lord mentions their transgression in this matter saying, ‘Why – for yourselves [you would choose only] male offspring, whereas to Him [you assign] female: [21] that, lo and behold, is an unfair division[22]’ (an-Najm: 21-22) which is an unjust and ill-allocated distribution, How could the weaker sex be for Allah and the stronger sex for you?

أَمۡ تَسۡـَٔلُهُمۡ أَجۡرٗا فَهُم مِّن مَّغۡرَمٖ مُّثۡقَلُونَ ٤٠

Do you [Prophet] demand a payment from them that would burden them with debt? [40]
(The Quran, at-Tur: 40)

The verses are still asking about the reason these people are rejecting and denying the path of The True Lord Glorified is He. Did The Messenger of Allah demand payment for his summons, such as weighed upon them and they were unable to bear it. The word maghram (debt) is money that is paid for other than a crime or somebody’s right. ‘...They would be burdened...’ (at-Tur: 40), i.e., overwhelmed and unable to pay it.

The Quran has mentioned in several places that the Messengers did not seek any reward for calling people; that their rewards for that lay with Allah who sent them. Allah says that prophets used to say, ‘...I have asked no reward whatever of you: my reward rests with none but Allah...’ (Yunus: 72).

أَمۡ عِندَهُمُ ٱلۡغَيۡبُ فَهُمۡ يَكۡتُبُونَ ٤١

Do they have [access to] the unseen? Could they write it down? [41] (The Quran, at-Tur: 41)

Or perhaps they have attained knowledge of the unseen and come to know that they will be leaders in the next world just as they were leaders in this one, and that their afterlife will be better than this one, like the one who said, ‘...But even if ... I am brought before my Lord, I will surely find something even better than this as [my last] resort’ (al-Kahf: 36). Thus it means that your mission does not bother them O Muhammad because they think they are going to paradise any way!

أَمْ يُرِيدُونَ كَيْدًا ۖ فَالَّذِينَ كَفَرُوا هُمُ الْمَكِيدُونَ ﴿٤٢﴾

Do they think they can ensnare you?
It is the disbelievers who have been ensnared [42]
(The Quran, at-Tur: 42)

That is, are they scheming against you? The word kayd refers here to plotting and planning in secret to harm The Messenger of Allah peace be upon him. The danger of such schemes is that they are formulated in secret, and thus one cannot see them to oppose them. They are the affair of the weak who are unable to face opposition. When the opportunity presents itself, they do not waste it. As the poet said:

When the weak one found the opportunity,
she killed, for that is the nature of the weak.

Allah then says, '...But they who are bent on denying the truth...', i.e. these plotters and planners, '...it is they who are truly entrapped'. Just as Allah says in another verse, '...Yet [in the end,] such evil scheming will engulf none but its authors...' (Fatir: 43) because when they plot, they must hide their scheme from their peers, yet when Allah has plans for them no-one can protect them, and His plans for the disbelievers are painful and severe. The word al-makidun is a passive participle and means that they are the objects of His plans.

The proof that Allah has frustrated their plans is that He thwarted their plots against The Messenger of Allah peace be upon him; indeed, their plots turned against them. On the night of the Emigration they gathered to kill him, and conspired against him such that his blood would fall upon all the tribes together, yet despite their planning and scheming, it was they who were mocked; dust was thrown upon their heads, while he peace be upon him was saved and unharmed.

أَمْ لَهُمْ إِلَٰهٌ غَيْرُ اللَّهِ ۚ سُبْحَانَ اللَّهِ عَمَّا يُشْرِكُونَ ﴿٤٣﴾

Do they really have another god besides God?
God is far above anything they set alongside Him [43]
(The Quran, at-Tur: 43)

This is another rhetorical question. What is it that has turned you away from Allah's summons? Do they have some other god beside The One True

God? And if so then what does he have to do with the creation of the heavens and earth? Why does he remain silent and not answer?

Allah Glorified and Exalted is He refutes them in this matter saying, '...If there were – as some people assert – [other] deities side by side with Him, surely [even] they would have to strive to find a way unto Him who is enthroned on His almightiness' (al-Isra': 42).

Then the end of this verse clarifies the question at its beginning: '...Utterly remote is Allah, in His limitless glory...' (*at-Tur:*43), i.e., transcendent and high above, '...anything to which men may ascribe a share in His divinity' (*at-Tur:*43), and the claims they make. Allah is One, Unique, Singular, the Self-Sufficing. He has no son and He has no associates, and there is nothing like unto Him.

وَإِن يَرَوۡاْ كِسۡفٗا مِّنَ ٱلسَّمَآءِ سَاقِطٗا يَقُولُواْ سَحَابٞ مَّرۡكُومٞ ﴿٤٤﴾

Even if they saw a piece of heaven falling down on them, they would say, Just a heap of clouds [44]
(The Quran, at-Tur: 44)

The Lord Glorified and Exalted is He said in another verse, 'then He makes them into a mass, and you see the rain emerge from within it' (an-Nur: 43)

See how they are deceived by the outward of the universe. They think it is for their benefit when in fact it is an affliction and a punishment. When they see a cloud coming towards them they think it is bringing them rain and goodness, but then it rains down punishment upon them.

This message is clear in Allah's saying, 'And so, when they beheld it in the shape of a dense cloud approaching their valleys, they exclaimed, "This is but a heavy cloud which will bring us [welcome] rain!" [But Hud said:] "Nay, but it is the very thing which you [so contemptuously] sought to hasten– a wind bearing grievous suffering, [24] bound to destroy everything at its Sustainer's behest!" And then they were so utterly wiped out that nothing could be seen save their [empty] dwellings' (al-Ahqaf: 24-25).

Here Allah Glorified and Exalted is He says,

فَذَرْهُمْ حَتَّىٰ يُلَٰقُوا۟ يَوْمَهُمُ ٱلَّذِى فِيهِ يُصْعَقُونَ ﴿٤٥﴾
يَوْمَ لَا يُغْنِى عَنْهُمْ كَيْدُهُمْ شَيْـًٔا وَلَا هُمْ يُنصَرُونَ ﴿٤٦﴾

So leave them, Prophet, until they face the Day when they will be thunderstruck [45] the Day when their snares will be of no use to them, when they will get no help [46] (The Quran, at-Tur: 45 - 46)

‘Hence, leave them alone...’ (at-Tur: 45), i.e. turn away from them and leave them be because there is no hope for them and there is no benefit to be gained from them, so leave them and do not overburden yourself trying to guide them. Allah Glorified and Exalted is He also said to Him, ‘...your only duty is a clear delivery of the message [entrusted to you]’ (an-Nahl: 82), so leave them, ‘...until they face that [Judgment] Day of theirs, when they will be stricken with terror’ (at-Tur: 45). That is, they will be afflicted by death and destruction. What is referred to here is the Day of Judgement. Then Allah Glorified and Exalted is He clarifies this Day some more saying, ‘the Day when none of their scheming will be of the least avail to them...’ (at-Tur: 46), i.e. their scheming against The Messenger of Allah peace and blessings be upon him and their conspiracies against him. ‘...And they will receive no succour’ (at-Tur: 46), i.e. Allah Glorified and Exalted is He will not help them, nor will anyone else be able to defend them from the punishment, for the command will be Allah’s alone on that Day

وَإِنَّ لِلَّذِينَ ظَلَمُوا۟ عَذَابًا دُونَ ذَٰلِكَ وَلَٰكِنَّ أَكْثَرَهُمْ لَا يَعْلَمُونَ ﴿٤٧﴾

Another punishment awaits the evildoers, though most of them do not realize it [47] (The Quran, at-Tur: 47)

Those intended here are the disbelievers of Mecca, for they oppressed themselves through their disbelief and prevented themselves from attaining the everlasting blessings in the afterlife they would have attained had they believed. As Allah Glorified and Exalted is He said, ‘...and no wrong did We do to them, but it was they who persistently wronged themselves’ (an-Nahl: 118). Such as these will have, ‘...suffering in store [even] closer at hand...’

(at-Tur: 47), i.e. than the punishment of the afterlife; they will be punished in this world, '...but most of them are not aware of it' (at-Tur: 47).

وَٱصۡبِرۡ لِحُكۡمِ رَبِّكَ فَإِنَّكَ بِأَعۡيُنِنَاۖ وَسَبِّحۡ بِحَمۡدِ رَبِّكَ حِينَ تَقُومُ ﴿٤٨﴾
وَمِنَ ٱلَّيۡلِ فَسَبِّحۡهُ وَإِدۡبَٰرَ ٱلنُّجُومِ ﴿٤٩﴾

Wait patiently [Prophet] for your Lord's judgement: you are under Our watchful eye. Celebrate the praise of your Lord when you rise [48] Glorify Him at night and at the fading of the stars [49] (The Quran, at-Tur: 48 - 49)

This is a commandment to our master Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him to have patience waiting for Allah's decree. It is a commandment accompanied by such care and concern as is reserved only for Prophet Muhammad and Prophet Nuh (Noah) peace be upon them for his Lord addressed him saying, '...Build, under Our eyes and according to Our inspiration, the ark...' (al-Mu'minun: 27). Thus Allah Glorified and Exalted is He consoles His Messenger and comforts him: Bear with patience O Muhammad the harm of your people. You are under our watchful eye, care, and protection, so do not be concerned about what they do. This is a station that Prophet Musa (Moses) peace be upon him was also given in Allah's saying, 'and I bestowed upon you love from Me that you would be brought up under My eye' [Ta Ha: 39].

So, Allah's saying, '...or indeed, you are in Our eyes ...' (at-Tur: 48) is a higher station that is appropriate to the rank of Muhammad, the master of the Prophets peace and blessings be upon him.

'And exalt [Allah] with praise of your Lord when you arise' (at-Tur: 48), i.e. glorify Him and praise Him at the same time. 'when you arise' (at-Tur: 48), i.e. when you rise from your seat say, 'Glory be to Allah,' and, 'All praise is for Allah,' and it will be an expiation for anything that may have happened in your gathering. It is purification for the end of gathering. The words qu`ud and julus both refer to the same type of sitting, but qu`ud means sitting down from being standing, whereas julus means sitting up from lying down. We say that someone was lying down and then he sat up (jalas), or he was standing up and then he sat down (qa`ad).

‘When you arise’ (at-Tur: 48) could also mean when you rise from sleep praise and glorify Allah for returning your soul to your body and replenishing your energy after your sleep. Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him taught us to say when we wake up, ‘Glory be to the One Who brought us to life after giving us death, and unto Him is the resurrection,’(1) and when getting up from a gathering to read the chapter of al-`Asr as an expiation for anything that may have happened during it (2).

Similarly, ‘and extol His glory at night...’ (at-Tur: 49), i.e., glorify Allah throughout the night, at its beginning and at its end, ‘...and at the time when the stars retreat’ (at-Tur: 49), i.e. at the very end of the night when the stars go dim. Thus it means one should glorify Allah at all these times, a continuous glorification because Allah Glorified and Exalted is He has given you many blessings and more that are specific to you that necessitate this praise and adoration.

(1) It is narrated on the authority of Hudhayfa ibn Al-Yaman may Allah be pleased with him that he said, ‘When Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him went to bed he would say, ‘In Your Name do I die and live,’ and when he rose he would say, ‘All Praise is for Allah who brought us to life after giving us death, and unto Him is the resurrection’. It was related by Al-Bukhari in his Sahih [5837, 5839], and Muslim relates it in his Sahih on the authority of Al-Bara’ ibn `Azib may Allah be pleased with him [4886].

(2) It is narrated on the authority of the Companion Abu Madina Ad-Darimi that if two of the Companions of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him met, they would not part until one had read to the other: “Consider the flight of time! [1] Verily, man is bound to lose himself [2]” (al-'Asr: 1-2), and then one of them would wish peace unto the other. [It is related by A-Ṭabarani in Al-Mu`jam Al-Awsaṭ 5281].

an-Najm

In the Name of God, the Most Merciful, the Dispenser of Mercy

The chapter of an-Najm(1) (The Star):

وَٱلنَّجْمِ إِذَا هَوَىٰ ١ مَا ضَلَّ صَاحِبُكُمْ وَمَا غَوَىٰ ٢

By the star when it sets! [1] Your companion has not strayed; he is not deluded [2]
(The Quran, an-Najm: 1-2)

Here, Allah swears by whatever He wills from among His created things, and here He swears by the star. In the Arabic phrase wa-an-najm, the letter waw is used to introduce something which is sworn by, which in this case is an-najm usually referring to a star. The word an-najm has two meanings, the first of which is a celestial body in the sky such as the sun and the moon. In this sense Allah the Glorified and Exalted has said: 'as well as [various other] means of orientation: for [it is] by the stars that men find their way' (an-Nahl: 16), in other words, as they travel by night. Another connotation of an-najm is herbage which has no stalk and which camels graze upon in the desert.

Allah the Glorified and Exalted has combined both meanings in His utterance: '[At His behest] the sun and the moon run their appointed courses; [5] [before

(1) The chapter of an-Najm is number 53 in the arrangement of the Noble Quran, comprising a total of 62 verses. It was entirely revealed in Mecca according to the opinion of Al-Hasan Al-Basri, ʿIkrimah, ʿAtaʾ and Jabir. According to Ibn ʿAbbas and Qatada one verse is an exception to this and was revealed in Medina, this being His utterance: "As for those who avoid the [truly] grave sins and shameful deeds..." (an-Najm: 32). It has also been said that the entire chapter was revealed in Medina; however, Al-Qurtubi states in his Tafsir (9/6483): 'It is correct that it was revealed in Mecca based on Ibn Masʿud's related statement that it was the first verse which Prophet Muhammad proclaimed publicly in Mecca.'

Him] prostrate themselves the stars and the trees. [6]' (ar-Rahman: 5-6) A poet likewise combined the two meanings when he said:

I observe the stars in my journeying towards her
And my camel grazes upon herbage of the wasteland.

Just contemplate here the precision of the wording of the Quran, as the sun and the moon signify the celestial bodies (an-najm) of the sky, and the trees denote by association the herbage (an-najm) of the earth. All prostrate to Allah the Glorified and Exalted and the greatest thing and the most insignificant thing submit to Him; everything is obedient to the same degree.

In another passage He the Glorified and Exalted says: 'Nay, indeed, I swear by the mansions of the stars – [75] and, behold, this is indeed a most solemn affirmation, if you but knew it! [76]' (al-Waqi'a: 75-76) Hence, swearing an oath by the stars is an oath sworn by a tremendous sign of the signs of Allah. The swearing of an oath by the stars here is specific to a particular state from among their states.

The opening verse (wa-an-najm idha hawa) means that the star has fallen. Now the star is a distinguishable mark in the sky which guides the traveller and shows him the way; therefore, when it falls, guidance is prevented and the usefulness is halted. However, Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him has not lost his way nor has he become deluded.

The next verse: 'This fellow-man of yours has not gone astray, nor is he deluded' (an-Najm: 2) comprises the concluding clause of the oath. It is as if He the Glorified and Exalted were saying: Even if the star which guides travellers falls, the star of Muhammad will never fall. The stars of the sky lead to material things which are bound by time, while the star of Muhammad leads to moral values and spiritual phenomena which are enduring, everlasting.

As for the meaning of '...has not gone astray...' (an-Najm: 2), this is to say that he has not turned aside from the truth, nor inclined away from it, and he has not deviated from the path of correct guidance. With respect to the phrase: 'fellow-man...' (an-Najm: 2), as expressed in the Arabic sahibu-kum, this refers to Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him since the companion (sahib) of a people is one of them, beloved by them and possessing stature among them. Finally, concerning the passage: ‘...nor is he deluded’ (an-Najm: 2), delusion (al-ghawaya) is to hold false convictions, and Muhammad never believed in any false convictions even before the beginning of his prophetic mission.

وَمَا يَنطِقُ عَنِ ٱلْهَوَىٰٓ ﴿٣﴾ إِنْ هُوَ إِلَّا وَحْىٌ يُوحَىٰ ﴿٤﴾
عَلَّمَهُۥ شَدِيدُ ٱلْقُوَىٰ ﴿٥﴾ ذُو مِرَّةٍ فَٱسْتَوَىٰ ﴿٦﴾

He does not speak from his own desire [3] The Quran is nothing less than a revelation that is sent to him [4] It was taught to him by [an angel] with mighty powers [5] and great strength, who stood [6] (The Quran, an-Najm: 3 - 6)

These verses are an extension of the concluding clause of the oath: ‘This fellow-man of yours has not gone astray, nor is he deluded’ (an-Najm: 2). Here, Allah the Glorified and Exalted swears by another attribute of Prophet Muhammad: ‘and neither does he speak out of his own desire’ (an-Najm: 3). In this verse, the Arabic word an-nutq, used as a verb and translated as ‘speak’ means utterance. In other words, he does not make statements based upon his own capricious inclination, and does not bring forth anything from himself, nor through his own independent judgement.

The initial phrase of the following verse, expressed in Arabic as in huwa and translated as ‘that [which he conveys to you] is’ means ‘it is not’, whereby ‘it’ refers to the Noble Quran to which Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him gave voice. There follows: ‘...but [a divine] inspiration with which he is being inspired’ (an-Najm: 4), this is to say that it comes from Allah the Glorified and Exalted. This comprises succinctness of expression signifying: The Quran is only divinely inspired revelation and nothing else.

As regards the next verse: ‘something that a very mighty one has imparted to him’ (an-Najm: 5), this means that the one who taught Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him and inspired him with the revelation is ‘...a very mighty one...’ (an-Najm: 5), ‘Mighty One’ being the guardian of divine inspiration, Jibril (Gabriel) peace be upon him. In this verse, the Arabic word al-quwa, signifying powers, is the plural of quwwa, for he has numerous powers which accord with his function. He possesses the power of intelligence with respect to reception, the power of preservation, the power of transmission, and the power of delivery. He has in him no whimsical desire which might alter that which has come to him, nor any trace of traitorous deception or falsehood. These are the attributes which have protected the Quran from alteration as previous scriptures have been altered.

Allah the Glorified and Exalted said of the people of the Scripture: 'Woe, then, unto those who write down, with their own hands, [something which they claim to be] divine writ, and then say, 'This is from Allah,' in order to acquire a trifling gain thereby…' (al-Baqara: 79).

With respect to the phrase '...a very mighty one...' (an-Najm: 5), Allah the Glorified and Exalted clarified this in other verses wherein it is said, even with reference to the Quran before it descended: 'Behold, it is a truly noble discourse, [77] [conveyed unto man] in a well-guarded divine writ [78] which none but the pure [of heart] can touch [79]' (al-Waqi'a: 77-79). Elsewhere, He said: 'trustworthy divine inspiration has alighted with it from on high' (ash-Shu'ara': 193); and He also said: 'with strength endowed, secure with Him who in almightiness is enthroned [20] [the word] of one to be heeded, and worthy of trust! [21]' (at-Takwir: 20-21) All of these are the attributes combined in Jibril.

In the verse under study, He said of Jibril: '[an angel] endowed with surpassing power, who in time manifested himself in his true shape and nature' (an-Najm: 6). The Arabic phrase dhu mirra, translated as 'with strength endowed', means the possessor of mirra which is strength and efficacy (quwwah) in everything it undertakes. It is precision which does not err. Al-mirra is a trait of tenacity and constancy which strengthens things. For example, when you see a rope as it is being twisted together, its manner of plaiting is suited to its function; thus, a clothesline, for example, is not the same as a rope which holds the sails of boats in place.

Likewise, the function of Jibril peace be upon him with Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him is to perform this function with strength, precision and intelligence in such a manner as to appear to Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him in an acceptable form which will not be rejected, a form which engenders a longing for receiving divine inspiration so that the human nature of Muhammad does not reject it. Similarly, the speech itself possesses sweetness because it is the speech of Allah and not the speech of men, and it has certain outward manifestations which signify it, and which point to its divine origin.

When divine inspiration first came to Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him it was a very great strain on him. This is because it was the first time in which the human nature and the angelic nature encountered one another, and therefore he exuded sweat and became cold, saying: 'Wrap me up, cover me up!' Hence, he was affected in his body and in his soul, to the degree that he was afraid that what had happened to him was something related to the influence of Satan.

When he informed our lady Khadijah may Allah be pleased with her of the situation, and she possessed sagacity in these matters, she told him: 'When he comes to you, inform me.' Then when divine inspiration came to him, he informed her, whereupon she sat on his knee and asked him: 'Can you see him?' He said: {Yes.} Then she laid her chest bare and asked: 'Can you see him?' He said: {No.} She said: 'Hence he is an angel and not a devil.'(1)

Take a moment to contemplate the judiciousness of Khadija peace be upon her and that which she possessed of understanding before the advent of Islam. It is as if Allah the Glorified and Exalted had prepared certain people from among men and women who would be receptive to its first communication, and would support it and believe steadfastly in it without waiting for a miracle they could witness in order to have faith in it. This is because for them the miracle of The Messenger of Allah was extant in his person and in his comportment among them. His miracle from their perspective was in his truthfulness, his trustworthiness, his generosity, and his virtuous character.

(1) This narration is narrated by Ibn Sayyid An-Nas in ʿUyun Al-Athar (1/117) as related by Ismaʿi ibn Abu Hakim, a subordinate client of the house of Az-Zubayr, who recounted that Khadijah said to Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him: 'O son of my paternal uncle, are you able to inform me of this your companion [i.e., Gabriel] who comes to you when he comes to you?' He said: {Yes.} She said: 'So when he comes, then tell me about him.' Then Gabriel came and so The Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him said: {O Khadijah, this is Gabriel who has come to me.} Thereupon, she told him: 'Get up, O son of my paternal uncle, and sit on my left thigh.' So The Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him got up and sat on her. She asked: 'Do you see him?' He said: {Yes.} Then she had him sit on her right thigh, and then in her lap, and each time he responded: {Yes.} Then she became distressed and cast aside her head shawl as The Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him was sitting in her lap, and subsequently she asked him: 'Do you see him?' He said: {No.} Thereupon she said: 'O son of my paternal uncle, be assured and of good cheer, for by Allah he is indeed an angel, this is not a devil.'

In this context it is sufficient for us to mention the stand taken by Abu Bakr As-Siddiq when people said to him: ‘Verily your companion claims that he is a prophet and that divine inspiration comes to him.’ Whereupon As-Siddiq, who was just returning from a journey, said: ‘If he had said this, then he has spoken the truth.’(1) Hence, the proof of his truthfulness in the eyes of As-Siddiq is that he says it, the mere fact of his uttering it, it sufficient for his statement to be believed.

This meaning is evident in His utterance: ‘Muhammad is Allah’s Apostle…’ (al-Fath: 29), in other words, it is sufficient as regards his identification that he is Muhammad, whom you all know, that he is Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him. The station of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him among his people does not require description or definition beyond this.

It might have been expected from them to say: ‘And who is more deserving of the mission of prophethood than him?’ However, instead they said, as the Quran relates: ‘…Why was not this Quran bestowed from on high on some great man of the two cities?’ (az-Zukhruf: 31)

(1) It is narrated by A-Bayhaqi in Dala’il An-Nubuwwa (2/361) on the authority of ‘A’isha that she said: “When Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him was taken on his night journey to Al-Aqsa Mosque [in Jerusalem], he began to tell people about this, and some people who had previously believed in him and put faith in his words became apostates. Some of these rushed to Abu Bakr and told him: ‘What do you think of your companion who claims that he was taken on a night journey to Jerusalem.’ He responded: ‘Did he really say that?’ They replied: ‘Yes’. Thereupon he stated: ‘If he indeed said that, then he has spoken the truth.’ They then said: ‘You mean you actually believe that he went this last night to Jerusalem and returned before morning?’ He replied: ‘Yes, for verily I believe him in that which is even more remote than this. I believe him in what he conveys from heaven in the early morning and in the evening.’ So it is for this reason that he was called As-Siddiq.” This narration is likewise narrated by Al-Hakim in his Mustadrak (6213, 63).

Returning to the verse under study above, '[an angel] endowed with surpassing power...' (an-Najm: 6), another meaning of the original Arabic phrase dhu mirra, is one possessed of excellent character and handsome appearance. Now, Jibril used to come to Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him in a good-looking form which he liked, and He peace and blessings be upon him used to appreciate the appearance of a man called Dahiya Al-Kalbi(1) so Jibril used to come in his form.(2)

Hence, the Arabic expression dhu mirra encompasses in meaning every good attribute which will render Jibril acceptable and unobjectionable. Yet with this power is also attributed to him, for when he manifested himself to Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him in his true form, he appeared in the form of a beautiful flying creature with wings. As He the Glorified and Exalted said: '…endowed with wings, two, or three, or four. [Unceasingly] He adds to His creation whatever He wills…' (Fatir: 1). As an illustration of his power it suffices that he smote the villages of Lot with one feather of his wing, thereby smashing them and turning their most elevated portions into their lowest portions.

(1) Dahiya Al-Kalbi's full name was Dahiya ibn Khalifa ibn Farwa ibn Fadala Al-Kalbi. He was a Companion whom Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him sent with his message to the Byzantine Emperor (Qaysar), calling him to Islam. He was present at many military campaigns, among them the Battle of Yarmuk; then he settled in Damascus, residing in Al-Mizza. He lived until the Caliphate of Muʿawiyah and died in the year 45 AH. (This information is taken from Az-Zirikli's Al-A'lam 2/337).

(2) It was narrated by At-Tabarani in Al-Muʿjam Al-Kabi (707) as related by Anas ibn Malik that The Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him used to say: {Gabriel comes to me in the appearance of Dahiya Al-Kalbi.} Anas added: Dahiya was a handsome man of fair complexion. It was also related by Al-Bayhaqi in Dalaʾil An-Nubuwwa (1361) as related by ʿAʾisha that Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him heard the sound of a vigorous jumping, so he went out towards it and I followed him to see what it was. Then there he was, leaning against the mane of his horse, and behold it was Dahiya Al-Kalbi—as far as I could perceive—and there he was bound in a turban with the slack part of it hanging between his shoulders. When Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him came back in to my dwelling, I said: 'There was vigorous jumping sound and so I left and went to see and lo there was Dahiya Al-Kalbi.' He said: {Did you actually see him?} I replied: 'Yes'. He then said: {That was Gabriel who ordered me to march on Banu Qurayzha}.

And what can enable you to grasp the status of the one who taught Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him as expression in the verse: ‘something that a very mighty one has imparted to him’ (an-Najm: 5)? Now, the student increases in dignity and honour according to the dignity and honour of the teacher. This is similar to when we see an articulate preacher who does not make a single linguistic mistake in his sermon, and hence we say: ‘Yes, indeed, for the one who taught him is so-and-so.’ Likewise, the one who taught Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him is Jibril peace be upon him with all that he possesses of the attributes of power, intelligence, trustworthiness and honesty; in summary: dhu mirra.

As regards the final phrase of the last verse above, fa-stawa, translated interpretatively as ‘who in time manifested himself in his true shape and nature’, it signifies that Jibril taught him to the point where Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him attained to a firmly established station (istawa) and matured through a process of sufficient learning in order to provide guidance to the world. He then entrusted him with this mission to guide people. Along these same lines, we have His utterance with regard to Prophet Musa (Moses): ‘Now when [Moses] reached full manhood and had become mature [of mind] (istawa) We bestowed upon him the ability to judge [between right and wrong] as well as [innate] knowledge: for thus do We reward the doers of good.’ (al-Qasas: 14)

However, in its initial period divine inspiration was burdensome for Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him as Allah the Glorified and Exalted says: ‘...We shall bestow upon you a weighty message’ (al-Muzzammil: 5). So, Allah the Glorified and Exalted wished to relieve His Messenger of this strain in order to give him the opportunity to taste the sweetness of what he was conveying unto him, and in order that he might long for it once again. Thus, divine inspiration would be lighter on his heart and its hardships made easier for him.

It is well known that a person normally bears difficulty for the sake of that which he loves. Hence, when divine inspiration subsided from Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him for a period of six months, the adversaries of the message took advantage of this opportunity, saying: ‘Verily

Muhammad's Lord has forsaken him. Exalted be Allah, only now and during a period of tribulation, they acknowledge Muhammad's Lord. For this reason Allah the Glorified and Exalted refuted them: 'Consider the bright morning hours, [1] and the night when it grows still and dark. [2] Thy Sustainer has not forsaken you, nor does He scorn you: [3] for, indeed, the life to come will be better for you than this earlier part [of your life]! [4] And, indeed, in time will thy Sustainer grant you [what your heart desires], and you shall be well-pleased. [5]' (ad-Duha: 1-5)

In other words: 'Your Lord has not forsaken you, O Muhammad, nor has he scorned you. Rather, he has desired that you have a restful respite.' Then He provides him with analogies drawn from the actual movements of the cosmos: 'For in your relationship to divine inspiration you are only like the bright morning hours and the night. The bright morning hours are for toil, and the night is for rest. Then morning comes again in order that you might face it with renewed energy and strength. Similarly, divine inspiration will come back to you, and will be more beloved to you and easier on you. And the latter portion of your life—or the Hereafter—will be better for you than the initial portion.

It must also be stressed that the Arabic word al-wadaʿ, meaning farewell, as employed as a verb in the verse: 'Thy Sustainer has not forsaken you (waddaʿa-ka), nor does He scorn you' (ad-Duha: 3), signifies love in its essence. For He did not say 'spurn you', for example, but rather 'bid you farewell', and bidding farewell is done in the hope of meeting again, just as a beloved bids farewell to his loved one when he embarks upon a journey.

وَهُوَ بِٱلۡأُفُقِ ٱلۡأَعۡلَىٰ ﴿٧﴾ ثُمَّ دَنَا فَتَدَلَّىٰ ﴿٨﴾ فَكَانَ قَابَ قَوۡسَيۡنِ أَوۡ أَدۡنَىٰ ﴿٩﴾

On the highest horizon [7] and then approached — coming down [8] until he was two bow-lengths away or even closer[9] (The Quran, an-Najm: 7-9)

It is said that the discourse here concerns Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him inasmuch as he was in the highest part of the horizon during the voyage of the night journey and ascension (al-Israʾ wa-al-Miʿraj).

In this respect, He the Glorified and Exalted said: ‘And, indeed, he saw him descend a second time [13] by the lote-tree of the farthest limit [14]’ (an-Najm: 13-14).

This is to say that Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him saw Jibril peace be upon him once on the earth and once in the heaven. There follows: ‘and then drew near, and came close, [8] until he was but two bow-lengths away, or even nearer [9]’ (an-Najm: 8-9). In other words, after Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him had become firmly established in spiritual maturity, and had attained the objective which qualified him to carry out his mission of conveying the message from his Lord, he was exposed to many hardships and wrongs from his people in both word and deed in Mecca. The situation reached such an impasse that he sought protection in the city of Ta’if where they goaded their foolhardy youths against him who threw stones at him until they bloodied his two feet. In the same year came the death of his wife Khadija—who used to mitigate the vexation of that which he encountered from his people—as well as the death of his paternal uncle Abu Taleb, who used to protect him and defend him against the enmity of Quraysh.

It is for this reason that this year was called ‘the year of sadness’, as you know. Then, when He peace and blessings be upon him returned from Mecca, he returned with a broken spirit. He was unable to find anyone in Mecca who could assure his security to reside in his own house. Just as he found it impossible to find support in Ta’if, he found it impossible to find a protecting guardian in Mecca, until at last Al-Mutʿim ibn ʿUdai received him—and he was a disbeliever—who then granted him his sworn protection to take up residence there. This illustrates to us that Allah the Glorified and Exalted may provide assistance to His Prophet and his message even by means of a disbeliever.

Therefore, Allah the Glorified and Exalted wished to heal the spirit of His Prophet, and to compensate him for the mistreatment of the people of the earth towards him. Hence, He told him: ‘If this is the welcome reception of the people of the earth for you, then I will show you the welcome reception of the residents of heaven.’ Consequently, He took him on the voyage of the night journey and ascension that it might provide consolation for Him peace and blessings be upon him it was there that he saw the horizon’s loftiest part, while he was two bow-lengths away, or even nearer, from the station of his

Lord the Glorified and Exalted. It is this which is meant by His utterance: ‘for, indeed, the life to come will be better for thee than this earlier part [of thy life]!’ (ad-Duha: 4)

After that Allah the Glorified and Exalted made His religion triumphant and provided aide to His Prophet, causing the adherents of disbelief and the leaders of Quraysh to fall down one after the other. Thus, was the unfolding of events until even Khalid ibn Al-Walid would say to ʿAmr ibn Al-ʿAs: O ʿAmr! Verily the distinctive sign of your companion has risen upright—that is to say, the situation has become well-established for Muhammad — and his star has ascended and there is no longer anyone who can resist him.(1) Thus, there is nothing for us to do but to go to him and believe in him.’ Later Mecca was conquered and people embraced Islam in successive masses.

Hence, the discourse here: ‘and then drew near, and came close’ (an-Najm: 8) means that Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him drew near to the station of his Lord, and to the lote-tree of the farthest limit (sidrat al-muntaha). Concerning the verse: ‘until he was but two bow-lengths away, or even nearer’ (an-Najm: 9), this means the extent of two bow-lengths, with the bow being the well-known instrument for shooting arrows. The final phrase of this verse, ‘...or even nearer’ (an-Najm: 9) signifies ‘or closer than that’, with the Arabic particle aw, translated as ‘or’ denoting an affirmation of the extent of two bow-lengths away. This usage is similar to that of another passage in which He the Glorified and Exalted said: ‘And [then] We sent him [once again] to [his people,] a hundred thousand [souls] or more’ (as-Saffat: 147). This is because the increase alluded to confirms the existence of the number one hundred thousand inasmuch as this amount is not be diminished but only augmented. The same is true for the proximity of two bow-lengths or closer than two bow-lengths.

There are some commentators who believe that the words here refer to Jibril. Hence, they interpret the Arabic phrase fa-stawa, rendered above as: ‘…who in time manifested himself in his true shape and nature’ (an-Najm: 6), to mean that Jibril peace be upon him appeared to Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him in his actual form, and with his wings which blocked the horizon. Furthermore, they understand the verse: ‘and then drew near, and came close’ (an-Najm: 8), as signifying that Jibril peace be upon him came close to Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him. Finally, in their opinion, the verse: ‘until he was but two bow-lengths away, or even nearer’ (an-Najm: 9) means that he came near to Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him until he was this distance away from him.

(1) This Hadith is narrated by Al-Harith in Al-Bughya (chapter 27, Hadith 1032). It was likewise related by Al-Hakim in his Mustadrak (5299, 5947), and it was cited by Al-Haythami in Mujmaʿ Az-zawaʾid (4/281) who attributed it to Ahmad and At-Tabarani.

فَأَوۡحَىٰٓ إِلَىٰ عَبۡدِهِۦ مَآ أَوۡحَىٰ (١٠) مَا كَذَبَ ٱلۡفُؤَادُ مَا رَأَىٰٓ (١١)

And revealed to God’s servant what He revealed [10]
[The Prophet’s] own heart did not distort what he saw [11]
(The Quran, an-Najm: 10-11)

This is to say that Allah the Glorified and Exalted revealed unto His servant Muhammad as regards the verse: ‘The [servant’s] heart did not give the lie to what he saw’ (an-Najm: 11); this means that Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him did not see Allah the Glorified and Exalted with his eyes, but rather saw Him with his innermost being and his heart. Thus, Musa (Musa) peace be upon him heard [Allah’s] Word on the earth, and Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him saw [Him] with the vision of his heart in heaven. The passage: ‘The [servant’s] heart did not give the lie…’ (an-Najm: 11), implies a warning to those who have doubts about this issue and deny it. For this reason, there follows this critical question:

أَفَتُمَٰرُونَهُۥ عَلَىٰ مَا يَرَىٰ (١٢) وَلَقَدۡ رَءَاهُ نَزۡلَةً أُخۡرَىٰ (١٣)
عِندَ سِدۡرَةِ ٱلۡمُنتَهَىٰ (١٤) عِندَهَا جَنَّةُ ٱلۡمَأۡوَىٰٓ (١٥)

Are you going to dispute with him what he saw with his own eyes? [12] A second time he saw him [13] by the lote-tree beyond which none may pass [14] near the Garden of Restfulness [15] (The Quran, an-Najm: 12-15)

Here, the initial particle indicates a interrogative clause from which is to be understood a reproachful contestation and amazement at their denying the truthfulness of The Messenger of Allah peace and blessings be upon him regarding what he informed them of after the voyage of the night journey and ascension concerning his going up into the heaven and his vision of his Lord the Glorified and Exalted. The Arabic verb tumarun in the first verse above, translated as ‘contend with’, is derived from the same semantic root as al-mira’ meaning to argument or dispute. However, this contention is groundless and engaged in for the sake of denial and provoking doubt, it is not intended as a means of arriving at the truth.

With respect to the following verse: ‘And, indeed, he saw it descend a second time’ (an-Najm: 13), this means that Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him saw Jibril peace be upon him a second time. The next verse mentions where this occurred: ‘by the lote-tree of the farthest limit’ (an-Najm: 14). Here the Arabic word as-sidra, translated as ‘lote-tree’, refers to the lote-tree which is located to the right of The Throne of Allah. Concerning the Arabic word al-muntaha, translated as ‘of the farthest limit’, this signifies that at this tree the knowledge of created things comes to an end, and not one of the angels can pass beyond it, let alone men. It was at this lote-tree that He peace and blessings be upon him saw Jibril peace be upon him for the second time. Moreover, in this place of proximity prayer was made incumbent upon Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him. Canonical prayer is the sole ritual obligation which was imposed by direct oral command, and this means that Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him heard the word of Allah in this intimate divine audition.

But when he peace and blessings be upon him was asked about his vision of his Lord he said: {Light wherever I saw Him.}(1) In other words, in whatever manner I perceived Him. This is a very subtle expression on the part of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him for when he looked he found nothing but light, and light is not visible but rather makes things perceptible to sight. Thus, if Allah is light, then there is no means of seeing Him.

(1) This Hadith was narrated by Muslim in his Sahih (261) as related by Abu Dharr who said: “I asked The Messenger of Allah peace and blessings be upon him: ‘Did you see your Lord?’ He replied: {Light wherever I saw Him.}” This was also narrated by At-Tirmidhi in his Sunnan (3204), by Ahmad in his Musnad (20427, 20547) and by At-Tayalisi in his Musnad (470).

Now, as for visualization as expressed in the likes of His utterance: 'Some faces will on that Day be bright with happiness, [22] looking up to their Sustainer [23]' (al-Qiyama: 22-23), the discourse here concerns the Day of Resurrection when mankind will be brought back to life in another form other than their form in this world. By means of this form they will be enabled to see their Lord. Evidence of this is found in the fact that in this new state in the Hereafter we eat but do not defecate, we drink but do not urinate or sweat. Why? This is because Allah the Glorified and Exalted has fashioned us in another form which is suited to the blissful pleasures of the Hereafter. While we eat in this world from what we cook and what we prepare, whereas in the hereafter we eat of Allah's cooking. This cuisine is prepared with precise calculation whereby no waste remains of it in the body.

Likewise, among the miraculous aspects of the voyage of the night journey and heavenly ascension is that Allah the Glorified and Exalted prepared Prophet Muhammad in a special way so that he might be capable of ascending into heaven. It is common knowledge that oxygen does not exist in the higher layers of the atmosphere. The Quran confirms this fact in Allah's utterance: 'And whomsoever Allah wills to guide, his bosom He opens wide with willingness towards self-surrender [unto Him]; and whomsoever He wills to let go astray, his bosom He causes to be tight and constricted, as if he were climbing unto the skies: it is thus that God inflicts horror upon those who will not believe.' (al-An'am: 125)

The question of visualization of Allah the Glorified and Exalted is an issue of great controversy about which much debate has raged without just cause. The Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him saw light, and the true vision will be in the Hereafter. We must limit our discussion of this topic to what has been authoritatively reported about it, otherwise it becomes knowledge which is of no benefit and ignorance which is of no harm.

What is important is the prescribed path which he brought and the extent of our adherence to its application to our practical lives. The apex of this prescribed path is canonical prayer which was imposed upon him directly on account of its importance in the proceedings of life, and the rectification of what is crooked in it. We have previously elucidated this in the following analogy: a director or chief sends a communication to the employee to do this and that; but if the matter is more important than this, he contacts him by telephone; and if it is even more important, he summons him to his office and notifies him of what he wants directly. In such a way was prayer prescribed. It is for this reason that we view prescribed prayer as incumbent upon every male and female Muslim. It is an obligation that can never be waived under any circumstances, as opposed to all other acts of worship which may be neglected with adequate excuse.

The Hadith concerning the pillars of religion: {Islam is founded upon five...}(1) makes the stature of prayer evident. Prayer is among the pillars of religion and among the central supports upon which it is erected. This Hadith also makes it clear that these five pillars do not constitute all of Islam. Nay, indeed, Islam is of greater scope than these for Islam encompasses all the activities of life, beginning with the summit of 'There is no deity save Allah, Muhammad is The Messenger of Allah' to removing something harmful from a pathway.

We are therefore astonished by those who call for the separation of Allah's religion from the politics and policies of this world. They say: There should be no politics in religion and no religion in politics. Now, this statement is absurd and incorrect. Would it be permissible to allow the murderer, the fornicator, the thief, and other criminals like them to run havoc among Allah's human creatures without punishment or restricting deterrents?

Given the importance of prayer in the proceedings of life, Allah the Glorified and Exalted rendered it a duty based on certain times, thus its obligation is linked to specific timing. These times are dispersed throughout the day and night in order that the believer remains in permanent contact with his Lord, and continually mindful of the prescribed path. It is not permissible to delay prayer beyond its prescribed time except with an acceptable excuse in the eyes of The Wise Law-Giver. Thus, whoever sleeps through a time of prayer, its time is when he wakens. And whoever forgets a prayer, its time is when he remembers. In these two cases, the obligation of prayer is not waived, but rather, it must be observed immediately. On the other hand, if a person misses a prayer out of indolence without excuse, then his prayer cannot be fulfilled because it has a specific time which he has let pass to the detriment of his own soul without a legal pretext.

(1) This Hadith regarding the five pillars of Islam is narrated by Al-Bukhari in his Sahih (7), by Muslim in his Sahih (20, 21), and by Imam Ahmad in his Musnad (4567, 5414) as related by ʿAbdullah ibn ʿUmar.

The deeper wisdom of assigning prayers a determined time lies in the fact that a man does not know when he will be caught unawares by his destined death, and therefore takes the initiative first by performing his prayers according to their appointed times. Prayer comprises duration and continuity across the extent of hours, as opposed to pilgrimage, for example, which is only once in an entire life.

We reiterate, then, that there is no call for us to differ with regard to the vision that Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him had of his Lord the Glorified and Exalted in the course of the night journey and heavenly ascension. What is important is that he was transported to a sublimely elevated place in view of being charged with ritual prescriptions. He used to be charged with religious obligations while he was on the earth, and now he is being charged with such prescriptions, while he is in heaven. Is it not enough that Allah the Glorified and Exalted spoke to him directly aside from divine inspiration and is it not sufficient that He peace be upon him says about his vision of his Lord: {Light wherever I saw Him.}?

Now, someone might justifiably ask: why did this vision come in the heaven specifically, while Allah the Glorified and Exalted is capable of manifesting Himself to His Messenger, and appearing to him while he is on the earth? To this we respond: The place is not for what is seen, but rather for the beholder, for the latter only sees in this place. Analogous to this is if I were to say to you, for example, while we were in the mosque, the moon has appeared. Then one of you says: But I do not see it. Then I tell him: Whoever is outside of the mosque or on its roof can see it.

In this context, His utterance: ‘will you, then, contend with him as to what he saw?’ (an-Najm: 12) is an affirmation of the vision, lending it weight and warning against doubting in it. And why should there be any dubiousness when the entire matter in the issue belongs to Allah, and Muhammad did not claim any special power for himself, but rather said: {I was taken on a night journey.}?

Perhaps you recall when we discussed His utterance: ‘O you who live in close communion with [evil] invisible beings and humans! If you [think that you] can pass beyond the regions of the heavens and the earth, pass beyond them! [But] you cannot pass beyond them, save by a sanction [from Allah]!’ (ar-Rahman: 33); we noted that there were some scholars of the opinion that the final Arabic word of this verse sultan, translated as ‘sanction [from Allah]’, meant knowledge or science (al-ʿilm). We said that this is not so, and that rather sultan was from Allah, The All-Capable of accomplishing this. Now, if the intended meaning of sultan were knowledge or science, He would not have said after this: ‘A flash of fire will be let loose upon you, and smoke, and you will be left without succour!’ (ar-Rahman: 35) If it were not for this verse, heaven would be wide open, with the Jinn having easy access to it.

Prophet Muhammad’s vision of Gabriel as expressed in His utterance: ‘And, indeed, he saw it descend a second time [13] by the lote-tree of the farthest limit [14]’ (an-Najm: 13-14) is to be viewed as an honour and distinction for Gabriel and an honour and distinction for The Messenger of Allah peace and blessings be upon him. As we have said the lote-tree (as-sidra) is a tree which produces the nibq fruit, which is an edible berry the size of an olive. Whereas the nibq tree of this world has thorns, the lote-tree of the utmost boundary has no thorns. It is as He said: ‘amidst fruit-laden lote-trees’ (al-Waqi‘a: 28) comprising the Arabic word makhdud which is to say denuded of its thorns. Prophet Muhammad said in describing the size of it fruits in paradise, that they were as the capacious ceramic jugs made in Hijr, in other words, like large earthenware jars.

But do not be astonished at the existence of this tree in the seventh heaven, for this arises from the unlimited extent of divine power and capability. Did He not place a tree in hellfire—may Allah protect us from it—regarding which, He the Glorified and Exalted said: ‘for, behold, it is a tree…’ (as-Saffat: 64) which is to say the tree of az-Zaqqum, ‘…that grows in the very heart of the blazing fire [of hell], [64] its fruit [as repulsive] as satans’ heads [65]’ (as-Saffat: 64-65).

Concerning His utterance: ‘near unto the garden of promise’ (an-Najm: 15), this signifies the garden in which find ultimate refuge the martyrs who have been slain striving in the path of Allah. It is as if it is a special garden reserved for them, apart from the garden of the Hereafter which is for after The Day of Reckoning. For in the case of the one who dies a martyr, and sacrifices his life in the path of Allah, Allah says to him: ‘You will not die in my presence’. Then He restores him from death a second time, as if He were saying: ‘It is I who grants life, and I am the one who takes it; so if someone else takes it, I conspire against him in that I render the martyr alive in my presence, with his life in the world joined to his life in the al-barzakh ‘an interval life between life and death’ awaiting the Last Hour.

You will recall that when we discussed Prophet Yahya (John), we said that it was Allah who named him Yahya. Furthermore, we said that when we give names to our children, we select beautiful, excellent names out of optimism for what they signify. Thus, we call a child Dhaki (intelligent), in the hope that he will be so, and we call a child Saʿid (happy), yearning that he be happy in his life. However, it may happen that reality brings forth the contrary of that for which we had wished. We call him Dhaki, but he is dull-witted, or Saʿid and then we see that in actuality he is unhappy. This is because we do not have control over the realization of that for which we wish.

But if the name-giver is Allah, then there is no doubt that the name ascribed by Him will correspond to reality. This is because with respect to Allah the Glorified and Exalted there is nothing that can hinder His decree, and nothing that can amend His pronouncement, nor is there anyone who can stand in opposition to His command. Hence, the appellation Yahya, which has the semantic connotation of ‘to live’ is an indication that he will live an eternal unbroken life. From this, certain scholars possessed of comprehension of the divine have understood that he will die a martyr. The reason for this is that it is martyrdom which guarantees him continuation of life inasmuch as his life in this world is connected to the life of a martyr with Allah the Glorified and Exalted:

إِذۡ يَغۡشَى ٱلسِّدۡرَةَ مَا يَغۡشَىٰ ﴿١٦﴾ مَا زَاغَ ٱلۡبَصَرُ وَمَا طَغَىٰ ﴿١٧﴾

When the tree was covered in nameless [splendour] [16]
His sight never wavered, nor was it too bold [17]
(The Quran, an-Najm: 16 - 17)

The meaning of ‘…the lote-tree veiled…’ (an-Najm: 16) is that it was covered, or encompassed and concealed. The Arabic particle ma, not translated literally here, is indicative of abundance and something tremendous deserving of amazement. The lote-tree of the utmost boundary is veiled in a multitude of marvellous created things of which only Allah is cognizant. The structure of the expression here is analogous to what occurs in His previous utterance: 'and thus did [Allah] reveal unto His servant whatever He deemed right to reveal' (an-Najm: 10), which is to say that He revealed unto him a great number of tremendous, wondrous things, This usage is similar to when you say: 'I was magnanimous to him, how numerous and marvellously diverse was my magnanimity to him'.

It has been narrated that among the amazing created things around the lote-tree of the utmost boundary were birds of wondrous forms and colours. Now, if we witness a great many marvellous manifestations of creation in the birds of the earth, and all that they possess of beautiful forms and patterns which we place for ornamentation in baskets in our houses, and all that they possess of lovely sounds, then how would you envisage the birds which Allah the Glorified and Exalted placed around this lote-tree in heaven?

Locusts made of gold have also been mentioned in this context, and these golden locusts are related to a story (1) involving Prophet Dawud (David) peace be upon him. It is related that he was sitting on the roof of his house, worshipping Allah and confiding in Him, when on that day he saw a locust made of gold fluttering above him. Thereupon he spread out his robe for it, and it came to pass that the locust landed upon it and Dawud seized it. At that point Allah the Glorified and Exalted said to him: 'O Dawud, do I not suffice you?' And he answered: 'Yes, indeed, O Lord, but I cannot dispense with your gracious favour.'(2)

With respect to His utterance: '[And withal,] the eye did not waver, nor yet did it stray' (an-Najm: 17), this is to say that the sight of Prophet Muhammad did not deviate during this journey. The Arabic verb zagha, translated as 'waver', has the meaning of inclining away from the objective. The word zagha bears the same significance as ragha which occurs in the story of

(1) The story of David with the golden locust

(2) This Hadith is narrated in the context of a Hadith by Al-Bukhari in his Sahih (270, 3140, 6939), and by An-Nasai in his Sunnan (406), and by Ahmad in his Musnad (7695, 7812, 9957) as related by Abu Hurayra, but in reference to Job rather than David.

Prophet Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon him: ‘Then he turned quietly (ragha) to his household, and brought forth a fat [roasted] calf’ (adh-Dhariyat: 26), in other words, he inclined towards his family in a discreet manner so that those present would not perceive it. The difference between the two words lies in the diacritical dot above the letter za ʾ, but the meaning is the same or close to it. When we say: ‘So-and-so departed surreptitiously (zugha)’, this signifies that he left furtively such that no one was aware of him. Another expression which approximates this meaning is His utterance: ‘…those of you who would withdraw surreptitiously…’ (an-Nur: 63), in other words sneak out stealthily.

Concerning His utterance after this: ‘…nor yet did it stray’ (an-Najm: 17), this means that his gaze did not transgress or go beyond the proper bounds in vision, and he did not extend it to anything besides its objective. Here we learn the correct norm of looking, and how it remains within the limits of what is permitted. This is like the guest who enters your house in the presence of your family and daughters, for he does not probe with his eyes to gaze upon that which he is not allowed to see.

لَقَدْ رَأَىٰ مِنْ ءَايَٰتِ رَبِّهِ ٱلْكُبْرَىٰٓ ١٨

And he saw some of the greatest signs of his Lord [18] (The Quran, an-Najm: 18)

In other words, Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him saw numerous wondrous signs of Allah during the voyage of the night journey and heavenly ascension, including both marvellous signs on the earth and in heaven. The Arabic word al-kubra, translated in this verse as ‘the most profound’, is the feminine plural and also the superlative form of kabira, whereas the corresponding masculine forms are kabir and akbar. The meaning here is that He peace and blessings be upon him saw a great number of the wondrous signs of his Lord which are described as being the great signs (ayat kubra), or that he saw the greatest of all the marvellous signs.

After these ayat (signs) have related this to us and have sworn to the truthfulness of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him with regard to conveying the message of his Lord, and have mentioned to us some of the cosmic signs and miracles, they subsequently transport us to the opposing phenomenon, to a discussion of idols and the worshippers of idols

أَفَرَءَيْتُمُ ٱللَّٰتَ وَٱلْعُزَّىٰ ﴿١٩﴾ وَمَنَوٰةَ ٱلثَّالِثَةَ ٱلْأُخْرَىٰ ﴿٢٠﴾
أَلَكُمُ ٱلذَّكَرُ وَلَهُ ٱلْأُنثَىٰ ﴿٢١﴾ تِلْكَ إِذًا قِسْمَةٌ ضِيزَىٰ ﴿٢٢﴾

[Disbelievers], consider al-Lat and al-ʻUzza [19] and the third one, Manat [20] are you to have the male and He the female? [21] that would be a most unjust distribution! [22]
(The Quran, an-Najm: 19 - 22)

The interrogative structure in the phrase 'Have you, then, ever considered' (an-Najm: 19) signifies: 'Inform me of the status of these idols which you have adopted as deities apart from Allah.' They were wont to adopt deities of various types: human, animal or tree, and sometimes they adopted an idol which had no form at all.

Concerning al-Lat, this was an idol in the form of a man who resided among them and used to knead (yaluttu) dough in order to relieve women of this toilsome labour. He died and left no offspring behind him to carry on with this task, so they were grieved by his death, and fashioned a statue of him in honour of his memory. Later they began to worship this statue.

As for al-ʻUzza, this is the name of a tree which they used to worship, and which Prophet Muhammad ordered Khalid to go and cut down (1). Concerning it, Khalid would say:

---

(1) In the book ʻUyun Al-Athar (2/207) it is narrated that the raid of Khalid ibn Al-Walid against al-ʻUzza took place five days before the end of the month of Ramadan in the year 8 AH in order to raze it. So he departed with thirty horsemen from among his companions until he reached it, and then he demolished it. Then he returned to Prophet Muhammad and notified him. Thereupon he said: {Did you see anything?} Khalid answered, 'No'. Then He peace be upon him said: {Then surely you did not destroy it.} So Khalid returned to it in great fury, and unsheathed his sword, and there came out to him a naked black woman with unkempt hair, and the custodian began to scream at her. Khalid then struck her and split her in half. He then returned to Prophet Muhammad and informed him of what had happened, at which He said: {Yes, that was al-ʻUzza.}

O ʿUzza, your disavowal [I seek], not your forgiveness
Verily, I perceive that Allah has distained you.(1)

Regarding the verse: ‘as well as [in] Manat, the third and last [of this triad]?’ (an-Najm: 20), Manat was also a name of one of their idols. Here He said: ‘...the third and last [of this triad]?’ (an-Najm: 20), as this is the third of them, and it was not in the form of a man or beast, The final Arabic word al-ukhra, translated as ‘last’ is an expression of contempt and ridicule for these idols and for those who worship them.

Allah the Glorified and Exalted has set them up as judges over what they are doing and over their worship of idols, saying to them: ‘Tell Me about these idols, do they merit being worshipped, do they have power and volition, although they are rocks which you brought with you own hands and moulded them into the forms which you desired? Subsequently, when an idol falls over or is knocked down by the wind, you raise it upright; and if its arms should break, you mend it; how then can you worship them? Where are your clear minds?’

However, this is a reflection of the fact that devotional nature in an innate part of the human constitution. The Creator fashioned man with a natural disposition towards religiosity. Even before Adam was created, while he was still in the world of potential

Allah the Glorified and Exalted has us make a solemn pledge while we were in the world of potential enclosed in the back of Adam peace be upon him.

Thus, Allah said: ‘And whenever Your Sustainer brings forth their offspring from the loins of the children of Adam, He [thus] calls upon them to bear witness about themselves: “Am I not your Sustainer?” – to which they answer: “Yea, indeed, we do bear witness thereto!” [Of this We remind you,] lest you say on the Day of Resurrection, “Verily, we were unaware of this”; [172] or lest you say, “Verily, it was but our forefathers who, in times gone by, began to ascribe divinity to other beings beside Allah; and we were but their late offspring: wilt Thou, then, destroy us for the doings of those inventors of falsehoods?” [173]’ (al-A‘raf: 172-173)

(1) This is cited by Ibn Kathir in his As-Sira An-Nabawiya, as well as by Ash-Shami in Subul Al-Huda wa-Ar-Rashad (chapter 52), and by Al-Waqidi in his Maghazi (1/873). In all sources al-ʿUzza is a constructed idol and not a tree.

Hence, they worshipped idols on account of what they possessed of innate faith in the soul. But true belief comprises consequences and requirement which may be hard on the soul and bind its movements towards objects of lust and desire. Therefore, man is inclined to worship a deity with no prescriptions in order to satisfy the instinctive yearning for devotion in his soul. And based on this they began worshipping idols because they were deities according to their claims. But these idols did not make any demands, and possessed on prescribed path, and they did not worship them except to relieve their devotional sentiments.

We notice here the precision of the Quranic expression in His utterance ‘Have you, then, ever considered [what you are worshipping in] al-Lat and al-ʿUzza, [19] as well as [in] Manat, the third and last [of this triad]? [20]’ (an-Najm: 19-20) They also used to worship angels apart from Allah, but He does not mention them with al-Lat, al-ʿUzza and Manat since angels cannot be seen. With regard to the verbal phrase of the first verse above: a-fa-raʾaytum, meaning ‘Have you, then, seen’ but translated as ‘have you, then, ever considered’, it would not be correct to use it for angels since they could not perceive angels. Rather, they heard about them and believed in them though they were invisible. About all of these they said: these are our intercessors with Allah. Similarly, they said: ‘…We worship them for no other reason than that they bring us nearer to Allah…’ (az-Zumar: 3). Thus, even in their disbelief in Allah the Glorified and Exalted they are disputatious about Allah.

There follows His utterance: ‘Why – for yourselves [you would choose only] male offspring, whereas to Him [you assign] female’? (an-Najm: 21) Here the interrogative is to indicate amazement and repudiation of them since they have ascribed the angels to Allah the Glorified and Exalted and classified them as feminine, in light of the final feminine taʾ marbuta of the plural word for them (malaʾika). However, angels are creations of Allah the Glorified and Exalted composed of light, they do not eat, drink, or procreate and they are not qualified as being masculine or feminine.

Now, the situation described in this verse is viewed in terms of judgement and partitioning in a way which the Quran refers to as: ‘that, lo and behold, is an unfair division!' (an-Najm: 22) This is to say: iniquitous and wrong. This is because you attribute to yourselves the superior gender, and to Allah the inferior one. The first error is that you regarded the angels as females, and the second is that you worshipped them. Allah the Glorified and Exalted refutes them: 'And [yet] they claim that the angels – who in themselves are but beings created by The Most Gracious – are females: [but] did they witness their creation? This false claim of theirs will be recorded, and they will be called to account [for it on Judgment Day]!' (az-Zukhruf: 19)

Allah the Glorified and Exalted also said: 'Verily, you and all that you [were wont to] worship instead of Allah are but the fuel of hell...' (al-Anbiya': 98), in other words, its combustible material which kindles it—may Allah protect us from such. The critical conundrum into which the worshippers of idols have fallen into is that they said: '…We worship them for no other reason than that they bring us nearer to Allah…' (az-Zumar: 3); but if only they had said: 'We only seek closeness to them in order that they might bring us closer to Allah', this would have been acceptable. However, they said 'we worship them', and this is a false, groundless statement. Hence Allah the Glorified and Exalted rebuts them, saying: 'Verily, you and all that you [were wont to] worship instead of Allah are but the fuel of hell...' (al-Anbiya': 98).

If you were to ask: 'So, what is the offence of 'Isa (Jesus) and 'Uzair (Ezra)? And what is the offence of the angels if people have worshipped them apart from Allah?' The answer in found in the same verse, examine it closely: '...all that you [were wont to] worship...' (al-Anbiya': 98), for in the Arabic original, wa-ma taʿbuduna, the relative pronoun ma here, translated as 'all that' is for non-rational things. Allah the Glorified and Exalted did not say: 'and all those who you worshipped'. Hence, this decree does not include 'Isa or ʿUzair or the angels.

Consider the Arabic word diza, translated as 'unfair', you will discover it to be a rare, obscure word in its formulation and pronunciation which does not re-occur among the vocabulary items of the Quran. It occurs in just this perplexing way in order to signify that their deed is strange and bewildering. It also signifies that this division of theirs is outrageously iniquitous and unjust since they have assigned offspring to Allah the Glorified and Exalted while He is The Creator of the fair sex, at least in their own opinion.

The dogmatic convictions in Islam did not give any preference to the male over the female, for both the male and the female are equivalent in the scale of religious jurisprudence. In order to illustrate this question, you should read, for example, the story of Maryam (Mary) peace be upon her in the Quran, in which Allah Glorified is He said: '…when a woman of (the House of) 'Imran prayed, 'O my Lord! Unto You do I vow (the child) that is in my womb, to be devoted to Your service' (Al-'Imran: 35).

The mother of Maryam (Mary) peace be upon her wanted to raise her child strictly in the service of the house of worship. 'But when she had given birth to the child, she said, "O my Lord! Behold, I have given birth to a female" – the while Allah had been fully aware of what she would given birth to, and (fully aware) that the male child is not like the female child' (Al-'Imran: 36). The mother of Maryam assumed that a male child would have been more suitable for the service of a house of worship than a female child. Allah Glorified is He made it clear to her that this female child shall assume a station which no other female has assumed before her, as she would attain a great stature in the history of religion, and a position which will raise her above all women.

When Allah Glorified is He spoke of several examples of women in the Quran, He referred to each of them without mentioning their names. He said: 'For those who are bent on denying the truth, Allah has revealed a lesson in (the stories of) the wife of Nuh (Noah) and the wife of Lut (Lot)' (at-Tahrim: 10). Likewise, He said 'And for those who have believed, Allah has revealed a lesson in (the story of) Pharaoh's wife' (at-Tahrim: 11). Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him specified that the name of Pharaoh's believing wife was Asiya Bint Muzahim may Allah be pleased with her. Thus, Allah Glorified is He did not mention the specific names of these women in the Quran. Their stories were mentioned to set a parable and a lesson, and to stress the issue of a woman's freedom of belief. There is no one who is able to coerce anyone into adhering to a particular belief system.

On the other hand, when Allah Glorified is He narrated the story of Maryam (Mary) peace be upon her he mentioned her name and the name of her father. He said: '…Mary, the daughter of 'Imran,' (at-Tahrim: 12) because her story was a unique and a special example that will not be repeated after her. Hence, there are verses in the Quran where the anonymity of the persons was preferred, and there are other verses where the person concerned is specifically identified and named. Each of these preferences was used properly, with every instance having its appropriate motive.

Allah told us the story of the young men in the chapter of the Cave: '…Behold, they were young men who had believed in their Lord: and (so) We increased their guidance to the right way' (al-Kahf: 13). However, the Quran did not specify their exact number or their names, and it did not mention anything about them aside their belief in Allah Glorified is He. This is the intended extent of their description in the verses, as specific details regarding their names and exact number had no importance in the context of their story. Mentioning these specific names would have been unnecessary because a person learning them will not gain any utility and a person ignorant of them will not be harmed in their life.

These young men were mentioned to show the believers how to adhere steadfastly to their convictions and confront oppressive injustices during any time and in any place, regardless of their number and their circumstances. If Allah had specified their names, they would have been perceived as a unique story that may not necessarily be repeated in other circumstances.

At this point, I would like to discuss whether Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him saw Allah Glorified is He. This issue was greatly debated among the commentators of the Quran and their opinions varied.

I would like to begin by saying that this is an issue of controversy which does not affect the basis of the theological dogma. It only serves to highlight the stature of Prophet Muhammad in the Eyes of his Lord. There are scholars who, out of love for Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him desired to elevate him to the degree of seeing his Lord.

However, there are other scholars who also had deep love towards Prophet Muhammad peace blessings be upon him but they also desired to shield people from the labyrinths of doubt. Therefore, they saw that this encounter between Prophet Muhammad may the peace and the blessings of Allah be upon him and his Lord Glorified is He did not involve an actual physical vision of Allah.

We will try to simplify this issue in a manner that makes it clear for everyone. It is normal that the opinions of scholars may differ regarding certain concepts. Such differences strengthen the essence of religion and do not impair it. When we read the beginning of the chapter of an-Najm, we find that it discusses the issue of divine inspiration (al-wahy) in two verses. Allah said in the first passage: ‘that (which he conveys to you) is but (a divine) inspiration with which he (Muhammad) is being inspired. The one with a mighty power taught (it to) him,’ (an-Najm: 4-5). The intended inspiration here is the divine revelation which Angel Jibril (Gabriel) peace be upon him brought down to Prophet Muhammad while he was on the earth.

Consequently, the subsequent verse referring to divine revelation: ‘And, thus, He (Allah) revealed to His servant that which He revealed’ (an-Najm: 10) does not have the same meaning as the first verse referring to divine revelation upon the earth. Rather, the second verse adds a new meaning, and the inspiration mentioned in it referred to a more direct revelation from Allah to his Prophet Muhammad. Furthermore, the second verse did not mention Angel Jibril peace be upon him as the intermediary of this divine inspiration. Moreover, the nature of the revelation was not explained, as Allah said: ‘...revealed to His servant that which (ma) He revealed’ (an-Najm: 10). Thus, the revelation mentioned in this verse was different, and its nature was lexically concealed by the ambiguous pronoun ma (‘that which’). On the other hand, the previous divine verses, conveyed by Angel Jibril to Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him were not ambiguous or concealed.

The general description of this direct divine revelation indicated the revelation’s sublime greatness, and that it transcended material limitations. Another possible interpretation is that this new revelation that Prophet Muhammad experienced was extraordinary and overwhelming. In this sense, the usage of the pronoun ma was similar to its usage in another chapter in which Allah said: ‘…and they were overwhelmed by the sea, with that which (ma) they were overwhelmed by’ (Ta Ha: 78).

Thus, we can see that the verses in the beginning of the chapter of an-Najm have mentioned two types of divine inspiration (al-wahy). The two revelations do not have the same meaning because if both types of revelation were similar, there would be no imperative necessity for Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him to go on this journey from the earth to the heavens since the Angel Jibril already came down to him with revelation.

Therefore, the verse: ‘And, thus, He (Allah) revealed to His servant that which He revealed,’ (an-Najm: 10) refers to a new bestowal upon Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him but it is a bestowal enveloped in mystery. It may be that conventional minds were not constituted to accept this different revelation, as these sublime bounties only inspire the pure souls. People’s constitutions differ greatly regarding this issue.

Thus, there are scholars who did not believe that Prophet Muhammad may the peace and the blessings of Allah be upon him saw Allah Glorified is He while other scholars accepted that concept. Praises are due to Allah Glorified is He that He did not make this disputed opinion part of our necessary body of religious beliefs. Allah Glorified is He addressed all believers by the necessary message. These believers include those who only fulfil the fundamental ordinances of Islam, as well as those who enhance their actions and intensively observe further voluntary acts of worship. Indeed, Allah will grant appropriate rewards for each group of believers.

The direct revelation that Prophet Muhammad received from Allah Glorified is He involved proximity, and listening. Prophet Mohammad defined what he saw during that revelation by saying: ‘There was Light. How could I see Him?’(1) Hence, Prophet Muhammad may the peace and the blessings of Allah be upon him definitely saw the Light, and what other objective is needed beyond this experience?

There is another narration that confirmed this meaning which has been cited in a narrated Hadith stating that Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him said to one of his Companions: ‘My Lord has granted me three vessels (of knowledge): a vessel which he commanded me to convey and this is the knowledge of prayer, a vessel which he left me free to choose (to convey it to the folk of purity who are capable of receiving it and to conceal it from those who are not capable of its reception) and a vessel which Allah forbade me to divulge (and this vessel contains matters which are beyond the comprehension of all men and which their minds could not bear).' Thus, there are details which Prophet Muhammad may the peace and the blessings of Allah be upon him was commanded to conceal.

(1) This Hadith was narrated by Imam Muslim in his Sahih (261) as related by Abu Dharr who said: “I asked Prophet Muhammad, ‘Did you see your Lord?’ He replied, “There was Light. How could I see Him?” The same Hadith was narrated by At-Tirmidhi in his Sunnan (3204) and by Ahmad in his Musnad (20427, 20547).

The Companions themselves were diverse in their capacity to understand such concepts. Thus, when ʿUmar (1) may Allah be pleased with him finished his circumambulation around the Ka'ba and stood before the Black Stone, he said: 'By Allah, I truly know that you are just a stone that cannot do harm or cause benefit, and if I had not actually seen the Messenger of Allah [Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him] kissing you I would not have kissed you.'(2)

Thus, ʿUmar may Allah be pleased with him drew our attention to the fact that a devotional act is not observed for its own sake, but rather out of belief in the one who instructed us to perform it. However, 'Ali may Allah be pleased with him possessed another form of abundance of understanding. Therefore, he closely approached 'Umar may Allah be pleased with him and said: 'O Commander of the

(1) The story of ʿUmar ibn Al-Khattab circumambulating the Ka'ba and his stance regarding the black stone and the response of 'Ali ibn Abu Taleb

(2) This Hadith is narrated by Al-Hakim in his Mustadrak (1635) as related by Abu Sa'id Al-Khudri who said: "We performed pilgrimage with ʿUmar ibn Al-Khattab and when he set about circumambulating, he faced the (Black) Stone and said, "Verily, I know that you are a stone which cannot do harm or bring benefit, and if I had not actually seen Prophet Muhammad kiss you, I would not have kissed you." Then he kissed it. Thereupon, ʿAli ibn Abu Taleb remarked, "But indeed, O Commander of the Faithful. It surely can do harm and cause benefit." (ʿUmar) then asked, "On what basis?" (ʿAli) replied, "On the basis of the Book of Allah." (ʿUmar) then asked, "And where is this in the Book of Allah?" (ʿAli) said, "Allah said: "And when your Lord brought forth their offspring from the backs of the children of Adam, He (thus) called upon them to bear witness about themselves, 'Am I not your Lord?' – to which they answered, 'Indeed, we do bear witness thereto!'" (al-A'raf: 172) And verily, I bear witness that I heard the Messenger of Allah say: "On the Day of Resurrection, the Black Stone will be brought and it will possess an eloquent tongue that testifies to those who have acknowledged it within the framework of Divine Unity." Hence, O Commander of the Faithful ('Umar), it can do harm and bring benefit.' Thereupon, ʿUmar said, "I seek protection from Allah from living amidst a people among whom you are not present, O father of Al-Hasan ('Ali).'"

Faithful ('Umar), but I know that it (the Black Stone) can do harm and give benefit, for it does bear witness to its companion on the Day of Resurrection.'

Hence, it is not necessary for us to know everything. Allah Glorified is He said: '…and you have been granted very little of (real) knowledge' (al-Isra': 85). This is the case of all people, regardless of who they are. In our daily lives, we have the habit of protecting precious items in several wrappers. For instance, we may place the item in an envelope, and then place the envelope in a secure storage container. We may then place the storage container in a private chamber. Therefore, if the precious matter was related to the vision of Allah Glorified is He we should expect a transcendental level of concealment. Hence, this knowledge was concealed highly in this sublime manner, and every intellect will perceive this knowledge according to its own understanding.

Allah said: 'Will you (disbelievers), then, contend with him (Muhammad) as to what he saw?' (an-Najm: 12) It might be asked whether divine inspiration is seen or heard. Indeed, divine inspiration is heard, so why did Allah say: '...as to what he (Muhammad) saw?' (an-Najm: 12) Therefore, we have to recognize that there was a vision involved. The people who do not accept the notion that Prophet Muhammad may the peace and the blessings of Allah be upon him saw Allah, support their opinion with Allah's verse: 'No human vision can encompass Him (Allah), whereas He encompasses all human vision' (al-An'am: 103). Allah has defined the instrument of perception in this verse as being the sense of sight, and indeed, human vision cannot encompass Allah. However, this verse only stated that the eyes cannot perceive Allah. Therefore, the verse did not negate that other senses can perceive Allah. There is a saying that wisely stated, 'When my eyesight was transformed into a spiritual insight, I saw the One (Allah) to whom nothing can be compared.' It is imperative that we understand that this issue comprises the concealment of a precious and a wondrous phenomenon.

Indeed, the one who meditates upon these verses discovers that they go far beyond that which we are discussing. Read the verse in which Allah said: 'Will you, then, contend with him as to what he saw?' (an-Najm: 12) And read the verse that comes after it: 'Truly did he (Muhammad) see some of the most profound of his Lord's symbols' (an-Najm: 18). In other words, Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him saw more than that of which you are speaking. So, what would your stance be if We informed you of all that he saw?
